THIRD REPORT

OF THE

EDUCATIONAL ENDOWMENTS (IRELAND) COMMISSION.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY CHARLES STEWART, MARQUESS OF LONDONDERRY,

LORE LIEUTENANT GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,

We, the Commissioners appointed under the Educational Endowments (Ireland) Act, 1885, have the honour to submit to your Excellency the following Report of our proceedings during the third year in which the Act has been in operation, that is, from October 1, 1887, to September 30, 1888.

The number of meetings which we have held during the year for the transaction of the business of the Commission has been as follows:

112 Meetings of the full Commission.
36 Meetings of the Judicial Commissioners.
43 Meetings of the Assistant Commissioners.

Total, 191 Meetings.

A Return of the attendances at these Meetings is annexed; infra p. xxi.

We have also individually taken part in the drafting of Schemes, and have attended at the Office of the Commission for the transaction of routine business. The annexed abstract of our minutes, infra pp. xxii.-cvii., contains a summary of our proceedings during the year.

Public Sitzings of the Commission.

Provision for future alteration of Schemes.

At the beginning of the year an important objection affecting all our Schemes was raised by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. It was contended that when provision was made for the future alteration of Schemes under section 18 of the Act, it should in every case be left open to all parties interested to apply to the Commissioners from time to time for alterations in the Schemes. For the consideration of this objection we arranged with the Commissioners to hold a public sitting, of which a report will be found in the Appendix, p. 288. At this sitting, strong representations were made of the insecurity and risk of trouble and expense involved in exposing governing bodies and endowments to indiscriminate applications for changes in the Schemes approved by the Lord Lieutenant, and it was also stated that many governing bodies would withdraw from seeking the benefits of the Act if an uncontrolled power of applying to alter Schemes were placed in the hands of every interested party. The Judicial Commissioners were of opinion that it was within our jurisdiction to provide for the future alteration of each Scheme under such special conditions as the circumstances of the endowment appeared to require, but as the objection had been also raised before the Privy Council, we thought it right to await the decision of the Council before publishing any additional Schemes. It was, on February 6, 1888, decided that we were justified in defining in each Scheme those by whom applications for its alteration may be made. We have since, as a rule, limited the power to the Governing Body, and some representative or other independent authority, which might act in case the Governing Body failed to seek an alteration of the Scheme when required in the interest of the endowment.

Provision for Removal of Head Masters.

The Schoolmasters' Association raised an objection before the Privy Council, in the cases of the Royal Belfast Academical Institution and the Belfast Royal Academy, to the provisions of the Schemes relating to the dismissal of teachers, and sought for the insertion of a clause requiring the concurrence of two-thirds of the Governors to terminate the engagement of a Head Master. The Privy Council did not adopt this suggestion, but approved of a provision, which we have since taken as a precedent in similar cases, requiring for the dismissal of a Head Master the concurrence of a majority of the Governors in a resolution passed at each of two successive meetings, convened by special notice.

Denominational Endowments.

A large number of denominational bodies, and of persons interested in endowments exempt from our jurisdiction under section 7 of the Act, have applied to us to deal with exclusive endowments by consent.

On this subject we have been in correspondence with "The Representative Church Body," and with "The Standing Committee of the General Synod of the Church of Ireland," and we have received applications to incorporate Diocesan bodies for the administration of Educational Endowments in connection with that Church from the following Dioceses:—Armagh; Clogher; Meath; Down, Connor, and Dromore; Tuam; Killalee and Achonry; Dublin; Glendelagh; Kildare; Ossory; Ferns; Leighlin; Cork, Cloyne, and Ross; Killaloe; Limerick; and Ardferd and Aghadoo.

We have also received a communication from the General Assembly as to the incorporation of a body or bodies for administering Educational Endowments belonging to the Presbyterian Church.

Evidence has been brought before us that, in many instances, small and scattered endowments have been lost or endangered, and that the efficiency of schools has been impaired, through difficulties of title, neglect of trustees, want of supervision, and other causes likely to be obviated by the creation of permanent and efficient governing bodies, capable of administering educational trusts with due consideration for the general interest of the localities or classes entitled to benefit from the endowments. The draft Scheme No. 47 is an instance in which it is proposed to deal comprehensively with denominational endowments in an important locality, the city and liberties of Cork, by the formation of a representative governing body, the amalgamation of schools, the formation of school districts, and the establishment of intermediate schools for the reception of the more promising pupils from the primary schools.

Provision for Inspection.

The existing governing bodies of some exclusive endowments have found a difficulty in seeking the benefits of the Act, owing to the provisions of section 17, which requires that every school sharing in any endowment dealt with by a Scheme shall be subject to periodical inspection by an Inspector to be appointed by the Lord Lieutenant. This difficulty might be removed if we were authorized to define the duties and qualifications of the inspectors, and to provide some guarantee that the persons to be appointed should have the confidence of the religious denomination to which the endowments belong.

The Royal School Endowments.

On April 30, 1888, we published our Draft Scheme for the reconstitution of the Commissioners of Education and the future management of the Royal School Endowments. This Draft Scheme, which was framed upon the general principles stated in our last report, and was accompanied by an explanatory memorandum, will be found in the Appendix, p. 507.

Within two months from the first publication, we received a large number of objections and proposed amendments, which will be found in the Appendix, p. 526.

The objectors included the Commissioners of Education, the several head masters and others claiming to have vested interests in the endowments, and persons and bodies representing various local denominational and other interests.

A list of the objectors is given supra, pp. xiv and xv.

The objections may be grouped under the following heads :—

1. The constitution and powers of the central body, the Commissioners of Education.
2. The constitution and powers of the proposed Local Boards.
3. The area and distribution of the Endowments.
4. The conditions to be fulfilled by Schools sharing in the Endowments.
5. The method of dealing with the existing School buildings.
6. The special provisions regarding the Armagh Royal School and Endowment during the continuance in office of the present Head-master.
7. The provision for vested interests.

For the consideration of these objections we held public sittings in Dublin on August 2, 3, 4, and 7, 1883, at which most of the parties were represented by counsel, others appeared in person, and the Draft Scheme was fully discussed. The report of the proceedings will be found in the Appendix, p. 381. The Scheme is at present under revision.

We think it important to state some considerations to which regard must be had in the final settlement of the Scheme. The net income available for educational purposes from the five Ulster Royal School Estates, the only considerable public property now administered by the Commissioners of Education, amounted during the past three years to the average annual sum of £3,530, distributed as follows :—

Armagh £944, Cavan £374, Dungannon £830, Enniskillen £1,293, Raphoe £139,

The average annual sum appearing as "Receipts" in the reports of the Commissioners during the same period was £5,344, but thirty-four per cent. of these "receipts" was expended upon "outgoings," including considerable sums allowed to the tenants as abatements of rent, and not actually received, though agents' poundage was paid upon them. We see little reason to anticipate any appreciable increase of the net income in future years, while if the lands were sold, and the purchase-money invested in Government stock or other permanent security, the net annual income would probably be reduced below £2,500.

During the past three years the expenditure upon the Armagh, Dungannon, and Raphoe schools has exceeded the net income from the respective estates. In Cavan and Enniskillen there has been a surplus, and the Commissioners have an accumulation of about £12,500 in hands derived from these endowments, but Armagh and Raphoe, on the other hand, have been debited with sums now amounting to over £2,130, and the Commissioners, in their last report, describe the financial position of the Raphoe School as "very embarrassed."

Section 11 of the Act requires us to "save" or to "make due compensation" for all vested interests, and the existing head masters have claimed a vested interest in the continuance during their tenure of office of the full present expenditure, and contend that if their interests be not "saved" they are entitled to compensation based upon the average amount of their emoluments for seven years before 1885, to be calculated as in cases of compulsory purchase, and paid out of the endowments.

If compensation were awarded upon the scale put forward by the claimants the endowments would be almost exhausted. The alternative of postponing the period at which the scheme will come into operation in each locality until the vested interest of the existing head master comes to an end, remains open for consideration. A reasonable provision for the retirement of masters no longer capable of discharging their duties with efficiency may tend to bring the scheme more rapidly into operation.

The Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury have furnished us with a claim (Appendix, p. 546), against the Banagher Royal School Endowment for a sum of £235 18s. 11d., the balance of an advance of £298 18s. 9d. made in the year 1818 for expenditure on the school buildings, which are now held from year to year at a high rent the lease subsisting at the time of the outlay having long since expired. This claim is not disputed by the Commissioners of Education. The net annual income for the last three years has been only £70 14s. 4d., and the Banagher endowment is now debited with £203, advanced from the other estates to defray the master's salary and the other expenditure. After providing for the vested interest of the present master, little or nothing can remain available for educational purposes.

We received a suggestion from the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, during our recent public sitting, to transfer the Carysfort Royal School Endowment to Arklow, and to apply it there for purposes of industrial education. The Royal School at Carysfort has been closed since the death of the master in 1887, and when in existence was a small and inefficient primary school in a remote locality. The average net annual income from the endowment is £75 4s. 4d. The proposal to transfer it to Arklow is under consideration.

In our opinion the Ulster Royal School endowments were originally intended, have hitherto been applied, and are still needed for the promotion of "Grammar school" education. The amount available may be fully utilized within that portion of the province which has hitherto had the benefit of them, and the preponderance of opinion at our public sittings has supported the conclusion that the right to share these endowments should be confined to the counties and dioceses in which the estates are situated, and within which, under the original charters and statutes, the schools were placed. But the fact that these public benefits are confined to a limited area in Ulster, will undoubtedly accentuate the want of similar endowments for grammar school education in other parts of Ireland.

On this subject, we have again to refer to the Memorandum which we addressed to the Chief Secretary of the Lord Lieutenant on November 30, 1886, and which is appended to our last Report. The subsequent course of our inquiries has confirmed our belief that the provision for Intermediate Education in Ireland is wholly inadequate, and bears no just proportion to the provisions for University and primary education.

Without some additional public endowment judiciously applied for higher education, upon a comprehensive system preserving a due distinction between schools of different grades, it is impossible in our opinion to place the arrangements for intermediate education throughout Ireland upon a satisfactory basis. It must always be remembered that the greater number of the endowments with which we can deal are of private origin, and restricted by the intentions of the founders to particular classes or to particular localities.

Industrial and Technical Education.

Many endowments originally intended by the founders to promote industrial education have ceased to be so applied, and are now employed in aid of intermediate or superior primary education. Almost all the schools established for the purpose of giving practical instruction in agriculture have failed, and we have found no general desire for their re-establishment in the districts where they formerly existed. In the absence of a local demand for technical or industrial education any sudden attempt to compel its introduction seems inexpedient. We have, however, where the nature of the endowments permitted, given powers to the governing bodies created by our schemes, as they may find it desirable, to establish evening classes, to employ travelling teachers, and to provide practical instruction in special subjects for pupils intending to follow commercial, industrial, or technical pursuits.

We have undertaken the preparation of schemes for several important institutions intended to promote special industries. The Baltimore Fishery School and the Munster Dairy School and Agricultural Institute, it may be hoped, will prove useful examples of this class.

We hope that some at least of the endowments originally intended for providing apprenticeship fees and marriage portions, forms in which it is now seldom found useful to apply charitable funds, may be made available for industrial education in accordance with the wants of the working classes of the present day. Section 10 of our Act provides that such funds may be dealt with as educational endowments.

During the last month we have held a series of public inquiries and have visited the principal schools in Connaught, having visited Ulster in 1886, and Munster in 1887.

All which we have the honour to submit for your Excellency's consideration as our Report in the premises.

Witness our hands, this Second day of November, 1888.

ADDITION TO THE REPORT BY ANTHONY TRAILL, ESQ., LL.D.

In the report of last year I disclaimed any responsibility for the principles which had then been adopted as the basis of the Scheme for the future management of the Royal School Endowments. A close examination of that Scheme, and a full discussion of all its details has not satisfied my mind that it is the justest or best solution of a difficult question, or that it is ever likely to work successfully in Ireland.

As the Scheme has now passed into the hands of the Judicial Commissioners, who alone will be responsible for its final shape, I take this, the only opportunity which remains to me of stating shortly the principles upon which I think such a Scheme should have been framed, but which were rejected by the majority of the Commissioners.

1. As the original Founders of these Endowments by Royal Charter obviously intended them to be used for the benefit of the Protestant Settlers, as part of the Scheme for the Plantation of Ulster, it would seem only reasonable that when these benefits are now being extended to Roman Catholics, they should be further extended to the large Protestant population of Ulster, by including the counties of Antrim and Down and the remaining portion of Londonderry not at present included in the Scheme.

2. With this extension, the Endowments might be roughly divided into three equal parts :—

- One-third to the Roman Catholics,
- One-third to the Church of Ireland and the Methodists,
- One-third to the Presbyterians and other Protestant Denominations.

Each of these sections of the community then being allowed to work out the educational problem of the future according to its own requirements.

3. If this extension be not adopted, but if the districts selected in the Scheme are to be adhered to, then each of the principal religious denominations within those districts should receive its own share of the Endowments, while at the same time every facility should be provided whereby different denominations should be enabled to combine their resources, for educational purposes, in such manner as they should think fit and should agree upon.

N.B.—In the distribution of the minimum grants in the present Scheme, this principle has been conceded to the Roman Catholics, but has been refused to the Protestants.

4. Each district should have its own Endowment thus divided within itself, and without reference to the population of the other districts.

5. Within each district this distribution should be made on a rough calculation of the relative numbers of each denomination who might be reasonably expected to look for the higher Intermediate Education, usually designated "Grammar School Education," for which these endowments were intended and for which the present Scheme professes to preserve them.

The National system of education provides most liberally for the education of the masses of the population, so that in estimating the numbers from whom those looking for Intermediate Education may be drawn, the illiterate population may be omitted and probably two-thirds of the literate population as well.

6. The actual calculations on which such a distribution should be based could be readily made out from the Census Returns of 1881, by estimating what proportion of each of the classes there given could be fairly expected to look for this higher education, the great object to be secured being, that those possessed of talent should come to the top, from every class in the community, but that those not so endowed should not be artificially taken from their sphere in life, and thrust forward into positions for which they are not suited and for which nature never intended them.

Letter (Nov. 23), read from Venerable the Archdeacon of Cloyne, as to an endowment belonging to Aghetin Parochial School.

To be informed that the Commissioners hope to be able to draft a scheme dealing with the above endowment either separately or in conjunction with other endowments in the same Diocese.

Letter (Nov. 24), read from the Under Secretary, Dublin Castle, stating that the Lord Lieutenant will arrange that the Commissioner of Valuation is to undertake the official valuation of the Mungret College premises.

Letter, as drafted, directed to be sent.

Letters (Nov. 24) read from the Secretaries, Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and (Nov. 25) from the Clerk of the Privy Council, stating that the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests have lodged an objection to the Clause in the Scheme for the Morgan's and Morcer's Schools relating to its future alteration.

The Secretary was directed to send the following letter addressed to the Under Secretary, Dublin Castle:—

In compliance with your letter of this day's date, I am directed by the Educational Endowments Commissioners to submit the following observations upon the objection now lodged by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests to Clause 22 of the Scheme for the future government and management of Morgan's School and Morcer's School.

The question involved in this objection is of great and general importance to the working of the Educational Endowments Act; it applies not only to the present scheme, but to all those already approved or in course of preparation, and if now finally decided in the case of Morgan's and Morcer's Schools, in which the objection has been brought forward long after the expiration of the time fixed by section 24, the ruling will affect many other schemes in which the parties interested have not received notice that the question is under discussion.

The Commissioners desire, on their part, respectfully to submit the following considerations to the Lord Lieutenant in Council in favour of the clause as it stands.

The section upon which the question arises enacts that "In any scheme the Commissioners may provide for the alteration of the scheme from time to time by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for Ireland, upon application made by the Governing Body or any party interested; provided such alteration shall not be contrary to anything contained in the Act;" other sections (secs. 14, 15, 16, 17) enact that "in every Scheme the Commissioners shall provide" for certain other matters.

The Commissioners submit that the insertion of a clause, under section 18, for the future alteration of the scheme is, in each case, discretionary with them, but as the schemes when approved by the Lord Lieutenant in Council (sec. 27) "have effect in the same manner as if enacted in the Act," and (sec. 29) "cannot be questioned in any legal proceedings whatsoever," it would seem that recourse to Parliament would be necessary to effect any change, unless a power of alteration be inserted. It is therefore most desirable to insert such a provision in every case. On the other hand, if it were left open to every person claiming to have any interest in an Endowment to apply, from time to time, to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for alteration of the scheme, its permanent character would be seriously impaired, and the governing bodies created under the Act would be exposed to the risk of constant interference.

After full consideration the Judicial Commissioners came to the opinion that, upon the true construction of the Act, they had the discretion to omit the provision for alteration altogether, or, where it was inserted, to limit the power of application to the Governing Body, or to define the party or parties interested who might apply; they now submit that they are not bound, if they insert the provision at all, to empower not only the Governing Body, but every other party interested in the scheme, to apply for its alteration.

They have hitherto acted upon this opinion in every instance, and all the schemes already finally approved by the Lord Lieutenant in Council have been framed upon the assumption that it is correct.

The following Table shows the provision limiting the power of application in each of the eight schemes which have been finally approved, and which are now in full operation. It will be observed that each scheme was framed with special regard to the circumstances of the Endowment.

No. of Scheme.	Endowment.	Made of application for alteration of Scheme.	No. of Alteration Cases.
1	Sevenoaks Borough Schools, - -	Application of Governors of either school in any matter relating to such school; or joint application of Governors of both schools in any matter whatsoever.	32
2	Church of Ireland Training College, -	Application of Governors or of General Synod, -	29
4	Methodist Female Orphan School, -	Application of Governors or of Methodist Conference, -	32
5	Hibernia and Goodrich Parochial Schools, -	Application of Governors or of General Synod, -	38
6	Ormond-quay Presbyterian Church Endowment, Dublin, -	Application of Governors by resolution passed at two successive special meetings, with the sanction of the General Assembly.	34
7	Stanhope-street Schools, Belfast, -	Application of Governors, -	38
9	St. Patrick's Cathedral Schools, Dublin, -	Application of Governors or of General Synod, -	25
10	Alexandra College and School, Dublin, -	Application of the Council of the College, -	40

In several most important instances of Endowments to which the Act does not apply (section 7) without the consent of the Governing Body, that consent has been given, upon the understanding that the power of applying to alter the scheme may be defined in the same manner as in the schemes already finally approved. In the case of the Ormond-quay Presbyterian Church Endowment, the Governing Body insisted, as a condition of giving their consent, that no alteration should take place except upon the application of the Governors by resolution passed at two successive meetings, with the sanction of the General Assembly, and in the instance of the Magoo Presbyterian College, Londonderry, the Methodist College, Belfast, the Alexandra College, Dublin, and other large institutions, it was pointed out that the power of applying to alter the scheme could not be left open to every professor, master, and other person interested. It is the distinct opinion of the Commissioners, founded upon their experience and upon the evidence given before them, that it would seriously imperil the efficient operation of the schemes framed under the Act, if the power of applying for alterations were extended indiscriminately to all parties interested in the Endowments.

They are also aware that the Governing Bodies of denominational institutions at present seeking the advantages of the Act would strongly object to any such provision.

Though provision is made for securing the continued efficiency of each scheme, in the constitution of the Governing Bodies, by the appointment of an Inspector by the Lord Lieutenant, and by public audit, the Commissioners quite feel the importance of conferring the power of application to alter the scheme upon some other body as well as upon the Governing Body; accordingly, in the case of Morgan's and Mercer's Schools, they have proposed to give this power to the General Synod and to the Diocesan Council, as representing the supreme authority of the religious denomination to which the Endowment belongs, and they trust that this provision will commend itself to the Lord Lieutenant in Council as sufficient to attain the objects of the eighteenth section of the Act.

The Draft Scheme for the Royal Schools Endowments was considered.

Instructions were given to the Secretary to apply in form as drafted for names of members for the Local Protestant Boards to be inserted in the Scheme:—

To the Rev. W. Todd Martin, Convener, Intermediate Education Committee of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, with reference to the Presbyterian representatives on the several Local Boards.

To the Secretaries of the Diocesan Councils of Arragh, Clogher, Derry and Raphoe, and Kilmore, with reference to their proposed representatives on the several Local Boards. (A copy of the letter being sent in each case to the Bishop of the Diocese).

To the Secretary of the Methodist Conference with reference to the representative of the Methodist Conference on the Farnham Local Board.

To the Rev. A. R. Burton, M.A., Rector of Cavan, with reference to the representatives of Cavan Select Vestry upon the Cavan Local Board.

The Commissioners adjourned.

NO. 8.—ULSTER SOCIETY FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The Scheme remitted by the Lord Lieutenant in Council, with a declaration dated October 11, 1887, was amended, and the Secretary was directed to forward copies of the amended Scheme to Messrs. Carson and McDowell, Solicitors, and to the Rev. Mr. Kingham, Secretary of the Society, requesting the suggestion of a name in place of Mr. Ross, Q.C., Recorder of Belfast, deceased, and asking to have the Recitals and Schedules duly certified and sent in, with the final observations of the Governors, on or before January 28.

NO. 28.—BELFAST ROYAL ACADEMY.

The Draft Scheme was amended, and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to each of the objecting parties, stating that the Scheme has been carefully considered by the Commissioners with a view to give effect as far as possible to the wishes of those concerned, and that as a general rule it seems desirable that the Teaching Body should be represented on the Governing Body, and that the existing position of the Principal ought not to be affected without his own consent; that the Commissioners have therefore felt it impossible to remove the ex-officio Governors as proposed, but that they have modified Clause 6, and introduced a new Clause 9, which they think will give effect, as far as is expedient, to the view of the objectors upon this point, and asking to have the Recitals and Schedules duly certified, and sent in, on or before January 28.

NO. 15.—ROYAL BELFAST ACADEMICAL INSTITUTION.

The Draft Scheme was amended, and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to each of the objecting parties, stating that the Judicial Commissioners have, so far as they felt it in their power, amended the Scheme so as to carry out the wishes of those interested, and asking to have the Recitals and Schedules duly certified, and sent in, on or before January 28.

NO. 26.—THE DUBLIN WORKING BOYS' HOME AND HARDING BEQUEST.

The Secretary was directed to order two copies of the Scheme on thick paper for signature.

NO. 31.—MOAT SCHOOL, LIENASTRA.

The Draft Scheme was amended, and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to the Incumbent of the Parish of Linskeas and to the Earl of Erne, stating that in deference to the wish of the Earl of Erne and of Mr. Trench, that their names should not be placed on the list of Governors, the constitution of the Governing Body has been modified; that having regard to the foundation and circumstances of the school, the Commissioners have thought it right to secure to the Earl of Erne for the time being, if at any time desirous to have a place, or to be represented on the Governing Body, the right so to do, and they hope the Scheme as amended will be found to meet the wishes of those interested in the School; and that any observations received on or before January 28, will be considered.

The observations on the objections lodged with the Privy Council against Schemes Nos. 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 20, and 25, were finally revised, and ordered to be sent to the Clerk of the Privy Council.

No. 30.—TULLIVIN AND BENBAWN SCHOOLS.

The Draft Scheme was amended and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to the Rev. Mr. Sanders, informing him that the Commissioners have carefully amended the Scheme with a view to carry out the views presented at the recent public sitting, and to give effect so far as seemed advisable to the wishes of the proposed Governing Body, and that the Commissioners would be glad to have any final observations that may occur to Mr. Sanders, or the other Governors, on or before January 28, also to send a copy to the Commissioners of Education stating that it has been amended to give effect to their objections.

No. 32.—ST. PETER'S SCHOOLS AND MRS. WRAY'S SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

The Draft Scheme was amended and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to the Incumbent of St. Peter's, with a request that he will furnish written consent of Incumbent and Churchwardens signed, in form to be sent him, and to state that the Scheme has been carefully amended so as to give effect to the wishes of those interested so far as was agreed on at the public sitting.

No. 23.—MAGEE PRESBYTERIAN COLLEGE.

The Draft Scheme was amended, and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to the Trustees, with a request that same, finally considered, may be returned in time for signature on January 23.

No. 33.—LAUREL HILL SCHOOL, COLERAINE.

The Draft Scheme was amended, and the Secretary was directed to send a copy of the revised Scheme to Mr. Kyle, his Solicitors, and the Governors, stating that the Scheme has been revised with reference to the several points of objection, and will, as amended, be considered on Saturday next, January 23, at the hour appointed for the public sitting, with a view to its being then finally settled.

Meeting of the Judicial Commissioners held this day at the Office, 23, Nassau-street, Dublin.

Letter (February 4) read from Rev. J. H. Bernard, on behalf of the Standing Committee of the General Synod, as to the Schemes for the Tullyvin and Benbawn Schools.

To be informed that the Scheme for the Tullyvin and Benbawn Schools has been accepted by the Commissioners of Education and by the Governing Body, of whom the majority are members of "The Church of Ireland," and it would not be possible for the Commissioners now to re-open the matter without great delay and expense, and that as the Scheme was considered in its several stages at public sittings, of which your Committee had notice, and at some of which they attended, the Commissioners do not feel that it would be reasonable on their part to delay signing it in the form to which all the parties directly interested have agreed.

The Scheme for the Merchant Tailors' School was amended in accordance with the suggestion of the Governing Body, and ordered to be brought up for signature to-morrow.

The Secretary was directed to send the following letter to the Rev. John Kingham :—

I am directed by the Commission to forward to you for the consideration of the Ulster Society for the promotion of the education of the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind, a copy of a communication from the Clerk of the Privy Council, remitting to my Commissioners the amended Scheme for the management of the Society with a declaration that the same should be modified as noted in page 7 thereof. You will please inform me at your earliest convenience whether the Society has any observation to make in reference to the proposed modification, and to say that if the Commissioners can be assured on sufficient authority that, by the adoption of this declaration the wishes of the Society will be satisfied, they will be prepared to re-submit a Scheme altered in accordance with that declaration.

In consequence of objections having been sent in to the Privy Council on two previous occasions after the Commissioners had been led to believe that the Society had no further objection to offer, I have been directed to send a copy of this communication as well to the solicitor of the Society as to the Principal of the Institution, and to add that the Commissioners cannot hold themselves bound to take the matter into consideration again without a sufficient assurance that there is no further risk of their being misinformed as to the views of the Society.

Meeting of the Judicial Commissioners held this day at the Four Courts, Dublin.
Minutes of preceding meeting read and confirmed.

The Secretary was directed to send the following letter to the Secretaries, Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, with reference to the Villiers' Charitable Institutions, Limerick :—

I am directed to communicate with you in reference to a Draft Scheme at present under consideration of the Educational Endowments Commissioners, for the future government of the endowments of the Villiers Charitable Institutions, Limerick. These endowments consist of a rentcharge of £22 15s. (Irish) issuing out of lands in Limerick, another rentcharge of £340 (Irish) issuing out of lands in Clare and Tipperary, and the residuary property of the founder, Hannah Villiers, now represented by sums of £21,855 11s. 4d., £2,137 11s. 7d., and £3,541, Government stock, all in the name of the Accountant-General to the credit of an administration suit in Chancery, commenced about 1820, and to which the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests are parties defendant. The trustees of the charity are the Incumbent of St. Matthew's Parish, and the Minister of the Presbyterian Congregation in the City of Limerick, both for the time being, and the rentcharges, with the premises used for the purposes of the Charity, consisting of twelve almshouses and two school-houses in St. Nicholas-street, Limerick, and a female orphanage and two other school-houses in Henry-street, Limerick, are vested in them Trustees. Besides the Almshouses, Orphanage, and Schools, the objects of the Charity include several other charitable purposes in Limerick, and the whole is administered under the direction of Chancery, pursuant to a decree of 1836, and subsequent orders of which the principal are dated in 1844 and 1880. Considerable expense has from time to time been incurred in Chancery proceedings, and substantial charges are involved in passing the Trustees' accounts, obtaining the directions of the Court, from time to time, when required, on the appointment of new trustees and on other occasions. Modifications have already been made in the administration of the trusts, and several changes in matters of detail, owing to changes of circumstances, appear to be now desirable. The Trustees are anxious to avoid the expense of further applications to the Court, and have lodged the Draft Scheme, of which I enclose a copy, with my Commissioners, who have held a public inquiry at Limerick, and are satisfied that the powers of their Act may be exercised with advantage to the charity in enlarging and incorporating the Governing Body, associating some laymen with the existing Trustees and making better provision for the administration of the property. The existing Trustees have proposed to vest all the endowments in this new Governing Body, which they propose shall consist of four members, but my Commissioners are not satisfied that it would be prudent to transfer the Government stock to such a small body, or to relieve them from control. It would, on the other hand, be manifestly advantageous to obviate the expense of the Chancery proceedings, to provide for auditing of the accounts through the Local Government Board, and for inspection under the Endowments Act. My Commissioners think, subject to the approval of your Board, that the safe and economical administration of the money funds might be best secured by transferring the Government Stock, as was done in the case of the Swords Borough Schools endowments, to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, upon trust to pay the income to the Trustees, and I am to inquire whether your Commissioners would see any objection to the preparation of a Draft Scheme providing for an application to Chancery for such a transfer. Of course the details of the draft would be fully open to consideration; and your Commissioners would have the fullest opportunity of putting forward objections and amendments. But my Commissioners have not thought it right to make the proposal to transfer the funds, as I have mentioned, without, in the first instance, being assured that your Board would be willing to accept them, and I have therefore, respectfully, to invite an expression of opinion upon the subject.

Your Commissioners would further oblige if they could say whether it is according to their practice in such cases to sanction the investment of funds in any securities bearing a higher rate of interest than Government New Stock, as the reduction of the income of this charity through the conversion of the Three per Cents. may seriously affect its efficiency. Any information as to the powers of investment which your Commissioners can accept would therefore be important.

If you can favour me with a reply at an early date, the Draft Scheme may be published within a very short time. Should any further information be desired, or should you wish to see the notes of the evidence taken at the public inquiry, you will kindly let me know.

Mr. James S. Macartney appointed to take a shorthand report of the sittings of the Commission to be held at Oldcastle, Kells, and Navan, on Thursday, June 21, 1888, and following day.

EDUCATIONAL ENDOWMENTS (IRELAND) COMMISSION,

1887-88.

APPENDIX A. MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

PUBLIC SITTING—TUESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1887.

October 4.

At the Office of the Commission, 53, Nassau-street.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERBON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAES, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.Sc., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., V.E.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Secretary, WM. EDWARD ELIAS, Esq., LL.B., and the Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., were in attendance.

1. Lord Justice FITZGERBON.—We have appointed this public sitting to discuss the objections which we have received to the draft scheme for the National Association for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, Claremont, the Hibernian Marine Society, and the Merchant Tailors' School, Dublin, being the only three of fifteen schemes published in June last, the objections to which appear to involve any serious matter of principle. In future we intend before signing any scheme to which objections involving matters of principle are received, to have them discussed before us in public. In one or two instances objections have been sent in to the Lord Lieutenant by parties interested who had not appeared before us at all, and who put forward an objection until the scheme reached the Privy Council. This results in very considerable delay and expense, probably arriving in most cases in the end at the same result which would have been attained here if the parties had come before us in the first instance. Though in some cases schemes have been submitted to us with dedications by the Lord Lieutenant, which involve matters of principle which we could not very well decide ourselves without the guidance of the Privy Council; in other cases, if the objections had been mentioned to us we should probably have been able to make the desired amendments, and we hope that in future the views of all parties interested will, in the first instance, be presented before us, as the Act intended they should be, before we sign the scheme.

CLAREMONT INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB.

2. Very Rev. H. H. Dickinson, Dean of the Chapel Royal.—Would it not be more convenient for the gentlemen representing the Ulster Society to discuss first the one point at issue between us?

Lord Justice FITZGERBON.—The more convenient course will be to go through the draft scheme in order. We have got your amended copy, and the first clause on which an alteration is proposed is clause 3. It is suggested there should be eight elected Governors instead of ten, with two ex-officio Governors, as it is considered the attendance would be better with a smaller number.

Dean Dickinson.—That would be fifteen altogether, including the five ex-officio Governors.

3. Lord Justice FITZGERBON.—What is the present number of acting Governors?

Dean Dickinson.—Of actually acting Governors only eight. There are so many institutions in Dublin, it is difficult to get men to act.

4. Lord Justice FITZGERBON.—Fifteen seems a sufficient number. In clause 8 there is a correction as to the amount of stock. The next amendment proposed is in clause 10, declaring the trusts of the endowment "to maintain an institution for the purpose of affording to deaf and dumb children, male and female, a literary and industrial as well as a religious education." The Committee consider it inconvenient and difficult to give deaf mutes an industrial education.

Dean Dickinson.—As honorary secretary for many years of the Claremont Institution, I wish to explain that we were anxious to collect information on the subject, and we went as a deputation to other institutions, and the universal testimony was that the great difficulty in dealing with deaf mutes was to make them capable of communicating with the outer world. The great object was to develop their literary education so as to make them capable of communicating with their fellow-beings, and if time were occupied at Claremont in teaching them trades, they would be diverted from their literary education. At Claremont there is, to a certain extent, industrial education, such as needlework for the girls and gardening for the boys.

5. Lord Justice FITZGERBON.—Is there any objection to adopting a clause the same as was adopted by the Ulster Society, "Giving to or procuring for them such training as may be deemed necessary or desirable to enable them to earn their own livelihood in some useful trade, occupation, or employment." This leaves a discretion to the committee?

Dean Dickinson.—We would be quite satisfied with that.

6. Lord Justice FITZGERBON.—We have had this question of industrial education frequently before us; in almost all instances training of a practical kind had been, by the donors and founders, declared to be part of their intention, yet this intention has almost always been allowed to fall. We cannot force any particular kind of education on people who feel themselves unable to give it with advantage, but we try in every scheme to introduce a clause leaving it open to the governing body to introduce technical and industrial training, and we hope this may yet be done.

Dean Dickinson.—I think that is quite right. The Commission at present inquiring into the training of the deaf and dumb visited Claremont, and if they give a unanimous recommendation that industrial training should be combined with a literary training, the Claremont committee I have no doubt would act on the recommendation.

7. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—With respect to clause 13, which states:—"The governors may establish local committees, each consisting of three or more members of the association in such parts of Ireland, exclusive of the province of Ulster, as they may think fit for the purposes of the association." &c. (Reads clause 7), the committee of the Ulster Institution for the promotion of the education of Deaf and Dumb, and the Blind have sent me a letter on the subject. We have also received a letter from the Clerk of the Presbytery of Dublin, objecting to the restriction of the membership to the Church of Ireland. (Reads letter of August 25, 1887, Appendix B, No. 1, p. 486). The Presbytery objects to clause 3, which requires that every Governor shall be a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church; also to clause 7 by which power is given to the General Synod of the Protestant Episcopal Church to alter the constitution of the governing body; and to clause 37 which does not grant to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland the permission granted to the General Synod of the Protestant Episcopal Church, to apply to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests in Ireland that the scheme may be altered. Since these communications, we have also received a statement dated October 3rd, 1887, from the Dean of the Chapel Royal putting forward the views of his society against these proposals of the Presbytery. Before discussing the matter I had better state, on regards the objection of the Presbytery, that the provision limiting the Trustees and Governors to members of the late Established Church is not our introduction. It is in the scheme of June 19th, 1883, approved by the Master of the Rolls, which is the governing document of the institution. That scheme provides that the trustees and members of the committee shall be members of the Church of Ireland, and on coming to be so, shall be disqualified. No doubt we have power under our Act to alter even a Chancery scheme, but where the scheme is recent we should hold ourselves bound by its provisions, unless very strong reasons appeared to the contrary. On the question of expediency it should be borne in mind that in the Ulster institution the Presbyterians are represented by half the governing body, the other half being members of the Church of Ireland. On the other hand the provision in our scheme, as it stands, does not go so far as the objection and answer appear to indicate. We have no jurisdiction, and we have not attempted to prevent the committee of the Claremont Institution from admitting pupils from Ulster or accepting contributions from Ulster; but we do think it would be of doubtful expediency that they should establish local committees operating in Ulster with the Ulster institution. A common excuse for not giving a subscription is that someone else is asking you at the same time, and it is an equally good excuse for not giving to either. Since 1846 the present system has apparently worked pretty well. We should like to hear what the Dean of the Chapel Royal has to say in support of the proposal to allow the Claremont Institution to establish local committees in Ulster.

8. Dean Dickinson.—To say the truth, my own consideration before the committee was that the clause was only intended in the sense your lordship has expressed, to prevent the establishment of local committees in the province of Ulster, and that it was not, and could not be intended as a restraint on the liberty of parents to choose what institution they would send their children to. The clause as it stands might preclude us from having a sermon preached in Ulster in aid of our institution, or sending a deputation there or receiving subscriptions there. The rest of the committee feel that with these words containing in the clause, "exclusive of the province of Ulster," it might be considered a restraint on us, and we might be charged with a breach of faith if we obtained subscriptions from Ulster or admitted pupils from Ulster. We should wish to see that restriction on both sides removed, that the Ulster institution should be perfectly free as to the collection of money and the admission of pupils, and that the Claremont Institution should be equally free. Let it be like the case of the Royal Schools. A parent resident in Cork could send his boy to Armagh, and a parent resident in Armagh could send his boy to Cork. We also consider that people ought to be left free as to the choice of the institution to which to send their subscriptions. Some people might think the Ulster institution most worthy of their support and some might think Claremont a better institution. As to the compact, I shall state briefly that it is founded on a historical mistake. The compact was made by the then existing Juvenile Association with the Ulster institution, but not only was it not made on the part of the National Association which we represent, but it was definitely repudiated by them. The National Association which we represent are the successors of that Juvenile Association, but the arrangement was made between the Juvenile Association and the Ulster Society, that in future no children should be admitted into Claremont from the province of Ulster, and that arrangement was made without the knowledge or sanction of the committee of the National Association for the instruction of the Deaf, Dumb, and Blind, and the committee reserve to themselves the right of maintaining the work of the association in its integrity.

9. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the date of the arrangement?

Dean Dickinson.—1846.

10. Lord Justice NAHLE.—Are there any local committees in Ulster connected with the Claremont Institution?

Dean Dickinson.—No.

11. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do I understand you to convey that there were anomalies in connection with the parent society existing in Ulster at the time the agreement was entered into?

Dean Dickinson.—There were. My contention is that this agreement cannot be considered binding on the parent association, as it was repudiated at the time.

12. Dr. TRAILL.—Was the report of your own committee to your society sent to Belfast?

Dean Dickinson.—It was sent to Belfast. It was a public report, and published in the newspapers. There are one or two questions I would wish to ask the Ulster representatives now. Have not deputations been sent from Ulster since 1846 into the other three provinces, Leinster, Munster, and Connaught?

Rev. John Kingston (Principal of the Ulster Society).—They have not. I am forty-two years connected with the Ulster institution, and with the exception of some gentlemen who had property in Ulster, no one was asked to subscribe outside Ulster.

Dean Dickinson.—Have pupils been admitted whose parents reside out of Ulster?

Rev. John Kingston.—None whose parents were not in some way connected with Ulster.

Dean Dickinson.—We have received twenty-five from Ulster since 1846.

† Appendix B, No. 1, (d), p. 486.

13. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you consider that Presbyterian parents residing in the south and west of Ireland might prefer to send their children to Clarendon?

Dean Dickinson.—I consider that Presbyterian parents ought to be perfectly free to send their children to the Ulster institution, and Church of Ireland parents ought to be perfectly free to send their children to us. I may state that we are absolutely bound to receive two children from Ulster. We have £450 on the condition that we should always have two pupils from Ulster.

14. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Have you always two pupils from Ulster?

Dean Dickinson.—Twenty-five or twenty-six have been received since 1845.

15. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—There is nothing to prevent a Presbyterian parent in any part of Ireland, having a deaf and dumb child, from sending that child to the Ulster institution. The terms of the old agreement went a great deal farther in limiting both these institutions than anything in either of our schemes. The old agreement prevented the Ulster Society from obtaining subscriptions or dealing with anybody in relation to the institution except those who had property within the province. We thought that hard to carry out, and we introduced this clause in the Ulster scheme, "The governors may establish local committees, each consisting of three or more persons, in each part of the province of Ulster as they may think fit, for the following purposes:—To assist in collecting funds or otherwise increasing the income of the Society; to give due publicity to the notices issued by the governors, from time to time, of elections to fill vacancies in the institution; to see and examine the claims of candidates for admission from their neighbourhood, and report thereon to the governors; to aid in providing suitable employment for pupils leaving the institution, and generally to promote the objects of the Society in their respective localities." I have read the whole clause, and we have merely inserted the sentence in the Clarendon scheme—each institution is free in all respects except establishing rural committees in the same locality.

Dean Dickinson.—I considered the matter carefully, and I thought it inconceivable that the Commissioners could mean that a clergyman of any Church should be debarred from having a clergyman sent preached in any part of Ulster in aid of Clarendon.

16. Dr. TRAILL.—But since 1845 you were bound by that agreement?

Dean Dickinson.—I do not consider we were bound by it.

Lord Justice NAME.—We would have no power to enforce it.

17. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Would you consider it reasonable to have sermons preached in behalf of Clarendon in a district where auxiliaries connected with the Ulster institution at present exist?

Dean Dickinson.—Certainly. I repeat that we are the legitimate successors of the Juvenile Association. I do think the committee will not as a body press any further objection if the clause is understood in the restricted sense.

18. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We must have no ambiguity about it, and whatever alteration is made now, the same alteration should be made in the Ulster scheme.

Dean Dickinson.—We would be perfectly satisfied if the words "exclusive of the province of Ulster" were left out.

19. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—If we do that we will set up a competition between these institutions that up to the present has never existed.

Dean Dickinson.—I do not think it would have that effect. We must take for granted people will be influenced by a spirit of Christian charity, and guided by principles of common sense. There is no envious feeling existing, and I will only say—God bless and speed the work of the Ulster institution. I am satisfied every member of our committee is actuated by the same feeling, and we have not the slightest intention of establishing local committees, or interfering with the work of the Ulster institution.

20. Lord Justice NAME.—It does not appear that you have established local committees in Ulster for the past forty years, or that you have any wish or intention to do so now?

Dean Dickinson.—Not the slightest, but if a parent says he prefers to send his child to Clarendon how can we prevent that?

Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We don't ask you to do so. We will leave what Mr. Shaw has to say.

21. Mr. J. J. SHAW.—I represent the committee of the Ulster Society, and it appears to me that Dean Dickinson has forgotten the nature of his objection. We do not seek to preclude him from getting pupils or receiving subscriptions from Ulster, but from establishing local committees there. He seems to consider they should not be prohibited by express words from establishing local committees in Ulster. If the Clarendon committee were permitted to establish local committees in Ulster, we consider that would be a gross violation of the compact entered into between the Ulster Society and the then existing Dublin Juvenile Association, and if carried out would lead to an unpleasant rivalry in Ulster amongst religious bodies hitherto working in the greatest harmony. The Dublin Juvenile Association was an auxiliary to '46 to the National Institution, and as an auxiliary to the National Institution it had committees in Ulster, and it was the only body that had any connection with Ulster. The National Institution—the parent society—had absolutely no connection with Ulster, except through the Dublin Juvenile Association, its auxiliary, which entered into this compact with the Ulster Society.

22. Lord Justice NAME.—What was the nature of the Juvenile Association?

Mr. Shaw.—It is described as an auxiliary to Clarendon.

23. Lord Justice NAME.—The Clarendon Institution must have worked independently of the Juvenile Association?

Mr. Shaw.—The Dublin Juvenile Association was composed of a number of gentlemen who made themselves active in getting subscriptions, and in finding out pupils, and bringing gird to the mill at Clarendon.

24. Dr. TRAILL.—Was the word "Juvenile" applied to the committee?

Dean Dickinson.—As a matter of fact it largely consisted of boys. I was a member of it when a school boy myself.

Mr. Shaw.—The Hon. Secretary was the late Dr. Kingdall, and he was not a juvenile.

Dean Dickinson.—We had some wise heads amongst us.

25. Mr. SHAW.—This compact has been working for forty-one years with great success, and the Ulster Society under it paid about £800 to the Clarendon Institution for the education of pupils.

26. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Do you insist that bargain is binding still?

Mr. SHAW.—I admit that it could not be enforced in law.

27. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—It would be desirable that each of these institutions should be open to children from all parts of Ireland. They receive voluntary subscriptions, but they should not be in the position of canvassing against one another.

Mr. SHAW.—We submit there should be no local committees in Ulster in connection with the Clarendon Institution canvassing for either subscriptions or pupils.

28. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Are you content with the clause as it stands in both schemes?

Mr. SHAW.—Perfectly content.

October 4, 1907.

Clarendon
Institution for the Education
and Dumb.

Dean Dickinson.—I am quite content that we should be prevented from establishing local committees in Ulster, but that must be distinctly understood as not precluding any clergyman who chooses to have an offertory or sermon for us. If we refrain from establishing local committees in Ulster we should be left free to have pupils or subscribers from Ulster.

Rev. John Kingston.—I consider that would be establishing an auxiliary in another form, and availing the spirit of the compact on which we acted for so many years. The parent society in Dublin concurred in this arrangement, for they discharged eight pupils who were in their institution at Clarendon, and sent these to us for the completion of their education, and we paid over to their funds nearly £300 on behalf of sixteen Ulster pupils who completed their education at Clarendon. When the pupils ceased going to Clarendon, we found our accommodation, which was ample previously, insufficient, and we had to expend £800 on building new dormitories, and £1,750 for building a new school-room and dining-room. We consider that if the Clarendon Institution be now permitted by a side wind to establish local committees in Ulster that portion of our buildings on which we have expended as much would be left idle, and in fact we should be obliged to close part of the institution.

29. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I am unable to draw any clause which would prevent a clergyman from having an offertory or preaching a sermon for any particular object in Ulster.

Dean Dickinson.—I should suggest the exclusion of the clause in both schemes.

Mr. Shaw.—If you retain the clause excluding them from establishing local committees in Ulster that will satisfy us. I entirely agree with Mr. Kingston that as a matter of honor, no such attempt should be made as the Dean proposes.

30. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We have seen both institutions, and had an opportunity of judging of their working. If we simply adopt the provision that the Clarendon Institution shall not establish any local committee in Ulster without the concurrence of the Ulster Society, I think it would meet the difficulty. A local committee could not then be established without the concurrence of the Ulster Society, and it could be made the subject of correspondence between the two bodies if the necessity arose. We should not then be prohibiting the making of a contract between the two bodies.

Rev. Mr. Kingston.—What is the meaning of the words "raising money through local auxiliaries or otherwise"?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—That is in the agreement, but we would have no power or jurisdiction to give legal effect to that.

Mr. Shaw.—I admit it never could be enforced by a court, but it is a matter of obligation between the two societies.

Dean Dickinson.—It never was a matter of obligation with us. As soon as the Juvenile Association was merged with the National Association it was blotted out.

Mr. Shaw.—If you act in the future as you have acted in the past for forty-one years we are satisfied.

Dean Dickinson.—How can I undertake to bind future honorary secretaries of the Clarendon Institution?

31. Dr. TRAILL.—You handed over to the Ulster Society eight of their pupils on the amalgamation?

Dean Dickinson.—It was on that contract before the amalgamation.

32. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you think that under the clause as it stands you could work as you have hitherto worked?

Dean Dickinson.—I have no doubt we could.

Rev. Mr. Kingston.—It would be absurd for us to establish, as suggested, an auxiliary in Dublin or Cork on behalf of the Ulster Institution. We don't wish it.

Dean Dickinson.—How could you prevent a clergyman in Ulster from having an offertory or preaching a sermon for our institution?

33. Dr. TRAILL.—The clause, as Lord Justice Fitzgerald suggests, would give either society the power of establishing local committees with the consent of the other.

34. Mr. Shaw.—I may mention that there are gentlemen here from Belfast, eminent members of the Church of Ireland, Mr. Thomas Montgomery, a divine of the Northern Bank, and Mr. H. H. McNeill, and they wish to state explicitly that the arrangement made in 1840 between these two societies has worked admirably in Ulster, and they are of opinion that if the Clarendon Institution were permitted to establish local committees in Ulster it would lead to an unpleasant rivalry, and to a diminution of the funds of both societies. They are accordingly here to members of the Ulster Committee to protest against any provision being given to the Clarendon Institution to establish local committees in Ulster.

Dean Dickinson.—We don't press that point.

35. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Substantially you seem to be all agreed that the clause may stand as it is.

Dean Dickinson.—I want it to remain a libre scripte that we don't understand any exclusion or restriction as regards receiving pupils or subscriptions from Ulster provided we don't ask for them. Supposing a clergyman or parent did be persuaded the Clarendon Institution, why should he be precluded from having an offertory on behalf of it or from sending a pupil to us? I think the clause should not be restrictive in that sense, or interfere with individual liberty of action.

36. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The only libre scripte is in print, and the words are: "The governors may establish local committees in each part of Ireland as they think fit, exclusive of the province of Ulster." If either of these societies should ever come to exist or be insufficient for the due care and education of the deaf and dumb, the scheme enables you to go to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests and have the clause struck out. I should prefer leaving it as it is, having already passed the Privy Council in the Ulster scheme.

Dean Dickinson.—As Hon. Secretary of the Clarendon Institution I must say I am quite content.

37. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I am sure the two societies can come to an understanding. If the Clarendon Institution had an office in Belfast opposite or alongside the office of the Ulster Society, neither would get as much money as if they remained distinct.

Rev. J. H. Kennedy.—As one of the majority of the committee who are opposed to this clause in toto, I am anxious briefly to explain our attitude. We consider that at present we are not bound to abstain from going into Ulster, and we object to have any restriction imposed on us for the future. Besides, we claim to be the successors of the Derry Institution which transferred its pupils to us at its dissolution. We don't want to force ourselves on any one, but we claim the right to go wherever we are wanted, and we protest against having any restriction imposed upon us, that was not on us before.

38. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you include every county in Ireland outside Ulster?

Dean Dickinson.—We can interpret the clause as prohibiting the one institution against establishing local committees in Ulster.

Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Your action seems to show that you considered you were bound by that one restriction, not having canvassed for subscriptions in Ulster.

39. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We cannot express the clause better than it is, and we will leave it as it is in both the schemes. As the Ulster Society is represented here, I may refer to the matter on which their scheme has been resisted, though we cannot draft the new conscience clause until we get the official declaration. When we receive it we will amend the clause and send it to you (Mr. Kingham) and you can let us know whether it meets your views.

Rev. Mr. Wigham.—We have been in the habit of getting a consent from the parents heretofore, and we would prefer continuing that.

Mr. Shaw.—The practice has been that where a child belongs not to the Presbyterian religion or the Church of Ireland, but is a Methodist or Baptist, the parent sends in a written consent asking that the child should be either put under Presbyterian instruction or Episcopal instruction.

40. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—No conscience clause would forbid that. We will not sign the amended scheme until it is seen by the gentleman associated with the institution, and I hope they will discuss it with us, if it does not satisfy them.

Rev. Mr. Kingham.—When we went before the Privy Council we were under the impression we could not come again before the Educational Endowment Commissioners, after the scheme had been signed and sent to us here Privy Council. If we had thought we could have done so we would have preferred going before you.

41. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—It is with a view of preventing any misunderstanding that we have held this public sitting to-day. There was nothing hostile or contentious about the settlement of the Ulster Scheme, and if we had known in time of the objection we might have obviated it.

42. Mr. James Henry (Solicitor).—I appear on behalf of the Dublin Presbyterian representing a large body of Presbyterians who object to the present constitution of the governing body of the Clarendon Institution.

Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—How many Presbyterians are there in the Clarendon Institution?

Dean Dickinson.—We have none.

Mr. Henry.—That only shows the working of it. I propose to submit that a number of Presbyterians subscribed to the Clarendon Institution, amongst others the Messrs. Shaw, David Drummond, the late Dr. Duncan and others; and in showing that it was intended for all classes of Protestants, I might mention that the annual meeting of the Cork auxiliary was held in the Presbyterian Church; in one town the Presbyterian minister was the local treasurer, and in another instance the Presbyterian minister was the local secretary. Before producing evidence I would submit that the scheme already mentioned for the Ulster Institution shows there can be no possible objection to having the Clarendon Institution governed by a mixed body, that is by members of different communions of the Protestant Church. Considering that Presbyterians have taken part in founding the Clarendon Institution and subscribed largely to its funds, I submit it would be in the interest of the Institution to give Presbyterians a representation on the governing body which would result in largely increasing the Presbyterian subscriptions from the three provinces, Leitrim, Monaghan, and Carrisburgh, and in Presbyterian pupils being sent from these provinces to the Institution.

43. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The question is whether the committee are willing to do so, and if they are unwilling have we the power to compel them?

Mr. Henry.—Whether they are willing or not I take it you have the power, the only matter that might stand in the way is the scheme approved of by the Court of Chancery.

44. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—That does not absolutely bind us, but it shows the Institution was a Church of Ireland institution. If that were so and subscriptions were given to it as a Church of Ireland institution, we should not change the character of it in that respect.

Mr. Henry.—I could not say that the scheme approved of by the Court of Chancery decided that without seeing the evidence on which the scheme proceeded.

45. Professor DONOVAN.—Were there any Presbyterians on the Governing Body before the date of the Clarendon Scheme?

Dean Dickinson.—I may interpose here. When the Clarendon Institution was established it was the only institution in Ireland for the education of the deaf and dumb, and on a broad philanthropic basis, numbers of persons of different denominations, Quakers and others, subscribed to the Institution in its inception, but as far as my memory extends, at least forty years, it was always under the management of members of the Church of Ireland. I should prefer it should remain absolutely a Church of Ireland institution, and in the same way that the Roman Catholic Institution at Cork should remain untouched, and that the Ulster Institution should be an institution for Presbyterians. I consider Clarendon should remain distinctly a Church of Ireland institution, and that the master should be of the Church of Ireland, and the teaching would be more efficient.

46. Professor DONOVAN.—If I mistake not, you had a Presbyterian head master?

Dean Dickinson.—In the beginning there was. He was the only person found qualified, Mr. Humphreys.

47. Professor DONOVAN.—No; he was a Presbyterian minister, Mr. Martin.

Dean Dickinson.—That is so. In the beginning very few people were found competent for the position. The committee chiefly considered the capacity and competency of the man.

48. Professor DONOVAN.—The sectarian constitution of the committee is a modern innovation, and at the time of the appointment of a Presbyterian head master, the committee was formed on a wider basis.

Dean Dickinson.—I have no recollection that the committee was otherwise constituted. On the committee of the Alexandra College we have a professor of mathematics and others of different denominations. It is quite consistent that the committee of the Clarendon Institution, being themselves members of the Church of Ireland, should waive the denominational consideration in favour of getting the best qualified man for the position of head master. They accordingly did the best thing they could to get the best qualified man, even though not a member of their own religious communion.

49. Professor DONOVAN.—Have you any of the earlier reports of the Clarendon Institution?

Dean Dickinson.—The point was raised before and it was shown in evidence that the Governing Body were members of the Church of Ireland, and it has always been so carried on within my memory.

Mr. Henry.—What the Dean has stated rather strengthens my contention, that the institution was originally started on a broader basis.

50. Dr. TRAILL.—There is a very great difference with regard to Ulster, where the Presbyterians form a very large proportion of the population.

Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—In the Ulster case, on the evidence, we confined the Governing Body to two denominations, Presbyterians and members of the Church of Ireland. For instance, you cannot have Baptists on it. The Clarendon institution is confined to one denomination, just as the Ulster institution is to two.

Dean Dickinson.—I was recently before the Commissioners on the Education and Training of the Deaf and Dumb, and I was asked if State aid were given to the Institution, especially with reference to day pupils, whether the committee would consider the introduction of a conscience clause. I said they would. Practically there would be great difficulty if we had Methodists and Presbyterians in Clarendon, for there is no Presbyterian Church near Clarendon, not nearer than Rutland-square, and that would be a long distance to send boys and girls.

51. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—You could not very well send deaf and dumb children in amongst an ordinary congregation.

Dean Dickinson.—I certainly should prefer the Ulster Institution to be wholly Presbyterian, and Claremont wholly a Church of Ireland institution.

52. Professor DOUGHERTY.—In Ulster they are in favour of working with one another harmoniously.

Dr. TRAILL.—You have not the Presbyterian population here that you have in Ulster.

53. Professor DOUGHERTY.—It is not proposed to give the Presbyterians equality of representation on your governing body?

Dean Dickinson.—The institutions, I consider, would work together more harmoniously if kept distinct.

54. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Are the deaf and dumb Presbyterian children sent to the Belfast institution?

Mr. Henry.—In one case the Claremont institution took a Presbyterian child and they undertook that it should not be brought up an Episcopalian. I can produce evidence of that. It occurred several years ago.

Dean Dickinson.—I have no recollection of it. By whom was it given?

55. Dr. TRAILL.—It has been now stated publicly, and it ought to be proved.

Mr. Henry.—The Rev. Mr. Hamilton was the gentleman to whom the undertaking was given.

Dean Dickinson.—I think there must be some mistake. I do not believe such an undertaking could have been given that one child would be brought up differently from the others in Claremont. There is only one form of religious education given in the institution and that is religious teaching in accordance with the doctrine of our own Church, that was always given, and before the establishment of the Crown institution Roman Catholic parents sent their children to us subject to that condition, which we never cancelled.

56. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Mr. Henry, if you are in a position to give evidence that any portion of the existing endowment is money in respect of which Presbyterians have a claim we will hear it.

57. Mr. Henry.—I will examine Mr. Hamilton.

Rev. J. M. Hamilton.—With reference to that case I wish to state that there was only one child deaf and dumb in my congregation, and it was necessary that child should be educated. I went to the office of the National Association and asked on what terms the child could be admitted, and I was assured the child would not be taught the catechism of the Protestant Episcopal Church. That assurance was given to me.

58. Dean Dickinson.—When was that?

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—It is about twenty-three years ago.

59. Dean Dickinson.—I positively deny there was ever any authority for giving such an assurance or that any responsible person in connection with the institution could have given such an assurance, and I have been the honorary secretary for thirty years.

60. Dr. TRAILL.—Who was the gentleman?

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—He was a gentleman in the office. I was not officially acquainted with the gentleman. I went to the office in Dublin and asked the question.

61. Dr. TRAILL.—Was he a paid officer?

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—He was an official in the office. I asked him would the child be received and not taught the catechism of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

62. Dr. TRAILL.—Was that ever brought before the committee?

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—I cannot say; the child was sent in and educated.

Dean Dickinson.—And taught the Church catechism, every letter of it. I deny the existence of any such agreement.

63. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Is the child in existence?

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—I believe the child is in Scotland.

64. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Did the deaf and dumb boy remain a Presbyterian?

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—I cannot say. The family left for Scotland a great number of years ago. I wish to state the funds of the institution were raised largely from Presbyterians. It received considerable sums from time to time from Presbyterians from the North and all over the country before the establishment of the Belfast institution, and ever since then down to the time of the agreement being made between the Ulster Society and the National Association. Many Presbyterians in Dublin still continue to subscribe to the Claremont institution, but the Presbyterians in the North supported from that time forward the Belfast institution. Presbyterians in Dublin consider that having subscribed their money to the institution, Protestant Episcopalians should not take it all to themselves when they were glad to receive Presbyterian help to found it.

65. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you consider when people of different religious denominations subscribe to any institution that they all should be represented on the governing body? For instance, I subscribe to Arden Industrial School.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton.—But Claremont was not an exclusively Protestant institution when it received Presbyterian money.

66. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—In the article of agreement drawn up at the conference in 1810, which was the basis of the understanding with the Ulster Institution, I find this clause: "The following shall continue to be the regulations of the Ulster Institution—that the pupils be instructed in the Holy Scriptures; secondly, that those pupils whose parents are members of the United Church of England and Ireland, do regularly attend that worship, and that all pupils transferred from Claremont be placed under the operation of this rule." Whoever made that agreement clearly regarded the Claremont institution as one in which all the pupils should then continue to be the teaching of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and, if so, it seems to me that the present claim cannot be supported as matter of right. It might be conceivable if pupils of all denominations were admitted under a common clause, and if all denominations of subscribers were represented on the Governing Body, but the question is whether we have any right to alter the constitution of the Governing Body, when it is conclusively shown that forty years ago the religious teaching was according to the doctrine of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the present Charity Scheme restricts the Governing Body to members of the Church of Ireland.

Dean Dickinson.—No one in the community is less anxious or antagonistic to other denominations than I am, but I consider that these institutions built up and conducted on family principles are better managed and more satisfactorily carried on, if they are all of the one way of thinking. I will only say Heaven bless the Presbyterians in their efforts in Ulster. If they will only leave us alone we will leave them alone. If people of different opinions cannot live amicably let them live in separate homes.

67. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—What we want to do is to ascertain the facts. It is plain on that point to which I have referred that forty years ago all the pupils received instruction in Claremont according to the doctrine and practice of the Church of Ireland, the then Established Church. In the report of the Commission of 1858, the children were all returned as members of the Church of Ireland, and in 1880, they were returned in the same way. Those who subscribed their money in former days for the establishment of this institution must be taken to have done so on the understanding that distinction religious instruction was to be given. Nothing could be more deceptive than to suppose that persons people belonging to different denominations subscribe to an institution consequently it cannot be of an exclusive character. Many people subscribe to charitable institutions belonging to other denominations and never think of changing to affect their distinctive character. The constitution of the Governing Body of the Clermont Institution was sanctioned by the Court of Chancery in 1832, and I apprehend that we now have no power to change it.

68. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose Dr. Denham was one of the largest subscribers to this institution?

Rev. Mr. BARNES.—He repudiated the idea that it was an exclusively Protestant Episcopal Institution, and the late Mr. Charles Hope, of Blackrock, subscribed to it on the assumption that it was not.

69. Mr. J. J. SHAW.—As to the proposed alteration in clause 24, as to the meeting of Governors, it is almost exactly the same as clause 23 in the Usher Scheme, and the alteration proposed by the Clermont Committee commands itself to the Committee of the Usher Society also.

70. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—When we get the scheme back from the Privy Council we will carefully consider any amendments you desire.

Mr. SHAW.—As regards the provision for holding the quarterly meetings of the Usher Society always at the Institution, it was found difficult to get gentlemen out there, the Institution being some distance out of Belfast, and the meetings were usually held at the Southern Bank.

71. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We have been applied to in several instances to relieve the Governing Body from the obligation of going to see the place in person. We have had evidence before us of institutions the Governing Bodies of which had not seen them for years. We will not allow that.

Mr. SHAW.—A provision for their inspection once a week half year would do.

Dean Dickinson.—We have provision for constant inspection on our committee. At present when we receive applications we admit with as little delay as possible. Since the number of applications for admission to Clermont was reduced we receive every one immediately on application not wishing to have the delay of an election. The Governors, I see under the scheme, have power provisionally to admit pupils, but every admission is subject to confirmation.

72. Lord Justice TRAILL.—Does not that clause as to the admission of pupils satisfy you?

Dean Dickinson.—No doubt, but practically the children would be admitted, and as regards the admission of pupils, the half-yearly meeting would be of utility.

73. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You have a provision "That if the number of applicants shall at any time exceed the number of vacancies, or whenever the Governors or the association shall so direct, the members of the association shall elect the free pupils," and all the members are to be consulted. You could not deprive them of that right.

Dean Dickinson.—The circumstances are a little altered. When that rule was drawn up originally, Clermont was the only institution and there was a necessity for election. Now we admit every qualified one, every child that is not idiotic that applies.

74. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We may sanction that so long as the number of applicants does not exceed the number of vacancies, but there must be an election where several are competing.

Dean Dickinson.—We will be quite satisfied with that.

75. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there any danger arising from that if sufficient public notice is not given?

Dean Dickinson.—We send out with the reports a little printed form asking people to let us know of any available cases in their neighbourhood. There are always vacancies.

76. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—The Governors or the association can at any time direct that a formal election shall be held half yearly.

Dean Dickinson.—The little solemnity of a half yearly election does tend to stimulate interest, provided it does not tend to check us in prompt admissions.

77. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We will allow you to elect children to vacancies without the formality of an election, subject to the power of the association to call on you to elect half-yearly whenever the number of applicants increases beyond the number of vacancies. The committee have also power to require candidates to be examined.

Dean Dickinson.—What we want to examine is not the attainments of children, but their capacity to be taught.

78. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We might leave out the clause requiring an examination, but they should be seen by somebody.

Dean Dickinson.—The form is generally filled up by the local clergyman and a doctor certifying the child is not idiotic, but is capable of receiving instruction.

Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We can put in such examination as the Governors may consider necessary.

79. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the use of a local committee if you admit pupils without consulting them?

Dean Dickinson.—In a country place it is sometimes difficult to call together a local committee.

80. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—What we want is that the people who are to pay for the child's education, or some one on their behalf, shall see the child. If we leave out the provision as to the examination of candidates, will you be satisfied that they must be seen by the local committee or by a qualified medical authority?

Dean Dickinson.—I think that would be sufficient. As to the 19th clause. It says, "An annual meeting of the association shall be held in the month of December in each year." It has always been the custom to have the general annual meeting on Easter Tuesday. It is a time always associated with Clermont, and I would rather have inserted "Easter in each year" for the annual meeting, and make the accounts for the year coincide with the time fixed so as to give time for an audit.

81. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You are answerable yourselves for the clause as it stands?

Dean Dickinson.—It would be desirable the meeting should continue to be held at Easter in each year.

82. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We will alter it to March or April. As to the objection to this next clause—"in addition to the annual meeting to be held as aforesaid, the Governors shall summon a half yearly meeting of the association to be held in the month of June in each year, or at such other time as the members shall appoint by resolution passed at an annual meeting, whenever an election of free pupils by the members is required to take place, under the provisions of the 14th section of the scheme"—we will put in that a meeting shall be called whenever required for an election, and leave out the half-year.

Dean Dickinson.—The next point is as regards clause 24. "Within one calendar month after the date of this scheme, and once at the least in every month thereafter the Governors shall meet at the institution." A meeting every month is objectionable.

83. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We will make it either quarterly or half yearly, but we will not sanction your never holding a meeting at the institution of which you are the governing body.

Dean Dickinson.—I don't object to that. Our present rule is that we don't meet there at all, but we have visitors formally appointed who visit in rotation and send in their report.

84. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—How often do they visit?

Dean Dickinson.—They visit monthly. It is quite right we should be required half-yearly to meet in the institution.

85. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are you willing to retain a provision for monthly visits by the Committee? We have seen places ourselves that had not been visited by any one of the Governors for ten years.

Dean Dickinson.—No doubt it would be desirable that the committee or a sub-committee should visit monthly and the governors half-yearly.

86. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—As to clause 23, we have communicated with the Local Government Board on the subject of audit, and they state they will be willing to consult with the governing bodies in sanctioning any competent auditor, and when he will act without expense they will be prepared to sanction such an arrangement. In one or two cases they have themselves already audited accounts under our scheme, and the fee they charged for auditing in one case was £1. We have no power of course to bind them to such a sum, but we are sure there will be no excessive charge. As regards inspection the Lord Lieutenant can appoint the inspector, and as to the amount of his remuneration, and we cannot interfere.

Dean Dickinson.—It is a very good thing that there should be an inspection.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We will revise the scheme and send you a print of it, and within three or four days after you get the revise you can suggest any other legitimate amendments that occur to you.

THE HIBERNIAN MARINE SOCIETY.

The Hibernian
Marine Society

There were present, representing the Governing Body, His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, Mr. F. Stokes, Mr. M. T. Moles, and the Secretary, Mr. F. De Lisle.

87. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—A special meeting of the Governors was held on July 18, to consider the draft scheme, and the following amendments were unanimously agreed to. (Reads amendments proposed.)

(To His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin.)—Does your Grace wish to say anything in reference to keeping up the old corporation.

His Grace the Archbishop (Lord Plunket).—I was not present at the meeting at which these objections were drawn up, but those who know more about the Institution than I do seem anxious on the subject; and it would be, I think, desirable to hear what they have to say.

Mr. Francis De Lisle.—A general meeting was summoned to consider the draft scheme, and the result agreed on is contained in the amendments which have just been read.

88. Dr. Traill.—Did they object to the words in clause 25, or to the dissolution of the existing society and the discharge of its liabilities?

Mr. De Lisle.—The Board otherwise considered the scheme generally was such that they had no reason to object to it.

89. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What are the reasons for proposing to maintain the original society?

Mr. De Lisle.—A feeling of honour that they were so bound to maintain it.

Mr. Frederick Stokes, J.P.—I find my name expunged from the list of existing governors and I am prepared to contend that we have always conducted the Institution with fidelity, integrity and success.

90. Lord Justice NALAN.—Are you living in Dublin? Mr. F. Stokes.—No. I suppose I am disqualified on that account?

91. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The names inserted as "existing governors" were the names of gentlemen still residing in or near Dublin.

Mr. F. Stokes.—Lord Ardlough and others were omitted who are resident in Dublin?

92. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The first question is whether you want the old title kept up; the Hibernian Marine Society in Dublin.

Mr. F. Stokes.—I would not change the name.

Mr. Messrs Terence Moles.—Being an old institution we do not see why the title of it should be altered. If you change the name it will involve an alteration in many legal documents and necessitate the getting of a new seal and other matters which would entail expense that might be avoided.

93. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We see no objection to preserving the old name. In that case the new Governing Body will not be a corporation, but in the nature of a committee of the old Corporation reconstituted.

Mr. M. T. Moles.—That would answer.

94. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The next matter is the question of the residence of the Governors. All the existing members of the Society will remain members of the corporate body, but the question is who will be your governing or managing body? Your old qualification was payment of the subscription, and no body now belongs to the institution except those subscribers who form the committee. We hope in future to see it do better than that.

Mr. F. Stokes.—The existing members are generally old men, and it is only a life interest in those that I seek to preserve.

95. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Does the Governing Body proposed in the scheme satisfy you as the ultimately permanent Governing Body? If so, some gentlemen now on the Governing Body might reach during life.

His Grace the Archbishop.—That would be the best solution.

96. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What is your view regarding the provision as to residence in the county or city of Dublin?

Mr. F. Stokes.—In my opinion that clause is not necessary at all. They should be at liberty to select gentlemen residing anywhere. For instance the largest number of Protestant employers are resident in Belfast, and you would exclude these.

97. Dr. Traill.—If gentlemen from Belfast were elected Governors could they attend the meetings?

Mr. M. T. Moles.—It would be desirable to have such gentlemen as Mr. Cairnes, of Drogheda. If he joined us we would be very glad. He sometimes sails here, but not constantly.

98. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Would there be any objection to a provision that anyone who does not attend should be struck off?

Mr. M. T. Moles.—We don't object to that.

Mr. F. Stokes.—Under certain conditions he vacates his office if he does not attend.

Rev. Dr. Moles.—Under clause 3 he ceases to be a Governor ipso facto if for the space of one year he fails to attend any meeting of the Governors. Under another clause "every representative Governor shall be eligible for re-election, provided he shall have attended at least one-fourth of the meetings of the Governors during his term of office, but not otherwise." That is no inconsistency there.

99. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You don't object, Mr. Stokes, to a man ceasing to be a Governor if he does not attend for a whole year?

Mr. F. Stokes.—No.

100. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—And for a qualification to keep a man on that he should attend one-fourth of the meetings. Would that satisfy you?

Mr. F. Stokes.—Yes; assuming the existing Governors are continued.

101. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We don't object. There was evidence on the last occasion that it was intended to enlarge the institution and extend its benefits.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—I object to the sixth clause which provides that whenever a Governor shall cease to reside permanently in the city or county of Dublin, he shall thereupon vacate his office, and I would also refer to clause 11, which deals with the election of pupils.

102. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If you can have an election whenever you choose to give notice, the result will be that you will never have a comparison of the claims of candidates. You should have a fixed time for your elections, and pick out the best of the candidates for admission.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—We seldom have more applicants than we want, and we occasionally elect them in the intervals of meetings in very desiring cases.

103. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If the institution were better known you would have more applicants than vacancies?

Mr. Curtis.—Regularly twice a year we advertise in Cork and Derry for applicants.

104. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—All applicants should have a chance of having their claims considered.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—I think we should have power to select them every two months, instead of waiting for six.

Mr. Curtis.—That would do.

Mr. De Lisle.—We should have power to admit very urgent cases at any time.

105. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If we allowed you to do so, and then have the admissions subjected to the next half-yearly meeting, the tendency would be to treat every case as an urgent one. After the scheme was published a letter appeared in the Press and the Journal, from a writer who signed himself a "Mariner," objecting to the clause that "The children of deceased, reduced, decayed, or poor seamen or fishermen shall in all cases have the preference," and the writer called on the Lord Mayor and other people to attend to secure the rights of seamen's sons. Though then appealed to, they have not acted on the suggestion, and I would rather the objection had been made direct to ourselves. We have considered it, and we think there is something in it. The institution was founded originally for the children of deceased or decayed seamen, and extending it to the children of fishermen, we think it ought still to be kept exclusively for the children of seamen and fishermen.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—We have advertised north, south, east, and west, and we rarely get the children of decayed seamen. We frequently find seamen with large families, whose income is not more than £60 or £70 a year.

Dr. Traill.—It is a most unfortunate expression, "decayed seamen," coming after the word deceased.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—If we could get boys trained for the sea we consider it would be doing a good thing.

Mr. F. Stokes.—I would not apply the funds for any purpose except the purpose for which they were given originally for the children of seamen. I think it would be applicable to the children of Coastguardsmen in the same in which it was given.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—A very large number of the children are the children of Coastguards.

106. Dr. Traill.—I think it would be better simply to put in the word "seamen."

Mr. De Lisle.—There are mariners whose income does not exceed £70 a year with nine and ten children.

107. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It was plainly established for the benefit of the children of seafaring men; and it appears to be agreed that we should extend it to the children of all classes of seafaring men. As the draft stands at present you might have the son of a landman competing with the son of a sailor, and if the landman's son was poorer than the sailor's son the governors might elect him, so that it would be open to the governors to extend the charity to people for whom it was never intended.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—It might be arranged that after exhausting the list of candidates who were the children of seafaring men applications might be entertained from the children of landmen. The practice has been to advertise with large placards in seaport towns. It is a Protestant institution, and numbers of the seamen are Roman Catholics.

108. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It appears to us the situation of the institution does not at all conduce to the institution being known. When the case was on before, it was stated that numbers passed the place day after day without knowing it was a school at all.

Dr. Traill.—You cannot get the sons of fishermen to come up here to attend a school in the city. Sandy-cove would be a splendid place to establish it.

Mr. F. Stokes.—Many clergymen might think it prudent to give the choice to the sons of landmen.

109. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The 13th section of our Act of Parliament is very precise. "In framing schemes it shall be the duty of the Commissioners to have regard to the spirit of founder's intentions; and in every scheme which abolishes or modifies any privileges or educational advantages to which a particular class of persons is entitled, they shall have regard to the educational interests of such class, and where the founder of any endowment has expressly provided for the education of children belonging to the poorer classes, either generally or of a particular class, such endowment shall continue as far as regards to be applied for the benefit of such children."

Mr. M. T. Moore.—If after two or three or four elections we did not get the children of seafaring men it might be left open so as then to apply the benefits of the charity to the children of landmen.

Mr. F. Stokes.—I would apply it to the benefit of orphans and children of seafaring men only.

Dr. Traill.—I think the extension to the children of fishermen was intended.

110. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The education is to be special also. We do not want you to lose the marine character of the charity.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—No doubt that would be desirable.

111. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Whenever a suitable candidate, the son of a seafaring man, presents himself he must be entitled to admission as against any one else.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—We find £800 accumulated, and we come to the conclusion if we could extend the benefits of the charity to other boys and train them for the sea we would be doing a good thing.

112. Lord Justice James.—You are referring to boys who are not the sons of seamen, but who intend to adopt a seafaring life.

Mr. F. Stokes.—I take it that we have no power to admit them.

113. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We will make the clause perfectly stringent that so long as any suitable candidates, who are the children of seafaring men, present themselves, the charity shall be confined to them. It will be only in the event of such a class of candidates not presenting themselves that you will be allowed to admit others, but these must be boys who intend to adopt a seafaring life, so that the marine character of the institution will be preserved.

Mr. M. T. Moore.—As regards the age of candidates, section 14 states that a boy shall not be less than eight nor more than twelve. It might be desirable to have that altered, as a boy of eight is very young.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—That would be only restricting yourselves.

Order 4, 1887.
Nautical Society.

114. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you not power to ascertain by examination the capacity of a boy? Under that you can protect yourselves against the admission of a boy who would be unfit for reception in such an institution.

115. Dr. TRAILL.—The extension of the age gives you power to get in a sufficient number of boys.

Mr. F. Stokes.—The existing Act provides that no children shall be received into any school or nursery unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the corporation that such child is the orphan of a deceased, reduced, or decayed seaman.

116. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—It was agreed at the former sitting that the benefits of the charity ought to be extended to the children of fishermen, and we shall provide that no others shall be admitted so long as there are suitable candidates who are the children of fishermen and other seafaring men. In case there are no such candidates, then there could be no objection to the admission of other poor boys who intended to adopt a seafaring life.

Mr. Thomas CURRIE.—Would you extend it to the children of lighthouse keepers?

Dr. TRAILL.—Under a clause such as Lord Justice FRERGINSON has mentioned it would extend to the children of lighthouse keepers.

Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—We will put in some phrase that will include every variety of seafaring life.

117. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—As regards the ages of candidates for admission, it seems to me you propose to limit the power of the governing body more than the scheme itself limits it.

Mr. M. F. MOSE.—We consider it would be desirable to have a saving clause. If you don't limit us to boys of eight and nine we will be obliged to take boys of seven.

118. Professor DOUGHERTY.—In cases of urgency why should you not be at liberty to take them?

Mr. M. F. MOSE.—Because boys of seven would require a certain amount of nursing.

Professor DOUGHERTY.—The difference between seven and eight is not very great.

119. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Do you find the same superintendence would not be suitable to boys of that age?

Mr. F. Stokes.—We had only one case of a child of seven years of age, the child of a seaman who died of cholera.

Mr. M. F. MOSE.—The boys have to wash and tend everything of that kind for themselves, and if younger it would entail names.

120. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—I think eight is the limit in the charter.

Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—Let mine be your normal age, and you can come down to eight for special reasons.

Mr. F. Stokes.—I think there is a little obscurity in the 19th clause as to attendance upon Divine Service and religious instruction.

121. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—The child must be the child of Protestant parents.

Mr. CURRIE.—If the father died and the mother married a Roman Catholic the child might be a Romanist.

Mr. F. Stokes.—We have always endeavoured to prevent the introduction of anything like proselytism.

Mr. CURRIE.—I would suggest the introduction after the words, "any convenient place of worship"—"being Protestant," there could then be no objection to the clause.

Mr. F. Stokes.—Under the clause as it stands at present we might be obliged to send the children to a Roman Catholic place of worship.

122. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—A child is not qualified for admission unless the child of Protestant parents. Supposing the father died, if the wife became a Roman Catholic she might, no doubt, under the clause as it stands call on you to send the child to chapel.

123. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—It would meet your view to put in the words, "any place of Protestant worship."

Mr. CURRIE.—That I think would meet the difficulty.

Mr. Stokes.—Have we any power to make any agreement for the sale of the school?

Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—For a sale of the interest in the premises in Merion-street, under the existing statute you would require the sanction of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. We will send the scheme, when revised and before it is signed, to Mr. De Lisle for any observations you wish to make. We are going to retain all the existing Governors who are not disqualified.

MERCHANT TAILORS' SCHOOL, DUBLIN.

Mr. R. MacMullen was present on behalf of the Governing Body.

124. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—There is but one objection to this scheme, namely, the omission to preserve the rights of the sons of freemen as defined in the existing deeds. We got no evidence as to the existence of any recognised number of children coming under the particular description, and we should be glad to have some evidence as to that.

Mr. Richard MacMullen.—I would wish to refer the Commissioners to the requirements laid down in the Trust Deed that the members of the Guild of Tailors have a prior claim.

125. Lord Justice NAIRNE.—Is there in existence a Guild of Tailors?

Mr. R. MacMullen.—Not now; the Guild has been dissolved.

126. Lord Justice NAIRNE.—Is not a freeman of the city recognised as belonging to some particular Guild?

Mr. R. MacMullen.—Not now; a roll of freemen is kept.

127. Professor DOUGHERTY.—How many children have you in the school at present, descendants of freemen belonging to this Guild?

Mr. MacMullen.—I think twenty-three.

Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—What is the proof you require of their descent?

Mr. MacMullen.—The Rev. Dr. Leeper was a member of that Guild, and we all know those who were members of it. There is a roll.

128. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—Is there a roll of the Guild as it existed at the time of the dissolution?

Mr. MacMullen.—Quite so, and also of the merchants.

129. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—Have you got these two rolls?

Mr. MacMullen.—We have.

130. Dr. TRAILL.—You can trace them?

Mr. MacMullen.—Yes; we have the names on the registered roll of freemen. There are, besides, 1,500 freemen, and every one of their children would be entitled. The members of those Guilds were Protestant freemen.

131. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Were these Guilds limited exclusively to Protestants?

Mr. MacMullen.—Oh, yes.

132. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Is there a list kept from generation to generation of the members of the Guild?

Mr. MacMullen.—We require parties to show what claims they have, whether on the Guild or on the freedom of the city.

133. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Do you require them to prove they were descendants of members of the Guild at the time of its dissolution?

Mr. MacMullen.—We require them to prove their descent.

Merchant
Tailors' School
Dublin.

134. Dr. TRAILL.—How are you to ascertain their descent?

Mr. MacMullen.—The roll extends back.

135. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The limitation is to the children or the descendants of persons who were members of the Guild at the time of its dissolution?

Mr. MacMullen.—We adhere to that.

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—As the roll existed at the time; we carry out that idea all through.

136. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The members of the Guild of Tailors have the first claim, and then Protestant freemen of Dublin and their descendants?

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—The descendants of freemen existing at that date, not of all freemen.

137. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you admit descendants by the female line?

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—Yes; a man marrying the daughter of a freeman would be entitled, or serving apprenticeship to a freeman.

138. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Did a man become a member of the Guild of St. John the Baptist by marrying the daughter of a member of the Guild of Tailors?

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—Yes.

139. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The 18th clause of the Act seems to apply, and we must ascend the chain accordingly by preserving the rights in question. What do you say as to clause 18 giving power to the head master to expel pupils or suspend their attendance?

Mr. MacMullen.—We wish the headmaster should merely have the power to suspend until a meeting of the Board, when the case could be brought forward.

140. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—There is a fee of ten rent of Rs. 3d. per annum payable out of a tenement or passage in Highstreet, which does not appear to have been received for a considerable period?

Mr. MacMullen.—At the time of handing over the property to the Trustees a case in reference to that was submitted to Mr. Blackburn, but the thing was dropped.

141. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—From what we have seen of this school, we consider it could be made a good intermediate school for the northern part of Dublin. At present it is somewhat restricted.

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—I think we have done wonders when you consider the materials we have.

Mr. MacMullen.—There was a mortgage of £200 on it. We had only an income of £75, and by management we educate fifty boys, and some of the boys educated in it now hold high positions in society.

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—I may state that one of the boys educated in it obtained a Hebrew scholarship in college.

Mr. MacMullen.—Our annual meeting was always held on the 24th June, our charter day, and we would wish that to continue. We close our accounts and our year ends also on the 24th June, that being St. John's Day.

142. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Could you not close your yearly account on the 31st March, and submit the accounts on the 24th June. If you close the accounts on the 24th June and have a meeting the same day you cannot have much opportunity of looking into the accounts?

Rev. Dr. LEGER.—We pay our bills every month.

Mr. MacMullen.—We are most willing to carry out any suggestion made by the Commissioners, but we feel bound to preserve existing interests. The present premises do not enable us to do as much as we would desire.

Professor DOUGHERTY.—I hope you will get out of them as soon as possible and obtain more suitable premises.

The Commissioners then adjourned.

PUBLIC SITTING—MONDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1887.

At the Court-house, Limerick.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAISH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., B.E.D.; ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D.; and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

Lord Justice FITZGERSON made an introductory statement.

VILLIERS' CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

Rev. David WILLIAMS, D.D., sworn and examined.

143. We do not wish the Commission to be prejudiced against us as trustees, owing to our not having introduced a scheme. The truth is we felt we had no better scheme than the one we were administering to propose; the trustees felt that, under the will of Mrs. Villiers, and also the scheme of the Lord Chancellor of 1836, they were absolute unless this Commission had full power to interfere with the will of the founder, and also the scheme of the Lord Chancellor of 1836. That was the reason for the Res of action we followed.

144. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—I believe the school was founded in 1826 under Mrs. Villiers' will.—If I give a brief history of the endowment it would be better, and you would see our position.

145. Have you a copy of the will?—Yes. It was dated 3rd August, 1819. The first thing contemplated by Mrs. Villiers was the founding of twelve widows' almshouses, for which a certain sum was set apart yearly, old money £340, present money £313 16s. 11d.

146. Lord Justice NAISH.—Where are the almshouses?—About ten minutes' walk from this, on what is called the Island beyond the cathedral.

147. There are two schools in connection with the almshouses?—Yes: the Nicholas-street Schools. After those schools and the almshouses were built, there was a large surplus, and the will of Mrs. Villiers declared that her trustees should be absolute as to what they should suggest to be done with the balance of the money. They consulted, prepared their scheme, and submitted it to the Lord Chancellor, who desired that out of this surplus there should be built in the new part of the city a school for Protestant orphans.

145. Dr. MOLLAT.—That is in Henry-street?—Yes; and in connection with that orphanage there were two schools, a boys' school and a girls' day school. These are the institutions which we superintend, that is to say, the Rector of St. Manchin's and myself. Under the will of Mrs. William the parties named as trustees are the Rector of St. Manchin's and the Presbyterian minister of Limerick for the time being. They are to be her executors. If they are unwilling to act then there is a certain step to be taken, but I have been for nearly half a century administering the trust, and I have always found the trustees, the Rector of St. Manchin's and the Presbyterian minister very willing to act. It is largely a labour of love, though we have a certain sum of money for it, it takes up a great part of the time of the trustees, but we feel our respective congregations have a vested interest in it, and therefore we should be very unwilling to recede from the matter. Under the will of Mrs. Villiers, confirmed by the Lord Chancellor, the trustees have each a sum of £40 of the old money for acting as trustees.

146. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What is the property?—You will observe that there were several reports, the Lord Chancellor in 1836 referred it to the Master to report, and a report was made in 1836. The report which got into my hands when I came to the city of Limerick in 1844 was a report of Master Henn of that same year. It has never been out of Chancery. I have been in the Lord Chancellor's hands for the past forty years and upwards.

147. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is the money in Chancery?—Part of it. The £340 for the payment of the widows' annuities, derivable from lands in Counties Limerick, Clare, and Tipperary; the balance of the money is in the Funds, and in accordance with this report of Master Henn, the Chancellor cannot several additions to be made to the payments which we were bound to pay.

148. What is the nature of the payments?—In the first place we pay £24 per annum to each of the widows. In addition to the payment to widows the large institution has to be kept in proper repair. We have £2,541 Old Government 3½ per cent. now, of course, 3 per cent., producing £209 4s. 8d. per annum, that is devoted to special purposes, not educational at all; it is to pay the Presbyterian congregation so much, and the Fever Hospital so much, and to pay also the trustees £10 for each.

149. Where is that fund?—It is in Chancery, and we get the money from the Accountant-General after passing our account for the previous year.

150. Are you obliged to lodge an account each year?—Each year for the last forty years I have prepared an account.

151. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you liable to costs?—We are liable to a little costs, not much; it used to be a very large figure, but we administer now under the Lord Chancellor, and he has a clerk who is pretty sharp about that, and causes us to prepare our accounts in such a way that the solicitor might not draw so largely out of our funds.

152. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Are you obliged to employ a solicitor?—Yes.

153. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What is the cost now?—I think about £15 a year; it varies, sometimes it is more and sometimes less. We paid our local solicitor last year £15 17s. 7d.

154. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—You say your local solicitor, have you more than one?—No, but we pay the solicitors of Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests for whatever they do. Last year £4 6s. 5d.

155. What do they do?—They appear before the Chief Clerk, and insist upon appearing before him.

156. Therefore you have to pay for the appearance of the Commissioners before the Chief Clerk?—Yes.

157. You are aware that under our Act your accounts could be passed before the Local Government Board Auditor?—That is soverely in the interests of the solicitors.

158. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you to pay any costs in Chancery exclusive of what you pay to the local auditor?—No. Part of this £15 17s. 7d. paid by us to our local solicitor would be for his appearance or his representative when the account was being passed.

159. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Then the costs come to about £30 a year?—About £30.

160. Is there any expense incurred on the coming of any change in the office of trustee?—Formerly there was, but in the Chancery I represent the promotion is so slow we have very little experience in that department. When my friend here succeeded after Archdeacon Hare died, I intended that to the Lord Chancellor through his chief clerk, and some steps were taken and he was recognised.

161. What did that cost?—A very small sum, perhaps not more than £1; I don't think even so much.

162. I don't think you could intimate anything to the Chancellor through a solicitor for £1?—It is only fair to say that the Chief Clerk is, for all practical purposes, the Lord Chancellor, and it is not so costly.

163. Is that £2,541 Government Stock, kept as a separate capital sum?—It is kept separate and accounted for separately to the Lord Chancellor in accordance with Master Henn's scheme.

164. First the year's annuity to each of the trustees, £40 Irish, equal to £36 18s. 6d.; three guineas to St. John's Fever Hospital; £8 6s. 10d., that is £9 6s. 10d. Irish, to the Trustees for the relief of poor objects of charity in Limerick; a year's subscription to the Presbyterian congregation, £19 8s. 7d. What is this £9 6s. 10d. applied for?—That is divided, each trustee gets half to give to any poor parties.

165. The next fund?—We used to have a second account, which was a very small sum, and by order of the Chancellor it was transferred to the third account. Our principal sum in the third account is £31,344 6s. 1d., in the new three per cents, producing £540 6s. 7d.; that is also in the funds, and we get the order from the Accountant-General in Chancery. And in addition we have £2,127 11s. 7d. Consols, producing £13 16s. 5d. That is all in Chancery to the same account.

166. What are the purposes of those?—For paying—first the twelve widows.

167. They get £24 a year each?—Yes, I had better state, and that will complete our money, in addition to that we invested, last year, a sum of £500 also in the Court of Chancery, producing about £16 per annum, that was the result of savings. The original decree of the Lord Chancellor, and the Report of Master Henn, stated that there was a balance of some £80 from year to year which would be added to capital; that has been largely reduced owing to the 3½ and 3¼ per cent. ceasing to exist, and of course our dividends have been reduced considerably. However we had savings to the extent of £500, which the Chief Clerk asked us to invest, that was done last year.

168. Have you any other cash or stock?—No other cash whatever, except any small current balance.

169. What other endowment have you?—From what we call Scott's annuity we have the sum of £340 in accordance with the will of Mrs. Villiers, per annum of the old money, of the present money, £313 16s. 11d.

170. Why is it called Scott's annuity?—Because the Mimes Scott, now the Mackintosh Pottery, are the people who pay it to us through their agent, Mr. Martin.

171. On what lands is it charged?—On Loughmore, Drumcliff, and other lands in Clare, Limerick, and Tipperary.

172. Is it safe?—That is hard to say. We live in bad times, but I remember worse times. After the series of 1847 and 1848 we could get no money out of these lands, and the trustees became responsible to the Bank for a large sum for keeping our widows from starving. We then applied to the Lord Chancellor for a Receiver, and after some time we got our money.

116. Do you mean to say you got the arrears as well as what were accruing?—Yes, and we were in no difficulty until lately; there are the agent's letters, we are keeping him up to it.

117. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—The first letter is sending the amount of the annuity to the 29th September, 1886, dated 22nd March, 1887. "I have sent you this out of my own money as there is more than a year's rent due on the estate, and I recommend you not send as much as you have done, as the estate cannot pay it, and I shall not advance again." That does not look very encouraging!—It is not very encouraging.

118. You have been paid up to the 30th September, 1886, in full?—Oh, more than that, we are paid up to the 26th March last.

119. 24th March, 1887, from Dr. Wilson to the agent. "The trustees think it right to inform you that however wise your advice was no bound to act not upon it, but in accordance with the will of the late Mrs. Villiers, and the order of the Lord Chancellor, both specifying we're widows to be maintained, and the amount to be given to such, and the fund to meet payment. We have no doubt that if you fail to obtain the annuity within a reasonable time the Lord Chancellor will order, on in your predecessor's case, the steps that should be taken in the interests of the trust." You got another half year since?—Yes.

120. Do you know anything of the lands on which they are charged, what their annual value is?—I do not. I know something of the lands of Drumcliffe near Eadie, where I have been.

121. Is the money paid direct to you or the Court of Chancery?—It is paid direct to the trustees.

122. Do you keep a bank account?—We keep a bank account, and if it should happen there is a little money we don't require we keep it on deposit receipt.

123. Are you under terms in the Chancery scheme to keep a bank account?—We are not. My experience has taught me that every such institution or charity fund should, in the interest of itself, be administered by a superior power, like the Court of Chancery, it has kept those trustees right for nearly half a century, when just like our neighbors we might have been a little loose and careless, but as we have to give an account each year of every penny we spend to the Court of Chancery, it has realized that we have neither gained £1 nor lost one penny.

124. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you include that annuity of £113 in your annual account to Chancery?—Of course.

125. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—Then your entire income amounts to nearly £1,200?—£1,142 4s. 7d. last year, provided we get the £113 as the interest on the £100 invested.

126. Have your school premises held?—In perpetuity.

127. Do you pay any rent for them?—None for the ground on which we have the almshouses and the Nicholas-street Schools. We pay £12 4s. 3d. per annum for the ground in Henry-street.

128. Have you a perpetual interest in it?—It is a long lease.

129. Have you got the deeds?—No, before I became trustee everything was kept in Dublin; the late Henry Burroughs, whose father had been solicitor for the trustees, was solicitor. And the master and Mr. Burroughs kept the whole thing together and sent us the sums necessary to be expended.

130. Rev. Dr. MASTON.—It is stated that the erection of the schoolhouses and almshouses cost £3,603—do it stand.

131. And you hold these houses free of all rent?—Yes.

132. In whom are the premises vested?—It must be in the trustees, it is all in the trustees.

133. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—I suppose you are aware that unless you are incorporated in some way your title may become defective?—That is a matter worthy of inquiry, but it never came into our heads. There is a clause in the will specifying the portion of land where these almshouses should be built.

134. Then that was Mrs. Villiers' own land?—I don't know. There is a devise in the will of "all that parcel of land situated in St. Macan's Parish, purchased by me from Lord Glentworth, formerly Bishop of Limerick."

135. Dr. MASTON.—What about the house in Henry-street?—The property in Henry-street belonged to the late Sir John Riston, and our yearly payment of £12 4s. 3d. was made to him.

136. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—The evidence we have got is that the place was held under a renewable lease dated 15th October, 1835, at £12 4s. 3d. You have no deeds, and don't know whether it was renewed or not?—No; but so far as I know it is perpetually renewable.

137. What is your first payment?—£288 a year to the twelve widows.

138. The next sum you pay are to persons connected with the almshouses and schools?—Yes.

139. The salary of the schoolmaster of the male school in Nicholas-street is £30, and the schoolmistress, £23 1?—Yes.

140. Are those schools in connection with the National Board?—Yes, both of them.

141. What is the attendance?—The average on the roll for the year ended 31st December, 1886, was: males, 292; females, 218; total, 510.

142. Do you join yourself to the National Board as a mixed school or do you get capitation grants in each of the schools?—About 1875, the two schools being so small in number, the Commissioners asked the trustees to unite the schools for educational purposes, so that there is but one school that draws the grant from the National Board.

143. You have made one mixed school in the sense of the National Board, of the two schools?—Yes, with this exception, that we have a separate school for females, and have a female teacher to give instruction to the junior classes, and in her own schoolroom special instruction in knitting and so on.

144. Is your salaried teacher the male or the female?—The male teacher.

145. What is his classification?—The man who left us in July last came in the Second Division, and he left us First of First. We have got a new man now who is First of Third; he will go in for an examination soon, and although we thought our last man, and so did the Inspector, about one of the best teachers in the south of Ireland, and on the first occasion on which his school was examined for results sen, every child had to be promoted whether he would or not, yet odd to say under this man who is First of Third the attendance is largely increased, so that in the first quarter the average attendance is—males, 362; females, 326; making 688 of a total.

146. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is he a trained teacher?—He is.

147. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—A very small addition to your attendance, then, would give you two salaries?—Yes.

148. Is it an entirely elementary school?—No, we have pupils in advanced mathematics. Our late teacher taught in all departments, chemistry and so on.

149. The next item is salary for a male teacher in the boys' school, Henry-street?—Yes.

150. I believe that school is closed at present?—That school is closed at present. There was a time when that school was the best school of its class in Limerick for many years after I came to Limerick. In fact it existed almost alone in that part of the city. Times have changed, and our school has changed with them. Since Leamy's school was established, and the endowments of Leamy are much superior to our endowments, they were always able to command first rate teachers, and they have a fair staff. Then the Model School took away a large number of the class of children who attended our school in Henry street. The Archbishop of Limerick, who is rector of St. Michael's, has also a large school there, and my notion is that there are too many male schools in that neighbourhood.

211. Rev. Dr. MOLLOR.—The supply of education of that kind is in excess of the requirements.—It is up to it at any rate in my opinion; I shall not say more. Nevertheless, we felt we were bound to make an effort to maintain our male school, but we were exceedingly unfortunate in our last teacher, although he was highly recommended to us; he turned out a failure, and we had to dismiss him in the beginning of the quarter. Then we wrote to others. There was one man here from Belfast, who had passed a very good examination in connection with the University there, and when he saw the state of things, he thought it better to hold on, and then my estimate and myself thought it better, as this Commission was coming down, to wait.

212. Dr. TRAILL.—How long is it closed?—Only since August.

213. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Supposing the provision to be sufficient in other schools, the Model School and Leamy's School, for the class of children who would go to the Henry-street school, whether would you consider it more expedient to increase the boarding provision for girls, or to apply the endowment in some other way?—You have exactly indicated the line of thought the trustees had. I wrote a letter a year and a half ago to the Chief Clerk of the Lord Chancellor on this very subject. Our orphanage requires enlargement, the male schoolhouse is just and parcel of the building, and there is a door which of course we have always locked up communicating with it. We were about applying for leave to expend this £200 in enlarging the orphanage, but in the meantime we thought this Commission would see perhaps there is no use for such a school. We had thought of asking for leave to have the whole building thrown into the orphanage, giving us the room we require, and for which we were prepared to spend the £200.

214. Is there any other orphanage in Limerick or its neighbourhood for Protestant girls?

Yes, F. C. HAMILTON.—There is a Protestant Orphan Home for senior girls.

215. Rev. Dr. MOLLOR.—Have you more applications for orphan girls than you can receive?—Not now; formerly we had.

216. Dr. TRAILL.—Are they all local?—Not all local.

217. How far do you consider yourselves free to go out of the county Limerick?—How is the order in which the cases of applicants shall be taken into consideration. Girls whose parents have resided five years in the city or Liberties of Limerick, the counties of Limerick and Clare, and have lost both parents.

218. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Were those regulations made by yourselves?—By the former trustees, and we have seen no reason to alter them.

219. Professor DECONCHERT.—Were they made under the Charter Scheme?—They were submitted to us.

220. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—We saw a girl there to-day who said she was from the county Tipperary?—Why not, the property of Mrs. Villiers is in the counties Limerick, Clare, and Tipperary.

221. Would there be any objection, in your opinion, to the area of the charity being extended so as to have the three counties in?—Not the least, and practically we have done it. Before I became a trustee girls from Fethard, Tipperary, and Clonmel were admitted.

222. Professor DECONCHERT.—Perhaps you would not object to even a wider area?—Not at all, and if there were not a sufficient number of applications from the immediate neighbourhood we would look to a wider area.

223. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Would there be any objection that in the first instance the children should be admitted from Limerick, Clare, and Tipperary, and the right to admit other children should be subsequent to that?—That is our principle. Our sleeping accommodation for twenty girls is extremely limited. Our doctor is totally opposed to our admitting more than sixteen, though last year we had nineteen, and we have no provision in the case of sickness; we would have to send the girls up to St. John's Hospital or some similar institution.

224. Dr. TRAILL.—How many would it hold if you had the boys' school?—We could accommodate at least half a dozen more.

Rev. Mr. Clarke.—There would be twenty-six altogether.

225. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—We saw the school to-day and the teacher there, and we were all most favourably impressed by the cleanliness and good order. You have a restaurant?—Yes.

226. What are her duties?—What would be the duty of any mistress of an establishment.

227. She told us she took no part in the teaching!—She does not teach; she keeps the place in proper trim and order; she buys all things for them in the shape of clothing and food, and generally superintends the orphanage.

228. The teaching staff consists of one teacher and an assistant?—Yes.

229. What salary do you pay the teacher?—The first entry I have is "one year's salary to Eleanor Hewson as teacher of the girls' school, £25," and then she is put down again, "one year's salary as assistant teacher, £15." How is that?—Because Mrs. Hewson was a teacher of the boys' school, and in addition acted as assistant in the orphanage. She superintended the children, and her duty was, in the absence of the mistress, always to be on the spot in order to maintain proper order.

230. The next two items strike one as rather large: "Thomas Dickson, a year's salary for gardening, £6," and as gatekeeper, £10. Is it necessary to have a man resident there?—He is resident at the Walshev's Almshouses, his duties are altogether there.

231. Dr. TRAILL.—What do you pay the medical £40 per annum.

232. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Then I understand the gate-keeper and gardener is at the institution, not at the school?—He is at the almshouses, his duty is to run messages for the ladies and so on, and is necessary as a precaution to them and to the place.

233. Then there is an item of £10 for heating libraries, are those under the will?—No, not under the will but under the scheme. They are in connection with the schools at the almshouses and with the schools at Henry-street, and in accordance with this scheme of 1844. The trustees' hands are bound; we are not allowed to exceed an expenditure in any one department.

234. Who has the use of these libraries?—The children of the school, and the teachers are the parties who superintend them. When Master Hunt was asked to report he gave a copy of the former schedule that had been adopted in 1830, and specified where there should be an enlarged provision, and amongst the rest he made an addition with regard to heating libraries.

235. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Who can borrow books?—Simply the children at the schools.

236. William Marshall as librarian of the boys' school, Nicholas-street, £3; Mary Jane Marshall as librarian of the girls' school, £3;—Robert, William, of the boys' school at Henry-street, £3; Eleanor Hewson, librarian of the girls' school, Henry-street, £2. In 1850 there is an entry of an application to the Court of Chancery,

Oct. 18, 1887
Rev. David

and a scheme proposed by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, and a counter scheme proposed by the trustees, what was all that about?—The trustees wished some changes. When we made an application to the Chief Clerk he said the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests had a say in the matter and must appear, and they did appear, they put in their view of the trustees, but I think our view was carried and confirmed by the Lord Chancellor.

237. The cost of that must have been considerable. You don't seem to have got very much attention in your powers?—Very little indeed, and from time to time there are difficulties thrown in the way by parties.

238. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—Do you mean by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—I mean by that, involving, as my co-trustee knows, a considerable amount of writing on the part of the trustees to have another put right, a small matter. I think that was whether we should be allowed to expend an extra sum of our funds for one thing.

239. What you would wish would be that your powers should be more elastic?—Yes.

240. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The whole thing that this scheme and counter-scheme were about, was that the annuities to the twelve widows paid at £36 later currency, should be increased to £34 British currency, and that each widow should be supplied annually with a ton and a half, instead of one ton of coal, and £8 be paid to servants, instead of £5, and that £148 dividends which had accumulated, should be applied to the repairing of the building and replacement of the furniture, and that you should be at liberty, subject to the provision for repairs of building and replacement of furniture, to expend such sum in your hotel as you might think right in sending orphans to the seaside or increasing apprentice fees, and that any other moneys should be applied to maintenance of orphans. Does it occur to you it would be an advantage to the charity if things of that kind could be administered by the trustees without going to Chancery?—Undoubtedly, but by this scheme of the Master, confirmed by the Lord Chancellor, we were restricted in our payments, we could not exceed £50 in repair of buildings.

241. How are the children admitted, do you nominate them?—By the trustees; applications come to us.

242. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you give any industrial training in the orphanage?—You perceive by our scheme we are not allowed to keep the girls after reaching sixteen, but all the girls are made useful, and on reaching ten years of age have the several duties of the house to attend to.

243. In connection with household work?—Just so, most of them is told off to do something in connection with household work, and the larger girls have all the work of the institution to do in scrubbing, cleaning, and all that sort of thing, and taking their turn at washing.

244. Do you teach sewing, mending, and knitting?—Yes, and many of these girls make their own clothes before going out of the institution.

245. Would it be an advantage for you to have the power, in the event of your thinking it necessary, to keep the girls beyond the age of sixteen?—Yes.

246. Dr. TRAILL.—Do they cook?—Yes.

247. Professor DOUGHERTY.—But they do not go out as household servants?—No, because they have generally been of a higher class. For instance, I have had four girls there, sisters, who were daughters of an agent of Lord Hawarden, and one of them recollected her father having one of the best houses in co. Tipperary, and having £1,000 a year, and when he died he left a widow with eleven children without £11.

248. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—Have you fixed times for visiting pupils?—No, there are just the two trustees, and we seek each other's convenience in the matter of a meeting. We meet frequently for the interests of the institution. A large amount of time is occupied, and we see each other on an average weekly.

249. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I see you have a power of paying apprentice fees up to £10?—Yes.

250. Do you find you can get any good for an apprentice fee of £10 now?—No. There was a time when we could get beef at 4d., a lb., now everything is double, and our money is consumed in that way, it does not go so far. But in addition to that our income has been diminished by the 34 per cent. coming down to 3, and we were threatened with another reduction, and were uneasy about it.

251. Dr. TRAILL.—Has not the price of food gone down in the last few years?—I don't think it has gone so far down in Limerick as elsewhere. Then with regard to the £10 apprentice fee it sufficed forty years ago, when we had ladies who had separate establishments as bonnet-makers, dress-makers, and so on; they were all anxious to get our orphans for the £10, and keep them in their homes and board them for three years. Motives are totally revolutionized, that class of persons has totally disappeared, and the monster houses have swallowed up these, and now we have great difficulty in disposing of our girls. If we succeed in getting the heads of three monster houses to take in our orphans, they won't board them, and the boarding has fallen on the trustees. The Archdeacon of Limerick, late co-trustee, paid a large sum of money out of his pocket for Presbyterian girls. I myself have done it for Presbyterian girls. That is to say we took the £10, but when we paid 6s. or 8s. for their board and lodging weekly, as we did often, for the two years it would cost us a sum of £15 or £16 out of pocket.

252. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Then you think it would be advantageous to have power to increase your apprentice fee?—Yes, that was our object in applying to the chief clerk.

253. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What about the religious education of the orphans?—It is attended to both by the mother and assistant mother. All the orphans are either Episcopalian or Presbyterian, and they go to their respective sabbath schools, and are in their ministers' bible classes.

254. Have you had any difficulty in working such an arrangement, because we are constantly told it is impossible to carry on a boarding school on this system?—We never have had one particle of difficulty. My first co-trustee was the present Primate, then the Rev. Robert Knox, after him the Rev. Robert Staveley, Rector of St. Munchin's, after him the late Archdeacon of Limerick. My present co-trustee is the Rev. Mr. Clarke, and in administering the trust, although we belong to different sections of the church, we never had a wrangle or quarrel, I am sure I would have had more if I had had a Presbyterian deaconess, and he might have had more if he had had an Episcopalian or Irish Church trustee.

255. Do you happen to know to what denomination Mrs. Villiers belonged to?—She was a Presbyterian.

256. And it was under her will that the Rector of St. Munchin's became co-trustee?—It was. I had a statement to that effect. I have been here now for nearly half a century, and when I came here I had a large number of old men, members of the Church, who lived at the same time with Mrs. Villiers, and Mr. Glover, one of our elders, was about the eldest member of the Church; if he had been living now he should have been about 100 years of age, so that he lived with Mrs. Villiers for a considerable number of years. He knew very well both Mr. Duddy, the Rector of St. Munchin's, and my predecessor, the Rev. Mr. Pinkerton, and was able to testify that Mrs. Villiers was a Presbyterian, both she and her mother. They were of Puritan origin. Both endowed the Presbyterian minister as such over and above his salary as trustee.

257. The Presbyterian Congregation takes a benefit under the will?—It does.

Oct. 26, 1887.
Rev. David
Wilson, &c.

258. In the event of a new governing body being formed for this Institution, would you be in favour of adding to the number of trustees?—I don't see any necessity.

259. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Our experience is that where there are only one or two trustees, if even one of the trustees is really active and attentive all goes well, but there is no security that that will always be the case, and, unfortunately, in a great many instances, it has not been so. We have tried to add to the governing bodies where they are so small, generally some lay element, for the management of property, that would be likely to work harmoniously with the others. Supposing it was left to ourselves to constitute a governing body, possibly you would say it should stay as it is, but if any addition be made to it, in what direction do you think we should look to get trustees that would be likely to be useful?—In that case I should say—one layman from the Presbyterian Church, and one from St. Michael's. I don't commit my co-trustees.

260. In your opinion about five would be enough?—About five would be enough. I have always found large bodies to be unwieldy. If you limit the numbers to five that would be far more likely to do the work.

261. Professor Douglass.—Instead of going to the Presbytery of Munster or the Diocesan Council, you would confine the trustees to the members of St. Michael's and the Presbyterian congregation?—Most naturally I would have more faith in the trustees under Mrs. Villiers securing the right men than either of the two bodies to which you have referred.

262. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Would your idea be that the layman should be nominated by the eldership of his own congregation?—So far as the choice is concerned, for instance, there is a governing body in my Church and a Bench of Bishops in yours, and I would leave the selection to them.

263. I may give you an instance—the Ormond-quay Church incorporated their Deacon's Court as a body to manage all the endowments. Supposing you want to constitute a governing body to work with yourself and your colleagues, of whom two should be laymen, should the Deacon's Court of your Congregation nominate one, or should he be nominated by the Presbytery of Limerick?—I should prefer either the minister himself, or what we call the Session, because they are the parties interested, and it is evident Mr. Villiers wished to give those two congregations the benefit.

264. Professor Douglass.—The Members of Session are elected by the congregation?—The members of the Session are elected by the congregation.

265. In that it corresponds to the Select Vestry very much?—Yes.

266. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In what parish are the Nicholas-street schools?—I understand St. Michael's. Henry-street is in St. Michael's.

267. In these only our Presbyterian congregation in Limerick?—That is all.

268. Professor Douglass.—Under whose management are the Nicholas-street National Schools?—Under my management, that is to say as a matter of convenience, and for correspondence with the Commissioners of National Education. I take the management of the one series of schools over at St. Nicholas, and the Rector of St. Michael's has the management and correspondence for the female school, Henry-street.

269. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I believe it is only very recently that the Henry-street school was attached to the National Board?—Only last year.

270. Was that on account of any objection on the part of your colleagues?—No; for a time we did not want it, and we have found latterly that for its sake of the education itself, and keeping the teachers up to the mark, it would be a great advantage to have it placed under the National Board to get the benefit of inspection, &c.

271. Have the results satisfied you?—Oh, yes; the school is an interesting school, and last week several additions were made to it.

272. Professor Douglass.—Is there a parochial school near the Nicholas-street schools?—There is a school, I think, under Roman Catholic management, and the Protestant Dean has a school about 400 pupils off.

273. Lord Justice NAISH.—What was Mrs. Villiers' maiden name?—Scott, her mother was Mrs. Scott.

Rev. Wm. J. Clarke sworn.

Rev. Wm. J.
Clarke.

274. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the Rector of St. Michael's?—Yes.

275. How long have you held that post?—Since September, 1883. I succeeded the late Archbishop of Limerick.

276. As Rector of St. Michael's you are one of the Governors of the Villiers' Charity?—Yes.

277. You have heard the evidence that Dr. Wilson has given?—Yes.

278. You can add any statement you wish. As regards the future management, is there any suggestion you would like to make?—I have heard the evidence that Dr. Wilson gave, and I quite concur. If I were asked what would be the best means to elect if the trustees were increased, I would say either myself or my Select Vestry should nominate. I would rather have the nomination of the lay trustee myself, or if the Commissioners would wish it, the Select Vestry of my parish.

279. Some of the schools are in a different parish—whether would you think it better that the Select Vestry should have the nomination, or that the nomination should be made by the Diocesan Council?—I would rather myself in the first place, and my own Select Vestry in the second place, and if you would not wish to have either of those, then I would be satisfied to have whatever you would decide on.

280. Do you think four is a large enough governing body?—I think so.

281. Rev. Dr. MASON.—If only one parish is to be represented, which parish is it to be?—St. Michael's.

282. Would the other parish be satisfied to have its school administered without any representation?—There is no other parish.

283. I thought the two institutions were situated in different parishes?—There is one of the Villiers' schools situated in St. Michael's.

284. The parish in which that school is situated would have no representation?—The school has no connection with St. Michael's parish whatever.

285. Dr. TRAVERS.—Do none of the children of St. Michael's parish go to the school?—The children going to the school I fancy are drawn from a great many parishes; we don't refuse any children that wish to come.

286. Are the parochial schools in that parish district from the Villiers' School?—There is, I understand, a regular parochial school under the National Board in St. Michael's parish.

287. Is that one of the schools that led to the boys' school falling off?—One of those that helped is that.

288. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I presume, if a governing body of four trustees was formed, you would rather they should have a discretionary power of electing the education and extending it to technical education?—Yes, if you added to the number of trustees, I would like their powers to be defined; I fancy they would not be paid trustees, as Dr. Wilson and myself, and if you would wish to give them power like ours, I would like that these would be set out.

388. Professor DORRINGTON.—You don't regard yourself as having a vested interest in this trust?—As master of St. Menetrix's, I would think so.

389. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Payment is made on the ground that you examine the pupils monthly in literature and the Christian religion—I don't know on what grounds the payment is made.

391. That is what is stated in the Report of 1880—I do really save work for the £38 odd that I get that I would do for three times the amount for anything else.

392. Professor DORRINGTON.—I presume the payment is made under the Chantery scheme?

Rev. Dr. WILSON.—The payment is made under the will of Mrs. Villiers.

393. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—There could be no question at all about your vested interest in that payment. Should you see any objection that we should provide that in future your successors should not have it?

Rev. Mr. Clarke.—I would certainly. I would like my successors to have all the same rights and benefits as I have myself, unless they give it up, as provided in the will.

394. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—They have duties to perform, I think, in connection with the almshouses?—Yes.

395. One of the objections to having a governing body of an even number is that they may from time to time be equally divided in opinion upon some question?—In that case I would have the senior trustee in the chair, and would give him a casting vote.

396. I was just going to ask you whether you thought that fair or not?—Dr. Wilson is the senior trustee at the present time. I was very anxious about that part of the evidence that referred to the payment of the master's salary in Henry-street. I was very anxious that the Commissioners in considering it would give us the liberty of diverting that part of the endowment, so as to make our orphan school in Henry-street a better school, give us larger powers, and enable us to have, perhaps, an assistant teacher there.

397. Speaking generally, what occurs to us is that elementary schools, that is to say, schools that give the education that is to be got in a National Board school, don't depend at all on an endowment. The National Board schools seem to be as good schools as any others, whether endowed or not, and therefore the first object to be looked after about this fund is to try by its aid to give a better education. In the model schools, that can be given to a certain extent, but they stop short of Latin and French, and technical education; education of that sort is very badly endowed and provided for, so I presume what you would propose would be that you should have power, if you keep up a boys' school, to give a better class of education, and you should not be bound to keep it up if that class of education is given at Leamy's School or elsewhere, and that you should enlarge the accommodation for orphan girls?—Yes.

398. Where do your girls come from—what class of life?—We have had more applications than we could find places for sometimes, and we are sometimes without an application, but generally speaking we have more than we can admit.

399. When a vacancy occurs what steps do you take to make it known?—I don't know that we have advertised lately.

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—We don't require it at all—the applications are always before us in advance.

400. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Could you tell us how the religious denominations of the girls are divided?

Rev. Mr. Clarke.—Do you mean in the election?

401. I mean in the school as it stands at present?—The trustees, in accordance with the powers vested in them by the will for managing all those things, have decided on dividing the number equally; we have a place for ten Episcopalians, and for ten Presbyterians; the numbers are very rarely ten each, we have only sixteen now, for instance.

402. Professor DORRINGTON.—Are they divided equally?—I have at present nine Episcopalian children in the school, Dr. Wilson has the remainder.

403. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—But you aim at having the numbers about equal?—Yes.

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—A short time ago the Presbyterians predominated; then, of course, when they came to be apprenticed out and there were vacancies, it was only fair the Episcopalians should get their turn, and although we aim at having half-and-half, you can easily see at one time one denomination may predominate.

404. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Supposing you aim at having half-and-half, and it was the turn of a candidate of one denomination to make them equal, and although you had a candidate of that denomination yet there was a more urgent case of the other denomination, have you any rule that would prevent your accepting that candidate?

Rev. Mr. Clarke.—The more urgent case is always taken.

405. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—You generally give the preference to the more urgent case?—To the more urgent case.

406. And the result is that each denomination gets about an equal number of appointments?—Yes.

407. It would seem, then, that the wants are about equal of each denomination?—Yes.

408. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—We will ask you at your own convenience to meet together, you and Dr. Wilson, who have had such long experience of this place, and to go fully and carefully through your position both with regard to the property, the constitution of the governing body, and the administration of the charity. Bear in mind, we have no power to alter the trusts of what is not educational, the Widows' Almshouses, the fees for the clergy, or those other matters in the will; but we have complete power, inasmuch as they run less than the educational endowment and derived from the same source, to arrange for their management. As regards the schools in all details, it is entirely open to us to remodel the thing; having regard to Mrs. Villiers' intentions, there is nothing else to guide us. And we will be glad to have from you the suggestions that your experience enables you to give. We will then draw up a draft scheme, and let you see it before we publish it, and you will afterwards have an opportunity to object to it. We don't bind ourselves to accept your suggestions, but we will largely consider them. We will expect to hear from you.

409. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—You might consider whether the funds should remain in Chancery or be vested in the trustees?

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—I think it might be very desirable that we should have it under our own control; it would save a vast amount of correspondence as well as expense.

410. Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—There is a matter in connection with the Villiers' School I should like to mention. I see that a schoolmaster in Henry-street, examined before the Commission, which reported in 1881, was asked "In what rank of life are the boys?" "Gentlemen's children," he answered "all of them, gentlemen's and mechanics." I believe now it is proposed to abolish that school altogether. I think the abolition of a school that was endowed originally for the education of the poor will have an effect upon the distribution of other endowments left for the poor also. One of the reasons given for the abolition of this school as a poor school is that Leamy's School is near it and the Model School near it. A question may arise as to the distribution of Leamy's endowment subsequently, and therefore I think before this was abolished it should be ascertained if there are poor Protestants in the city who would avail of the education to be given there, if it was ordained as a poor school according to the intention of the testatrix.

Oct. 16, 1887.
 Rev. W. J.
 Clarke.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Of course that would be quite necessary to consider, especially when we come to deal with the other endowment, but as far as I remember there is nothing in Mrs. Villiers' will specifying the class of children to benefit. It is only on the assumption that there is other provision for the poorer children that this school would be done away with.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—I see in the same Report a similar proposition was made with regard to Dr. Hall's Charity; it was proposed to abolish that and to amalgamate the endowment with the almshouses, and those seems to be a general system of abolishing school endowments for the poor Protestants of the city and amalgamating them with the other charities. I think that is very unfair, first to the poor Protestants, and then to the city, and then to us Catholics, when we are claiming a share in the neutral endowments.

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—We never made any distinction in the admission of children to that school owing to their social rank, and we have educated there Presbyterians and Episcopalians orphans without their paying one penny of school fees.

311. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What the Bishop suggests is that if the school in Henry-street, which would take poor children as well as the latter class, were closed there would be a larger number of children to be thrown on the other funds available.

Rev. Mr. Clarke.—We have no objection in the world to keep the school open if we could be supplied with pupils, but we object to keep a sickly school staggering on with four or five pupils.

312. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was the smallness of the number of pupils the only reason for not maintaining the school?—That is the only reason.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In fact the school cannot be said to be closed, because you are bound to pay your master.

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—I may state, as a matter of fact, that the school is not closed, but we were unwilling to hasten our action in the matter knowing this Commission was coming on.

313. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I presume you will not appoint a new master until we see what is to be done?

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—No, certainly.

314. Lord Justice NABH.—What was the number of boys when the last teacher was there?—When the man left who was with us only a short time, there were six or seven on the roll.

315. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You never had any boarding department for boys?—Never, and I have seen sixty boys on the roll of that school.

316. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The fact seems to be that the boys were drawn away by the opening of other schools in the neighbourhood?—That was one element in the case, we were also unfortunate with regard to teachers, and the only teachers we could get, owing to the small endowment, were teachers who had a profession before them; one became, for instance, a minister of a section of the Church, and another went to another department.

317. Lord Justice NABH.—Can you tell me exactly what did the scheme provide with reference to the boys' school at Henry-street, did it give any direction as to the class of children to be taken in?—Nothing.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—I see in the Blue Book of 1858, that according to the Chancery scheme this school was endowed for the education of poor male children.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—There is no class that feels poverty more than the children of men who have been in a better position in life and have left no means.

318. Lord Justice NABH.—Did the boys taken in at the Henry-street school pay fees?—They did.

319. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are there not in the neighbourhood of Henry-street parochial schools or other schools under Protestant management?—Yes, there are.

320. What elementary schools are there close to you?—Rev. Mr. Clarke.—St. Michael's Parish School.

321. Is that in connection with the National Board?—Yes.

322. How near is that to the building in Henry-street?—Three or four minutes' walk.

323. Then is there public provision for elementary education for Protestant children under Protestant management in the neighbourhood?—I think so.

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—As a Presbyterian minister I never interfere with the children of members of my Church going where the parents choose, the result is some go to the Model School, some to Leamy's, and some to Villiers'.

324. Lord Justice NABH.—Was the education given at the Henry-street school the same as would be given in a National school?

Rev. Dr. Wilson.—It was latterly, with the addition of classics.

325. Dr. TRAITS.—Has the Rector of St. Michael's, or the Presbyterian minister, at any time declined to act as trustee under this will?—Never.

326. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I presume in one either of these official trustees declined to act, either himself or his congregation would be the proper authority to appoint someone in his place?—There is a provision under the will for appointing in that case.

*LEAMY'S FREE SCHOOL.

Very Rev. Thomas Banbury, Dean of Limerick, sworn.

Very Rev.
 Thomas
 Banbury.

327. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you sit on the part of the trustees of Leamy's School?—Yes, I have been deputed by them to attend.

328. I believe the school was originally founded under a will?—Yes, the residue of the founder's property was given for the purpose.

329. The residue was stated to be given to his executors to be by them applied to the "education of the poor in Ireland, principally those in and about Limerick city, as they, my executors, in their better judgment should deem meet, to give this bequest the most extensive efficacy"?—Yes, but I may state, we work under a Chancery scheme.

330. The executors did not act, and the Lord Chancellor made an order in 1842 for the purchase of premises and the establishment of the school, in which a system of education, subject to the approval of the Lord Chancellor, should be carried out; "that part of the daily instruction should consist in reading the Holy Scriptures, without note or comment, and for that the scholars should during an hour each day be placed in two separate rooms, the Protestants in one room, and the Roman Catholics in another, and while there the Protestants should read the Holy Scriptures without any restrictions, and the Roman Catholics should read such portion of the Holy Scriptures as were contained in four small books published by the National Board." That system remained in force from 1844 to 1874. Is that scheme now in force?—Yes, and I am here on behalf of the Governors, to say we are satisfied with this scheme, and don't desire it should be altered. Application was made to the Governor by your Commission to furnish a draft scheme, if we thought fit, and our reply was, that we were satisfied with the scheme under which we at present work, and considered that the school was being efficiently conducted so far as the funds at our disposal permitted.

331. What is the endowment?—The property amounts to over £10,000, all invested in the Three per Cent. It is in Chancery, the money is paid under power of attorney, and lodged in the Provincial Bank, and the Governors draw. The whole income of the charity amounts to about £400 a year, but included in that sum are pupils' fees.

332. I find that in 1880 the endowment was £10,245 11s. 6d. consols, and £353 6s. 9d. cash in bank!—That is right so far as the capital sum invested in consols is concerned, but the cash balance has been considerably cut down since, as the expenditure has exceeded the income.

333. Who are the Governors?—Lord Enly, the Bishop of Limerick, Dr. Graves, the Ven. Archdeacon Hamilton, Dr. Kane, Sir James Spaight, Mr. Robert Hart, Colonel Mansell, Captain Vanderkate, Lord Clarendon and myself.

334. How were they appointed?—They were appointed by the Court of Chancery; when a vacancy occurs, we recommend a name to the Court, and the Court usually sanctions the appointment made by the Governors. I find eleven Governors were named by the first order, with power of re-election subject to the approval of the court. Six additional Governors were nominated in a second order in addition to the survivors of the original eleven. Two vacancies have since been filled, but at a cost of £20 for each, consequent on securing the approval of the Lord Chancellor.

335. An application for an alteration of the scheme appears to have cost about £370?—Unfortunately there was considerable litigation as regards this trust at one time, and the expenses were very considerable. The expense of appointing Governors is ridiculously large £36 or £37.

336. How does it cost that?—Chancery costs.

337. Rev. Dr. Monro.—It costs £20 to get the approval of the Court of Chancery for each Governor?—That is what it costs. We hesitate to nominate when we have merely one vacancy, we have on more than one occasion waited until we had two vacancies, as it saves the expense of appointing two is not more than the expense of appointing one, but the particular of the costs I cannot inform you of.

338. What is the number of pupils in attendance at present?—In the male school on the roll at present there are forty-five boys, of these twenty-nine are paying and sixteen free.

339. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What is the amount of payment?—£2 a year, that is under the scheme. We are limited in the number of free pupils to twenty, we cannot have more than twenty under the scheme, it happens we are four short of our number on the present day, but the probability is that it will be filled up shortly. We sometimes are quite up to the number, and sometimes not.

340. Now, the girls?—Sixty-five on the roll.

341. How many of them are free?—Twenty, the full number, and forty-five paying.

342. Do they pay the same fee as the boys?—The same.

343. Lord Justice Farnham.—Can you tell us what the average attendance is?—The average attendance of boys thirty-five, and of girls, fifty-five.

344. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What is the class of education given in the school?—Good English education, French, and chemistry.

345. Is it beyond the National Board subjects?—Quite beyond it. The boys' school is an intermediate school purely. The girls' school partly primary and partly intermediate. The girls' school is a mixed school, boys under the age of nine years being admitted; when they exceed that age they are admitted to the male school.

346. How many of the sixty-five are in the primary department?—I should say about half.

347. Dr. Traill.—I ascertained this morning that they are not learning French?—Oh, they are. We have not a French mistress now, a little time ago we had, but we were obliged to dispense with her services in consequence of want of funds. We are greatly hampered as regards funds. You might have seen that the schoolrooms were very unsatisfactory in appearance, unfurnished; going on as we are we exceed our income.

348. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is there no attempt made to increase the funds except by fees from the children?—How could we increase it?

349. By getting people to help you by putting their hands in their pockets?—That is not very easily done.

350. Now in mind you have a capital sum of £10,000?—We have to give the master a large salary, and the assistant master, and the mistress, under the scheme, and then there are very considerable expenses keeping up the building, it is very large, suited to double the number of boys.

351. Rev. Dr. Monro.—Do you send up pupils to the Intermediate examinations?—Yes.

352. We learned at the school that six girls went up and four passed last year?—Yes.

353. Did any boys go up?—Yes, I remember two boys went up straight into the College of Surgeons.

354. With forty-three boys in an exclusively intermediate school how do you account for the small number going up to the Intermediate Examinations?—I think we have not masters enough.

355. You have a head master and an assistant?—Yes.

356. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do the governors meet at any fixed time?—On the first Wednesday of every month at the Board Room.

357. What is a quorum?—We have no specified quorum.

358. What is the usual attendance?—It varies from six to three, I don't think we ever transacted any business when less than three were present.

359. What are the religious denominations of the pupils?—At present there is one Roman Catholic boy and seven Roman Catholic girls.

360. That is right out of 108?—We had a much larger number a little time ago.

361. As you tell us that the governors are satisfied with the scheme, how do you reconcile that with there being only ten per cent. of Roman Catholics in the school, the scheme contemplating that they should be taught as well as Protestants?—In February, 1885, the Roman Catholics were all withdrawn in a body, we then had twenty-seven Roman Catholics in the girls' school, and they were all withdrawn.

362. Rev. Dr. Monro.—Then the Catholics don't appear to be satisfied with the school as it is at present conducted?—I presume not.

363. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do any of the Catholic Governors attend?—No, Dr. Kane did for a long time, but he ceased to attend recently.

364. Are there any Roman Catholic governors at present on the body except Lord Enly and Dr. Kane?—That is all, the Roman Catholic Bishop is not, the late Roman Catholic Bishop was.

365. Then the governing body has practically become Protestant, and practically none but Protestant children attend the school?—Not from any act on our part.

366. I suppose we may take it that the resolution of satisfaction with the existing state of affairs was one arrived at by the Protestant members of the Board?—Certainly, they only attend now. We are not satisfied with our endowment, we want more money.

367. How many pupils in the school building calculated to accommodate?—Certainly more than double the number of those attending. There are four very large schoolrooms, of which two are now in use.

368. Lord Justice Farnham.—If the other two were utilized would they not hold considerably more than double the present number?—I think the present schoolrooms would hold one-third more than we have.

Oct. 26, 1947.

Very Rev.
Thomas
Barbery.

certainly more than one-third in the boys' room, and perhaps one-third in the girls'. The girls at one time amounted to over 90.

369. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I should say each of the four schoolrooms would hold about 100!—About 100.

Lord Justice NAIK.—I see the Rev. Benjamin Jacob stated there was school accommodation for 500.

370. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—At all events there are four schoolrooms and each of these would fairly accommodate 100 pupils?—At least.

371. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—And if you had 400 in attendance, each of whom was paying over £1 a year instead of £2, your income would be very much larger than it is?—But you see it would entail a very much greater expenditure as regards teaching staff.

372. The money, I presume, is all paid half yearly by the Court of Chancery?—Yes.

373. How are the trustees' accounts kept?—They are kept by the paid secretary, he gets £20 a year.

374. What are his duties?—Just to keep the accounts and send out notices and summon the meetings. We have the children examined annually, and I present the last report of the examiner, you will find that it is very good.

375. Dr. TRAILL.—Who was the examiner?—Mr. Dewd.

376. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What is he?—He is a clergyman of this diocese belonging to the Church of Ireland, he is Diocesan School Inspector.

377. He is principally engaged in testing the religious knowledge given in schools?—Yes, but he is quite competent to test the other branches of knowledge, he was a scholar of Trinity College.

378. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—[Reads report of examiner.] Now, the expenditure. The first salary paid is Halpin, 5s. a month, a caretaker. Then Mr. Mercer?—He is the head teacher, he gets £100 a year, and a capitation grant of £1 over the number of twenty children.

379. He gets no capitation on the free pupils?—No, but on the other pupils in excess of twenty he gets a capitation grant of £1, that is under the scheme of the Court of Chancery.

380. The next is Mr. Moore?—He is second master, he was appointed under this scheme too.

381. What does he get?—£40, and he has 5s. capitation when the head master gets £1.

382. Then there is the servant, Miss Muller, £4 5s. 4d.?—That is for keeping the school premises in order.

383. Miss Harrold?—She is a teacher in the female school, there is a head mistress, Miss Mercer, who gets a salary of £50 a year, and her assistant gets £30. There is also a mistress, she gets a smaller sum, Miss Croston.

384. Is there any difference in the instruction given at Leamy's School to girls, from that given at the Villiers' School?—It is pretty much the same, I am not sure whether they teach French at Villiers' School.

385. What class of children attend the school?—We have a variety of classes in Leamy's School, we have had children of the gentry, and children of the most humble parents, we have had children of domestic servants on the free list.

386. Are the children attending Leamy's School at present, taking them all round, fairly to be described as children of the poor?—The free pupils are quite poor, but not the others.

387. How are the free pupils appointed?—By the governors, the application is made to them.

388. How does it happen that there are not the full twenty at present?—It varies, sometimes we have more applications than we have vacancies, and sometimes for a very short time the numbers fall away, people moving from the city.

389. Dr. TRAILL.—You have thirty-six out of a possible forty?—We have.

390. Lord Justice NAIK.—How are they selected?—By the governors on the merits of the case.

391. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Then the return from an endowment intended for the poor in Ireland would appear to be thirty-six to forty free pupils receiving daily education. Do the governors consider that a reasonably satisfactory return for £10,000?—You see we are sitting under the Court of Chancery Scheme.

392. Yes, but you gave us an opinion that you don't want that altered?—I have my own opinion as regards the Leamy School, I am here now to represent the views of the majority of the Protestant governors, because the Roman Catholic governors have not taken any part in the school for a considerable time. Since I have been appointed a governor I have not seen any Roman Catholic governor except Dr. Kane, and he only was present for a short time. But I came here to state the views of the majority of the Protestant governors. I have my own views, but I suppose you don't want to hear them.

393. We should wish to hear them, bearing in mind that in the first place the usefulness of the endowment does not seem to extend to as many people as Leamy contemplated, and also that the working of the Chancery scheme is really the subject of our investigation?—May I ask, do you contemplate altering the Chancery scheme, is it in your power?

394. Certainly. Not to change it for change sake, but if it is not working properly. If we came to the conclusion that forty children of one religious denomination did not represent the extension of this endowment to all those for whom Leamy intended it, we would you propose to act about increasing its usefulness?—My opinion is that it ought not to be kept up at all as a primary school, it ought to be established as a purely intermediate school; there is a great want for a Protestant intermediate school in Limerick, not only in the city but for the district around. There are plenty of primary schools, there is the model school, a first-rate school; there is a large Jesuit school—I am now speaking of the opportunity for the education of the poor Protestants—there is St. Michael's School conducted under the National Board by Archbishop Hamilton, there is Mr. Gregg's School, which is a large school, and I consider that the Holy School, and the Parochial School of St. Munchin's are quite sufficient for the poorer class of Protestants in that part of the city of Limerick.

395. Lord Justice NAIK.—What class do you think ought to be admitted to it if it were converted into an intermediate school?—The poorer class—providing boys from the primary schools that require further instruction and more extensive education than they can receive at the primary schools.

396. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—When you speak of intermediate education, do you mean education entirely of a literary kind, or do you include any other kind of intermediate education?—Literary quite.

397. Not industrial or commercial?—Oh, certainly commercial.

398. Do you mean to include the classical?—In the rudiments of classics. I consider in training—of course that is only an opinion—for a mercantile profession that some knowledge of the classics is necessary.

399. If it is to be an intermediate school, should it not give such training as would qualify the boys to pass at the intermediate examinations?—Certainly.

400. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—It is very difficult for a boy to get any distinctions at those examinations unless he takes up at least Latin?—We do teach Latin in the school, and I should say that we may extend that branch of teaching.

401. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you think it desirable to expend an endowment which is intended for the poor, upon the maintenance of a classical school?—When we have sufficient primary schools to educate the poorer classes and when we feel a great want of an intermediate education, I think, if you, Commissioners, have power to make the alteration, it is desirable it should be made.

402. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose you mean that the National Board, having come in since this will was made, there has been a provision for primary education made by the State?—Yes, there was no such thing as the National Board in his time.

403. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—We must keep in view the intention of the founder, which was the education of the poor. Do you think a classical education is the best suited for the poor?—Certainly not, if you mean the very poor.

404. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—He said, himself, "the poor in Ireland, principally in and about Limerick city"—I do not think that the scheme we now work under is fully in accord with the intention of the donor, I think his intention was to give the poor an education that they now get in the National Schools.

405. Dr. TRAILL.—He gave a large discretion to the executors, how long are they dead?—I don't know.

406. Have you made any inquiry about them?—No, I have not. My opinion is that when that scheme, under which we now act, was passed, that latter clause of the will was not kept in view.

407. Were any of those executors alive in 1842? Have you the history of the first Chancery scheme? and do you know who applied for it?—Here it is (produces).

408. Lord Justice NAISH.—Had not the school got shut up in the interval between 1833 and 1844?—It was, and there was litigation.

409. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—I should like to know whether you think it would be possible in Limerick to provide a kind of education more advanced than the education given in the National schools, but still suited generally to the wants of the poorer classes—an education which would in some way help to fit them for their work in life?—That is what I think we very much require. When promising boys present themselves in the different schools of the country we have no means in Limerick of forwarding their education. We have a great want of a school in Limerick, where their education could be completed; I mean boys that would probably make marks in life if they had favourable opportunities.

410. But the general run of those boys cannot hope to follow a university career, nor is it desirable they should?—Certainly not.

411. Then the kind of education they want is something different from the education given as a preparation for the university?—Yes.

412. Would it not be possible out of this endowment in some way to provide the kind of education that is wanted?—That is my idea—that is what I had in view; and I said that although I was here to represent the views of the Board, my own views were not in accordance with them.

413. Lord Justice NAISH.—Are you aware of what religion Mr. Lenny was?—I don't know—I never inquired.

414. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you know who the executors were?

Dr. TRAILL.—Marion Fitzgerald, of Clonas, near Castleknock, Ireland; and John Taylor, of Bond Street, London; and in the scheme of 1842 the trustees were Francis Alexander Fitzgerald and Charles Frederick Burton.

Lord Justice NAISH.—That is ex-Baron Fitzgerald. There is a letter here of Mr. Kearney's, in which he said the testator's family had been all Roman Catholics, and he was not aware of any evidence given before the Master in Chancery to show that the testator was of a different religion.

415. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—There is nothing in the will to indicate that any question of religion entered into his mind?—No, he does not seem to have troubled himself about that.

416. He made his will in Madeira. Can you suggest any way in which this money could be made available for the advancement in practical instruction of the children who deserve protection from the primary schools?—I think we would require more funds in the first place.

417. I think that is an insuperable obstacle to your proposal?—I would suggest that the money hitherto allocated to the male school at Villiers' should be applied to the creation of an intermediate school at Lenny's, and I should have no objection to a certain endowment in my own parish being allocated to that purpose also, under the Crown Charity, because in those districts we have very good primary schools where the Protestants can be taught.

418. What is the Crown Charity?—The Cathedral Grammar school.

419. Is there not also a sum of money available for educational purposes under Dr. Hall's Charity?—That has been diverted to another channel under a Chancery scheme, and is now applied to the payment of widows.

420. Lord Justice NAISH.—Is any portion applied to the purposes of education?—Not now.

421. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What would be the amount of the Crown Charity per annum?—£32 odd.

422. Do you think it would be possible, with the Crown Charity money, and whatever share of Lenny's money would be fairly allocated to children of the class you describe, to give such substantial assistance as would enable a Protestant intermediate school to be kept up?—I think so; that would add £50 a year.

423. And that could be done in such a way as to let poor children, who would be objects of Lenny's Charity, get the advantage of advanced education and at the same time provide a school where parents who could pay could procure the education of their children?—Yes, and I would increase the fee—£2 a year is ridiculously small.

424. Have you ever had any difficulty between the children who could pay and those who were free?—None at all.

425. Where do you think Governors could be got who would have the confidence of the Protestant community?—I think the Protestant Governors as at present in existence have that confidence. Those Governors might be made Life Governors with power to co-opt.

426. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do they all belong to your own denomination?—Yes.

427. And you are proposing to divert part of the Villiers' money?—We should certainly bring in Presbyterian Governors, and we have been most anxious that Dr. Wilson should be on the board. He was asked by the Governors whether he consented to act if co-opted, and for one reason or other he was not available. There is a vacancy at present, and if things went on as they are we would be disposed to co-opt him.

428. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We were told there were some Methodist children—have you any Methodist Governor?—No, I think if we had it as an intermediate school there ought to be Methodists on the board.

429. Do you consider that if the Protestant denominations had the Crown charity fund, their share of Lenny's fund, whatever it was, and the buildings, they could maintain a school such as you say is wanted—would there be a sufficient number of children able to pay fees to supplement the endowment, and so make it a successful school?—I think so.

430. There is a great want of intermediate education?—A very great want, we feel it a pressing want.

431. The only way that could be done consistently with the will would be that the fees to be paid by the better class of children should supplement the endowment of which the poorer are entitled to the benefit. Is there in Limerick a class of poor children who could be instructed with those of a better class without chalking?—It has been the case hitherto. We have had the children of magistrates and of the gentry at Leamy's school.

432. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Could you tell me the Protestant population of the city?—The Church people are 3,200 to 4,000.

433. And how many Presbyterians?—I cannot tell you. I don't think the Presbyterians amount to more than 500.

434. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What kind of education is given in the Model School—is it merely primary education. I am anxious to know whether the education given in Leamy's School is different?

Rev. Mr. Gregg.—I could not tell you how high the education goes, but they have every apparatus and appliance, and they have a very experienced master and mistress.

435. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Is the education given at Leamy's higher than that given at the Model School?

Rev. Mr. Gregg.—I think so in science.

436. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Have you had any connection with the Science and Art Department?

Dean Barbery.—We have; we have a class in connexion with it at Leamy's—mathematical. I would point out to you that Protestants and Roman Catholics are not working together in the Leamy School. The present Governor invited the present Roman Catholic Bishop of Limerick to take a seat on the board, and for some reason or other I don't think there was a response from his lordship of his willingness to accept the seat.

437. We generally find they work better apart than together?—Unfortunately I think that is the case in this country, and therefore I think Leamy's School would perhaps be better off if there was one body there only.

438. You would not advise us to go back to the system where the Protestants were reading the Bible in one room, while the Roman Catholics were reading the Holy Scriptures, according to the National Board, in another?—No.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—Would you kindly ascertain when the twenty free girls and the sixteen free boys began to attend Leamy's School, because I find at the investigation in 1881 there were but two free girls, and I would like to know if any of those free children have been transferred from the Villiers' School or borrowed from any other Protestant school in the city. The master was asked at that time "What class of life do the children attending the school belong to?" "Respectable middle class." "Are their parents shopkeepers?" "They are all with one or two exceptions in business." The mistress answered, "I have two girls who are free pupils." Now it has suddenly started up to twenty.

Dean Barbery.—I beg your pardon, my lord, it was not very suddenly. We have had a considerable number for some years. I think we have mended our hands as regards the free pupils. We saw it was right we should, and some of us pressed that point.

439. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Could you give us a return showing the number of free pupils you have had every year since 1860?—Yes, here are the minutes (produced).

440. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—In February, 1885, the number of pupils on the roll—female department, 161; paying pupils, 52; free pupils, 9. September, 1885—Male department, paying pupils, 39; free pupils, 6; total, 47. Female department, paying pupils, 54; free pupils, 10. March, 1886—Male department, paying pupils, 40; free pupils, 13.

Female department, free pupils, 11; paying pupils, 40. September, 1886—Male side, paying pupils, 34; free pupils, 10. Female—paying, 31; free, 21. December, 1886—Male, paying pupils, 38; free, 37. Female—paying pupils, 45; free, 30. It is only within the last year it has come up to the full number?—Yes.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—That increase, my lord, occurred immediately after a letter I wrote to your Commission, complaining of the management of Leamy's school and its working.

Dean Barbery.—I don't think that letter was ever before the Governors.

Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—At all events the increase arose apparently after our Commission was in force.

441. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Previous to the report of 1880 the Governors had made every exertion to get applications for free places, and had failed to do so, so that you have succeeded in getting applications?—Yes.

442. Can you account for the change that has taken place?—I don't think I can, I was not a Governor then.

443. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—When were you appointed a Governor?—In 1882, and since then I know more about the pupils than before.

444. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The number of free places filled has been gradually going up.

Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—In November, 1884, the free pupils on the boys' side were only five, and on the girls' side only eight. You have been admitting free pupils more largely than before?—I think it first in three years it was not as well known that free pupils could be admitted.

445. What is your system of admitting them?—Applications were made, and we then inquired with regard to them, and the applications usually came through a Governor, and the Governor was supposed to be able to tell us something about the application, and if we were not satisfied with the knowledge of the Governor that presented the name, we made inquiries, and selected those that were poorest, of course of a respectable class.

446. Do you think that you might get an increased number if you were to have an examination among the clever pupils of the primary schools in the neighbourhood, more or less of a competitive character. I think if it was established as an intermediate school, it would be more or less desirable to have a competitive examination for entrance, not entirely competitive, but I think there ought to be some attempt at competition. I think that would have a good effect; we then would get clever boys from the country, perhaps, to come in.

447. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—About what value do you set upon the buildings?—They cost a great deal of money.

448. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Don't you pay your head rent?—Something very trifling. I am afraid the buildings cost a great many thousands pounds.

449. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Buildings are not always worth exactly what they cost; what would you put them down at?—I think £4,000.

Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I think you could build them new for that.

450. Dr. TRAILL.—If they were going to be charged against you as your share of the endowment you would not value them at £4,000?—I am not competent to give an opinion.

Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I see they only cost altogether £3,940.

451. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—They constitute a substantial part of the endowment?—Yes, so far.

452. Dr. TRAILL.—When were they built?—About 1845.

VEN. F. C. HAMILTON, M.A., Archbishop of Limerick, sworn.

453. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long have you been a governor of Leamy's school?—About two years.

454. You have heard the evidence the Dean gave, in what way do you think the endowment of Leamy could be best made useful. First, do you think it can be made useful jointly for both Catholics and Protestants under any sort of joint management?—I am afraid not, but that is no fault of ours.

455. That being so, if we were bound to make it under the will available for all, how do you propose to make it available for Protestants?—On account of the number of schools that are in the city already for the poor Protestants, there does not seem to be any want of a school of the ordinary kind but only of an intermediate school. I am rather of opinion that the education given there is sufficiently high as it is. I have been constantly into the boys' school, it appears to be a very advanced education they are getting there in Arts and Science and English, and, although they are not taught French at present, it is from want of funds.

456. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—They are taught French?—They are by Miss Mercer, but she does not feel sufficiently competent, she would rather have a French teacher.

457. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is there any change in the mode of admission of children that would bring a larger number of pupils?—It is only within recent times we have felt that the provision for free pupils was not sufficiently availed of, and from time to time we increased their number. That has been since I joined as a governor myself, but I have no information as to any way in which the scheme could be changed or altered, and I am rather in favour of keeping the scheme just as it is now. We have so many other schools for poorer children I don't think any more poor children would come to Leamy's school to-morrow if it was thrown open.

458. Is there any way in which you think the better class of children would be attracted to the place who could pay fees that would make it a school available for a larger number both of poor and the better class?—I have heard the mistress state that if there were a good education in French it would attract a number of the better class of girls.

459. Where do the boys and girls of Limerick at present that want to prepare for intermediate examinations get their teaching?—They are very badly off, they have to pay, for special instruction, tutors and governesses.

460. Are there any private schools in Limerick for boys?—No, none of the kind you speak of.

461. Are there any large number of visiting teachers or has everybody to get a tutor for his own sons?—The master, Mr. Switzer, and others, take private pupils in the evening, and in that way our boys get the advanced instruction they require for the intermediate examinations.

462. Where do boys that want to prepare themselves for the Civil Service get taught?—Mr. Mercer and Mr. Switzer take them; gentlemen's sons are obliged to avail themselves of these opportunities.

463. If there was a provision made to carry on a school that would supply that class of education, aided by a share of the Leamy endowment and the Crown charity, do you think there would be a larger number of pupils to take advantage of it?—I don't think that persons who wanted special education for the University, or those, or the higher grades of the Intermediate, would be content to attend Leamy's School, they would prefer to have private tuition of the kind they have now. I would wish to leave the scheme just as it is, and carry on the school as it is.

Rev. Canon Gregg, A.M., sworn.

464. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are not a governor?—I am not.

465. You are a clergyman of a church in the immediate neighbourhood?—Yes, Trinity Church.

466. You were anxious to give some information about the admission of girls to Leamy's school?—I have had during the last two years a great number of people applying to me to get admission for their children as free pupils. I have got a good many in through the governors, but I frequently found that they had their number over-filled for the girls. Several are now waiting to get in when there are vacancies. There has been rather an over-supply of applicants to get into the girls' school free.

467. Lord Justice NIXON.—To what class of life do the girls belong?—Some are children of a warder in the county prison, some were admitted out of that family but others held back because there was no vacancy for the admission of free children.

468. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Could you mention the positions of the fathers of the other applicants?—There were others of a better class than the warder's children; it was merely when it was suggested there would not be a supply that I thought I would state that I have made applications for the admission of Catholics without success.

469. Then how do you account for there having been so long as very few?—I think the school has got a high character at present, and that has attracted more children who wish to go there.

470. The number of boys does not seem to have been so full even as the girls until recently?—I think there are a great many more girls in the city than boys, I am sure there are three to two who require that class of education.

471. From what you know of the wants of the neighbourhood, could you give us any suggestion as to the best mode of using this endowment?—I think that what the Dean stated, and the Archbishop referred to, is a fact, there is a want in the city for a higher class of education.

472. Do you agree with them that there is no want of further means for primary education?—I think all the schools are primary, and any of the higher class are private; there are a number of private schools, and a great number of people living by tuition.

473. What private schools are there?—Miss Fitzmaurice's school in Thomas-street is a private school, and there is Madame de Pin's for girls.

474. She has been very successful at the Intermediate examinations; do you know how many girls attend her school?—I don't know; it is well supplied with pupils, and both Catholics and Protestants go to that school, she is a Roman Catholic herself, but they go because I believe they get a superior education there.

Rev. Canon Gabbett, A.M., sworn.

475. The point I wish to press very much is the importance of a good intermediate school in Limerick for the Protestants, for the best children in the primary schools in the country. For instance, I have had myself to send in a scholar to Leamy's school for instruction for the Kildare-place Training School, and it is very important that the staff of that school should be increased and improved in every way, it would attract a great many of the best pupils in the country schools.

Rev. Canon Gabbett, A.M.

OCT 10 1887

Rev. Canon
Gilbert, &c.

476. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How far did your candidate live outside Limerick?—Ten miles.

477. Then had she to board here?—Yes, she boarded and lodged in Limerick in order to go to Leamy's school to qualify herself for the Kilmareestown school.

478. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Supposing an arrangement was made by which Leamy's School could be made available as an intermediate school for the boys and the girls of the surrounding district, how do you think Protestants could be best represented on the governing body, so as to attract as many of them as possible?—They are very well represented at present.

479. That is by a system of co-optation, not representation strictly speaking?—Probably the Bishop of the diocese might nominate, or else the Diocesan Council.

480. The Diocesan Council meets in Limerick? I presume?—Yes, I am one of the Secretaries of the Council.

481. What large parishes are there in the county that you think could take advantage of Leamy's School?—There is one parish, Kilmans, where there is a large number of Protestants and a very good school, and they have sent forward some very good pupils. In Killyn parish, and Adare parish, there are a number of Protestants, also in Rathleone and Askerton, and we really have no outlet for these children where they can be taught, and no Protestant institution, though there are a great number of Roman Catholic institutions where intermediate education is given.

482. Your evidence is that there is a large district without intermediate education?—Yes, and without any suitable educational opportunities for Protestant children.

483. And you think Leamy's School might be utilised in that way?—Yes.

484. Most Rev. Dr. O'Driscoll.—About how many boys could be calculated on to attend a Protestant intermediate school?—That I could not say, one year I might have one, and there might be three or four from another parish.

485. Lord Justice NASS.—What is your parish?—Croon.

486. What about the Protestant population?—It is small, about seventy souls.

487. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You think a good number of pupils would come in from these neighbouring parishes to Leamy's School?—Yes.

488. Why have they not come in hitherto?—I fancy they have from time to time, but if the education was of a first class it would attract them. Sometimes they are sent to Doldin, to Kilmareestown Training School, or the National Training School, Marlborough-street, that is expensive of course, and the parents could have them very much more easily educated here, perhaps located with some friends in Limerick.

489. You would wish to have the standard of education raised?—I fancy it wants an increased staff of teachers.

490. Are there not enough teachers for the number of pupils?—I understand they want more masters.

491. Dr. TRILL.—If they had more pupils they could have a greater variety of teachers?—Of course, and if there was any money going for scholarships and other advantages, and the staff was improved—I don't mean to say the staff is not efficient—and if they got a superior class of teachers, you would have a superior class of pupils.

492. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Once the school gets to a certain size it does not need much money, if there are fees paid?—Mr. Dowd, the Inspector, told me it would be a great advantage to the school if there were more assistant teachers.

493. In order to bring in the people from these districts, you think the class of education in the school should be improved?—Yes.

494. And you think if it was improved it would bring in a larger number?—I think so.

495. And there is a very great want of an outlet for the primary schools, and also of a means of instruction for the better classes?—Yes.

496. Lord Justice NASS.—You think they would come in and live in Limerick for the purpose of going to the school?—Yes.

Dean Baskerville.—Might I supplement my evidence on one point. You asked me how I could account for there not being more applicants for admission. I think one of the hindrances is that it is a girls institution, there is no religious education.

497. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is there no religious education at all?—I believe the masters read the Bible without note or comment, the Governors don't feel themselves justified in going farther.

498. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you think it desirable that the Governors should have power to give religious education?—Much certainly, I think there is a great want of it, and that debar parents.

499. That would mean that the school should be denominational?—Most decidedly, I don't think it could work otherwise.

500. Professor DOWNEY.—With a competent staff?—Yes.

Witnesses sworn.

Mr. Elias
Mason.

501. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How long have you been head master at Leamy's School?—Three years.

502. Where were you trained?—Santry School.

503. Did you come direct to Limerick?—I was assistant master in Fares for three years, and senior mathematical master at Rathleigh School.

504. You did not enter any university?—No; I got leave from five years ago, and I was prohibited by the doctor from reading, and in Limerick it is very inconvenient for me to go to the university, because my school would be left in one person's hands, and as the examinations are nearly always at school time I would have to be away from the school.

505. Did you get your own education altogether in the Incorporated Society's Schools?—Yes.

506. Did you get any classical education?—I got a little in Santry, and since then I have been reading nothing but classics. I have been up twice for scholarship. I was second out for scholarship in two years after 1861 in Trinity College.

507. As to the condition of the school, have the numbers increased or decreased during your time?—They have increased from 16 when I came, up to 54 last winter, back again to 45 now.

508. Were there only sixteen pupils when you came?—There were less, I think; sixteen came there in my first quarter.

509. How is it there are only forty-five now when you had fifty-four some time ago?—Last winter we got overhauled. Our school is very comprehensive, it embraces boys from seventeen years of age down to eight or nine. With two masters it is very hard to work four classes. The course of education is too extensive.

510. What are those children learning that are going in at such an age as nine or ten?—Elementary English. At twelve I commence elementary Latin with them.

511. How many of the forty-five children you have now could get at the Model School the whole of the education they are getting with you?—The two junior classes could; about fifteen.

512. Then about thirty are getting a more advanced teaching?—Yes.

513. Is there any want with regard to the teaching staff?—I know for certain that one boy was removed last winter because his father said there was too much work for two masters in the school. We could not attend to all the boys we had; it is possible that was the case with more boys.

514. How do you and your assistants arrange the work?—We have four classes; I take two and be taken two.

515. You have such one class at desk work while the other is at oral work?—Yes, I also teach the girls in algebra, arithmetic, and Euclid.

516. One girl passed very high in these subjects at the Intermediate?—One girl got 75 per cent.

517. How many boys have you sent up?—As a rule the boys are over sixteen, and they are prepared mostly for commercial life, my duty has been principally bridging over the gap between Model School education and the entrance to commercial life.

518. Does not the junior grade suit boys of that sort?—When boys have got only six or eight months at school to finish their education it is not possible to put them in a regular laid-down course of instruction.

519. Can you give us any suggestions as to what you think would attract pupils to the school?—I think certainly if there was another master in the boys' school.

520. What subjects are not provided for at present?—I have to take both classics and mathematics. Being educated at Trinity my strong point is mathematics, and if I had an efficient man in classics I think it would add to the efficiency of the school.

521. Rev. Dr. Motzow.—What is the range of classes you teach?—Only the classics for the junior grade of the Intermediate. A boy of mine got a Junior Exhibition; he passed in Latin, and this summer one of my boys passed in Greek. I prepared him out of school-hours.

522. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Are there any number of pupils in Linsrick who want teaching which they are at present obliged to get out of school-hours?—There seems to be enough of the better class to require it, but somehow or other they are not as many as you would expect. I teach classics for the Trinity College Course.

523. Rev. Dr. Motzow.—How many pupils have you?—One or two for every examination.

524. Does that represent the whole want of Intermediate education for Protestant boys in Linsrick?—Look at all the boys who go away to boarding-schools. Before I came here no classics were taught in Leamy's School at all, and it was the rule to send away boys to boarding-schools, and since then that has been carried on.

525. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Where does the difference come in between your instruction and that of the Model School?—My education is more enlarged, I am not limited to the result fees course, as if I find my boys efficient I can put them on as far as I like, or keep them until they are efficient. The payment by results in the model schools tends to push them on sometimes when they are not efficient.

526. Rev. Dr. Motzow.—In what respect do you go beyond the model school?—I take mathematics—I never heard of trigonometry being taught in the model school, I taught two boys last year, and I give the higher course in algebra.

527. In Euclid do you go further than the model school?—I don't know that, but I could not get any good of their boys until I taught them myself.

528. Do you teach Latin or Greek?—Not without extra payment.

529. Do you teach French?—There are no boys at present, it seems not to be a desirable subject, Latin more so.

530. You have a girl reading for the senior grade in French at present?—Not in the school. I believe she is getting private tuition.

531. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Practically there is no French teaching at present?—Not advanced teaching, if you call MacMillan's First Book teaching French, we teach it.

532. Lord Justice NASEM.—How many boys have you learning Latin?—Sixteen or eighteen.

533. How many learning Greek?—None at present, before Summer I had three.

534. Rev. Dr. Motzow.—Then the standard of your teaching is above that of the model school inasmuch as you give a somewhat higher course of mathematics and Latin?—Yes, and if I find enough wanting I give any assistance they want for special examinations. For instance before Summer I had two boys preparing for the College of Surgeons, one of them passed, and the other passed in everything but English.

535. Lord Justice NASEM.—Did you pass any boys in mathematics at the Intern office Examinations?—I did.

536. How many?—Three out of five, but unfortunately their names don't appear in the list, they did not sufficiently qualify. One boy passed with his name published, but the rest were only given by their numbers.

537. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Then the result of the Intermediate examinations is that your teaching in mathematics has been very successful, but some of your boys failed because in other branches they were not successful?—Exactly.

538. And you want a larger staff to teach in the other branches?—I think if we had another master that would be sufficient.

539. If you had an efficient classical master able to teach other languages, an efficient mathematical master (which you may take it you have at present), and an assistant, how many more pupils could you teach than you have now?—We could easily teach thirty more.

540. Rev. Dr. Motzow.—Would they come?—I cannot say that; the only reason I have to believe that is that the numbers run up so steadily to fifty-three or fifty-four.

541. But on the other hand you afford an opportunity out of school-hours to those who want that education to come to you, and very few come?—If a boy has been educated in my school, afterwards I don't mind giving him half an hour extra.

542. But you give private tuition?—I don't charge for that, if a boy has been in my school for a couple of years I don't mind giving him some extra time.

543. But I thought you gave private tuition to pupils outside the school?—I do too.

544. How much?—Every hour is occupied from half-past seven to six. My school commences at half-past nine and it is over at half-past two.

545. Dr. TRABLE.—Have you permission from the Board to teach outside school-hours?—Yes.

546. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Does it not show great pressure that parents send their children so early to you at half-past seven in the morning?—Those are the children of better-class people.

547. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What were those pupils preparing for?—Generally the College of Surgeons or Trinity College, and a few for the Civil Service.

548. Rev. Dr. Motzow.—Do you know, as a matter of fact, any pupils who would come to you if the standard of education was higher?—I do, I know one at present who is going away because he cannot be taught Greek for the entrance at Trinity.

549. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Is he a paying pupil?—He has been.

551. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Do you appear for the trustees who hold as tenants under the 36th & 24th Vic., cap. 608, l. 1?—Yes.

Commissioners of National Education through the Board of Works. The school was opened in 1858, the greatest number of pupils ever resident was twenty-three. The institution was never full, and was finally closed on September 17, 1876, when the pupils and teachers were removed to the Limerick Model School, the stock and other property were sold off by auction, and in 1879 an ordinary National School was held in part of the building, the rest was empty and the land was let to farmers. I suppose we may take up the case from 1870. Was the power to consecrate a house contained in the Act 23 & 24 Vic., cap. cxxx. exercised?—Yes, the present trustees were appointed March 1, 1877—that is there was then a vacancy for two trustees and there were three surviving trustees, Sir Stephen de Vere, Lord Enly, and Sir David Roche.

553. Were these trustees of the Irish Representative Loan Fund?—No, in 1852 the Lord Lieutenant appointed five trustees to carry out the trust.

554. What trust?—The trusts of the £4,079 & 7d. recovered from the county Limerick, and appropriated out of the Representative Loan Fund for the establishment of an Agricultural Model Farm for that county. The original trustees were Bishop Higgins, Sir Richard Beckett, Sir David Roche, James D. Lyons, and William Howley. They had power on the death of a trustee to co-opt another trustee, some died and others were appointed under this power, and of those trustees so appointed, Sir Stephen de Vere, Lord Enly, and Sir David Roche survive. In 1870 they called a meeting by public notice and appointed Mr. Edward William O'Brien and myself. Up to that time the houses, premises, and land were in the possession of the National Education Commissioners under lease. We held a meeting on March 1, 1877, and finding there were only six pupils in the school, we entered into a correspondence with the Commissioners of Education, and the result was that they surrendered the premises to us on September 29, 1876. By the trust deed of 1852 you were bound to carry on the school as an agricultural model school ourselves in default of finding anyone to do so.

555. Lord Justice Stannard.—Under the earlier trusts it could only be used as an agricultural school—it could only be used as an agricultural school, and we could not possibly succeed where the Commissioners of National Education failed. At our meetings we considered the best course to adopt and drew up certain resolutions and suggestions, and sent these to the Lord Lieutenant. At a meeting held June 24, 1876, when the correspondence with the Commissioners was considered, a letter was read from Lord Enly dated from London, suggesting that directions be given forthwith to the solicitors of the trustees, Messrs. Kenney & Murphy, to instruct Mr. John O'Hagan, q.c., to prepare and lay before the Lord Chancellor a scheme for the future government of the Mungret establishment on the basis of the proposals made by the trustees to the Commissioners of National Education. Resolved—

"That Lord Enly be requested to wait upon the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland with reference to the Model Farm and School of Mungret, County Limerick, and to represent to His Excellency that the buildings on said Model Farm have been constructed upon a large scale and are eminently fitted for a large educational establishment, that they are now in good repair, that the dormitories are fitted up for thirty-three pupils, but could conveniently accommodate double that number; that the lecture and board rooms, sitting rooms, officers' messes, dining hall and kitchen could accommodate 100 pupils with the necessary teachers and staff; that the offices and gardens are on a large scale and in perfect order. That the staff consists of—1st. A principal teacher at £50 per annum and board. 2nd. House manager and ration at £20 per annum and board each. 3rd. One agriculturalist at £20 per annum. 4th. Four servants at £12 per annum each. 5th. The doctor at £40 a year. 6th. Three permanent laborers and about £50 a year expended on extra labor. That such being the normal outlay on the staff alone of the establishment, it was ascertained on inspection by the Trustees on March, 1877, that the large and expensive establishment contained only six pupils, of whom three only belonged to the county and city of Limerick, for the benefit of which the institution was founded by funds contributed partly by the State and partly from local sources. That the Trustees having noted themselves of the utter failure of this institution, and of the consequent waste of public and private funds devoted to it, represented in September, 1877, and again in November, 1877, to the Commissioners of National Education, in whose hands was vested the management of the institution under lease from the Trustees, that the scheme of a great public establishment for the furtherance of agricultural science by practical instruction having proved abortive, it was advisable that the large public and private funds collected in the undertaking should no longer be allowed to be wasted, and suggested a plan by which the establishment might be rendered available for purposes of general education, including a limited course of instruction in agriculture. That the said Commissioners by letter of October 14th, 1877, declined to accede to such suggestion as being inconsistent with their system of agricultural education, and by letter dated March 14th, 1878, gave notice to the Trustees of surrender of the farm and premises on September 29th next ensuing. That the Trustees have reluctantly arrived at the conclusion that a school primarily intended for the advancement of agricultural knowledge cannot be successfully carried on except at an unprofitable loss, the possible advantages arising from such a system bearing on fair proportion to the expenditure, and that when a great public department such as the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland have failed, it is vain to expect that the Trustees with their very limited resources could succeed, that the number of pupils which the scheme has proved a disastrous failure, and cannot be made self-supporting but by an unjustifiable waste of public and private funds. Lord Enly is requested to impress upon His Excellency that if the existing establishment could be devoted to a general (not including an agricultural) education—an education holding much place between the primary schools and collegiate institutions—a province vast would be, in part, acquired, as such would be opened to native talent, and the legitimate solution of those who having risen beyond the teaching of the primary schools, find themselves unable to cope with their more wealthy brethren in the higher branches of education. Lord Enly, our respected colleague is requested to impress upon the attention of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, that large sums, both public and private, have been devoted to an experiment which has demonstrably and irretrievably failed, but that by adoption of the scheme laid before the Court of Chancery the Trustees for the future government of the establishment and the administration of the funds a great and long benefit may be conferred upon Irish society, and the public service advanced by the introduction of a highly educated class of occupations for employment in the service of the State, the large sums already expended would be utilized, and an institution founded which would, in all probability, be, to a great extent, self-supporting."

We found the Court of Chancery had no power to vary the Scheme, and then the Act of Parliament was passed.

556. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The trustees were personally upon your reading were Lord Enly, Sir Stephen de Vere, yourself, Mr. E. W. O'Brien, and Sir David Roche, five gentlemen all of the locality?—All of the locality.

557. You considered the question whether it would be possible for you to keep up an agricultural college in an agricultural county, and you came to the conclusion that as it had been a disastrous failure in other hands it could not succeed in yours?—Certainly. We had no power to carry on any other class of school. When we got up possession in 1878 I wrote the lands for the trustees. We allowed the manager who was there before to remain on, and he acted as steward for two years pending this new scheme or putting an Act of Parliament.

558. You practically managed it as a farm is just now handled?—Yes.

559. I believe the lands consist of about 600 acres?—71 statute acres, we got a scheme sanctioned by the Lord Lieutenant under the powers of the Act.

550. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—The Act left it quite open to the Lord Lieutenant to sanction whatever scheme he thought proper to be laid before the Law Officers of the Crown, and sanctioned by the Lord Lieutenant.

551. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Have you got the scheme?—It is enclosed on the present lease; the scheme has been varied since.

552. You produce a lease of the 11th August, 1880, from Lord Ebury, Sir David Roche, Sir Stephen de Vere, Mr. O'Brien, and yourself, that is all the trustees, to the Rev. Joseph Bourke, &c. It copies the Act of 1876, esp. xxix., that under the Act the Lord Lieutenant with the consent of the Treasury, by minute of June 17, 1880, concerned in the scheme proposed, and declared that it should be lawful for the trustees to demise all the premises except the national school house, and all the buildings other than farm buildings and such portions of the lands adjoining, not being less than 1 statute acre, as the trustees might think it expedient to have occupied and used in connection with the school, at the best rent that could be reasonably had for the same for each term, determinable or not upon any life, including the head master's life, as in the scheme might be provided. That a meeting of the trustees was duly held, and it was determined that the school premises should consist of the buildings and had described in an agreement made between the lessors and the Rev. Joseph Bourke, and that the annual rent of £79 15s. was the best rent that could be reasonably had for the said premises. And that inside both the lands and the buildings?—Yes.

553. Do you mean to say that £79 15s. was the best rent that could reasonably be had for the 71 acres with £8,000 worth of buildings?—For an educational establishment, the rent was for the land only.

554. Then you excluded the buildings from the estimate of the rent?—Yes.

555. The Act says the best rent that can be reasonably had for both land and buildings?—Well, that was the best rent. No one would rent the buildings.

556. But I understood you to say you excluded the buildings?—I don't think we put any rent on the buildings. They had no marketable value.

557. Then what you took as the best rent that could be reasonably obtained as provided by this Act was a rent fixed on the land only, without the buildings?—Well, that is the rent that the Commissioners of National Education paid under their lease.

558. But they had erected the buildings themselves?—We gave them portion of the money, we found the buildings there.

559. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—They were more or less derelict when you came in?—They were quite derelict.

560. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Then the rent was calculated on the land, and the buildings still remained to represent what was spent on them, so far as it was not wasted. The decade is for 21 years, there are covenants by the lessee to pay the rent, not to sublet, provisions for re-entry, not to be subject to any custom or usage mentioned in the Landed and Tenant Act, 1870, and to give up the demised premises in good order at the end of the decade?—We had power to determine that tenancy at twelve months' notice, and that lease has been determined. We were not satisfied with the way the schools were carried on, we dismissed the head master, and took over the school in 1881.

561. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Who was the Rev. Joseph Bourke?—He had a seminary in Limerick, and he applied for the head mastership.

562. Was it a diocesan seminary?—I believe it was; he applied for the head mastership of the school, and at a meeting of the trustees we considered his application and appointed him head master. That lease was settled by Mr. Wright.

563. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I cannot find any power of determining the tenancy?—You will find it on the back of the lease.

564. It says the head master of the school may be appointed and removed from time to time by the trustees?—And we have both appointed and removed the head master.

565. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Well, at all events we may take it that that lease was surrendered, and the place then came back into the possession of the trustees?—Yes.

566. You next produce a lease dated April 12th, 1882, the same trustees as the lessors, and the Rev. William Roman, of the Crescent, Limerick, the Rev. T. A. Finlay, Tallaght College, Tallaght, and John White, of Northman, are the lessees. It recites that the Lord Lieutenant had approved of the Scheme—is that the same Scheme?—Yes, that is the original Scheme.

567. Then it recites that every such lease should contain a proviso enabling the trustees to determine the same, on giving twelve calendar months' notice of their intention to do so, that the lessees had consented to take a lease at the annual rent of £70 sterling, and then a recital that that was the best rent that could reasonably be had?—Yes. We were offered £40 by three parties at first, and we demanded a rent of £70 and got it.

568. I suppose we may take it that that rent also was estimated on the land only?—Yes; the Hon. Hugh Massy valued the land for us.

Deus Moberg.—May I ask a question? Were the public aware this place was to be let?

569. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—First let us get the history, Mr. Dean, and then you can ask any questions you wish. This is a lease for 999 years, determinable at twelve months, with covenants to cultivate and manage the lands in a fair and profitable manner, and not to erect any additional buildings on the lands without the consent in writing of the trustees. To establish on the premises a school as defined by the Intermediate Education Act, 1878—such school to be carried on in the manner prescribed in the amended scheme?—The provisions of the scheme were subject to alteration, and we had a supplemental scheme in the following July.

570. Two statute acres at the least in each year to be kept in tillage, and to be used for the purposes of agriculture, and giving practical instruction therein; and then a provision, in case it should appear the school is not being carried on in accordance with the provisions of the scheme, or is not carried on as a successful Intermediate School, it should be lawful for the trustees to enter, on giving twelve months' notice in writing. Was attention called to the fact that the scheme required you to insert a proviso enabling the trustees to determine the lease on giving twelve calendar months' notice in writing of their intention to do so, apparently without regard to whether it was carried on successfully or not?—That lease was settled by counsel—we are only laymen.

571. Dr. TRAILL.—You have not had any consent to call for a surrender of this lease?—No; I can show you the successful working of the school up to the present time.

572. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The amended scheme is dated July 24, 1882, and seems to provide that the trustees are substantially to superintend the management of the school?—As far as valuation goes.

573. Is the rent reserved by the lease paid to the trustees?—Certainly; it is returned by the trustees as prices to the school.

574. Therefore, practically, the whole of the Government property in the Institution, the value of the lands, the buildings, and the rent are all applied now for the purposes of the Institution?—Certainly; I can give you the accounts. We are bound by our trust to expend the money for the benefit of the Institution.

575. Let me see your last account. Do you close your account at any stated time?—It is a running account, it is closed up to the present (produced).

576. This is not an account of Margret Agricultural College, for the whole transactions of 1881 amount to £24 on one side of the account, and £90 on the other?—There is £167 credits, and £24 17s. debits, exclusive of rent and contribution to prices.

Q. 14, 1887.

James G. Barry, Esq.,
S.P.

Oct 20, 1887.
James G.
Barry, Esq.,
F.R.

587. Se; £37 of that is a balance from the other year 1—Our receipts are £55 from dividends and £70 from rent each year. We pay back £70 for prizes for the pupils, and £65 goes to pay taxes, tide-rent-charge, and current expenditure.

588. What are the dividends derived from 1—There was originally £1,000 remaining from the £4,079 granted by the Treasury, which was with accumulations of interest invested in the Three per cent. annuities by the trustees.

589. Lord Justice NASEN.—Is that still in the name of your trustees, and do you draw the dividends from that 1—Yes. At our meeting on March 1, 1877, Sir Stephen de Vere, who was one of the original trustees, handed us the sum of £766 3s. 4d. which was lying to his credit in the Provincial Bank.

590. How was that lying to his credit 1—Mr. de Vere stated to the board that a sum of £238 7s. 10d. had been lodged on deposit in the Provincial Bank, Liverpool, on the 23rd August, 1856, to the credit of Bishop Higgins, Lord Montagu, Sir David Roche, Wm. Howley, and Stephen E. de Vere; that by the deaths of all the other trustees said sum became vested in him. On April, 1871, he took out, in his own name, a fresh receipt selling the amount of interest then due, and the new deposit receipt then granted was for £548 14s. 8d. He for several years made the most careful inquiries to ascertain the trusts on which this sum was held but had been totally unable to discover them, and, believing that the trusts must have been for the benefit of Mangret Model Farm in consequence of the original sum being invested in the names of the trustees who existed in 1856, Mr. de Vere, in March, 1877, transferred to the present trustees this sum, amounting with interest to £766 3s. 4d., but on the express understanding and condition that this money shall be reserved for the usual benefit of the Mangret Model Farm, as long as it is conducted as such, and if it should come to be, then this sum to be employed in the same manner and on the same trusts as the other funds of the Mangret Model Farm. Besides the above sum, there was then to our credit on the current account, £400, a cheque drawn by the trustees on the bank, and I got authority to invest both sums amounting to £1,166 3s. 4d. in the Three per cent. in addition to the £1,000. On the surrender of the school to us by the National Board they claimed a certain sum from us, I think £150. I went back through the accounts to 1852 and turned the tables on them, and found they owed us £303, which, they after some dispute, paid us. They had only on an average about six pupils, and we had a right to have nine pupils at a rate of £7 10s. each. There has been £400 since invested in Four per cent. Preferential Shares of the G. S. and W. Railway. When we got up the premises and were going to lease them to the Rev. Mr. Bourke we had to put them in repair and we then sold out in all £250, portion was paid to the contractor for putting the place in repair, and the balance was devoted to buying scientific apparatus, on which we spent about £300, so that now the balance is £2,108.

591. Kindly give me the exact figure of your present fund 1—£1,708 15s. 9d. Three per cent. annuities, and £450 Four per cent. preferential shares of the Great Southern and Western Railway.

592. How do you apply the dividends on that money 1—The pamphlet will show—rates and taxes. We have given several grants for scientific apparatus since, and there is a balance to our credit. We have no other grant.

593. Then you, in fact, pay it to the managers of the school 1—Yes.

594. The school being your tenants 1—Yes.

595. As regards the rent, how is the control and expenditure managed 1—When we agreed to give them the £70 for prizes there was a scheme drawn up at the time.

596. Is it done by examination 1—By examination.

597. Do the trustees take any part in the distribution of the money 1—Not in the distribution of the money.

598. Except in so far as you approved of the scheme 1—We approved of the rules and the scheme. Some of the trustees have been present at the distribution, from time to time.

599. Lord Justice NASEN.—We distribute the prizes.

Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is the money paid to you and repaid 1—No; a receipt passes between us—we exchange receipts. That is according to the scheme.

600. Dr. TRAILL.—Was not the original condition in the scheme that it was to be let on the best rent that could be obtained 1—So it is in accordance with the Act of Parliament.

601. The original scheme gave instructions to be let for the best rent which could be obtained. What did you understand by that 1—We took it to be that whoever was the head master should take the lease and pay us the best rent to be had.

602. Does it make any difference whether it was £70 or £100 if it was to go back. Relying the scheme it would look as if it was to be let to some person independent of the school 1—We did not read it in that way. The whole thing was settled by mutual agreement. We had no power to let the lands to an outsider.

603. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You have not let the premises at their marketable rent, if the buildings be taken into account; but you have let the land at a full rent, whilst, however, is not paid to you, but is settled by cheque, and repaid to the pupils, so that fact the school premises are an endowment as possessed by the present institution 1—Except the dividends. The buildings have no marketable value.

604. And these dividends you from time to time apply for the benefit of the institution 1—Certainly; we consider that is our task.

605. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you pay the taxes 1—We do.

606. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Let me read you the advertisement of the school, which appears in the report of 1891 (pamphlet report, 1890, p. 211). As you giving at present any agricultural prizes or scholarships 1—The sum of £70 is given to the pupils in prizes.

607. There is the statement—"The trustees will give valuable prizes and scholarships to stimulate the study of what the latest experience has proved is necessary to the well-being of our country."

Lord Justice NASEN.—We have nothing to say to that proposition.

608. Your lordship's name is at the head of it 1—That is the school that failed, then gentlemen took the school from us and was not able to carry it on.

609. Has the agricultural instruction continued 1

Mr. Barry.—Yes. The science of agriculture is taught still.

610. How much of the highly cultivated farm land is used for agricultural instruction 1—I suppose that two acres reserved in the house.

611. What crops are in them 1—The ordinary crops.

612. Do the trustees look after the agricultural instruction at all 1—No, we have appointed a head master. It is his duty, not ours.

613. Is he an agriculturist 1—No.

614. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—You don't consider yourselves bound now by that advertisement 1—No.

Lord Justice NASEN.—I think it ought to be clearly stated that we have no sort of responsibility for that advertisement. I never heard of it until your lordship read it.

615. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I have read it from the Blue Book of 1889 1

Mr. Barry.—I never saw that advertisement until today. The trustees were not examined in 1889.

616. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Am I to understand that the trustees of this institution were not responsible for a public announcement made with their names at the head of it 1

Lord Justice NASEN.—Certainly, they were not.

Mr. Barry.—We appointed a head master, and £50 shows to us he has not carried on the place according to this scheme we can dismiss him. It has not been shown to us, on the contrary we find the results of the teaching has been most satisfactory up to the present.

617. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do the trustees visit the school at any certain time?—Certainly, we held a visitation this month, we have fixed the first week in October for the visitation. We hold our meetings frequently and often visit the school.

618. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You found it was not possible to carry it on successfully if it was kept up usually as an agricultural school?—Certainly. It was a failure.

619. And you varied the character of the education with the consent of the Lord Lieutenant?—Yes, and whatever we have done in connection to this scheme. We have no responsibility, we consider, as long as this scheme is carried out satisfactorily.

620. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I am afraid the responsibility is by the scheme fixed on the trustees. Can you say why an institution originally established for agricultural teaching, which is stated to be here so important, has wholly failed as an agricultural college?—The class of boys who went there merely took advantage of it to get a training for the Civil Service, the eldest sons of farmers remained at home, and as a rule never went there, it was merely the younger sons, who wanted a profession, went to these schools and took advantage of them, and thus got their professions. On Lord Enly's property there was a school which also failed.

Lord Enly.—Would not that be a question to put to the Board of National Education.

621. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I think not, you are the trustees of this property, and we want to know why you could not carry out its original intention.

Mr. Barry.—The trustees handed it over to the Commissioners of National Education to establish a school, they held it for twenty years and failed, though they had plenty of funds at their back. We could not succeed where they failed.

622. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—We want to ascertain, if we can, why it is impossible to maintain a successful agricultural school in a purely agricultural country?—Well it is a fact, they all failed.

623. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was it simply because it had failed in the hands of the Commissioners of National Education as an agricultural school you came to the conclusion that you could not carry it on successfully?—It was.

624. And do you think there is no demand in an agricultural country like Limerick for instruction in agriculture?—Certainly.

625. Dr. TRAILL.—Don't you think the people of the country, experienced agriculturists, might succeed where the National Board failed, who were not so experienced?—But they sent down trained professors, they had Professor Baldwin here.

626. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We are told the Munster Dairy School is not a failure?—That is quite a recent thing on a new basis.

627. You appear to have had a clientele to establish an agricultural institution with this valuable property and not to have attempted it?—We attempted it and it was a complete failure.

628. Lord Justice NASH.—How many pupils are there in it now?—About eighty pupils.

629. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You found farmer's sons did not go there to learn agriculture?—No.

630. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I believe the land is good land?—It is not what you would call good land in the county Limerick, it is fair agricultural land.

631. It is asked for the purpose of an agricultural school?—It is.

632. Dr. TRAILL.—In 1884 it was stated to be worth 34s. the Irish acre, but it improved so that it was stated to be worth about 43s. an English acre?—Well we had it valued by Mr. Hugh Maury, a gentleman well known in the south of Ireland. It was Mr. Kenny who stated what you are reading, he was interested in the place, he managed it for several years, and of course was anxious to make it out as good as he could in order that he might be kept on. I do not agree with his evidence in 1880.

633. How much is spent on the agricultural teacher in the place?—I don't know.

634. No. 13 of the scheme says the trustees may apply some of the fund in the payment of the agricultural teacher?—We have not done that.

635. And the purchase of scientific instruments?—We have done that.

636. The scheme says that those payments were to have precedence over burses and prizes?—There is a discretion in that, the trustees, if they think fit, may apply it. There is a steward paid there, and there are lectures given in agricultural chemistry.

637. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How is the rest of the land over and above the two acres used?—As an ordinary agricultural farm in connection with the college.

638. To whom do you look as the responsible person for the management of the institution?—The present head master, the Rev. Mr. Bens, a French gentleman. He was only recently appointed on the resignation of Mr. Roman.

639. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose they got a good deal off the land, potatoes and so on?—Yes, and they have a dairy farm.

640. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How do you appoint the head master when a vacancy occurs?—We get certain applications for the head mastership, and we considered these at our meetings, and made the appointment.

641. "The number of other masters, teachers, and monitors shall, from time to time, be fixed by the head-master with the consent of the trustees"; what teachers and monitors have you consented to the appointment of?—The head master will explain that we have not taken any part in appointing them, but we have approved of any appointments made.

642. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You have visited the place and found it was conducted to your satisfaction?—Yes.

643. Dr. TRAILL.—Were the names not submitted to you by the head master?—In a formal way they were not, but we saw all the masters, they were introduced to us at our meetings.

644. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What day do you fix for the visitation?—The first week in October each year.

645. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the head master a foreigner?—A French gentleman.

646. Does he belong to any particular order?—He does, the Jesuits.

647. Do you get any return from time to time of the people attending the place?—This is the last return (produced).

648. It gives the results at the Royal University?—The first year thirty-three went up for examination and thirty-two passed.

649. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was that the matriculation examination?—Different examinations.

650. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the objection that the trustees had to the Rev. Mr. Bourke?—The fact is he had not funds to carry on the school and failed.

651. Your evidence is that the Rev. Mr. Bourke did not carry out the trusts of the lease, as I took it down?—No; he did not carry out the scheme. He did not carry on the school to our satisfaction; it failed as a school after one year.

652. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—There seems to be a most extraordinary complication of machinery. The scheme requires the educational endowment to be open to everyone, to all denominations, and it is apparently derived from public money, yet it is now exclusively under Roman Catholic management. Can you suggest any way in which the management could be simplified?—The scheme has been settled; it was complicated before, but it is not complicated as far as I can see now. There is a conscience clause. We hold our meetings and carry out the trusts and the head master is supposed to carry out the agreement he has entered into. He has signed a formal consent to carry out the scheme.

653. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think when you have appointed a headmaster of the Order of Jesuits, that the school is likely to be open to all religious denominations?—That is a matter of opinion.

654. I merely ask you as a trustee?—On the other hand if we appointed a person of another denomination the school would be closed to Catholics. It was originally established for the benefit of the farmers of this country who are all Catholics. It is the only school in the south of Ireland in connection with the Royal University.

655. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I might mention a case that we had very like this, the Kildare-place Society, which was supposed to supply education to all denominations. They had some buildings in Dublin which they let to the Church Education Society, and which of course consisted of the members of one denomination only. They reserved a rent as you did, and spent it on the place. We got rid of all that imaginary relation of landlord and tenant, and applied the whole of the property to the educational purposes for which it had been really used. Our scheme has since been sanctioned by the Lord Lieutenant. If we applied a like rule to this present case the result would be that this endowment should be applied in the terms of your own scheme for the purpose of Intermediate education, including instruction in and the promotion of agricultural science, open to all denominations. It is a Limerick endowment to a great extent. Supposing that view to be taken, what governing body could carry on the institution that would have the confidence of the people without the necessity of having recourse to the Lord Lieutenant?—For carrying on an agricultural school?

656. Not necessarily agricultural. For supplying the real wants of the locality with reference to education?—I don't know any better system than we have. We wanted to establish a successful school and we succeeded where the Board of National Education failed.

657. Yes, but you are not obeying the scheme, and if the Lord Lieutenant were to appoint two or three trustees who did not agree with the rest of you in ignoring it, you could not carry it on as you are doing?

Lord Justice.—We have it in our own hands now by the power of expropriating tithes.

658. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—With the sanction of the Lord Lieutenant, and under the compulsion of Chancery to give effect to the scheme. If any member of any other denomination said, "These trustees, who are trustees for the education of all the inhabitants of the neighbourhood, have put this institution under a management that we don't approve of, and we will upon the Lord Lieutenant or the Court of Chancery to appoint trustees who will carry out those trusts," what would happen?

Mr. DUFFY.—It must be a majority of the trustees. The trustees are themselves of different religion; they are not all Catholics. This is a Catholic country.

659. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you of opinion generally that in all these cases where the original trusts, which were supposed to be applicable, are found practically not to be applicable to all, and therefore drift into the hands of parties of one denomination, are you of opinion that it is better to leave it in the hands of that denomination, and let it be worked by them, or that this endowment should be divided again among all?—It all depends on circumstances; in this particular case it had been unsuccessful under previous management. We did our part by having a conscience clause in the lease. Under Protestant management it would be a failure.

660. I am talking of one particular point. It is admitted on all hands that this conscience clause as between Protestants and Roman Catholics does not work, whether it is a Roman Catholic institution open to Protestants, or a Protestant institution open to Roman Catholics. Do you think it is better that it should be divided among all denominations or to leave it in the hands of one denomination?—I think the present system gives satisfaction; and I don't see any reason for changing it.

661. That is to say you prefer that the one denomination should continue to work it as they have been doing at present?—I do.

662. And all other denominations should have to climb upon the money?—It is not a question of climb on the money, the place is open to them.

663. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—That is the answer that is always complained of, and justly in being given to any denomination that cannot conscientiously take the instruction offered by others, the place is open to them?—We should either carry on the school ourselves or give it to some person who could carry it on successfully.

664. You are going back on the point. What Dr. Traill wants is your opinion whether in the future it is better in the case of such an endowment that it should be administered by the people of one denomination or of more than one?—It is better to have it denominational, otherwise the school would fail.

665. Dr. TRAILL.—Would this endowment be cutting up among the different denominations?—It would not.

666. Is it your opinion that it would be better to let each denomination retain its own endowment as far as possible, and afterwards put one against the other?—I could not say.

667. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—There is no endowment capable of division, except the money.

Lord Justice.—£5,108.

668. According to your experience in Intermediate Education is distinguished from agricultural or industrial teaching what is wanted in the neighbourhood?—Either Intermediate or University. We have a number of Intermediate schools in Limerick, and in the South of Ireland we want more schools in connection with the Royal University.

669. Then your want is an University school?—Yes, in connection with the Royal University. There was a resolution passed this year by us as follows—

"Whereas by the first clause of the scheme, in addition to the instruction in classics and science, instruction shall be afforded in the French language, and in the various branches of social English education, suitable to the school, as defined by the rules annexed to the Intermediate Education Act, 1875, or the due preparation of pupils for University education, and also the sciences of agriculture, resolved that it is advisable that the energies of Mansel College be exclusively directed to the preparation of scholars for University education."

670. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—And you passed thirty-four students at the recent examination, amongst whom there were eleven Honours gained?—Yes, the Rev. Mr. Bond was appointed 4th October, 1887.

671. Dr. TRAILL.—Was your custom not to give the lease to the head master?—In the present head master in the lease now?—No, the lease of 1832 is in existence still.

672. When you made the lease to these three gentlemen, had they not the appointment of the headmaster?—They had the appointment subject to our approval, but we actually appointed.

673. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Besides preparing for University examinations, do you send any boys to the Intermediate examinations?—Not at present.

674. Then in point of fact this so-called school is a University College?—We wish to make it so, it has been so successful in connection with the University, that we are anxious to continue it as such.

675. And you think there is a demand for university teaching in this neighbourhood?—Certainly there is.

676. And to make it a university college is to subject it to the wants of the locality?—Certainly. In the Rev. Mr. Bond's time it was an Intermediate school, and it did not succeed. He had only forty pupils, now we have eighty pupils.

577. Then it was the fault of the master that the place failed?—No; but he had not sufficient capital.

578. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—The scheme says, "In addition to the instruction in classics and science, instruction shall be afforded in the French language, and in the ordinary branches of a sound English education, suitable to a school, as defined in the rules of the Intermediate Education Act, 1875, or to the due preparation of pupils for university education, and also in the science of agriculture."—We recommended the head-master to confine himself to university teaching.

579. Dr. TRAILL.—In Mr. ROMAN's time was it a university college?—The first year I think he prepared his boys for the Intermediate, but afterwards it was associated with the University, for a time it was doing both.

580. Did Mr. ROMAN resign the head-mastership or did you remove him?—He resigned.

581. What capital has been invested by the present trustees?—Something very large.

582. Since what date?—The last two years, under the new lease, they spent about £12,000.

583. Lord Justice NABH.—In what way was the money spent?—In buildings.

584. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Do you think it satisfactory that tenants who have spent £12,000 for buildings should be practically dependent for their tenure on the opinion of a board of trustees, appointed by the Lord Lieutenant, as to whether the school is properly carried on?—They accepted the lease on those terms, and they have an appeal to the Lord Lieutenant.

Very Rev. Dr. DELANY, A.B.—That is one of the points that the lessees intend to raise.

585. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Is there any doubt that the scheme was approved by the Lord Lieutenant without any reference to the Privy Council?

Lord DALY.—That was a question which I raised myself as to the difference between Lord Lieutenant and Lord Lieutenant in Council. As I understand, the barrister who was employed to draw up the lease considered that "Lord Lieutenant" meant "Lord Lieutenant in Council." I did not think he was right about that. But I would venture to suggest to you, as you have asked what amendment we would like to have, I should think to introduce "Lord Lieutenant in Council" would be a most essential amendment. I don't think it is fair to have people who have expended £12,000 already on the place, and probably will expend a great many more thousands, left to the arbitrary will of an individual, and I should think "Lord Lieutenant in Council" should be substituted.

586. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—There is another point. The whole of the endowment is to be used and applied "under the control and direction of the trustees for such purposes of instruction, including instruction in and promotion of agricultural science as to the Lord Lieutenant with the consent of the Treasury shall seem meet." Apparently if the Lord Lieutenant issued any order with regard to the instruction in this place it would bind you and the lessees. Do you think that is satisfactory?—I don't say that it is satisfactory at all, if the school is to continue as it is at present.

587. Can you give us any assistance in determining what governing body, irrespective of the Lord Lieutenant and the Treasury, would be likely to keep this place going as a useful school?

Mr. BARRY.—Perhaps Lord Emily would give you his idea on that.

Dean DUNDY.—It seemed to me a strange thing that buildings representing nearly £8,000 and seventy-one acres of land should be let for £70. I have been in this part of the world for a great many years, and I never heard anything of this until it was completed. It was not made known to the public. I, myself, would have given more rent for it if I had been offered it.

Lord DALY.—What I would venture to say, Mr. Dean, is, I think we should deal with this in the way a reasonable landlord would deal with his tenants, and I would be very sorry to put up a lease of mine to public notice. I would rather get the best valuator I could, as I believe Mr. Hugh Maury is acknowledged to be, and let him decide.

588. Dr. TRAILL.—That is if you had a tenant in possession, but not if you were going to get a new tenant?—I would certainly have it valued.

589. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—I should like to know how the buildings came to be left out of the valuation?—The answer to that is that the buildings were thrown in for the purpose of education. We considered that all we were bound to do was to get the value of the land.

590. Unfortunately your Act required you to value them in the rent, but I suppose the real truth is that you looked upon them as buildings only available for educational purposes, and thought you were at liberty to give them for nothing for those purposes?—Exactly.

Sir Stephen de Vere.—The question of the trustees was that we could only take into account that which had a money value in the money market, that a money value was attached to the ground, but was not attached to these overgrown buildings which were of no use whatever to any person, except persons having a great educational establishment, and which therefore had no more market value than, as we all know a great handsome house could have, which could not be let, and which the owner is very often glad to give to any person who would keep the fire lighting.

591. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think the same observation applies to all public buildings in Ireland?—It applies to all public buildings, and also to places of worship. What is the money value of the finest cathedral in the world? St. Paul's, or Westminster Abbey has no money value.

Sir Stephen E. de Vere, examined.

592. My friend, Mr. Barry, mentioned that there was some £700 or £800 which I had paid in. The fact was very curious about that. When the late Lord Montagu, one of the trustees, died, I happened to go into my bankers, and they said to me, "Are you aware that there is some £500 or £700 standing to your credit upon a deposit account?" I said, "No, I am not aware of it, I know nothing about it." "Well, it is so." And then they produced a receipt to the late Bishop Higgins, to the late Sir David Royle, to two or three other persons, and Lord Montagu and myself. "Now," he said, "they are all dead, you are the only surviving trustee, we know nothing about trusts in the bank, and all I can say is that that is your money." I said, "What do you recommend me to do with it?" He said, "I recommend you to transfer it to your own private account." I said, "Sir, I will not do that, I will make further inquiries; make out a receipt, a new deposit receipt, add up all the interest and make it out in my name, and from this cut let all the accumulations of interest go to the addition of the capital, in the meantime I will make every possible inquiry to find out what the trusts were." It took me a couple of years to find it out, or rather not find it out. I examined all papers of the original depositors, I examined all the papers of the schools, and all the papers of everybody that I could conceive could throw light on the subject. I could not discover the vestige of a trace of any kind. The money was therefore absolutely mine, and finding that the names of the original depositors had all been trustees of Mangret School, I assumed that there was some trust unknown to me for Mangret School, and I handed over the money to trustees.

693. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Was this any part of the Irish Reproductive Loan Fund?—This had nothing to do with the Reproductive Loan Fund at all.

694. Do you know yet where the money came from? Not in the least.

695. Dr. TRAILL.—How do you know it did not belong to the Reproductive Loan Fund?—I had no reason to believe it did, I have no evidence of any trust belonging to it, but from the fact that the persons named in it were Trustees of Mangret, I handed over the money, and it has since formed part of their fund; that was the only statement I wanted to make.

Lord Justice.—It did not come from the Reproductive Loan Fund, because we can account for every penny of it.

696. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Was there any collection or subscription of money or accumulation of interest that you know of to account for it?

Sir S. de Vere.—Nothing at all.

Duan Sweeney.—Was there not an original list of subscribers to this institution, where is that list? Some of the gentry living in Limerick at the present day stated to me that their fathers subscribed to—I never heard of such a subscription.

Lord Justice.—I was living close to it, and if that occurred I would have heard of it.

697. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Who conveyed to you originally?

Mr. Sweeny.—I can let you have the names. I haven't the conveyance here.

Sir S. de Vere.—Some questions were asked with regard to the failure of Mangret as an agricultural school. I have here a good deal concerned with other similar agricultural schools, both in this country and elsewhere, and the failure of it as an agricultural school was not confined to Mangret. I believe that every agricultural school, small and large, that was set up in the county Limerick also failed entirely and completely. We felt as trustees that it was our duty to advise as far as we could the larger amount of public endowment which was vested in us in the difficult phases of life that we have gone through. I believe your lordship will find that the trustees here merely tried to render available for public use what would otherwise be wasted.

698. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The report of 1880 says the same thing, it speaks on the total or partial failure of all agricultural schools in Ireland except Glanerin.

Sir S. de Vere.—Glanerin establishment had national funds at their back, and they were able, therefore, to employ capital and bear with losses that similar schools could not have done.

699. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—How do you account for the failure of the other schools?—They were badly constituted and badly conceived; they were not wanted; the people of the country made no use of them, the farmers being in the habit of saying, "we will not go to the expense of sending our sons and paying £30 or £40 a year for teaching what we can teach them better in our own homes." The schools were not adapted for teaching on a large scale, or for the teaching of cottage agriculturists, they were neither one or the other, they were badly designed, badly conducted, the people did not support them, and they failed.

700. Dr. TRAILL.—The charge was originally £8. In 1878 it was raised to £26.—It was not purely the loss of money to the farmer, but it was also the loss of the son's labour, they failed because they were not supported by the agricultural population.

701. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You don't suggest that we should try to form any scheme to make it a compulsory agricultural school again?—If you were to do anything of the kind you would ensure its destruction.

Lord Justice.—The only thing that I would like, would be, in the way of conversation, to consider whether there is any way of giving greater security to the money, who, of course, have expended a great deal of money upon it. May I venture to put this question to you, would not the security be, as far as anything human can be, completed if you had the trustees in the first instance with the powers that they are given, and then an appeal, if they were to exercise those powers unjustly, to the Lord Lieutenant in Council. I should always have objected, and in point of fact only agreed to the lease upon the assumption that the words there did mean the Lord Lieutenant in Council.

Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—It possibly might be some additional security, but I fear we have now to go a little behind that, and up to the present I cannot see any practical advantage in retaining the trustees if this is to be a University College.

702. Dr. TRAILL.—But they come to the trustees for leave to expend this money?

Lord Justice.—With regard to some portion of the money they came to the trustees, and with regard to the other portion of the money, they came to two of the trustees Sir Stephen de Vere, and to me, and we approved of the plan, in fact we very much advised the plan ourselves, and approved of the plan, and then we had a formal vote of the trustees approving of the plan. I think we have done it perfectly rightly, the great point is the one raised by Lord Justice FitzGibbon—do we give sufficient security to these leases.

Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—They have none at all that I can say, for you are not carrying out either the Act or the scheme, and the lease does not comply with either one or the other, and in any case they must quit without any compensation if the school is not conducted as directed by the scheme and Act, with the satisfaction of the trustees for the time being.

703. Dr. TRAILL.—At what date did they begin to expend this money?—I think a portion of the money which was a chapel was commenced about three years ago, I think the rest was taken sometime during last year.

704. That is since this commission came into existence?—I don't know when it came into existence—yes.

705. Lord Justice Stansfeld.—Would you propose any change in the constitution of the trustees, I don't mean the present trustees, but the means of perpetuating the body?—I think condition seems a very fair plan, but you know I speak with entire submission to you, and Lord Justice FitzGibbon, and the other gentlemen; and then the appeal to the Lord Lieutenant in Council is a perfectly secure one.

706. And to whom would you give the appeal?—Suppose the trustees were to say to the lessee, "You have violated your compact with us," and the trustees were to do that arbitrarily and improperly, the lessee would have an appeal to the Lord Lieutenant, but I think it would be a great additional security to have it to the Lord Lieutenant in Council, but then I speak with entire submission to you, and would be so much obliged to you if you could point out a better plan. I don't see that there could be a much better plan than that.

707. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—If we come to the conclusion that we could not make this school really available for any other education except that of Roman Catholics, and if it is to be an intermediate or university school, we should consider what body we can form that, without Government interference, could be perpetuated for the management of the plan in a manner satisfactory to Roman Catholics. At present the weak point seems to be that the trustees are not educators, but they have got tenants who are able cases, but who have no safe tenure, because if those head trustees took it into their heads that they did not like the education given, or if anyone brought the matter into Chancery, the leases might be turned out at twelve months' notice. We should try to form a governing body that would both hold the property and manage the education. Generally we have put the bishop of the diocese at the head, and given him one or two ecclesiastical colleagues, with some laymen, and thus made up the board. We have not found an elective system in connection with any Roman Catholic schools, but in the Protestant schools it has been elective.

Lord Ebury.—Do we not follow the precedent of Rugby? We hear constantly that the trustees or governors have elected the head master; it seems very much the same.

Dr. TRAILL.—Except that you have parted with the property to these gentlemen.

170. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The property is in one person, and the teaching is another, and the subordinate teacher, if I may use the term, has got the place and expended his money in it without any security.

171. Dr. TRAILL.—I will read the section of our Act.—"The governing body of an educational endowment shall not during the continuance of the power of making schemes under this Act begin to build, rebuild, or enlarge any school building or teacher's residence, except with the written consent of the Commissioners."

Lord Ebury.—This should have been advertised, so that we might have known about it.

172. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—If at any time within the next month or so you would hold a conference of the trustees and the educational representatives of the laity, with the bishop, and let us know what you would recommend, we would consider it carefully. It is a matter of such importance that we could hear you in Dublin at any time. This whole constitution seems to have been drawn up to look as if it were a reality when it is not. The Lord Lieutenant and the Treasury and the trustees have nothing really to do with the education, and if you, Limerick people, can constitute a governing body for yourselves that will administer this endowment with the confidence of the people of the neighbourhood, it would be a very great step. There is a great demand in Limerick by the Protestants for an Intermediate School, and if you have a good set-off in Munster for the Catholics, we might be able to do a little better for the Protestants with the small things that are in the city.

Lord Ebury.—Well, thank you very much. The only thing I would take exception to in your remarks is that the trustees had nothing to do with the matter. Sir Stephen de Vere and myself have done as much as any two men could do.

Rev. J. R. Reid, A.B., sworn.

173. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Are you the head of the Mangret College?—I am, my lord. I have been appointed for only a week; before that it was Father Roman who was the head master.

174. You were appointed by the trustees?—I was appointed by the trustees.

175. The other educational staff in the place have not been changed along with you?—No.

176. How many assistant masters have you?—We have a Professor for each of the classes of the University, eight in all—a Professor for Mental Science, for Logic, for Natural Philosophy, for Second University, First University, and Matriculation classes; besides we have a special Professor for French, and a Professor for Mathematics.

177. Rev. Dr. MONRO.—And Classics?—The University course in Arts consists chiefly of Classics.

178. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Are all the Professors members of the Jesuit Order as well as your self?—Not all, but nearly all of them.

179. Is the college an educational college conducted by the Order?—It is conducted by the Order.

180. And you were appointed as a member of the Order?—I am appointed as such.

181. Rev. Dr. MONRO.—And you employ such extra assistance as you find you want?—Yes.

182. Dr. TRAILL.—Which of the other teachers do not belong to your Order?—M. L'heritier, Professor of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, and Mr. Bradley, classics and music.

183. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—According to the relation that exists between yourself and the other members of the teaching staff how do they hold their offices?—They are appointed as myself, in accordance with the rules of the Institute to which we belong, but my appointment has been submitted to the trustees.

184. Then your direct and real appointment is an appointment from your own Order, but sanctioned by the trustees?—Yes.

185. Does the same apply to the other masters and teachers of the institution?—It depends upon the head master now to select his own professor, and remove them in case he is not satisfied.

186. And you are aware you have to get the consent of the trustees to their appointment?—Yes.

187. What number of pupils have you?—At present we are not complete—we have averaged from seventy to ninety. The first year we were seventy; we went to eighty and ninety—that has been our highest number. This year we are not yet complete, and we are only about sixty.

188. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you been in the institution before your present appointment?—Since the beginning—from September, 1882.

189. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What post did you hold before you became head master?—I have been teaching philosophy.

190. Do the pupils all pay fees?—All pay fees, some with the help of benefactors.

191. What are the fees?—£23 and £4 extra.

192. Are they all boarders?—All boarders.

193. How many come from the County Limerick?—I cannot say exactly, but the majority has always been from the County Limerick.

194. £32 includes board and lodging and the ordinary teaching?—Yes.

195. What are the extras?—They are for washing, for experimental physics, medical attendance, and music.

196. What would be the fees for extras?—£4.

197. £36 would be the full stipend?—Yes.

198. What class do the boys belong to?—Generally to the farming class.

199. Have you sons of commercial people also?—We have.

200. Have you any provision for teaching book-keeping and subjects of that kind?—No, my lord, because we devote ourselves to University teaching. What we do simply is to keep in a preparatory class those who are not able to go for matriculation; we prepare them for three years, in a remote way, for matriculation; after that we begin our teaching from matriculation up to M.A.

201. What provision have you got for religious instruction?—We have religious instruction on Sunday—there is a special class for that.

202. Have you got a place of worship in the establishishment!—We have, we used to have only an ordinary room for worship, but we have built a chapel since.

743. Have you any boys in the institution who are not Catholics?—No.

743. Have you had any during the time you were there?—No.

743. So the conscience clause has not been very irksome to you?—No, nobody asked to be admitted, but we were bound to admit everybody without distinction of religion.

744. How is the land used?—Chiefly for the use of the College. We have our own milk, and butter, and vegetables, and everything of the kind we want for the house. I don't think it is a great profit, it is just if we can make ends meet.

745. You think the College would be better off with less land?—It is not a great advantage for us, at all events, so far as income is concerned.

Professor DOUGHERTY.—Perhaps it enables you to take your boarders at a slightly lower fee?—If it was profitable, but it is not much. Of course we can get from it certain articles of our food. I really doubt that we have much profit.

744. Who manages it for you?—We have a steward; he has been a pupil of Mungret when it was a farm, and went to Glanerin, where he graduated in agriculture. He is managing our farm with six labourers.

747. Do any of your pupils study agriculture?—None.

748. How do you employ the two acres?—We have more than two acres in tillage.

749. There are not two acres then set apart for practical instruction in agriculture?—No, there is no demand and therefore we cannot give it.

750. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—You think the rent is high enough?—I think it is high enough. We have no profit by it either. The £70 are awarded as premiums to our most successful candidates at the University Examinations.

Lord KELLY.—It is impossible to give, as I understand, both university education and school education in the same institution; it is an unsatisfactory way of doing it, and what I should desire to see in every school and college in Ireland would be to have these two things separate. They are separated, as your lordship knows perfectly well, in England, and they ought to be separated in this country. I think there is nothing more injurious to our educational institutions than to mix up the two things, you do neither of them well, you create your staff with a view to two things instead of fixing them upon the one thing, and the result never can be so good.

751. Dr. TRAILL.—Would your lordship apply the same remark to the mixture of primary with intermediate education by the Christian Brothers?—I would rather not give an answer upon that, because I have not considered it, but I have considered this question, and I think it is distinctly an injurious thing to any extent, to have it both one and the other.

752. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Do I understand you to wish it to be a college exclusively for students already in the University, and who would receive their collegiate education with you?—Certainly.

753. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Are there intermediate schools in Limerick capable of preparing boys for a university college, such as you would wish to see at Mungret?—I really cannot answer that question; I think I have seen in the newspapers the names of pupils going up both to the University, and to the Intermediate Examinations from some school in Limerick; I know nothing about it.

Most Rev. Dr. O'DWYER.—There is no school in Limerick mainly devoting itself to the preparation of pupils for the University.

754. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you kindly say for what professions or objects the students are being educated? Rev. Mr. REND.—We receive our pupils without distinction of profession; the greatest number of our students are clerical, for foreign and home missions. We have some preparing for medicine, and for other branches, but all must follow the course of the University.

755. Have you got theological classes?—We have no theological classes. From our place they can be admitted directly to Divinity in Maynooth, or some other college.

756. In the last seven years, has a large or small proportion gone to Maynooth?—We have had a few—seven one year, and four the other year.

757. Where did the rest go?—They followed each of them his vocation, and we are not responsible when they leave our school where they go.

758. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is the instruction the same for divinity students and others?—We have no divinity students, and therefore no theological classes.

759. After they leave you, would you say a large proportion go to the clerical profession?—Yes.

760. A small proportion only go for Maynooth or join the secular clergy in Ireland, and the greater number become missionary priests at home and abroad?—Yes.

761. What proportion go to lay professions?—There may be ten out of eighty; that is the average.

762. Dr. TRAILL.—I don't quite understand when you say they go to foreign missions. Do they go as clergymen?—They go to become clergymen.

763. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Do they go from you to All Hallows?

Very Rev. Dr. DELANY.—They go to colleges when they read the theological course.

Most Rev. Dr. O'DWYER.—Any bishop that was such "subjects" can get them. They get a school education at Mungret, they do there then. Any bishop that wants boys with that education can take them or not.

764. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Very few of the diocesan colleges now return their theological or divinity course?

Dr. O'DWYER.—Oh, none.

765. Then to what institutions would the students go from Mungret to continue their studies?—They may go to All Hallows College. If an American bishop wanted "subjects," and heard they had two or three smart boys there he would make arrangements for their education either in his own diocese, if he had a college, or at All Hallows, or Waterford, or Rome.

766. Do they remain with you up to the time of getting their University degree?

Rev. Mr. REND.—Yes; they get their degree and leave us, but some don't go so far.

767. A student who went through his full course in Mungret would remain with you until he finished his University course; he would get no training for any profession, clerical or lay, but would afterwards go to some place where he would get his profession?—Certainly.

768. Dr. TRAILL.—How many of the eighty would go abroad roughly speaking?—It is a question for the future more than the past.

769. But in the past seven years?—We have only the school for five years, and very few have finished their course. Some only have gone abroad. I think we have twelve who have gone to foreign missions.

Very Rev. Dr. DELANY.—Father REND says ten out of eighty, but the eighty are not new students every year; I don't suppose more than twenty-five enter each year.

Most Rev.
Doctor
O'Dwyer.

770. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Your lordship has heard the evidence with reference to Mungret College. If the Commission came to the conclusion that its usefulness could be best extended as a Catholic college for university teaching, have you any suggestion to offer as to the constitution of the governing body?—I should think the suggestion you throw out yourself a while ago was a rather good one, that some persons should be appointed ex-officio in the first place, and that others should be added to them, and the board so constituted should have a power of co-optation, we have no other way practically in the Catholic body of keeping up a body of that kind. We have no constituency by which you could have an election. I know no Catholic constituency that could get a vote for the appointment of persons on a board of that kind.

771. Do you think the governing body should be altogether clerical or partly clerical and partly lay, or as it is at present, altogether lay?—I should say it ought to be a mixed body, partly clerical and partly lay.

772. Have you any definite opinion as to the proportions in which lay and clerical representatives should be on it?—A good deal would depend on the powers of the board.

773. The powers of the board apparently would be to take charge of the property, and to put it in the hands of educational people on terms that would secure to one for educational purposes?—If their duties were very well defined I think it would be a matter of secondary importance, whether the clerical or lay element predominated on it.

774. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think it would be an advisable thing to have separate governing bodies for the property and for the education, or do you think it is better thing to have one governing body in charge of the whole institution, including the property and educational powers?—Decidedly one body for all.

775. Then in that case it would make a serious difference as to the proportion between the lay and clerical element?—I should presume it would be well defined that the education would be of a particular kind, that it would be a Catholic education, and the board of trustees would have no power whatever to change that afterwards.

776. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In other institutions in which religious education forms part, such as the Methodist College, Belfast, the head of the college is appointed by the governors, and once he is appointed he becomes an ex-officio member of the governing body. The present relation between the trustees who own the property and are answerable for seeing that it is applied for certain educational purposes, and the persons who carry out the education, would appear in this case to be the relation of landlord and tenant. Does your lordship think that is a good relation?—No, I think the trustees of the college ought to be the governing body of the college, and the property ought to vest in these only.

777. At present the educational body, the tenants, seem to have a very precarious title; but they have also got an interest that in justice ought to be recognised because they have spent a great deal of money upon the premises. How do you think that the Order which has spent the money can have their rights best protected in forming a governing body?—They could get a representation on that board in the first instance.

778. Would there be any difficulty in giving each a representation naming the bishop of the diocese to be placed at the head of the board?—For my part I see no difficulty.

779. No difficulty of jurisdiction or of opinion is likely to arise?—I think not. They have an interest in the thing and I don't see why they should not be represented like everyone else.

780. Many objections arise to the efficiency of the teaching what rights should be reserved to the Order who have spent their money on the place, and who at present could be turned out without compensation?—That power ought to be withdrawn from the trustees, and it ought not to be left to the arbitrary will of the Lord Lieutenant to agree with the trustees; there ought to be some tribunal to which the teaching body could appeal.

781. If the property were now vested in a governing body which would carry on the teaching as well as manage the property, there would be no division of interests such as there is at present; but this difficulty would apparently exist—£12,000 has been spent by the Jesuit Order on property which, with the rest of the money, is a public endowment for intermediate undenominational education vested in the trustees. If we now formed a Catholic governing body, on which the Jesuits would have only a representation, how could we secure to them, without danger of conflict, a perpetual interest in the place to the extent of their own expenditure?—They are better able to answer it than I am.

782. We find them legally only tenants from year to year; that is what they are on account of this power of determining the tenancy. If a Roman Catholic governing body was constituted with the bishop at the head, bound to give Roman Catholic education, would your lordship consider it, from your point of view, just to vest in that governing body the whole existing property, both the tenants' £12,000 and the trustees' £8,000?—I think in equity the Jesuits ought to be satisfied that their interests were safeguarded in any such arrangement.

783. What would you call a safeguard?—What they themselves would consider a safeguard.

784. Dr. TRAILL.—If the money cannot be converted into cash and carried away, how could there be a safeguard at all except to remain there for ever?—They may not wish to remain there for ever in the first place, and in the next place they may consider they are being unfairly treated by the governing body.

785. Supposing a conflict on an educational point took place between the new governing body and the Jesuit Order, the tenants in possession, how could that conflict be settled?—As I understood it, it is proposed to transfer the property from the Jesuits, who are leaseholders nominally but who are really tenants from year to year, to the new governing body, and that I propose would be done on such terms, and giving the Jesuits such a representation as will satisfy them.

786. To secure their property no representation could possibly satisfy them except a majority?—I don't think so; it is for them to say what will satisfy them, and I think much less than a majority of the board ought to satisfy them. They merely want to work there for the public good and the purpose of Catholic education, the board will be entirely Catholic, the bishop of the diocese and the whole board will take identical interests. It is to my mind a metaphysical case, a conflict between them and a board having identical interests. It is a possible but I don't think a practical case.

786A. Your lordship thinks there would be no injustice in making the question of whether the Jesuits were giving an efficient education or not, determinable by a board on which the Jesuits would have a minority representation?—I think not, because the Jesuits are really only trustees there for the Catholic body, and if it is a fairly constituted board from the first they have no cause of complaint if the board is afterwards dissatisfied with them, and think they are not carrying on the education in the interests of that board.

787. How would you secure continued representation to the Jesuits?—The head master being a Jesuit might be an ex-officio member of the board. I must say that I have never given any thought whatever to this question, and I don't like to be committed to the answers I give of the real, and, if the Commissioners wish, I will consider the matter and give my opinion.

Doctor

788. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We are only anxious that your lordship as bishop, the authorities of the Jesuit Order who have spent this money, and Father Reid as head of the teaching staff, should consider with the existing trustees, and, if you are able to agree, send us up the heads of a constitution.

Very Rev. Dr. Delany, A.C.—With regard to the difficulty which his lordship has very justly appreciated, and which has been suggested by the Commissioners, in case of a collision—because it is well to provide for a case of a collision or diversity of opinion—I would venture to suggest that this commission should have the existing buildings all carefully mapped and valued, the market value of the original buildings, and the ground, and the expenditure on them, and also the expenditure on the new buildings ascertained. Regulations could be made by which further expenditure should also be noted, the expenditure incurred with the consent of the new governing body. And, if a division of opinion occurred in which it became impossible that the Jesuit body should continue lessees, if the new governing body determined that their course of education was inefficient or unsatisfactory, and that therefore their lease should terminate, that the people to whom they should hand it over should make such compensation to them in such proportion of the then ascertained value of the present buildings as would be settled by the board.

789. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I am afraid the difficulty would be to find a fund out of which the compensation should come!

Dr. Delany.—It is a double question of whether it might not be met by compensating the rights of the trustees for the original holding by the Jesuits, if the expenditure that they made on it was very much the larger. It is quite possible that the expenditure of the Jesuits on the buildings after a short time would altogether outweigh the value of original grant, and therefore it might be arranged that in case it was to be determined to solve dual ownership, which I believe is one of the great difficulties of today, the dual ownership might be solved by ascertaining what sum of money the Jesuits should pay to become the entire owners.

790. Dr. TRAILL.—Don't you see that the Jesuits have laid out £12,000 in the teeth of the Act of Parliament, which has directed them not to do so?

Dr. Delany.—The Jesuits and the trustees were in total ignorance.

791. Dr. TRAILL.—The new Governing Body could not be held responsible for their ignorance.

Dr. Delany.—In the first place no notice had been given to these gentlemen that they came under it.

Dr. TRAILL.—Notice is not required of the requirements of an Act of Parliament.

792. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The Jesuit Order has been mentioned, but the three lessees are the legal tenants. I understand the Rev. Mr. Roman has left, and that the Rev. Mr. Finlay is now in Dublin—where is Mr. White?

Dr. Delany.—He is living in the county Limerick.

793. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Those three lessees are the only people who have any legal right, and their lease contains a positive covenant that they will not erect or make any additional buildings on the land, or make any addition to the buildings without the previous licence in writing of the trustees.

Dr. Delany.—That has been carried out.

794. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Those buildings having been erected on this lease, what claim for compensation could you have if the lease was determined as it may be?

Dr. Delany.—None on the lease. I quite admit that on the lease it appears to me to have been an act of infraction. I was startled on reading the lease—they are actually precluded expressly from claiming compensation for any such buildings, even when built with the consent of the trustees. I quite admit that as the lease stands, it seems to me that to moreover mortgaging the trustees would be perfectly within their right, if they deemed the education unsatisfactory, in turning out the Jesuits without one shilling compensation.

795. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The £12,000 expended on these buildings has really been to meet added to the place as an educational institution, and therefore the whole thing might now be regarded by us as so much educational endowment. That being so, is it possible in your opinion to form a body on which the bishop and the priests would both be represented, and which would both own the property and manage the institution?

Dr. Delany.—Certainly, but I believe it would be necessary from the commencement to have the portion of the property which originally vested in the Jesuits, and the portion contributed by the lessees clearly marked, in order that, if the lessees were disturbed, some arrangement might be made by which they would be compensated, and, as their interest would very much outweigh the interest of the original owner, I don't think it ought to be all conceded, that the trustees could settle it by turning them out, and giving them compensation. I think there would be certainly dual rights if not dual ownership. The dual rights would be terminated by their paying to the governing body the value of the buildings originally on the place.

796. Dr. TRAILL.—How was this money raised, was it by loan or the property of the Order?

Dr. Delany.—The property of the Order.

797. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We cannot see any prospect of any sum of money being available for the other branch of the partnership to buy out the Jesuits, but it might be possible to enable the Jesuits to buy out the others, to save themselves from eviction. I don't at present see how it could be made to work both ways.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—Think, my lord, is a very serious question, and I take the liberty of suggesting to Father Delany that it would be better to do as your lordship said, and allow the present trustees, the representatives of the Jesuits, and myself, to confer about this business, and come before you with our opinion matured on the matter. I think it will be likely to lead to confusion to have a number of crude suggestions thrown out by us or others on this business, that we may have to go back upon afterwards. I think it would simplify matters if we were first to consult all concerned at it.

798. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The next step to be taken by the Commissioners will be the publication of a draft scheme, and before preparing it we should be anxious to have the result of a careful conference of all those who are now interested in the matter. But they must remember that when the draft scheme is published it will be the common right of all classes of the community interested in the endowment, to send forward any objections they think proper, both to us and to the Lord Lieutenant. In a large endowment of this kind, comprising public money, it has been our practice to hold a subsequent public sitting after all the objections are received, at which any person who wishes can be heard.

Lord Delany.—I entirely agree with his lordship that it is much the best for us now to leave the matter for the consideration of all concerned. I only just want to mention one thing—the Jesuits are not the only persons who are concerned in the expenditure. I have spent £2,000 in that place, it is not my own money, but money that I am responsible for.

799. Rev. Dr. MORAN.—In this conference I think it would be desirable if you would consider whether you would not give the governing body power to consider from time to time the kind of education to be given in the college, and not bind them down permanently to give university education.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer, Bishop of Limerick, examined.

10th Dec., 1887.

Most Rev.
Bishop
O'Dwyer,
Bishop of Limerick.

300. Lord Justice FRYGINTON.—You were anxious, my lord, to make some observations to me, with reference to Leamy's School?—I assume, in the first place, that the principle your lordship expounded in the morning will govern the management of this endowment, that you will comply as far as possible with the intentions of the founder of the endowment. It is pretty plain that his intention was that his endowment should be applied to the poor of Limerick without restriction to any denomination whatsoever, and therefore I take it that, as long as there is money available for the poor of Limerick, and there are poor in Limerick, it ought to be applied to them. At present, I believe, it is admitted, too, that the children attending the school are not poor. In 1881 the evidence of nearly all the parties who came forward on the part of the school showed that it was a middle-class commercial school; it was not a poor school, and the children are nearly all the children of shopkeepers, well-to-do people who could pay for their education. In the next place I wish to say that there are an immense number of poor children in Limerick in the Christian Brothers' schools. I asked the Christian Brothers to give me a return of the number of children in their schools at present, and I also asked the different convents in Limerick to give me a return of their schools, and I find that in the Christian Brothers' schools the last week there were 1,604 boys on the rolls, and an average attendance of 1,452 boys. I am informed by the Superior of the Christian Brothers that, out of that number, there are 400 children who are so poor that they cannot pay a penny a week, and that many of these children have to be supplied with school books by the Christian Brothers themselves. And I am aware that the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which is a charitable association, raises money annually for the purchase of books for destitute children who attend the Christian Brothers' schools. That being so, I think, as far as the boys of the city are concerned, there is a very great need for the application of this endowment, or some endowment towards their education. The Christian Brothers, to all intents and purposes, are an endowed body, they get no payment from the State—most unnecessarily—and they have got but a very small endowment about which their Superior, if necessary, will give you information. He has given me a written statement of the endowments they have, it is a very small sum, and practically gives them no help towards the maintenance of their schools. We have two collections annually in the city to maintain the Christian Brothers. They work from one end of the year to the other without any payment, and the people of the city, by voluntary payments at the church doors, support the Christian Brothers and enable them to carry on their schools, so that they are almost entirely dependent on charity for the purpose. I think, then, that in these schools alone there is a means of applying this Leamy fund that would altogether exhaust it. Then in the Convent schools there is an enormous number of children attending the various poor schools. At St. Mary's parish there are 772 girls on the rolls, and an actual attendance on October 4th of 582. In St. John's parish there were on the rolls 787 girls, and an actual attendance of 564. In Pery-square, near Leamy's, in a dilapidated old house, there are 566 girls on the rolls, and 412 actually present. The sisters informed me that none of the pupils in St. Mary's, St. John's, or Pery-square pay any fee whatsoever. I may mention that all these schools of the Sisters of Mercy are National schools.

301. Is St. Vincent's Convent School a school for poor children?—Yes, it is a National school, and also an orphanage and industrial school. In the National school there were, on the 4th October, sixty-nine girls on the rolls, and forty-four in actual attendance in the orphan school; but the children at that school are somebody of a better class than the children who attend the others.

302. You don't count them among the very poor?—I don't call them strictly poor.

303. Then St. Mary's, St. John's, and Pery-square are the schools for poor children?—Then the Presentation Convent, Sexton-street, there were on the rolls 900 and actual attendance 612 children.

304. Are these National?—National schools also.

305. What is your lordship's proposal with respect to Leamy's endowment?—The first question would arise as to the house itself. I wish to say that unless the fund is divided in some way and applied in denominational schools it will be denied altogether to the Catholics of Limerick. You see by the evidence you have got that there are practically no Catholics attending the schools. You have children by thousands at Catholic schools, and you have only six or seven or eight attending Leamy's. I assume, then, that if we are to get any relief in this matter, that fund will be divided between us and the Protestant communities. Then the question will arise first as to the house. If we don't get the house, and there is simply a question of dealing with the interest of the monies invested, I would say at once that the money ought to be applied to supplement the funds of the Christian Brothers' schools. There are a variety of ways in which that could be done.

306. Leamy intended his endowment to go both to boys and girls. The building seems much more suitable for a comparatively small number of children, and an intermediate school, than it would be for any such large numbers as you have mentioned?—I first assume that you deal only with the money, and then that you come to deal with the school itself in a separate way. If you wish to keep the school and the money, what I think ought to be done would be this:—The marketable value of the school, as a school at present, ought to be ascertained, and divided, with the money invested, between the Catholics and Protestants of the city.

307. Is there any use that you could suggest for the building and the money together of which the Catholics could take the advantage?—Oh, decidedly.

308. What would that be?—In the estimation of the Catholic schools I admitted to mention a National school, St. Vincent de Paul National School, built about two years ago. There was such a want of a poor school at that side of the city that the St. Vincent de Paul Society, who go about amongst the poor, seeing the children lying in the street, voted £500 of their own money as a contribution towards the erection of these schools. An application was then made to the Board of National Education for a grant. The whole cost about £1,000, and out of that the Vincent de Paul Society gave about £500. That school has now on its roll 570 boys, and an actual attendance of 375. If Leamy's school and the money were to go together I would suggest that a school such as the one I have just mentioned be established in it. You would have up to 400 boys in attendance at that school. The endowment from the National Board supplemented by a substantial part of Leamy's endowment would make it a first-class Catholic model school, in which the education of the ordinary National school could be enlarged, the teaching staff supplemented, and, by a system of prizes, the whole efficiency of the school would be increased. The entire endowment would not be necessary for such a school, and portion of it could be given to the Christian Brothers, who, I think, in any redistribution of funds ought to get a substantial sum. The Christian Brothers for generations have been teaching the boys of Limerick, giving them a magnificent education, and when the Government treats them as they have done because they are true to their religion, I think they ought to be considered by this Commission.

309. How would the Protestants get any share of that money?—I do really think the Protestants, on their own showing, have hardly any claim on this, because witness after witness has said they don't want poor schools—they have poor schools enough—and as long as there are poor in Limerick to which Leamy's money could be applied, I don't think it ought to go to the rich.

 G'Dwyer,
 Bishop of

810. They said they had poor schools in connection with the National Board. We could not take away from them what they are entitled to under Leamy's will because they have since got grants from the National Board!—But if they tell the Commissioners they don't want it, I don't think it should be forced on them.

811. But they said they wanted it for other purposes!—But it can be carried out as Leamy intended.

812. I understand that you think the school and money cannot be made available for both denominations!—Certainly not. I never will allow the Catholics of Limerick, while I am bishop, to attend a mixed school. I particularly wish to improve on the Commission with regard to this school that I believe a first-rate boys' poor school could be established in Leamy's house with a part of the money endowment of Leamy; that a portion of the remainder ought to be given to the Christian Brothers, and could be very usefully spent if a board were incorporated in Limerick that would take charge of the endowments, and rules could be provided for its guidance, by which they could apply such money efficiently through the different schools of the city. But I wish to say that though I believe on their own showing the Protestant body have no claim to a share of the endowment, I have no objection at all to their getting a share, but I think it ought to be applied to the education of the poor.

813. Would there be any difficulty in principle in forming a mixed governing body for managing Leamy's property and dividing and distributing the fund, provided the principles of distribution were laid down on which all denominations were to share?—I don't see what difficulty there could be; but I don't see what need there would be of forming such a body.

814. Somebody must hold the property, and it is a fund in which all denominations are interested!—I think it would be much simpler for this Commission to make the division from the first.

815. Dr. TRAILL.—Would that be carrying out Leamy's intentions?—Decidedly, for the education of the poor. Supposing the school was valued at £10,000, and the rest of the endowment at £10,000—that is £12,000; and you say the Catholics of Limerick get three-fourths, and the Protestants one-fourth; form a Protestant board in a way to satisfy them, and hand them their money, binding them to expend it in a certain way. Hand to the Catholic board their share of the money, binding them to expend it in a particular way.

816. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—How would you propose to form the Catholic board?—I would suggest the bishop of the diocese be Chairman, the administrator of the parish in which Leamy's School is, one or two priests, and a couple of laymen that would be named—men of position—either magistrates of the city or members of the Town Council, and they should have power to co-opt.

817. Dr. TRAILL.—But large buildings may be worth nothing when they come to be valued for educational purposes?—Well, you know, there may be such a thing as a white elephant in buildings.

818. If you take away the endowment, and hand the building, with a quarter of the endowment, to any body, it would be worse than a white elephant!—Yes; but Margaret buildings are perfectly useless. I understand you could let the land, but not the buildings, but if you put up Leamy's School to-morrow for section, I will buy it from you.

Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—We had a similar case to this—Swords Borough School. We came to the conclusion that one denomination required the building more than the other, and accordingly we proposed that if they chose to keep them at a certain price they might, putting the value against their own share of the endowment. If you have on the one side Leamy's School, and on the other a certain sum of money, which would the buildings or the money be more suitable for the Catholics?

819. Rev. Dr. MASON.—What would your Lordship estimate the buildings to be worth?—They cost nearly £4,000; they are worth more than £3,000; but as far as I am concerned, it is a matter of indifference. If you give their money value to us we are perfectly satisfied.

820. If we put them at £3,000, which would you rather have the buildings or £3,000?—I don't see any great store by them as against £3,000, but you will have to bear this in mind, if you set down the value of the buildings at £3,000 and make a division of the entire endowment between the Catholics and Protestants of Limerick, the house alone will very nearly exhaust any share that you would, on any reasonable principle, give the Protestants, so you would be giving them four bare walls with nothing. It is for them to consider whether they would not get the money and apply it to the schools they have already.

821. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—What Catholic schools are near Leamy's now?—Perry-square Convent School; it is a very bad building. We have the St. Vincent de Paul National School, in Harcourt-street, where there is an actual attendance of 375 children. And what I had in my mind was this, that if Leamy's School was given over to us we would put the National School into it, and the residence for the teachers, and the improved accommodation they would have there would be a large supplement to its revenue, and we would put the poor school now conducted by the nuns in Perry-square into the new buildings of the St. Vincent de Paul School, and by this management we would serve both the boys and the girls of the district.

822. Dr. TRAILL.—Who gave the £1,000 for the St. Vincent de Paul School?—The Commissioners of National Education.

823. Do they give grants for Convent schools?—They give grants for the building of schools. If a school is vested in local trustees the Board will give two-thirds of the cost of building.

824. Lord Justice KILMER.—Is St. Vincent's a National school?—Yes.

825. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—The Model School is not far from that?—Yes; but of course we cannot go there.

826. But the building is there. How many is it capable of accommodating?—I really don't know—it is a fine large school.

827. If the Model School was available for Catholic children would Leamy's School be required also?—Oh, no.

828. It would be a solution of the matter, if the Model School were in the hands of the Catholics and Leamy's in the hands of the Protestants!—Yes.

829. And you think that would be satisfactory to the entire city?—Yes; but any legislation on the education question is very far off in this country.

830. It might not be so far off if people were reasonable!—A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

831. Dr. TRAILL.—When the Protestants say, "We are quite ready to allow you to come into this building," and when you won't go into it, do you think it is a reasonable thing to deprive them of the building afterwards?—Certainly. I do think so. It is Leamy's will that regulates it. The will says they should be for the poor of Limerick.

832. That is another question; suppose they used them for poor children, and you said you would not come in on any terms?—Oh, of course, if we turned Protestants we could get the whole thing—if you propose to set a man a condition that he cannot accept. Catholics never used these schools.

831. The regulations in the Court of Chancery were settled with a view to satisfy the Roman Catholics!—But you must know that what the Court of Chancery did in the good old academy days to satisfy the Catholics is a very different thing from what the Catholics themselves would be satisfied with.

832. But the buildings were built on the faith of that!—They were built by persons who took the money and regulated the education in a way that they thought satisfied the consciences of the Catholics. The buildings all belong to the poor of Limerick indiscriminately, and it is for you to make the best use of it that you can.

833. But I am only pointing out the difficulty of leaving the Protestants with a large building, and without any endowment!—Then let them leave the buildings and take their share of the money.

PUBLIC SITTING—TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Limerick.

Oct. 11, 1887.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIKH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, B.D., D.C., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.T.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

* MEMORIAL OF CERTAIN INHABITANTS OF KERRY.

834. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—We have received a memorial from Archbishop O'Connell and other Protestant inhabitants of Tralee, and also a memorial from Dean Coffey, Roman Catholic Dean of Kerry, on the subject of education in that locality, and will begin to hear any statement on the matter.

Via R. D'A. O'Connell, Archbishop of Armagh.—As far as the Church of Ireland is concerned, practically there are no educational endowments in Kerry, and we feel that in the competition for the public service and intermediate examinations we are very heavily weighted. We are so far removed from the centres of education in Tralee; it is such a waste to parents to send their children to public schools, that practically they are out of the running altogether. And, therefore, our object was if there was any fund to be distributed which was restricted to the use of the Church of Ireland that something should be done to encourage intermediate education in Kerry. Formerly the schools of Kerry produced some excellent classical men, the fellowship and the scholarship benches of Trinity College had a good many occupants from Kerry. But when the National System was introduced the primary private schools were all abolished, and the local fairs, which generally taught classics, was swept away; therefore, we simply ask that in the redistribution of any endowment, Kerry, in its necessities, should be remembered by the Commissioners.

835. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Have you considered what endowments there are upon which you thought you might have a claim; for you are aware that our power is limited to providing for the future government and management of existing endowments, and we have no power to increase their amount!—The only two of which I was aware were the Incorporated Society and the Erasmus Smith Funds, whether they are locally available or not. I don't know, but if they are, I would ask that some portion of those should be allocated for the purpose.

836. Dr. TRAILL.—Ennis is out of your reach!—Ennis and Tipperary are both out of our reach.

837. What substitute could you get for Ennis as a typical locality with a chance of working a school?—I think Tralee would be the only place that would be any benefit.

838. What is the population of Tralee?—The Church population is about 900.

839. Is it larger than that of Ennis?—I am not sure.

840. Lord Justice NAIKH.—A little larger than Ennis.

Archbishop O'Connell.—Besides the members of the Church of Ireland there are about 200 Presbyterians and Wesleyans, all I may say of the class for whom intermediate education is necessary.

841. Dr. TRAILL.—It is a day school you want!—Yes. Do the Commissioners deal with girls' schools?—Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Yes, there is a section in our Act of Parliament requiring us, as far as possible, to extend to girls' schools the benefit of any available endowments.

Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—A lady from Tralee appeared before us in Dublin.

Archbishop O'Connell.—Then I would also ask on behalf of girls.

842. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How many girls are there in the existing school?—About from 30 to 60. They have fallen off very much in sixteen or seventeen years through want of teachers.

843. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Has anything been done by local effort to establish schools in Kerry?—No, not that I am aware of.

844. You don't think anything could be done in the way of getting subscriptions?—I think it could, but I would not like to bind myself here to any that.

845. Lord Justice NAIKH.—There is no local fund available?—No.

846. If we could apply a portion of the funds you mention, of course you are aware a great number of other places would also put forward a claim!—Quite so.

847. Dr. TRAILL.—How far is Tralee from the nearest school?—Ennis is the nearest public school. As the bird flies, it is about 100 miles, and as you go by train it is double the distance—you might as well go to Dublin. Middleton, Tipperary, and Ennis are the three schools nearest.

848. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Those are the views you wish to put forward?—Yes.

849. Then I may shortly state how the matter stands. We have already had evidence in Dublin of the unfortunate position of Kerry in educational matters, especially with regard to girls' schools. In that large county, from which so many clever people have come, there are no local endowments. Furthermore, the supply of private schools seems very small both with regard to boys and to girls, and one of the difficulties is that they have been unable even to have a centre for intermediate examinations at Tralee. Of the want of endowments there can be no doubt, but our powers are only to extend the usefulness of existing endowments. We have no power of creating endowments, and in the exercise of the powers which we do possess, where the endowments are of private origin, we are obliged to have regard to the intentions of the founders. The more important endowments were provided for localities which do not include Kerry. The Incorporated Society and Erasmus Smith's schools both come within the scope of our Act, and we are engaged in the consideration of schemes for their future management, but until we have succeeded in advancing the more difficult question of the Royal School endowments, we cannot publish a scheme as regards either of the others. But I think I may anticipate the matter so far as to say, at least with respect to the Incorporated Society, that its endowments appear to be denominational, and that it would be desirable that the body formed for their management should have power to apply the whole, or whatever portion of those endowments may belong to the denomination which you represent, in whatever way they consider most advantageous to the members of their own denomination throughout Ireland, subject to the special restrictions which, no doubt, affect some of their endowments which belong to particular localities, under the direction of the people who originally gave them. But it will be our object in settling any scheme for the management of these endowments to secure that there shall be nothing to prevent an application of portion of them, if free otherwise, to localities hitherto without educational provisions. The case of Erasmus Smith's schools is more complicated, and I am not yet in a position to say even so much about that. The endowment is altogether derived from one individual; it is to a great extent localised, and certain persons were mentioned by the founder who were to benefit by it; it has not yet been extended to Kerry, and unless the governing body of the schools should find it prudent and consistent with their trust so to extend it, I am afraid it would not be in our power to compel them to do so. The boarding schools you have mentioned, Midleton and Ennis, would continue to be open to the inhabitants of Kerry in the future as in the past, and therefore, for boarding purposes, you have the same provision that has always existed. We cannot promise you, because we don't believe in its existence, a share of any public fund. There are no public funds at our disposal that it would be possible to extend to Kerry. We had applications in the North of Ireland last year from a number of localities situated in Kerry, in many of which great exertions had been made by the inhabitants themselves to establish schools; they asked some assistance to maintain these schools. There is not any endowment in Ireland that could support an intermediate school in such county, and the very most that could be done would be, when a school is established by local effort, to enable it to receive some small assistance from central funds. The evidence we have had goes very strongly to show that at a very small endowment there given out may be a great assistance to a school if vigorously supported locally, but when an attempt is made to support a school altogether by endowments it is generally a failure. I am sorry not to be able to speak more definitely on the subject, but we will certainly bear in mind, in settling the scheme for the Incorporated Society, what you have put forward on behalf of your locality, and if we find ourselves able so to do, we will enable the now governing body to extend the benefit of the endowments to Kerry.

Archdeacon O'Keefe.—Is it too late to make any application to you with respect to a local endowment?

Lord Justice Fitz-Gibbon.—Certainly not. If there is any local endowment, no matter how small, which can be made the subject of a scheme by the creation of a body for its government, we may make it the nucleus for something better. If the existing girl school in Tralee, or any other institution in this locality, could be made the subject of a scheme, we can give you the most ample powers for extension afterwards, as funds are provided, by ourselves or in some other way. We are in communication with many persons for the erection of schools or local bodies for the management of educational endowments, and we shall be glad to do what we can to assist you in that way.

Rev. Walter Baxendale sworn.

Rev. Walter
 Baxendale.

832. Lord Justice Fitz-Gibbon.—You wish to give me some information with reference to Leamy's school? I am very much interested in it, because members of my congregation send their children there; and some members of the Methodist congregation have sent their children also on my recommendation. Some four years ago when I came to the town, I found this was a school on a perfectly undenominational basis. Of course that met my own convictions. I sent my own children there, and the Methodist minister, Dr. Crook, consulted with me and determined to send his; the result was an increase in the number of Nonconformists sending their children to that school, and it became very much in that way the thing the donors intended. It is more and more becoming all that the trust intended. I wish to place my own position before you. There is a great want of a middle class and intermediate school in this neighbourhood, and if you close the school, I almost go so far as to say you leave these thinking like myself nothing. I was drawn to it by the fact that it was an undenominational school. I should very much like to send my children by and by to a University school. You seem to be on the point of closing Mungret against me, and if you close this school so that I cannot go there, you leave me nothing in the neighbourhood. I am perfectly sure my experience is the experience of a large and increasing body of people. We don't care about sectarian differences, we long to see our children educated side by side, without making the lines of cleavage that are here stronger, and the gulf wider apart than it is. The word that raised my desire to give evidence was the statement about making it a denominational school.

There are hymns here who represent labour interests, who employ labour largely, and I think if some of them were to be asked to give evidence, they could give most valuable information. I have asked again and again men who know the town well—there is a distinct want for middle class education, and for a broad platform on which we can all meet, and I believe as Protestants, at least, we are perfectly prepared to do so. There is no disagreement on these questions between us, and there is every willingness to co-operate with our Catholic friends if they will. I don't know how far that side has withdrawn, but it does seem to me, as a Protestant father of a family, fair to say to them "we are not interfering with you at Mungret, don't you interfere with us at Leamy's, give us fair play here." If not, I would feel obliged as a citizen to raise the point as to the present use of the endowments at Mungret. I have a great admiration for a great many Roman Catholic friends, I have heard the expression of their opinions, and as far as their opinions go, it is entirely against what the Roman Catholic Bishop said yesterday. I was somewhat astonished to listen to him, we are prepared to leave their side of the question unchanged, if they leave ours.

833. Rev. Dr. Moller.—What do you mean by their side and yours?—It seems to me I have a perfect right to claim that my children should go on the foundation at Mungret if I like. I want my children to go to a University school, and to live at home. I live on that side of the town, and I don't see why my right should be interfered with. If you interfere with that right, you are going against the whole tendency of modern times, you are narrowing the dis-instead of broadening it. If the Commission makes it so that there is no conscience clause in Mungret, you take away that privilege from us. I should like that the privilege should be allowed me, and other citizens if we like, to send our children to Mungret. If you take away that privilege, then give us on our side Leamy's school, and let us do something there. The education in this town for middle class children, and for the poorer class who try to keep themselves respectable, is wretched in the extreme. I am an Englishman, but I know somewhat of Limerick. I have lived here four years; there is a great want here in this direction, and we do hope that you will not narrow the existing chances in the matter.

854. Lord Justice FitzGibbon. — Everybody appears to be quite satisfied that there is that great want, that at present there are no Protestants at Mungret, and there are practically no Catholics at Leamy's. Pardon me, there are Catholics at Leamy's.

855. Practically, I say, there are none, and the system of education there is such that no Catholic governor has continued to take any part in the management. That being so, could you give any suggestion as to how a governing body for Leamy's school could be formed that would have the confidence of all denominations of Protestants? I think the thing would be very easy. We have been a Young Men's Protestant Association, and we have settled that matter among ourselves to our own content. There is a governing body of all denominations, all ministers are ex-officio members, and the Dean tells me he is perfectly willing to let that be a part of the scheme for the future management of Leamy's.

856. Do I understand that according to your view all Protestant ministers should, ex-officio, be members of the Governing Body of Leamy's School?—No, but you have power to give a larger body, on which all ministers could be represented.

857. How would you propose to represent the laymen?—There would be the difficulty, but I fancy that difficulty would be got over if you allowed us the same privilege as the Jesuits and the trustees of Mungret, if you gave us half an hour among ourselves to consult we could give you some scheme that would satisfy us.

858. We would be very glad if some such course was taken. In the north of Ireland, in several places, before our inquiries were held, a public meeting of the Protestants interested in education was held, at which committees were appointed representing all sections of Protestants, who were empowered to come forward and who gave us their views, and were prepared in each case to submit proposals for a system in which all Protestants would work together in managing their share of the endowments whatever it was. I am afraid there is no practical prospect of our being able to make any arrangement which would include the Roman Catholics, and we must respect their views as well as those of the Protestants. There is no use of forcing a system on the two parties that probably one would repudiate altogether and the other would not like so much as leaving the Protestants to work by themselves—I think you would find that the scheme of getting Protestants who are interested in education together, and getting them to elect laymen, and perhaps a complete public body, would work in Limerick.

859. You have taken an interest in the matter, and represent one congregation at least, and if you can cooperate with others in submitting suggestions to us before the settlement of the scheme we shall be very glad to receive them. The work which we should be anxious to do is exactly what such a body as I have mentioned would be best able to advise about—I may say I don't think the present education in Leamy's School is what it ought to be for Protestants.

860. The school is not nearly full and the first object ought to be to form some scheme by which the buildings would be made completely useful. One proposed you heard yesterday was to fill them at once by making it a Roman Catholic school and allowing the Protestants a corresponding share of the money to establish a school elsewhere. Another proposal might be to enable the Protestants to utilize the buildings as part of their share of the endowment, the Roman Catholics having their claims upon the money satisfied in some way in which they should take advantage of it. We are not only willing, but it is our duty, to hear the views of all parties on this matter, and we should be very glad to have a joint representation from any number of denominations, and the larger the number the better—I think if the Dean prepared a scheme it would meet all our views.

861. The Dean is in this difficulty—he is a member of the governing body which expresses its satisfaction with the existing state of things.

Dean Swobbery.—I have my own opinion about the matter also.

862. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Could you estimate the numbers of Protestants of denominations for which you can speak who would want the school?

Rev. Mr. Macdonald.—I think so, in some measure. There are perhaps eight or nine children, speaking roughly, of Congregationalists going there now. I should think there would be more than that of the Methodists. I know several Presbyterian families going there. I should say from one-third to one-half of the present pupils are Nonconformist children. If you were to narrow the basis we should have to withdraw, and we should have nowhere to educate those children.

863. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—I have not heard any proposal to narrow it beyond the Roman Catholic portion?—Exactly, but that seems to me a very serious matter, I don't think Leamy's is too well endowed. If you take part of the endowment and give it to the Catholics you would cripple the school.

864. Rev. Dr. M'Callister.—I understood the Dean a view to be that the want of which you speak, and which was described to me yesterday, is a want of education for the middle class of Protestants in Limerick. We were told that there is ample provision for the education of the poorer classes of Protestants. Now the evidence of the Bishop was that there is a vast number of poor in Limerick for which there is very imperfect provision, and it was for the education of the poor that this money was left; consequently, if Leamy's School were developed into an intermediate school for the middle and upper classes, the object for which the endowment was left would be frustrated; and it would be frustrated at a time when there is a vast number of poor in the city for whom there is not sufficient provision.

865. Rev. Mr. Macdonald.—Would you allow me to pay a compliment to the Roman Catholic Church and say that I think that is a very good provision, all honour to them, they have done their work well. But there is a class of poverty that comes under our notice more, perhaps, than under the notice of the Catholic Bishop, a poverty that puts the best appearance before the world, and has not much to help it, a struggling poverty that does not send its children about with bare feet but it is more worthy of help than the poverty which is more apparent. That is the class that by the free scholarships of Leamy is helped at present. I have not many of that class in my congregation, but the Protestant clergy know these poor children that are needy and they do recommend them, they are provided for without the appearance of giving charity, but it really is serving a want of the town in that way, not so apparent, but a real want. Besides yesterday we heard it clearly laid down that endowments for agriculture were to be given for University education. His lordship laid down the lines that where we see a thing has developed in a certain direction, and is doing good, we ought to do nothing voluntarily to depart from that; now I say it would be a violent wrench to take the existing money, and give them among the poorer class to the Christian Brothers. I have all respect for the work they are doing, but it seems to me that that is not the kind of thing the donor meant; as far as I understand he did not mean the very poor, I think he meant what we see among the Protestant poor, and very often that poverty is quite as much, perhaps more worthy of sympathy than the poverty which is more apparent.

566. PROFESSOR DOUGHERTY.—Have you any considerable Protestant working class population in Limerick?—I think there is a very fair class. There is Mr. Shaw here who is a large employer of labour. You had better have his opinion than mine.

567. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think the present arrangement at Mangret is all approximate to the original idea of the foundation?—Not in the least.

568. Do you think that being "open to all denominations" in the programme, while the head of the institution is a Jesuit, and the institution under the management of the Jesuit order, it is de facto open to Protestants?—Not at all, but my own feeling is that I am willing to say under existing difficulties let it be so.

569. What is your opinion as between these two alternatives; where public money has got locked up with private money, and the institution has got into the hands of one denomination, is it your opinion that the money should be accounted for, and divided, so as to cripple the institution, or is it your opinion that the institution might be worked by the body into whose hands it had got, rightly or wrongly, a debtor and creditor account being kept in respect of such cases, as between the denominations?—I think you would spoil everything if you attempted to divide now, the thing has gone too far, you had better follow the growth of public opinion. The Catholics have taken Mangret, don't injure them. You say we have taken Lenny's, very well, let us keep it, it is a similar endowment. But if they begin to quarrel over Lenny's, you should let us put in our caveat as to Mangret.

Rev. Joseph W. R. Campbell, M.A., Methodist Minister, examined.

Rev. J. W. R.
Campbell.

570. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you wish to add anything to Mr. Bensdale's statement?—There is nothing I could add.

571. Could you tell us how many children of your congregation would take advantage of Lenny's school?—I know there are four families of your congregation who send their children there at present.

572. What is the principal want among the poorer members of your congregation in the way of education?—Intermediate education is really the great want.

573. Do you think if the Lenny endowment was made available for free scholarships for poor children of the middle class, there would be a sufficient number of middle class children who would be able to pay to enable the institution to be kept up?—I think so.

574. Dr. TRAILL.—It has been said that there is sufficient accommodation in Limerick, or sufficient educational provision for the Protestant poor of Limerick, do you agree with that, or do you think there is any ambiguity in the word "accommodation," befitting accommodation, and money accommodation. Is provision in money for the Protestant poor excessive in Limerick, or is it sufficient?—I think provision for the poor, those who require a rudimentary education, is sufficient.

575. On account of the National system?—Yes, and other endowments as well, but I think the provision for anything towards intermediate education is not adequate.

576. And among the clever boys that might be got from these other schools from the poorer class, Lenny's endowment might be made available?—Yes.

Alexander W. Shaw examined.

Alexander
W. Shaw.

577. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Can you give any information as to whether there is any substantial class of Protestant children who cannot provide themselves with the class of education they want, and who would avail themselves of Lenny's School?—There are. There is a certain section of poor working men, it is not a very numerous section in proportion to the population, but there is certainly a section that would avail themselves of Lenny's School.

James O'Shaughnessy, esq., M.R.S., sworn.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy.

581. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You desire to give us some evidence?—I don't know that I could give you much information about Lenny's, although I live beside it. I am delighted with the well got up class of children I see going in, but I have never been inside the walls of it. It struck me I might be of some use on the question of the state of Limerick generally, its poor as compared with those of other cities, and also as to the condition of the poor Catholics of our city.

582. We should be glad to hear you with reference to the educational wants of Limerick. Would you state first your means of knowledge on the subject?—I have been living in Limerick, except during the time of my medical studies, for sixty-two years, and I have had a good deal to do with public matters. I belong to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul in Limerick. I did not intend to mention it, because we don't speak publicly in connection with our society. However, that society has a council, a head board in Dublin, and has spread all over the country, in every large town in Ireland there is a branch, and the rules of the society require us to send in, quarterly, an account of the amount of poverty, not of pauperism, because we leave that to the workhouse, and at the end of the year the council at Paris, the head of our institution, have those figures before them, and they publish them. The population of Dublin is 249,500; the population of Belfast is 203,060; the population of Cork is 97,500; the population of Derry is 55,947, and of Limerick, 55,650. Now, in the last report of the operations of the society we have these remarkable figures. In Dublin the number of individual families relieved has been 3,830, in Belfast, 1,204, in Cork, 1,525, in Derry, 418, and in Limerick, 1,765; as nearly as I could have it calculated the percentage of poverty in Dublin is seven per cent., that of Belfast is 4.9, and a half, Cork, six three-quarters, Derry four three-quarters, and Limerick, nineteen.

883. Of course your figures with respect to Limerick and Cork, and, to a great extent, to Dublin, would be slightly enough compared, but should you not take into account in Belfast and Derry that, I presume, the families relieved by your society are almost, if not altogether Catholic?—Not necessarily.

884. Practically?—Well, they would be.

885. Rev. Dr. MONTAGUE.—Those figures represent the persons relieved by your society?—Yes, the number of individuals.

886. Do you think the number relieved by your society is proportional in each case to the poverty of the city?—I don't know any better test of the poverty of a city than that is, because those people all apply to us.

887. Does not the amount of relief given depend in some degree upon the resources of your society as well as on the amount of poverty existing; there might be a great deal of poverty in some cities not relieved by your society?—All classes apply; we are so situated that I think it would be a difficult thing to assume that the persons who are in want of relief would not apply.

888. Dr. TRAILL.—You don't mean to say that the Protestant poor of either Belfast or Derry ever applied to your society for relief?—I do mean to say it.

889. As a matter of your own knowledge?—They do in Limerick; I have never been in Derry or Belfast, but all I know is by the rules of our society we are bound to relieve all classes and creeds.

890. But you say that they applied, do you adhere to your statement that in Belfast or Derry any of the Protestant poor have ever applied to your society for relief?—I don't know.

Dr. TRAILL.—I don't believe it is the case, I am quite sure it is not.

891. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I am afraid we are wandering a little from education. We may take your figures as founding a fair comparison between Cork and Limerick, at all events as to the condition of the poor, but how see you off for schools?—For over twenty-five years we were entirely deficient and in want of schools in St. Michael's parish, which is more than half the city. For over twenty years, at my rate, the only school we had was one at the extreme end of our parish, in close connection with St. John's, and in the entire district, with a population of some 15,000 people, we really had no school for our boys. The condition of things was so bad that the late Bishop saw it and undervalued it, but we had no funds, we had no means of getting up a school, we were already heavily loaded, I may say, by our efforts to support the Christian Brothers, and we had no funds to get up a building and plant. Some two or three years the society to which I belong seeing the very sad condition of affairs, seeing the boys growing up to the age of manhood without having gone near a school, the victims of prisons, reformatories, and industrial schools, we made a great struggle, and under great difficulties we established the St. Vincent de Paul school. The same, to a great degree, applies to the female teaching in Limerick. There is a school close to the Leamy School, the Pery-square school, taught by the nuns, that is nothing better than an old nunnery. It is really not fit for the children nor for the ladies who have charge of them. What they do there is wonderful, they not alone feed a great many of the poor children but they clothe them. And in the Presentation Convent, where the enormous number you heard of yesterday, are taught, they have to clothe and to feed nearly all who are in the school. I have scarcely ever met a child coming from the Presentation Convent that she has not told me she was the child of a widow, and most of them are orphans that have been fed and clothed by these nuns. I think the condition of our children with regard to education is very bad indeed.

892. You have been telling us what schools you have, we should rather wish to know what is wanting in the way of education, is there any large number of children who are not at present able to get education. I believe the recommendation is not sufficient in the Pery-square school?—It is so crammed up with children that it is impossible to have anything like order.

893. So the Bishop told us yesterday. Have you any practical suggestion as to how you think a little money, because there is not much, could be best spent?—I think money would in the first instance be best spent by subsidising the Christian Brothers' funds. Private citizens have to come to their aid to enable them to get on. Our own school, the St. Vincent de Paul school, of which I happen to be one of the managers, is kept up by a great struggle, and I don't think it is a breach of the rules of our society to state here that the efforts we made to apply a portion of our funds to it simply almost got us boycotted by the heads of the society. From our poverty-stricken people we absolutely took the sum of £800, I think, of the money which we ought to give for the clothing, the firing, and the feeding of the poor, to build that school, sooner than have our children in a state of demoralisation. There was a great struggle made over it in Dublin, and very properly.

894. Were you not able to get the whole cost of your building from the National Board?—We arranged very well with them. They would have given us the whole grant if we gave them the whole building, but we look forward before long to be in a position to keep up the building ourselves, so we kept the ownership in ourselves.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—There is a rule of the Irish Church forbidding us to take grants from the National Board in cases where the schools are vested in the Commissioners.

895. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I was aware, my lord, that that was so for a while, but I thought that it was changed. The idea used to be that a vested school meant a school vested in the Commissioners of National Education, but since it became known that vested schools included schools vested in trustees for education, there have, I believe, been many instances in which Roman Catholic schools so vested have been built at the cost of the Board.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—This school is vested in Dr. O'Shaughnessy and two other gentlemen as trustees, and they have the appointment of the manager.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy.—If it was possible for us by any means to have got the whole of the money from the National Education Board we would have been very glad, it was by the point of the bargain, we were opposed at home and abroad for two years, three never was such a battle as we had to build that school, and thank goodness it is built now, it is a great success, and his lordship who really promoted it with the late bishop, has great reason to be very happy. He is now paying out of his pocket for the cleaning of it, I have a bill against him now to pay for the school, and he is very good humoured over it.

896. Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—As a matter of fact is there any fund for the maintenance of the school, the repairs, the cleaning, and the heating of it?—No.

897. And you have on some to me to find out of the ordinary diocesan fund a sum for that purpose?—I have, my lord, but I have not gone to you yet with the large bill, which we have been paying for the last two years.

898. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Then you have to pay all the costs of maintenance and you get but two-thirds of the cost of the building from the National Board?—Yes.

Rev. Mr. Barndale.—I live near this school, and the new building they have erected has half occupied the neighbouring National school, that is a misapplication of public funds.

Esq.

OCT. 21, 1887.
Dr. O'Shaughnessy.
semp.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy.—I am bound to say we have not three boys from the Model School in our school. The only school we would be apt to interfere with would be the Christian Brothers', and they bear it very good humouredly.

892. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The school that Mr. Baxendale referred to is the Model School—is it?

893. There is an objection on the part of Roman Catholics to attend that school?

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—They are forbidden in this diocese to attend it.

Dr. O'Shaughnessy.—We had the National Inspector here, who was a good judge, he lived in the district, and he saw our boys were growing up to the age of sixteen or seventeen without education. We ourselves missed the difficulty for we said "there is a school above them." And he said—"Certainly not, your boys won't be allowed to go there."

Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The Model School was opened to them in the same way as Mingret is open to Protestants.

894. Dr. TRAILL.—Are there any Protestant boys in your school?—I declare, I think, there are no Protestant boys in Limerick that want schooling, except those that can pay for it. I have to do with most of the charities in Limerick and as most of the money comes from the worthy liberal Protestants of Limerick my desire is to find out Protestants who would be the recipients of our charity for clothing or food and I really cannot get them.

Very Rev. Dean Beaubury further examined.

Very Rev.
Dean Beaubury.

894. Mr. Baxendale has said almost all that I intended to say, and I endorse a good deal of what he said. I am in a somewhat difficult position, but I don't appear in antagonism to Mingret, at present I am quite willing that the Roman Catholics who have practically Mingret under their entire and exclusive control, should so continue, but against that I propose that we Protestants, and I mean the Protestants of all denominations in Limerick, should have the exclusive and entire control of Leamy's School and fund, I would put the one against the other, that is the position I endeavour to maintain. It has been manifested from the evidence we have heard as regards Mingret that a very considerable portion of endowment originally intended for the benefit of the community at large, including the Protestants, has been now diverted from its original intention and exclusively devoted to Roman Catholic education. Of course we know that the donors of Mingret are entirely closed against the admission now of Protestants. Very well, that being so, let it be, but for that, to make amends to us, the Protestant community not only of Limerick city but of the whole county, let us have the exclusive right to Leamy's School. That is the position now in which I stand. I come here ostensibly to represent the Board of Governors of Leamy's School, and as I said yesterday the Board was for the most part satiated with the scheme as it at present exists, but evidence has come up which alters the opinion of some members of the Board, of myself certainly, and of some members with whom I have since spoken. I think now that all the Protestant members of the Governing Body of Leamy's School would advocate leaving over Leamy's School entirely to the control of the Protestants of Limerick of all denominations, to be represented as I think can easily be done on the governing board. Bishop O'Dwyer yesterday laid great stress on the fact that Leamy the original donor intended, giving expression to his intention by his will, that the endowment should be for the poor of Limerick. I don't remember that the Bishop continued to read Leamy's will, but I will if you will allow me now just read the passage that has reference to Leamy's intention. He left his money, the residue

895. Am I to understand that there are no Protestant poor?—There are a few, but when I go to the heads of the Protestant party to ask will I relieve these, the late Mr. Alexander one of the most benevolent men Limerick ever saw told me "Never relieve a Protestant, if you can, for they have enough from us, and they are not proper subjects if they go to you."

896. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—I understood from the Bishop that if the Model School was available the Catholic pupils on terms which they could accept, that the Model School and St. Vincent de Paul School taken together would give the Catholics the accommodation they want, leaving Leamy for the Protestants, but that if the Model School cannot be made available you are in want of additional buildings for your people; did I understand you rightly?

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—Quite so, my lord, and I take the liberty of adding that though this Commission is empowered to deal with Leamy's School it has no power to deal with the Model School, and it is probable whether within a short time you will have power to do so.

Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—It is problematical, and it is for those interested in education to represent the matter whose effect can be given to their representations.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—I think it would be a great mistake for us to surrender any claim we have for Leamy's on the chance of getting the Model School.

of his property, "to the education of the children of the poor in Ireland, principally those in and about Limerick or as they (that is, his trustees) in their better judgment should deem meet and fit to give this bequest the most extensive efficacy." I say that if we have Leamy's School as an intermediate school we shall be overriding on the intention of this donor more strictly than if we open it, or it is opened as a primary school, because notwithstanding what Dr. O'Shaughnessy has said to you now I don't think he knows very much about the Protestant poor of Limerick.

897. Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—My lord, at this point, before the Dean passes away from it, might I ask your opinion as to a matter of construction, is it that clause "or as they in their better judgment should deem meet and fit to give this bequest the most extensive efficacy." Is that qualifying "the poor in Ireland, principally those in and about Limerick city," or does it qualify the education, as I understood Leamy meant that the education should be for the poor wherever they come from, he directed his trustees to get them from in or about Limerick, or in whatever way would give the most extensive efficacy for the education of the poor.

898. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—There is nothing more difficult than to interpret wills. I can only say for myself that the addition of that clause would enable us, if we saw that for the education of the poor the thing was not required, to say that the testator intended to say to his executors, "If you cannot apply my property in that way efficiently you may apply it in whatever way you think efficient." Being entitled to stand here in place of the executor I would not think we were so rightly tied down to spend the money on the poor, or if there were no such clause.

Lord Justice NASS.—I think it does give a certain discretion.

899. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—If his executor had acted I don't think with that clause in the will the Court of Chancery could have restrained them from any application of the money for the purpose of charitable education, which they found most useful.

If they found a deserving class of people that they wished to help I think they could have done it. I am only now speaking as one member of the Commission, at the same time, I don't think they could have applied the money to supplement the education of rich people, but it is more elastic than some other wills we have had to deal with.

Dean Sandberg.—That is what I maintain, and I consider the Commissioners would not be going contrary to the will of the donor if they consented to allow the school to be an intermediate school. I don't propose to take away from the poor Protestants of Limerick the advantage that they might reasonably expect to have, because, although I am happy to say you won't find any Protestants about the streets without shoes or stockings—it would be a disgrace to the Protestants of Limerick if such was to be seen. Still, as Mr. Buxendale has represented, there is a very great amount of poverty among the Protestants of Limerick. They endeavour to keep a respectable appearance, and they deny themselves almost the necessities of life, in some cases, in order that they may present that appearance, and that is to their credit, and I speak now for the children of those struggling Protestant poor who are trying to educate their children and advance them in life.

108. Meat Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—Would you be kind enough to ask the Dean how many poor Protestant children are in his own parish of St. Mary, because he said at the last inquiry here in 1861, that the Blue School was not wanted as a poor school, because he could not find twenty poor children in the whole parish.

Dean Sandberg.—I have the Blue School at present under the National Board, they don't pay one penny for their education, I have a grant from the National Board, and I have on the roll at the present moment forty-one poor children, who receive a gratuitous education, and from that school I have, on more than one occasion, promoted boys, or had them presented to Leamy's School on the free list, and that school I hold to be a feeder for the school I propose to establish at Leamy's, and other schools in Limerick would be feeders to that school. It is for those children we require an intermediate school. It is no reason because a child is of poor or humble parents that we should not endeavour to raise such a child up if he shows an ability to occupy a higher position than he was born to. Bishop O'Dwyer will, I am sure, agree with me in that, that is our sin and object, wherever we see promising Protestant children, either in Limerick or the county to advance them, and my difficulty is the want of such means. If you take away Leamy's School from us, we have no means of passing on these children from a lower to a higher state. We don't, at the present moment, confine ourselves as regards Leamy's School in our admissions to children of Limerick, or the county Limerick, we have at present on the free list two children from Strathfields, one a Roman Catholic, and one a Protestant, so that if it was an intermediate school we would have an opportunity of extending its usefulness not merely to Limerick city, but to Limerick county. When we say we have ample provision for the primary education of the Protestant poor, why have we not because we have endowments, but because we still crave for State aid. There are four Protestant schools in Limerick under the National Board, and there is another very shortly to be under it.

109. Meat Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—Do these supply all your wants, Dean?—Well, for the most part, I think. I speak as regards my own school; we have a small endowment, but we get a capitation grant from the National Board; they supply us with books and requisites. Some requisites we have to pay for, and the maintenance of the school. In the case of St. Michael's National School, under the Archbishop, it is a very large school, and I think he gets a large income for his master and relations.

110. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We have now given the fullest opportunity we reasonably could to all parties interested about this Leamy School of stating their views. Mr. Buxendale has mentioned a matter of which we should be very glad to hear more, that is, a conference from which written definite proposals or suggestions might come from the Protestants of Limerick. We want to extend the usefulness of the existing property, not only the Leamy property, but others, so as first of all to secure its being fully employed for educational purposes. In the case of Mungret the endowment has run in the one direction; in Leamy's it has run in the other, and considerations no doubt suggest themselves as being analogous in the two cases. We have to try now to frame a scheme for each, and we will bear in mind all we have heard and do the best we can. I would case meet in person on all parties that the scheme, as first published, will be the result of our own consideration of the matter in the first instance. There will then be another opportunity for all parties concerned to present their objections in a formal way, so that they can be considered by the Lord Lieutenant, as well as by us, and we may hope, with all this property that exists, much more useful work for all denominations may be done than at present.

Meat Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—A good deal has been said about Mungret College and its bearing on Leamy's. As far as I represent the Catholics of Limerick, we wish Mungret to be treated on its merits. If the Commissioners believe that at the time the new scheme was put in force for Mungret a better use could have been made of it for the city or county of Limerick, I have no objection to your coming to a new arrangement. The whole business was done by the old trustees of Mungret, Lord Enly and Sir Stephen de Vere. They found a large building there for years idle and useless; they thought what would be the best use of that for the interests of the people for whom it was erected; the great majority of the boys taught there are farmers' sons, and if they are not taught exactly the kind of education for which it was originally founded they get an education that is extremely useful to them, and, therefore, it is doing substantially, though not technically, the work for which it was built. Therefore, Mungret can stand on its merits, and I don't think there is any need for looking for a set off.

111. Dr. TRAILL.—When you say taking Mungret on its merits, do you mean if we were calculating the amount of the endowment we should see how much we should take away for the Protestants?—You should calculate the value of the building for any purpose, collegiate, or otherwise, at the time it got into the present hands, and whatever that was you could charge it against the present owners.

112. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Besides the land and buildings there is still a money fund. We will have to consider all these matters, and ought not now to discuss details when we have invited the Governing Body to send in their suggestions, and must hear those of other people also. I think it would be hardly fair to turn now to discuss the Mungret case in relation to the Leamy case or any set off, but we cannot settle one scheme on different principles from the other.

Rev. Dr. Motzart.—There is a very wide difference between the character of the two endowments. The endowment of Mungret is derived from public sources, and is at present administered by a Board of Trustees constituted under an Act of Parliament for the purpose of conducting intermediate or university education. Leamy's endowment is a private endowment, established for the education of the poor, and in our Act it is provided that we must have regard to the founder's intention in dealing with such an endowment. Therefore we are not at liberty to barter away the rights of any class who may claim under Leamy's will, in consideration of what may be done for another class by means of the Mungrat endowment.

Dean Dunbury.—I think there is evidence that a portion of the endowment came from private sources, I have very good reason to believe that. I regret very much that Dr. Wilson is not here to give evidence on the point, because he was in Limerick at the time. A subscription was raised for the purpose of helping Mungrat at the time it was established as an agricultural college.

1913. Lord Justice FRIZZIMON.—We really are getting into a discussion that has at present no practical end. In the Mungrat endowment there is a rent reserved to the present trustees, and they have a large money fund besides. Their scheme does not purport to withdraw, even if it could lawfully do so, that money from the provisions of the statute, under which it was to be applied for agricultural teaching and for education open to all denominations. It may turn out that such teaching is not practicable. Again we should be antiquating and deciding, without hearing both sides, difficult matters of law, if we were now to enter on any discussion as to the legal position of Mungrat or of Leamy's either. I would say for myself that we have had a body of evidence that, both for Catholics and for Protestants, the crying want in Limerick is not of a provision for primary education, which is now aided by provisions, which did not exist when Leamy made his will, but of a provision to enable clever children of the poor to better themselves by getting a better education. The greatest English endowments are applied to giving the highest class of education to poor people, but the very machinery for giving that education becomes the nucleus of great institutions where people who are able to pay for it get their education too. I should not consider myself to be diverting such money from its legitimate use if I could spend it so as to provide poor and deserving members of all denominations with intermediate education in institutions that would at the same time supply the wants of better class people on payment.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—I fear your lordship has not given sufficient weight to the condition of our poor Catholic schools. Bear in mind we have no provision from Government for the repairing of the schools into which our children are taken by thousands. Our children are so poor that we have to collect money at our church doors to feed and clothe them. The education of the male poor of Limerick is done altogether by the voluntary contributions of the Catholic people of the city. It is really a hard thing seeing that we have to support our clergy, orphanages, and almshouses for widows that while there are public endowments available for the education of the poor our people in Limerick have to put their hands in their pockets for the education of the people.

Lord Justice FRIZZIMON.—I should like to say that we have had evidence in other places, and it impresses me as much as it impresses anybody, of the very narrow margin that now excludes many of our schools from public assistance. Certainly this Commission is not answerable for the continuance of that difficulty, but the solution of it is not to be found in splitting up the few small private endowments that exist, but in making the State aid available for all.

Dean Dunbury.—Taking away a portion of the endowment from Leamy's school would be virtually closing the doors, we find it almost impossible to work that present, if any was taken from it it would cripple it.

Rev. Mr. Bannard.—In any future provision that is made, I suppose there would be no attempt to remove the conscience clause, so that at any time Catholics could come in if they wished. I know his lordship has strong views on the question. Is there any power in the Commission to alter the fact that there must be a conscience clause?

Lord Justice NAHEM.—We have power to do it, but that is a matter that will come up when we settle the scheme.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—If the Commission were to make it a Protestant school I should wish there was no conscience clause in it, that it should be a thoroughly Protestant school.

Dr. TRAILL.—But there must be a conscience clause in a Protestant school.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—Oh, as between themselves, I don't know about that.

Lord Justice FRIZZIMON.—There is no intention at present of giving Leamy's to any particular branch of Protestantism.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' SCHOOLS, LIMERICK.

Brother James P. Slattery sworn and examined.

Brother James
P. Slattery.

1914. Lord Justice NAHEM.—Are you the superintendent of the Christian Brothers in Limerick?—Yes.

1915. Have you the control of the Christian Brothers' Schools in Limerick?—Yes, I am manager.

1916. How many schools have you?—We have eighteen schools in the city.

1917. Lord Justice FRIZZIMON.—Each under a separate Brother?—There are twenty-two Brothers, a Brother in each school, and in some of them two Brothers.

1918. Lord Justice NAHEM.—How many separate buildings have you?—The schools are in four localities, Section street, St. Mary's, St. John's, and St. Munchin's. We have ten schools in Section street, four in St. Mary's, two in St. John's, and two in St. Munchin's.

1919. Are all these primary schools?—They are all primary schools, and we have also two Intermediate schools in Section street.

1920. What is the number of your pupils?—On the roll we have 1,694, and last week, on Thursday, I got a return from the Brothers and there were 1,471 children in actual attendance.

1921. What is the average attendance in the year?—In the winter time, of course, it comes down, there are some of the children poor, and the cold cuts them up. I think the average attendance for the year would be something less than 1,300, while in the summer months it is considerably greater.

1922. Are many of them boys free pupils?—We never refuse nor dare we refuse a boy who cannot pay his school penny. We have 400 children in our schools who don't pay even one penny a week, and cannot pay.

1923. What do the others pay?—Some hundreds pay one penny; over a hundred pay fourpence a week, and in the two Intermediate schools they pay sixpence, but in the Intermediate schools and the Fourpenny schools there are boys free who cannot pay.

1924. How many boys paying nothing are in the Intermediate school?—I should suppose about seven.

1925. What class of education do you give in the Intermediate schools?—The education required for the Intermediate Examinations. I produce a (Appendix B, No. V. c.) summary of the successes of our pupils under the Intermediate Act.

1926. Rev. Dr. Mottet.—What is the number of pupils in the Intermediate schools?—About 180.

1927. Do you send up boys in each grade, junior, middle, and senior?—Yes.

1928. The pupils in the Intermediate school come from the other schools?—Yes.

1929. So they represent the most promising boys from all your schools?—They do. They come to the front from the other schools. The subjects taught are Greek, Latin, English, French, German, Celtic, Italian, Arithmetic, Book-keeping, Euclid, Algebra, Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, Drawing, and Music.

900. Dr. TRAILL.—How many boys learn Greek?—Not many, probably not more than three or four. Our successes at the last Intermediate Examinations will give you an idea of it.

901. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—I see one boy got the gold medal in Modern Languages, silver medal in Italian, and silver medal in Celtic?—He took the eighth place in the senior grade, the gold medal for being first in Modern Languages; the silver medal for being first in Celtic and Italian, and a senior grade distinction.

902. Was he entirely taught in your school?—He was from his first book.

903. Lord Justice NAIK.—Would you tell me what funds the Christian Brothers have?—I have been local superior of the Christian Brothers, Sackville-street, since September, 1884. I hand in a statement of our funds, no change has been made in the investments since I came.

904. Is the sum stated the only income which you derive from your endowment?—That is the only income for teaching 1,600 boys.

905. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—In whose name are these various funds?—The superior, some members of the order, and some externs.

906. Who looks after the necessary transfers from one fund to another whenever there is any change?—I suppose the superior looks after that.

907. You ought to be the party, because you get the money?—Since I came into Limerick I had very little time to look after money legacies or anything of the kind.

908. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Are you one of the trustees?—I am not.

909. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Who are the trustees?—Our superior is one, for instance, in Dublin.

910. I am afraid many of these securities may be in the names of private individuals who have passed away?—Some of them have passed away; there is a bequest of the Rev. Mr. Walsh, and all the trustees are dead but one.

911. When he dies may you not have to go into Chancery?—Well, I dare say we will have to look to it, but I have never been a trustee.

912. Your superiors would find it for their interest to look into the matter; for among charitable funds mine are in greater danger of getting into legal difficulties than Roman Catholic funds, because if not transferred in time they pass by law to the personal representatives of the last trustee and finding him often involves time and expense, and if he cannot be found the only alternative is to go to Chancery, which may cost a large sum. This difficulty is one of those of which this Commission has power to get rid.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—I understand you have power to incorporate a body to hold this endowment.

913. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Yes, but in this we cannot do it without obtaining the written consent of the present trustees if we are satisfied that the funds were provided for Roman Catholic education, and placed in the hands of Roman Catholic trustees. (To witnesses).—Is all the property you have mentioned vested in trustees who pay the income directly to you?—Different trustees, and on different trusts, but all for our schools.

914. Then you might have one corporate body to hold the whole of this property?—I think it would be an excellent thing.

915. Have you got any additional funds since 1880?—Not any.

916. Who pays you Miss White's annuity of £361?—I get it from a solicitor in town, Mr. Kenny.

917. Is it charged on some estate?—It is a mortgage, I think.

918. There is stated to be a mortgage for £1,800, who pays you the interest on that?—I think the Industrial School Brothers, I am not quite sure, they got £1,800 from my predecessor.

919. Who pays you?—I get it from the Industrial School Manager, they got the money to build.

920. Then your security is the property of the Industrial School?—Yes, it is.

921. Lord Justice NAIK.—How much does the fees paid by the boys attending the school come to in the year?—The school fees for 1886 amounted to £416 5s. 1d. All this was expended in this way, for rent and repairs of schools, £190 15s. 1d.; free school requisites, £21 12s. 7d.; premiums and gratuities, £9 8s.; salaries of pupil teachers, £232; school fuel, £31 10s.; making £324 5s. 8d., whilst the school pence were only £416. The school thus is indebted £168.

922. In addition to the school pence what other money do you get for keeping up the schools?—We have two collections in the year, in May and November, amounting to about £400.

923. Dr. TRAILL.—You make up about £1,100 a year altogether?—You know we can never apply the school money for our own support.

924. Lord Justice NAIK.—Dr. Trill wants to know the entire amount of money that comes to you without taking into account the disbursements. You get £370 from your endowment; school pence, £416; and the collections, £400; do you receive any other money?—The Brothers go round every Saturday, and make what they call the penny a week collection.

925. Dr. TRAILL.—What does that amount to?—Some hundreds.

926. Lord Justice NAIK.—Are all the children attending your schools Catholics?—They are all Catholics.

927. Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—How many Brothers have you?—I have twenty-two brothers, and two servants, and I have twenty-six or twenty-eight pupil teachers.

928. They have to be supported out of this money?—The pupil teachers get £202.

929. Lord Justice NAIK.—Do the pupil teachers live in the same building?—No, they do not, they board out, and these pupil teachers are generally selected from our own boys.

930. Dr. TRAILL.—You teach them during certain hours of the day, the higher teachers?—Yes.

931. Lord Justice NAIK.—Are all the trustees, in whose names moneys are standing, members of the Order?—No, they are not, I think his lordship is a trustee of Father Becho's money.

932. I presume the trustees are all Catholic?—They are all Catholic.

933. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—When you say that you have sixteen schools in Limerick, that does not mean that you have schools in sixteen localities?—No, four localities.

934. By "school" you mean a class-room?—A classroom where there would be 100 or 120 boys, and there is a Brother presiding in each.

935. Lord Justice NAIK.—If you had further funds at your disposal, what would you say is the most pressing want of the Christian Brothers' Schools?—We do the work well, I think every man can bear testimony to our work; the boy, Shanahan, who has taken the first place, is the first in Ireland, he was taught by the Brothers. We do the work, and having no funds at hand, we adopt this system of collecting from house to house, and I must bear testimony to the Protestants of Limerick that they have stood to us right well, admirably, in fact wherever the Brothers are the Protestants assist them, they know their devotedness, and know that they throw themselves into the work with earnestness. I was in Belfast for twelve years before I came here, and there I found gentlemen of all denominations to assist us.

936. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—From the numbers you have attending, I presume the grants available to

National schools with similar attendance, if they were open to you, would give you a sum of money considerably more than you have stated to be your present pecuniary wants.—Unhappily

967. Could you state shortly what is the difficulty that prevents you from taking these grants?—I will put it in a nutshell. It is simply this, we would not be allowed to use our own books, and in the second place we would not be allowed to use religious emblems, the Crucifix or the statue of Virgin and Child, and this, I maintain, brings to children's mind a religious idea, which is admirable, the Virgin holding the Child in her arms, the boy can associate that very easily with what he sees at home in his own house.

968. The only points that prevent you taking advantage of the National Board grants are first, that you cannot use your own books, and secondly that religious emblems cannot be exhibited in the schools during the hours of secular instruction?—I think these are the chief obstacles.

Dr. O'Dwyer.—I suppose that you maintain too that religion ought to be an unrestricted and integral part of education, and not confined to certain hours of the day?—I think everyone knows that the Christian Brothers give religion the first place; it is for that we left home and kindred to devote ourselves to a hard trying life, and I think the influence we can exercise over the children that way is considerable, and would not have it curtailed or hampered; we certainly would not give up such an influence.

969. Professor DOCUMENTY.—As a matter of mere arrangement I suppose you find it convenient to restrict your religious instruction to certain hours of the day?—We do, but at the same time in our class books or bookish history we cannot help taking up a religious point.

970. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Of course you are aware that a great number of the schools under Roman Catholic orders are National schools, and that they are able to give an education satisfactory to themselves, at the same time remaining in accordance with the Board?—I know that.

971. Does not that indicate that the points that keep the Christian Brothers out must be something different from the mere arrangement of religious instruction, and rather depends on the use of your own books and of religious emblems?—That is the very thing that keeps us out, and Mr. Trevelyan in the House of Commons not very long ago said he read the books and would have no objection to place them in the hands of his own children.

972. Dr. TRANTER.—The State must examine the books of any school for which they pay?—Yes.

973. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—So far as we know, is there any objection to submit your books to approval?—No.

974. All your governing body are exclusively Roman Catholics, all your endowments are vested in Roman Catholic trustees, and all your pupils are Roman Catholics, so we must declare you to be exempt, and cannot settle a scheme for you without your consent; if you wish to put an end to the unsatisfactory condition of your property, we shall be glad to assist you if you apply, but if you do not desire to do so, we have no power or desire to interfere.

DIOCESAN SCHOOL, ROXBOROUGH ROAD.

Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer examined.

Most Rev.
 Dr. O'Dwyer.

975. There were one or two matters on which I wished to put my views before you. I wish to say with regard to the Roxborough School that, on looking into the evidence taken before the Endowed Schools Commissioners in 1856, it is reported that the Roxborough School was built by monies levied off the city of Limerick by the Corporation acting as a Grand Jury, and by the Grand Jury of the county Limerick. There were £1,600 raised by the County Grand Jury, and £240, I think, by the city. A site of one acre, Irish, was purchased for £400, of which £135 11s. 5d. was produced by the sale of the old Diocesan Schoolhouse, £241 was presented for by the Corporation, and the balance, £29 8s. 7d., was advanced by the Commissioners of Education. That school was then built to be a classical school, a Protestant diocesan school, with a distinct understanding that any Catholic boys or boys of any religious denomination that attended it should get a classical education there; and it was so maintained for years, and numbers of Catholic boys did go there, if I believe, and got a classical education in it. It became an utter failure. At the time the Commissioners sat that school was found to be an utter failure. The Grand Jury of the county Limerick were so dissatisfied with it that they appointed a committee to investigate its condition. That committee went through the matter and found there were scarcely any scholars. They pressed the matter at the time to let them see what scholars there were, but the scholars could not be produced, because, he said, it was "fraternal day," or some sort of a holiday. However, the school was continued; the head master used to be a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and it broke down altogether under his management as a classical school. It remained then for some time, I see by that evidence, after the death of the last master in the hands of his widow, and the Rev. Mr. Gregg in Limerick was anxious to get it. It seems he got into communication with some of the Commissioners in Dublin, I think the Clare-street Commissioners, of whom Dr. Kyle was the Secretary. They found between them that the title of the place was in so complicated a condition that the Commissioners could neither sell nor set it to Mr. Gregg, but Mr. Kyle informed him, if he once got into possession it would be all right, and it would be easy then to square the Commissioners. I see by Mr. Gregg's evidence that he went then and paid £30 to the woman who had possession of the place. Where he was in possession the Commissioners in Dublin got into correspondence with him to ascertain on what terms he would buy or rent it, and they got no definite proposition from him. And from that day to this, having got into possession at the suggestion of the Secretary of the Commissioners in Dublin, he has held it without paying anything for it whatsoever. Now, I wish to say for myself, and I think I may speak representing the Catholics of Limerick, that that house, if there is to be a Protestant classical school or intermediate school in Limerick, that that house ought to be devoted to it, and I have no objection whatever to its being so devoted. It was built by the Grand Jury of the county, and the city of Limerick for that purpose, and I think it ought to be devoted to it, but I have every objection to its being maintained for its present purpose, for, I believe, it is a proselyting institution. I know numbers of children are in it who were Catholics. Mr. Gregg himself stated in his evidence that there were numbers of children of mixed marriages, that he preferred those of a mixed marriage to those who were not of a mixed marriage, that he was perfectly satisfied with the authority of any one of the parents in such a case to take the children. There is an agreement, I believe, signed by the parents who put their children there, that they are to remain for a certain number of years, and, though I am not in a position to prove it, I have no hesitation in stating my belief that it is a proselyting place, and I should wish, if Mr. Gregg comes forward, or the other Protestant clergyman of Limerick, that they should be fairly and squarely asked the question, and if I am I think it should be taken and given to the purpose for which it was built. If the Protestants of Limerick think they can maintain a classical school I have no objection to their getting it.

974. Dr. TRILL.—Was not the building in a bad state at the time Mr. Gregg got it?—So he stated. He stated at the same time in his evidence that he was aware of a person attending who was willing to give £100 for possession, and he was aware several parties were looking to get it, and were willing to pay money for it. Being asked at the time by Lord Randolph Churchill if it was any use as a building site, he said, "none," that nobody built in that direction, although in the meantime there has been a whole street built opposite it. There is no doubt the house had a large money value at the time, and the whole transaction on the part of the official in Dublin, and on the part of the gentleman who got possession, is, I think, a thing not very creditable to the parties concerned.

977. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Your lordship is aware we must look into the history of the school and the title to it, and it is not for me to use any adjectives or adverbs on the subject, but, substantially, I believe the history as your lordship has stated it, is set out in the report of the Endowed Schools Commission. We have reason to believe that since 1880 there has been a more regular letting of the building by the Commissioners of Education, and we hope now to take evidence from Dr. Gregg as to his position, and mode of dealing with the premises. The school was originally a diocesan school, and was disposed of by the Commissioners, in Clare-street, to Dr. Gregg, on their own responsibility. We had a very similar case in Monaghan, where the school was allowed to go into liquidation, the Protestant inhabitants called a meeting, became tenants to the Commissioners, and opened it as an Intermediate School; the Catholics led St. Macartha's Seminary, and did not interfere. In that case we have incorporated the Commission, which we found to have established an efficient school, and with no claim put forward on the part of the Catholics, we have given the Commission permanently the property of which up to the present time they had been merely tenants-at-will of the Commissioners of Education. It will be our duty to inquire into the present uses of the Bonbore-road School, and while we would be inclined to give it to any people who would make a legitimate educational use of it, rather than allow it to be sold, we will bear in mind what you have stated when we go into it.

Dr. O'Dwyer.—I would wish a matter should be brought before Mr. Gregg. I had been curate in this city for a number of years, and an impression was left on my mind that illegitimate children of Catholic mothers were taken in there for the abandonment of their religion. I have one case distinctly before my mind in which it was alleged to me that the mother of two illegitimate children withdrew them from the work-house, made them Protestants, and put them in there. I believe that has been done in more cases than one.

978. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is that a case which was investigated in 1880?—It is not the same case.

979. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Mr. Gregg will kindly take a note of it, and give us a statement about it when we take up the inquiry into his school.

Rev. Mr. Gregg.—If you mention the name.

Dr. O'Dwyer.—I think the name was O'Brien; but I am not sure, it was several years ago, when I was curate in St. Michael's. If Mr. Gregg tells your lordship that he was attended of the marriage of the parents of the children before he took them in that case on end to it.

980. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—With regard to the children of mixed marriages different considerations might arise?—Would you allow me to put this case—a Catholic girl in Limerick marries a Protestant soldier, he goes away, and dies, she is poor, and she goes with her children, they had been reared Catholics, she goes and hands them over to Mr. Gregg, and signs an agreement that she is not to get the children for the next five years. She knows what she is doing, she goes out into the world, and is married again without any imbecilities. I would like to ask eloquence of the status of Dean Banbury or Archbishop Hamilton so they regard it as a pacifying institution, because I would be perfectly satisfied to abide by their opinion on the matter.

DR. HALL'S CHARITY.

981. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I think there was another matter you wished to mention?—Yes, Hall's Charity. There was an endowment for a school as well as an almshouse. I see by the evidence in 1881 that it was proposed to apply to the Court of Chancery to abolish the school, on the ground that there was, practically, no use for it there. I think the endowment of that school ought to be made available in any re-adjustment of the educational endowments of the city for educational purposes somewhere within the city.

982. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is any portion of the endowment at present applied to education?—I believe not, I am not quite sure what is being done, since 1880 I have no further information about the thing.

Dean Banbury.—I can give all information about that, only perhaps this is not the time to give it.

983. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You wish to urge that this charity ought to be restored to educational purposes?

Dr. O'Dwyer.—Yes, and that it ought to be unencumbered.

984. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We must look into the facts and into our powers, but the first thing to look after is the property. The Commissioners of 1880 found that the property had in 1854 been reported as worth nearly £200 per annum, and had been since 1854 under the control of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, whose secretary stated that it had been before the present board 124 times besides involving a very large correspondence; that the property, situated in a decaying part of the city of Limerick, consisted of houses then about 200 years old of which the principal part was nearly in ruins. Another question may arise—and of course we cannot anticipate how it may be decided—namely, whether this property has since 1880 been all turned away from education before our Act passed?

The Dean.—That is a fact.

CATHEDRAL GRAMMAR OR BLUE SCHOOL.

985. Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer.—With regard to the Craven Schools—

Dean Banbury.—I beg your pardon, my lord, is not this very inconvenient, giving the evidence in part. I would like to explain things in you for I am sure you would not like to take all away from us, poor Protestants.

986. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You need not be under any apprehension of our not fully hearing you. It is only for the personal convenience of the Bishop, who cannot attend to-morrow, that we are taking his statement now. The Craven endowment seems to have been given to the Bishop, the Dean, the Mayor, and Recorder of Limerick, for the schooling and binding to a trade of twenty poor Protestant children for ever.

Dr. O'Dwyer.—Quite so, and what I want to say is that, these being no poor Protestant boys to educate, it was turned into a Catholic school; and when you came to allocate the funds of another poor school, Lemay's, you should bear in mind that that fund was available for Protestant boys.

The Dean.—Now, the school is under the National Board, and it is entirely a free school, I have forty children on the roll, and they are not charged a penny. When the last Commission was held it was intimated to me that we were not carrying out the wishes of the original donor, and when that was intimated to me it was my duty to see that the wishes were carried out, and it is now a National school.

Dr. O'Dwyer.—That is quite satisfactory, there can be no objection to that. I thank you, my lord.

MOUNT ST. VINCENT'S CONVENT SCHOOL.

Rev. D. FitzGerald, R.E., sworn.

Rev. D.
FitzGerald,
R.E.

987. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You are the chaplain to the convent?—I am the parish priest of St. Mary's, and the Bishop deputed me to give evidence. I gave evidence in 1880.

988. Rev. Dr. MALLON.—Is this institution entirely for the benefit of Catholics?—It is altogether for Catholics.

989. Is it administered altogether by Catholics?—It is.

990. Then in that case we cannot interfere with you unless with your own consent?—So I was thinking.

991. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—We ought to ask you the condition of the property?—Your lordship called my attention to the deed of purchase of the ground on the last session, the only trustee living then was the late Bishop, and now the trustees are the Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer, Rev. Mr. O'Shea, the Administrator of St. Michael's, and the Lady Superior of the Convent.

992. Has the property been vested in those three trustees?—Yes, I have got the deed here (produces).

993. Does this convey or deal with any of the trust funds?—No, only with the lands.

994. As far as that is concerned your title is all right, and it is for the use of the Mount St. Vincent School, which is a purely Catholic institution, and therefore unless you wish to have the property vested in a corporate body we can do nothing?—I was very much obliged to your lordship for your suggestions on the last occasion, and carried them out.

995. You had from Mr. Lecky Arthur £140 a year?—Yes, I find by returns that it has averaged in late years £94 14s. 3d.

996. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—That is derived out of house property in Limerick?—Out of house property in Limerick.

997. Is it secured?—They are all old houses.

998. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Have any of the annuities fallen in?—There is still an annuity of £10 a year on it, Mrs. Roche's. I collect all the rents of the Arthur property except the Tontine buildings.

999. If the tenants refused to pay who could sue them?—I act as agent, and I sue them and recover the rent.

1000. Agent for whom?—The Sisters of Mercy to whom the property was left, the old members of the community to whom it was left still live.

1001. Suppose some troublesome tenants refused to pay you?—I believe I would have to fall back on the Sisters of Mercy, it was left to them for the charity.

1002. Then I may tell you you would have to fall back upon the Lord Chancellor. How do your tenants hold?—Some are half-yearly, some quarterly, some monthly, and some weekly.

1003. Mrs. Baker gave you some property?—I should think her money was spent on the building.

1004. Mrs. Hogan gave you £1,000?—That is invested in a mortgage of £½ per cent.

1005. Who are the trustees of that?—The executors of the late Bishop, I am one myself, Archdeacon Halpin, and Father McCoy.

1006. Dr. TRAILL.—In what county is the property which is mortgaged?—In the county of Limerick. The tenants are buying their property at present under the Act of Lord Ashbourne.

1007. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Then there is house property of £25 a year?—That brought in on an average £33 17s.

1008. Who are the legal owners?—There is a movement at present through the attorney who acts for the Sisters to appoint new trustees.

1009. If you get your attorney to move in the direction of getting a body incorporated under our Act to hold the whole of this property, that will get rid of all these difficulties for ever. There is Mr. O'Gorman's grant of 1871, that is £10 a year?—All I received from that is £11 10s. 6d. for three years, the tenants are very poor and they are going into Court to try to get their rents fixed, there are three tenants.

1010. All your trustees, I presume, are Roman Catholics?—All Roman Catholics.

1011. And are the children in the orphanage of that denomination also?—All.

1012. Rev. Dr. MALLON.—Of what order are the nuns?—Sisters of Mercy.

1013. Do you want us to prepare a scheme for you?—We would be much obliged, but I think we will be able to transact the business as we have done in the past, we got on smoothly. I find that when things get into the Courts they are very slow in getting out.

1014. You had better consult the Bishop about the matter, and see whether you can't get out of the Courts once and for all?—I asked his lordship before he went out, and he said I would be right in claiming exemption.

1015. The school is exempt, and we cannot interfere with it without the consent of the governing body.

DIOCESAN SCHOOL, ROXBOROUGH-ROAD.—(continued).

Rev. Canon Grogan sworn.

Rev. Canon
Grogan.

1016. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—We may take up this matter of the Roxborough-road School from the last report of 1880?—My lord, as you gave very great latitude in respect to certain charges I think I ought to have equal latitude in replying to those charges. I felt very sore at one observation, which after describing a state of things which did not exist at all, said that it was not very creditable to me. That was putting a censure on me on grounds which the person who made the charge ought to know and be sure were in existence, and I say most distinctly those grounds on which that charge was made were not in existence, and I would like as you allowed the statement to be made, that I should be allowed in fairness to reply to those different things.

1017. It would be convenient if we first get the circumstances of the school, and then we will ask you to give us your statement, as fully as you wish, on all these matters you refer to. Taking up the case of the school from the former report, you were then the tenant of the premises at Rotherborough-road under the Commissioners of Education but had no document of tenancy. Have you since entered into any agreement with the Commissioners?—I have; under their sanction I sent in a proposal of which I have a copy. I have their letter accepting that proposal, and a further letter from Mr. Arnold Graves on the part of the Board leaving it to me to name the rent I ought to pay. I named £30 a year which I have been paying since January 1st 1886.

1017. What sum of money had you expended on the premises before the date of that letter?—Something about £400.

1018. Was that expended on permanent improvements on the house?—There is a mixture of furniture with the expenditure, there is on the buildings an account of £443 11s. 4d. expended in this book (produced), but there are debts included. Besides that, including £150 in rent, I have since expended £225 more.

1019. The expenditure includes work on the roof?—The roof was in such a state that if I had not taken down the chimney the whole building would have come down, the chimney was waving with the wind.

1020. There is a sum of £120 paid to someone named Thompson?—He is a plumber. Since spending the £443 11s. 4d. I had to do a great deal in the way of sewerage, and making a cesspool at the end of the field which cost £28. The house was in an unsanitary state, and Dr. Hall and his family never had their health until I found out what was the matter with it.

1021. Could you state how much you have laid out on the premises in permanent improvements?—£500 or £600 at least.

1022. And you have expended that on the title you have now got?—Yes. I would like to mention a matter that was referred to as if the building was depreciated by me to the value of £30, that was the Poor Law valuation, I did not give it as my valuation. I paid the poor rate when I went in first on that £30—£7 10s.

1023. You have paid this £30 a year to the Commissioners of Education since 1880?—Since 1st January, 1880.

1024. What have they done with the money?—They have laid it out on the premises, and they have laid out recently £62, which they had not money to pay. They estimated the work to me, and I said I would pay the money. The money was laid out, and they are waiting for the certificate of the architect. The roof is in that state that it may come down at any moment. They sent down Mr. Mitchell, the architect, and the men found when they got into the ceiling, they dare not touch the roof. They have propped it up and made it very unsightly. The roof is bowed in the middle. They sent down a man named Kieran. Mr. Mitchell came down; he could not go in where the men went, and the men cut into the ceiling. I have their letter of the 11th July, 1887, here (produced).

1025. Could you give your estimate of the value of the premises, irrespective of your own expenditure, at the time you got it?—The premises were not safe for anyone to live in. I found a sewer that had not been opened for forty years, underneath the building. That was the real source of Dr. Hall and his family not being in good health, it was made by the architect to empty into a rock which had no outlet, a large chamber nearly as high as this room, and twenty feet square, and the whole substance that went from the fire of the house went into this and had no outlet for forty years until I opened it.

1026. Supposing this place, in its then condition, was offered in the market for letting or sale, could you give us any estimate of its value?—No, I never thought of it, the building is in my parish, and I put the matter before our Bishop. We had no parish school, and he recognized me as Rector having a claim on that school-house. I have a great number of parishioners who require provision for a school of that kind in that particular place.

1027. As regards the education, what number of pupils have you there now?—One hundred and one on the roll at present—fifty-six resident, and forty-five day children.

1028. What are the requirements of the locality with respect to day pupils?—All these forty-five children are from the neighbourhood, here is the list (produced). The total Protestant population of St. Laurence's parish is 483, that includes people in the Lamentic Asylum and Artillery Barracks, but (irrespective of those in the asylum and barracks) there are about 303.

1029. What class of education is given to the day children?—Both classes of resident and non-resident children are taught together. The education given is primary. The school is divided into two schools. At the time of the last inquiry we had only one school, we have now an infant school as well as a girls' school. The National Board books are used.

1030. Do the 101 include the infants with the others?—Yes.

1031. Where do the fifty-six resident children come from?—Thirty-three from the city and county of Limerick. All the children, with the exception of six, are free.

1032. Do you mean both day pupils and the others?—Yes, the total they pay is £37.

1033. There is one child put down at £6 a year?—That is one of the Protestant Cyprian Society's children.

1034. There is a payment of £4 a year from Cork, how is that contributed?—By the children's father, a pedlarman, his wife belonged to my parish, and died at Christmas, he asked me as he had no way of taking charge of the children if I would take charge of the three children, and he agreed to pay £1 a month.

1035. There are some paying pupils named Storey?—The father is in the employment of the railway, and pays 10s. a fortnight, their mother is dead.

1036. In those cases they are children whose fathers, having lost their wives, have sent the children as resident pupils to you, paying something for them?—Yes.

1037. How are the free children admitted?—I admit them myself on a personal application by the legal guardian, and only by the legal guardian.

1038. Would you just give us fully what your practice is in admitting the children, and what classes they belong to?—They belong to the poor who have no way of having their children educated.

1039. Does every free pupil in the school come in after a signature by some one?—Always the legal guardian.

1040. As regards the religious denomination of the children what are your provisions?—The provisions are that the children come in as Protestants from their legal guardian. The father, if he is alive, is the legal guardian; if the father is dead, the mother is the legal guardian, and I take the application from that party.

1041. Have you got a form of application?—Yes, here it is.—1. Names of parents—if either or both are alive; employment and residence. 2. Names of all the children, and ages, and if at home, or where resident. 3. If child is perfectly healthy in mind and body, and free from skin disease or other defect. 4. Has he or she been vaccinated, had measles, whooping-cough, or scarlatina? 5. If admitted will the parent or friends agree to take him back if required to do so? 6. Will he be sent to Limerick suitably and respectably clad, and in charge of some reliable person. 7. Will any help, annual or otherwise, be given by anyone to the funds of the school?

1042. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Have you a printed form?—No, I never have a printed form. I drew one up when the application comes, and I send it to the party who applies.

Oct. 11, 1897.

Rev. Canon
Grogan.

1043. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I see it is in the form of a letter, beginning—"Dear sir, I am anxious that you should receive my child into your school in Limerick to be educated. If you receive her I will agree to receive her back if at any time you should wish me to do so." (Witness).—They are not taken in for five years—that is quite a mistake.

1044. Lord Justice Naisbitt.—How a stipulation been made in any case that a child is to be kept for any fixed period?—No, the moment the legal guardian wishes to have a child that child is taken away. If you allow me I will refer you to a case that was brought forward at the end of the inquiry last time, when I was taken by surprise, but I have documents here to show that these people were Protestants always, and the father died a Protestant, with Dr. Collins, of Quinestown, beside his bed at the posthouse.

1045. There was another question we were asked to put to you—have you any children in the place who are not legitimate children?—There are two or three.

1046. What is the authority on which those children are received?—That of both parents.

1047. In the case of illegitimate children?—Both parents.

1048. Dr. TRAILL.—One parent very often does not recognise the child?—In the cases I had both parents did.

1049. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Have you accepted illegitimate children on the mother's application alone without knowing anything about the father?—No, and as to that case that was referred to, we never had anyone of the name of U'Edrian taken out of the posthouse. I know nothing about it. I never to my knowledge took in a child that was taken out of the posthouse, and presented to me in the way that was said. I would not take them in without a regular document. In the case we have, both parents signed the document.

1050. What is the number at present, don't give the names, of illegitimate children who are in the place?—I think about three.

1051. And in each of these cases are you able to state that you had communication with both parents?—Both parents.

1052. Dr. TRAILL.—Do they pay for them?—No.

1053. You are a liberal person to take in illegitimate children without having a provision made for the father to pay for them?—I have an arrangement made that if I cannot keep them they must be taken back.

1054. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What fund have you for maintaining these children?—I have no endowment except voluntary subscriptions; we have £40 a year under the Westropp fund. The boys are at the Haverhill Memorial Hall.

1055. How that institution been recently established?—I recently bought the hall. Mrs. Westropp left £15,000 for certain charities in Limerick; each was to get so much. That money is vested in seven trustees, who pay the interest over to the charities mentioned in the deed. I get £40 a year for these schools.

1056. About how much money are you able to collect year by year for Roxborough?—It goes into the common fund. Roxborough costs about £700 a year.

1057. Is the fund common to that and the Haverhill Hall School?—Yes.

1058. What sort of instruction do you give the children?—They all get primary education, but we train them so that they are very successful in getting into the Kildare-street Training College. One of our girls got tenth place last year. She has a school in the county Kerry, after one year's training. We had nine trained as teachers, and one of them got £100 a year under the National Board, in Leitrim, as a teacher.

1059. What provision do you make for the children on leaving?—We can get very good wages for them as servants. The demand is so great we cannot meet it.

1060. Then you have no difficulty in providing for your children?—No difficulty at all.

1061. Have you any idea of the annual cost per head of maintaining your boarders?—I calculated about £16.

1062. That does not include clothing surely?—It includes everything, teachers' salary and everything.

1063. Lord Justice Naisbitt.—Do you make inquiry as to what the religion of both parents is?—I do, but I consider that if one parent is a Protestant, I have a right to try and bring the children in, but I never look for them.

1065. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you state if your own knowledge that other members of the family have been brought up by the father in his own way of thinking?—Yes. The mother never objected to the children going with the father. There are three children whose mother was a Roman Catholic but a dead, the father was a Protestant, I have marked them as mixed. Taking them all in there are nineteen.

1066. Could you give us any idea of whether the fathers were Protestants or the mothers?—In some cases one parent is dead. There is Hennessey, the father is a Protestant, he is in the railway, and all the children are Protestants, the mother is living.

1067. Lord Justice Naisbitt.—In the case of the child McCarthy, you say the child had been brought up a Protestant?—Always.

1068. In the case of those other children, are you aware whether the children had been brought up Catholics or Protestants?—I am aware that some of them were, and then on the death of the mother, the father came and said as he was a Protestant himself, he wished I should take his children, he had no use to look after them.

1069. Dr. TRAILL.—Are there any cases in which the father has been a Roman Catholic, and while living the mother has given the children to you?—I cannot recollect; here is the case of a Roman Catholic parent, Murphy.

1070. Is the father living?—Yes, and all the children are Protestants.

1071. Has the father agreed to their coming in?—Yes; he is a coachman.

1072. Is there to your knowledge any case in which the children are there contrary to the wish of the father, he being alive?—Not a single case.

1073. Have you got in every case in which the father is alive, the father's written authority for taking in the children?—I have the consent, as the applications came with his knowledge from the mother, as Murphy, for instance.

1074. Lord Justice Naisbitt.—But the application was from the mother?—Yes, the children being all Protestants.

1075. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Have you had, since the last inquiry, any application for the removal of children from your institution after they were admitted?—No, because the parent can walk in and take them out any moment they like. There is no difficulty, I never put an impediment in the way.

1076. You wished to make a statement with reference to the case mentioned at the last inquiry?—Here is the case, Reed of Quinestown. [Lester read.]

1077. Those children were ultimately removed from your school by the mother?—I gave them up as soon, and the mother went down on her knees in my study thanking me for giving them, and Mr. Elford, is what they were brought over, said they were a credit to my school.

1072. The point that was made about that case on the former occasion was that there was some delay about the children being taken away by the mother?—I was absent at the time, but I gave them up, because I did not want to have any amputees. I never kept a child against the will of the parents.

1073. Have you had any similar applications to have children taken out of your school, and put into Catholic schools?—Several children were taken from me and put into the Industrial Schools in the city. There was one case in which Sir John Lestrange and Mr. Lascombe had to come down by the night mail, and he came to me and said, "If this case goes to a public inquiry the certificate of the school will be cancelled." Two boys of the name of Roberts were taken in, smothered, and dragged there, and the father was brought there. These two boys were brought into the Board Room, and Sir John Lestrange asked what authority there was for their being in there. And the head of the establishment produced a document and asked the father "Did you sign that document?" "No," he said, "I did not." Sir John Lestrange said "Give us the children." He brought them out to the gate and gave them to me. They were always Protestants, the mother had been a Roman Catholic, but at the time I had them the mother was dead a long time.

1074. Rev. Dr. Maccor.—Who took them away from you?—An elder son of Roberts had married a Roman Catholic, and when the father was supposed to be dying the boys were allowed to go see him, and they were taken and put into that school.

1075. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Did those boys after they came back remain on with you?—They did. One of them is in the city still, one went to Belfast as a tailor.

1076. Dr. TRAILL.—The father recovered them afterwards?—He did, and when I went over to pay my visit in the County Prison Mr. Lascombe was sent over by Sir John Lestrange to ask me not to put it into the papers. I said I only wanted to get the boys back, I did not want any publicity. I have here the report of the Orphan Society (produced). There are four on the list of the name of Graydon. The two girls were taken and put into Mount St. Vincent's School, and baptised there.

1077. Rev. Dr. Maccor.—Who took them?—The mother, who had been a Protestant, was married again. Her children had been on that orphan list. While Graydon is in the navy now.

1078. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The father is stated to have been in the constabulary?—Yes, when the father died these children were put on the Protestant orphan list; when the mother married again she took the five children, and they were put into lodgings, and the two girls, Margaret and Jane Graydon, were put into the orphanage.

1079. Had they been in your institution?—Not until after I got them back, because the Orphan Society had given up all hope of recovering them, and I recovered them.

1080. Had the father and mother both been Protestants during the time of their marriage?—Yes.

1081. Can a child go on the list of the Limerick Orphan Society unless both parents were Protestants?—Oh, yes, as children of mixed marriages.

1082. From the time that you say the mother took them from the Protestant Orphan List until they came into your institution, how long was it?—I dare say about a year.

1083. And during that time two of them had been at Mount St. Vincent's?—Yes, I think so.

1084. What authority had you in that case for taking them into your institution?—The Orphan Committee said as they could not recover them, if I recovered them they would leave them with me.

1085. Dr. Maccor.—What do you mean by recovering them?—Because they had gone beyond their reach.

1086. You mean getting possession of them?—Getting the mother to give them back again.

1087. What means did you take?—I sent for her and got her to come to me, and I said I knew it was contrary to the rules of the Industrial school to keep them in there, and I wrote a letter, and said "If you sign that I will send it up to the Lord Lieutenant." But instead of that she went up to the school, and showed the document and they were given up.

1088. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Were they voluntarily given up to you by the Mount St. Vincent's authorities?—Yes.

1089. Did they remain with you?—Yes, until thirteen, when I put them into the Orphan Training School.

1090. Dr. Maccor.—How old were they when you "recovered" them?—Between ten and eleven.

1091. In whom are your school premises vested?—In the Clero-street Commissioners at present.

1092. You are the tenant?—I am the tenant to them.

1093. Under what tenure do you hold?—A yearly tenancy.

1094. They state in their letter to you that they were making this arrangement with you, they were advised by counsel that they were exceeding their powers?—Under their powers they had no right to take any rent at all.

1095. Then your lease was invalid?—I have no lease, I am only tenant from year to year.

1096. What rent do you pay?—£20 a year.

1097. Lord Justice Maccor.—Don't the Commissioners give it back?—They say they have laid it out on the school.

1098. Dr. TRAILL.—You pay money, you don't "exchange receipts"?—No, those (produced) are my receipts. They stated to me the other day that they had no money to pay this bill of £20 which had come in from Mr. Keenan, and I said, "If you choose I will pay you the money and stop it as rent."

1099. Rev. Dr. Maccor.—In your opinion does the £20 a year represent the value of the premises?—I am paying for my own improvements, because the building was not worth anything until I laid out the money. I might have only put £5 on. They left it to me, because they had no power to impose a rent, and I think they could not say I was taking an advantage when I put £20 on, and the Monaghan people were only paying £5 a year.

1100. Do they keep the premises in repair for you?—They do, some of them. I do a great deal myself.

1101. Out of what funds are you able to do that?—I collect the money; I appeal for funds.

1102. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Are the children in your place all Protestants?—They come to me as such. They are educated as such.

1103. Have you anybody administering the £700 a year which you collect and apply for the purposes of Buxton's but yourself?—Only myself.

1104. Therefore as a school you are under our Act exempt from any settlement of a scheme?—I have not a farthing of money that you would call an endowment.

1105. The only matter we can deal with in this case without your written consent is the reversion on your tenancy?—I have put in a proposal to them about purchasing the building, and on account of all the money I have laid out, I ask a right of pre-emption, the place was saved from destruction, it is now a useful building, and it has been made so by my money.

1106. Rev. Dr. Maccor.—What do you mean by a right of pre-emption?—Having the first offer of purchase.

1107. What would you give for it?—I could not tell you that. I would let them say what they think the value, and I would give what I thought the value. The Masons Hall, which I have now as the Havergill Memorial Hall, had an outlay of over £4,000 on that building. It was put up for auction and the highest bid was £600. It would not be sold for that sum. I purchased for £970, what cost over £4,000. That will give you an idea of what the value of the buildings are in proportion to the outlay.

1114. Dr. TRAILL.—How long after the outlay was that?—I don't know. It was built first as a Philosophical building. I suppose it was thirty-five years ago.

1115. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What was the history of that building—where was the fund provided with which it was originally built?—There was a scientific man here and he wanted a philosophical building; they took debentures, and before the building was completed they were bankrupts. Sir James Spaight had a mortgage on it of a thousand pounds. Then it was set to Forrest of Gifford-street for a lace factory. He had it leased for twenty-one years when they gave it up. It was then in the market again, and I bought it for £500, but I could not get the £500, and I gave it over to the Freeholders, and they laid out £1,200 on it. They became bankrupt, and I bought it again for £970.

1116. Where did you get the £970?—I had the money in my own hands as trust money, at least I had £500 of it, and Mr. Jacob and another gentleman in the city gave the other £470; it cost with legal expenses £1,000.

1117. What use is made of it now?—It is a boys' school; we have fifty boys in it.

1118. Is that a Protestant school under Protestant management?—It is.

1119. Is there anything else you wish to state?—I wish to say that everything I have done in connection with getting possession of the Roxboro' building or carrying on the working of it was above board; it is all open for fair inquiry. In my first communication with Dr. Kyle I asked would I be right or sole in giving Mrs. Hall any money to get possession, and he said, "Yes."

1120. All that is in the former report, and it is only right to say that the people with whom you were corresponding were the Commissioners of Education, acting under Act of Parliament, and bound to report to Parliament every year, and that this transaction appeared in their report.

1121. Dr. TRAILL.—In what respect was this hall to be a memorial to Miss Haverhill?—It was called that by me when I bought it.

1122. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I think we have now heard fully the Bishop, Dr. O'Dwyer, and also Mr. Gregg, upon the matters connected with this Roxborough School, and it is right that we should state how far we have anything to do with these matters of controversy. We have only to deal with my portion of this institution that represents an endowment within the scope of our Act. So far as the existing school is concerned it appears perfectly clear that as a school it is outside our jurisdiction, except with the written consent of those who have its management, for all the pupils are Protestants of one denomination, and are brought into the school for the purpose of being brought up in that denomination, and the whole government of the school is in the hands of Dr. Gregg, who belongs to that denomination himself. Therefore, as regards the school, it was simply, and I hope fairly, for the purpose of having the whole matter satisfactorily explained here, and allowing every gentleman to state his views, that we have heard evidence. We have, however, a duty to perform with respect to the endowment represented by the buildings, as they were given up by the Commissioners of Education to Dr. Gregg, and by the interest the Commissioners still possess in those buildings. This was a diocesan school, built to secure extent with public money under an Act of Queen Elizabeth, intended to provide superior education for all classes. Those schools were afterwards vested in the Church-street Commissioners, the school failed and ceased to exist as a school, and became an empty and dilapidated house in their hands. They let it to Dr. Gregg under the instrument of tenancy produced here, and their interest still appears in it to be an endowment coming within the Act, and which it is our duty to make useful as far as we justly can. The only proposal that has been put before us is that it should be sold, and Dr. Gregg claims a right of pre-emption. He is in the position in which some other educational bodies in the place appear to be, he has been spending his money on a bad title, and he could be evicted without compensation, inelegantly in one sense, but legally in another. We are bound to deal with the matter when seeking a scheme for the management of the endowments vested in the Commissioners of Education; we will make provision with respect to this building as justly as we can, and we will consider what clauses we can insert, if any, to protect Dr. Gregg in the expenditure he has made. It may be that he should have the refund of the building valued as he got it, or in the alternative the compensation for his permanent improvements should be paid to him by the Commissioners out of the remaining diocesan school funds which they possess, to whatever extent a tenant who has spent money on a bad title with his eyes open is entitled to equitable consideration. We wish it to be understood that the only place in which this Roxborough-road School can appear in any scheme to be framed by us will be in a minor or adjunct for the management of the endowments vested in the Commissioners of Education. It is quite impossible for us, having regard to the present state of affairs, to establish a new school in the building the school that is now in it is not within our jurisdiction, and the Commissioners' interest in the building is the only thing that comes within our jurisdiction. Any scheme that we may prepare for the endowments held by the Commission of Education will contain ample powers to convert into money any buildings or property which cannot be otherwise made available for educational purposes, and it is under such powers that these buildings must be disposed of.

1123. Dr. TRAILL.—Suppose Dr. Gregg gives his consent, could we give him a scheme dealing with the buildings?

Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—If he applied for the settlement of a scheme under the Act we could certainly settle a scheme for him, and deal with these buildings.

1124. Rev. Mr. Gregg.—Have I power to send in a scheme?

Dr. TRAILL.—We prepared a scheme for Minagh which was very much in the same position. It seems to me if you give your consent to have a scheme prepared for you, that this Commission should deal with the school as far as it belongs to you, and it would be quite within the power of the Commission to settle the terms on which the buildings should be conveyed to you.

1125. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Monaghan School was within the compulsory powers of our Commission, Roxborough is not, Monaghan School was under the control of a mixed body of Protestants, and we settled a scheme giving them a good intermediate school, available for all the Protestants of the locality. The cardinal difference is that the Roxborough School is not within the jurisdiction, except with consent. If that consent is given we can prepare the draft of a scheme which we will not force upon Dr. Gregg, but in preparing which we must give consideration to all the claims on the building.

Dean Busbury examined.

1194. The funds only amount to £32 2s. 6d. per annum, there is a fall off of £16 since the Commissioners of 1680 in consequence of the fall of a house which was in a dilapidated state, and unfortunately in the fall two persons were killed. Since the last Commissioner I have placed the school under the National Board, and at present on the roll there are forty-one children who receive primary education without fee or charge, so that I am more than carrying out the bequest of the donor who left the money to educate twenty poor Protestant children.

1197. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—The first endowment was under a deed of 1734, and a will of 1739, and consisted of some tenements in Limerick?—Yes.

1198. Are those the tenements that have fallen?—Yes of them have fallen.

1199. What do you get from the house property?—Nothing, we have no house property now, the only income we have is derived from the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests.

1200. I see there are recovered trust funds, £24 2s. 6d., formerly left to the Dean and Chapter, and some monies amounting to £913 12s. 2d. in the hands of the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests?—We get the interest of that, and £5 a year for a house let to the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral, I think that house as belonging to the Cathedral and not to this charity at all, however, it is taking money out of one pocket and putting it into the other.

1201. We had almost an identical case in Dublin in St. Patrick's Cathedral Schools, where they had an old school connected with the Cathedral, and also a newly endowed school managed by the Dean and Chapter, they incorporated the Cathedral Board as a governing body for the management of all their schools. If you would get from the office a copy of the scheme for St. Patrick's Cathedral Schools you would probably find it does what you want to do here.

1202. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What is the actual income?—£30 15s. 8d.

1203. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Who is the present governor?—The Bishop, Dean, and Rector of St. John's.

1204. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How is the money applied?—£20 a year to the schoolmaster, and the rest is expended on coal, books, and furniture.

1205. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I suppose the deed of the fallen house is in existence?—It is valuable, it is an old part of the town, the agent has been trying to dispose of it but he is only offered a few pounds, it is in connection with a very large charity, the Craven charity, which is a widows' charity.

1206. Dr. TRAILL.—Are the almshouses in the same place?—They are under the Hall charity.

1207. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Who administers the Craven fund?—The Bishop, myself, and Mr. Langbridge.

1208. How were you appointed?—Under the will. The Bishop, Dean, the Mayor, and Recorder of Limerick, and their successors for ever were entrusted with the houses. The Mayor and Recorder at that time were Protestants, but they have long ceased to act, so that really the trust has come into the hands of the Dean, Bishop, and Rector of St. John's.

1209. This being a strictly Protestant charity, the municipal trustees would drop out of it under the Municipal Corporations Act of 1843, but how did the Rector of St. John's come in?—That is a puzzle to me. I see no reason for his coming in except that some of the houses were in St. John's parish.

Archdeacon Hamilton.—I understood he was a member of the trust board. I was rector of St. John's for fourteen years, and I was a trustee for that time. I think the Rector of St. John's is mentioned somewhere or other.

Dean Busbury.—I never could find it out and I know the Rector of St. John's before was also a trustee when he died.

1210. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the Rector of St. Mary's a trustee?—No.

1211. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I believe a house in Dublin that was originally bequeathed to this charity has disappeared?—Yes, so it appears.

1212. Dr. TRAILL.—What has become of the £40 a year that Mrs. Craven bequeathed?—I don't know where that is.

1213. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—We are not practically advancing the matter by inquiring as to the Craven charity which is not educational, but if you think it would be an advantage that the Rector of St. John's should get a legal status, and you should associate one or two laymen who might help in the management of your property and save you the expense of an agent you can do so now.

Dean Busbury.—I don't see what the Rector of St. John's has to say to the school, it is in the hands of the Bishop and myself.

1214. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—As remaining members of the old board of four?—The Mayor and Recorder have long ceased to act, and the trust is now in the hands of the Bishop and myself.

The Mayor of Limerick.—As regards the Mayor, at the last meeting of the Craven Trustees I was summoned, and recognised as a member of the board.

Dean Busbury.—That is with regard to the widows, but you have no status with regard to the school.

1215. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You should see what has been done in the case of St. Patrick's Cathedral. It was a very similar case, and our scheme has put the matter for once and all clear. Your endowment seems to be within the scope of the Commission, as the Mayor and Recorder still appear to be trustees.

Dean Busbury.—There is no Recorder now.

Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—No, but there is a provision in the County Courts Act by which his office may be restored at any time.

ST. JOHN'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Rev. Frederick Langbridge sworn.

1216. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Are you one of the trustees of the Westropp trust?—No, but I am concerned in it as Rector of St. John's; £200 was left to St. John's Parochial School.

1217. There is also a grant from the Earl of Limerick of school premises and £5 a year?—We hold the premises at the rate of 1s. a year.

1218. Where are your schools?—Cornwallis-street.

1219. How many children have you attending there?—Thirty-one.

1220. Are they primary schools?—Very primary, almost infants.

1221. Are you in connection with the National Board?—We are not.

Dean Busbury.

Rev. Frederick Langbridge.

Oct. 11, 1897.

Rev. Frederick
Langbridge.

1152. What income have you?—Nothing at all but £5 for repairs allowed by Lord Limerick, and £100 from the Westropp trustees.

1153. Who pays the interest?—The Secretary, Mr. Brown.

1154. Who are the trustees?—There were eight trustees.

1155. (Lord Justice FitzGibbon reads deed of trust).—How do you apply the money?—Entirely to pay our teacher, and it is not quite enough to do it.

1156. How do you supplement it?—We have got it in all kinds of irregular ways, we have asked our congregation for it often.

1157. Rev. Dr. Mottor.—How much do you get a year?—£41, and our salary to the teacher is £45.

1158. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Who holds the school premises?—I really don't know.

1159. Does anybody look after the property?

Archdeacon Hamilton.—It is held under a rent of 1s. a year from the Earl of Limerick, and it is vested in the Rector. While I was there I paid sixpence every half year.

Rev. Mr. Langbridge.—I have got a notice to-day to pay the sixpence.

1160. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Have you any lease?—No, there is no lease.

1161. The former report states you have a grant?—It is practically a gift.

1162. Rev. Dr. Mottor.—You don't want any interference?—We don't want any, except that we are not getting our money at all now, the Westropp trustees have paid us nothing for half a year, and we are extremely poor in our parish. Our parishes are paupers to a man. My impression is that they are nearly all on the verge of pauperism.

1163. Are you within reach of Leamy's school?

Not for a number of the children who attend our school, they are very young.

1164. They don't always remain young?—They go from us when they grow up.

1165. Do you know why the money is not paid?

Rev. Canon Gregg.—There is a whole year due, the money was lent out on that unfortunate place, Bodys, there is £164 due to me on other charities. Colonel O'Callaghan cannot pay, he borrowed a large portion of the £13,000 belonging to the Westropp trustees.

Rev. Mr. Langbridge.—Our position at present is that we shall have to close our school very abruptly—temporarily, of course.

1166. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—What is the attendance at your school?—The average for last year was thirteen, we have seven new names within the last week or two.

1167. You are not large enough to get a salary from the National Board?—We could get a modified grant.

1168. We may tell you exactly what we told the Dean. If you look at the schemes for Roheny and Coolock Parochial Schools, or the Ormond Quay Presbyterian Schools, you will find they deal with schools very like yours; they ascertained the property, and gave powers to deal with and recover it, and also to manage the schools properly. Generally speaking, in such cases we put the diocesan at the head of the governing body, and add two, or three, or four lay representatives. Your school is not within our compulsory powers. I am afraid we cannot compel tenants to pay rents which they paid with, I presume, reach the mortgagees, and ultimately be transmitted to you for the teaching of your poor children.

ST. MICHAEL'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Archdeacon Hamilton examined.

Archdeacon
Hamilton

1169. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—What is the condition of St. Michael's Parochial School?—When I came into the parish four years ago I found a parochial school established by my predecessor about ten years before; he had been receiving the income of the Barkle Charity, and I have been receiving it since; it is the same school, under the same master and mistress, and in the same building. I put it under the National Board two years ago. The dividend on the endowment was to be paid as long as there was a parochial school in St. Michael's, and there has been one uninterruptedly, and is still.

1170. You receive the money from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—Yes.

1171. Have you any other endowment?—No.

1172. It would not be worth while to settle a scheme for the management of this endowment alone?—No. The school has increased since we put it under the Board. The average last year was seventeen; it increased very much since it was put under the Board, there were seventy-one in the school yesterday. The total for 1896 on the rolls was 151. There was only sixty-two the year before it was put under the Board. For the three quarters this year the total on the roll was 105.

DR. HALL'S CHARITY—(continued).

Dean Dunbury.

1173. Dean Dunbury.—I handed in a Charity Scheme, dated 24th June, 1890, by which the portions of this charity which had up to that date been utilized for the purpose of education was diverted, and under these circumstances I respectfully submit that your Commission has no authority to investigate or go into this matter, but it would be ultra vires. I may be quite wrong, but it strikes me this Commission was only appointed for the purpose of investigating existing educational endowments, and this educational endowment ceased to exist by an Order of the Court of Chancery, on the 24th June, 1890. We have it in very much better order than it was when you last had to look into it, and we are preserving the remainder of the property.

Lord Justice FARRER.—To what purpose was it diverted?—To paying widows' pensions. There is an almshouse, and up to the date of the scheme the widows were only receiving £5 a year.

1174. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Was the sum which was formerly applied to education diverted to augment the widows' pensions?—Exactly; their pension was doubled.

1175. What has become of the school buildings?—The portion of the almshouse building formerly used as a schoolroom is now available for the accommodation of the widows.

1176. It is quite clear that we cannot interfere. The Act of Parliament says we shall not divert from purposes that are not educational any money that is spent during three years before the Act to have been spent on non-educational purposes, unless we find that there are no persons entitled, or that the purposes have failed.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE.

Rev. Timothy O'Keefe, s.r., examined.Oct. 12, 1887.
Rev. Timothy

1177. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—You were anxious to give us evidence in reference to the Sacred Heart College?—Yes, my lord.

1178. How are you connected with it?—I am rector of the College.

1179. Is it in connection with a religious order?—It is with the Jesuit Order.

1180. What property do you possess?—We have no endowment whatsoever, the College is carried on by the fees of the scholars, and by the fees which we receive from the Intermediate examinations, and also from our own contributions to the support of the College.

1181. The College is carried on at the Crescent?—Yes.

1182. You have prepared a number of pupils for the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, and with very considerable success.

1183. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What was the total number of pupils last year?—About 110, of whom we sent up 40 for the Intermediate.

1184. And nearly all of these passed?—All with the exception of five.

1185. You got a considerable number of prizes?—We got 9 exhibitions, a gold medal for the first place in the middle grade, and 2 silver medals, retained 2 exhibitions, got 6 money prizes, and about 20 passes with honours.

1186. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Are all these Limerick boys?—Some few come from Tipperary, and some from Clare by train, nearly all are Limerick boys.

1187. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What is the greatest distance they come?—We have two from the town of Tipperary, that is the greatest distance; they come by train every morning; several boys come by train on the Clare line.

1188. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose you claim exemption from the powers of this Commission?—I would be very glad to come under the Commission if it would do me any good.

1189. Your institution is entirely for the education of Roman Catholics?—Yes; sometimes we have Protestants at our school.

1190. But your main object is for Roman Catholics?—Yes.

1191. And it is administered by Roman Catholics?—Yes.

1192. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What relation is there between your education, and that given at Mangret?—None whatever, Mangret is altogether a Royal University College, and ours is an Intermediate school.

1193. Then supposing a boy to go through a regular course with you they could take him from you, and carry him through a university course?—It may be so, but we have several boys studying the Intermediate course who could matriculate long before they finished with us.

1194. Which do you consider the more difficult, the Royal University Matriculation or the Intermediate?—The Intermediate certainly. The passes for matriculation in the Royal would be equivalent to a pass in the junior grade in the same subjects. And one of the great defects that I have to complain of is that some of the boys who wish to pass from the Intermediate to the Royal find it difficult, for although the standard is the same, sometimes the books are different. For example, in Latin for the matriculation in the Royal there are the Fifth Book of the Æneid and Cicero, whereas the books prescribed for the junior grade this year are Nepos and the First Book of the Æneid. I wish to have it on record that here we are in Limerick carrying on a very successful school for the benefit of the city, and we, the Jesuit Order, are carrying it on at a very great pecuniary loss, and entirely at our own expense, except so far as fees go.

1195. What are the fees?—The nominal fee is £3 15s., but it is very rarely we get it, several boys pay us nothing. I suppose last year in fees our average would be a little more than £4 5s.

1196. What fee is a boy of the ordinary class wanting Intermediate education as a rule able to pay?—They say they are not able to pay us, although they require the education. I don't think £3 15s. is at all a large fee, but still several of the parents object to pay that fee, and ask us for a reduction, and we have to make the reduction.

1197. Dr. TRAILL.—How many teachers have you?—We have occupied solely with education four Jesuits, two assistant masters who are not Jesuits, and we have four Jesuits who are partially employed.

1198. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you teach all the subjects of the Intermediate course?—All the subjects, we teach Latin and Greek, mathematics, natural philosophy, chemistry, drawing, music, Celtic, and French.

1199. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do your pupils enter the Royal University from your school?—Occasionally.

1200. How do they carry on their education for the Royal University after leaving your school?—They substantially prepare by the Intermediate course, and then they study privately perhaps for a month or two, read up the particular books that may be required for matriculation. We have also a special matriculation class in our school.

1201. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How do they get instruction for the remaining part of the Royal University course?—Some I know have entered Trinity College and some are in Mangret.

1202. And others perhaps prepare themselves by private study?—Others by private study. I am not aware of anyone in University College.

1203. Dr. TRAILL.—Some of them have gone to Trinity College?—Yes; one of them is Mr. Charles Doyle.

1204. Professor DOUGHERTY.—If the trustees of Mangret are able to effect their aim by making that College a University College, do you think your school will not as a feeder to the college?—I don't think it would supply many boys to it. I don't think many would be likely to go.

1205. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Are the boys that go to Mangret more advanced than the boys that come to you?—Yes, they require them to be more advanced.

1206. Professor DOUGHERTY.—They are preparing boys in Mangret for the matriculation examination of the Royal, and if the matriculation examination is about as hard as that of the junior grade, the boys who enter Mangret would seem to be of the same class?—Well, they are bachelors at Mangret, and they may have a particular object in entering there.

1207. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you mean the object of preparing for a sedentary life and joining your order?—No, very few join our order or become priests here.

1208. Then to what object do you refer?—Becoming missionary priests in England and America, and other places.

1209. Dr. TRAILL.—How many years has your institution been here?—Twenty-seven years.

1210. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Are your boys of the same social status as those who go to Mangret?—Better I should say.

1211. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Does your school at present supply Intermediate education in Limerick to the best classes in Limerick itself who want it?—It does, amply.

1212. Have you sufficient accommodation?—We could take twice as many.

Oct. 12, 1887.
Rev. Timothy
O'Keara, s. r.

1213. It is a great deal cheaper in proportion to maintain a school with 300 pupils than with 100!—It is.

1214. Lord Justice NAHE.—Have you the building off the Crescent that was formerly a Catholic diocesan school?—No, that is now leased as a boarding-house for ladies.

1215. Is there any provision in Limerick for boarding clever boys who want to get a good Intermediate education?—None. There are some boys who come from the country and we provide them with safe lodgings, and have a kind of supervision over them.

1216. How many boys have you coming in from the country?—Sixteen or seventeen. The train suits very well. The parents complain very often of the fare being a great expense upon them, frequently much more than the fees.

1217. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What is the distance from Tipperary to Limerick?—About twenty-six miles.

1218. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—I suppose you would be very glad to get any endowment we have to dispose of?—Certainly, that is the reason I appear here.

1219. Dr. TRAILL.—What amount do you receive in result fees from the Intermediate Board?—Last year we got £115; we have to pay £130 to extern teachers.

The sitting terminated.

Oct. 12, 1887.

PUBLIC SITTING—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Ennis.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAHE, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.S.C., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., M.D., M.B., F.T.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A. Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., was in attendance.

Lord Justice FITZGERSON made an introductory statement.

*KILLALOE DIOCESAN COLLEGE.

Rev. Denis Kelly sworn.

Rev. Denis
Kelly.

1220. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What position do you hold in the Diocesan College?—I am one of the teachers, and Vice-President of the Institution.

1221. From the Report of 1886, it would appear that the original Killaloe Diocesan College had become inadequate to the requirements of the College, and that new buildings were then in the course of erection at Ennis, have they been since erected?—Yes.

1222. How are the premises held?—They are vested in trustees, the Right Rev. James Ryan, Coadjutor Bishop of the Diocese; the Very Rev. John Ryan, who was then President of the College and is now a Fellow of the Royal University in Dublin, and a Commissioner of Intermediate Education; and the Rev. Daniel Fogarty, the Catholic Administrator of the parish of Ennis (procurator deo).

1223. This is a deed of January 31, 1878, vesting a conveyance from the Landlord Tenants Court of November 26, 1865, of part of the lands of Glenroadmore, containing 16a. 0s. 12s., to Mr. Thomas Moohan, that the Right Rev. James Ryan being desirous of erecting a Diocesan College for the benefit of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Killaloe had purchased the lands from Thomas Moohan for £1,900. The trust is to hold the premises as building ground for the Diocesan College of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Killaloe, and for such other uses, trusts, and purposes relating to said Diocesan College, and the education therein of the people of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Killaloe as may hereafter be declared by the said Right Rev. James Ryan by any deed or deeds. Has there been any further deed declaring the trusts of the College?—No further deed.

1224. On the face of the deed the college is exempt from our jurisdiction. Do you desire to give us any evidence?—Yes, my lord, I submitted a query sheet to the Commission; about last Christmas I prepared it, and I wish now to put it in as correct.

1225. When was the present college opened?—August, 1881.

1226. Were the buildings completed at that time?—Yes, practically. Some works were to be completed in the ground, and the play hall was to be erected, but the college itself was completed.

1227. What accommodation have you in the college?—Eighty single bedrooms, two dormitories that would accommodate thirty-five or forty each; a very large schoolroom that would very easily accommodate 100 boys at study, and in case of necessity 120 or 140, and there are five very commodious class rooms.

1228. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What accommodation have you for boarders, and what accommodation for day boys?—We could accommodate 150 boarders, and in addition we could receive day boys.

1229. How many day boys in addition to the boarders?—I should say another hundred.

1230. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What accommodation have you for the teaching staff?—Two very commodious sets of apartments for the president and vice-president, and the remainder of the teaching staff are accommodated in the ordinary rooms; they take one room as a sitting room, and another room as a bedroom.

1231. What was the cost of the whole building?—It was erected by public subscription, and the full amount was £20,577 11s. 10d.

1232. Was all that expended upon the building?—All that, and some money in addition, a few hundred pounds that came in afterwards, but that was the amount that was published in the list in the Freeman's Journal of November 7, 1881.

1233. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Can you say roughly now how much has been expended?—Roughly, about £21,000, and that money was given by public subscription. The Coadjutor Bishop subscribed £5,200, the priests of the diocese subscribed £12,071 11s. 10d.

and there was one diocesan collection and the lady subscribed £2,250 St. Val.

1234. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Then the whole of the money was raised in the diocese itself from the bishop, priests, and lady?—Yes, not a single penny came from outside.

1235. Were you able to invest any funds for the maintenance of the college?—Not a penny.

1236. Then the entire money is represented by the buildings?—Yes.

1237. Is the purchase-money included?—It is.

1238. Since you opened the building what has been the number of your pupils?—During 1879 and 1880, boarders 48, day boys 58; 1881-82, boarders 62, day scholars 83; 1883-84, boarders 61, day scholars 67; 1884-85, boarders 52, day scholars 70.

1239. Now, give us the numbers at the present date?—At this season of the year our numbers are not quite full.

1240. Give us your numbers for 1886?—Last year 48 boarders and 67 day boys.

1241. What fee is paid by the boarders?—£50.

1242. Did all pay £50 or were any free?—There was no boarder free, there was some slight reduction made in some cases.

1243. In connection with the college are there any houses or funds available to assist pupils?—There is no house or fund available in connection with the college, except the fees paid by the boys, and some small fund we get from the Intermediate Board. The lands connected with the college bring a small sum yearly; the principal parts of the lands are used as playgrounds for the boys, but some hay and grazing is taken off the lands notwithstanding that they have been used as playgrounds, that brings from £15 to £20. We have been left a small bequest of land as part of our resources by Miss Leary (copy will produced), containing devise of "the Haven field" with the following condition—"I direct that as an equivalent for the bequest of the Haven field there shall be educated as day pupils, free, two poor deserving boys to be selected by the President yearly."

1244. What was the value of the field?—It was not very much. Miss Leary was under a misapprehension as to the quantity of land she held; part of what she wished to bequeath was only a tenancy, and the quantity of land that came to us was only about three Irish acres; we have that now in addition to the three acres.

1245. And in return you are obliged to educate two free pupils?—Yes.

1246. Is that the only property you have?—Yes.

1247. What are the day boys' fees?—£5 for day boys who are learning classics, and £4 for day boys who are not learning classics, per annum.

1248. Are all the day boys paying?—There are two boys free on the Leary bequest, and there are some other boys free. It is not known that they are free, but they are admitted because they find a difficulty in paying, it is simply a matter of generosity.

1249. Are the day boys all from Ennis or the neighbourhood?—No, they are not, there are some boys who come to lodge in Ennis, and go as day boys to the school.

1250. Where do the boarders come from?—Principally from the Diocese of Kilmore, but we also get a considerable number of pupils from the Diocese of Kildare; it is a small diocese in the north-west of Clare containing two baronies, Burren and Curraneen.

1251. Is there any other Intermediate school in Kilmore or Kildare?—There is no other Catholic Grammar School.

1252. Rev. Dr. MULLER.—Do you get any boys from Galway?—We get a considerable number of boys from the portion corresponding with the Diocese of Kilmore, about Gort and Curraneen, which is really the portion of Galway connected with Clare.

1253. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What is the course of education?—We follow the intermediate programme in the great bulk of the school; then we have a number of boys preparing for the various professional examinations—some preparing for solicitors examinations, some for the College of Surgeons, and some for the matriculation of the Royal University, but those are not constant classes. When boys require to be prepared for examinations we form a class for them.

1254. Have you any pupils preparing for the Royal University matriculation?—Not very many. Last year we had one boy who read his first year's University course, and passed in June, he has left us now, and gone to professional studies.

1255. Where does he pursue those?—I don't know where he has gone.

1256. Dr. TRAILL.—How many of your boys learn Greek?—Practically all our boys learn Greek.

1257. Rev. Dr. MULLER.—In 1882-83 there were eighty-seven learning Greek, in 1883-84 there were eighty-six, in 1884-85 there were seventy-four?—Yes, those numbers are correct.

1258. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Almost all your boys learn mathematics?—Almost all.

1259. You have a small number learning physical and natural science?—A very small number, merely when it is necessary to pass an examination, as it is, for the Royal University, and at present for the College of Surgeons.

1260. What appliances have you got for these subjects?—I may say none.

1261. I understood you to say you have no funds with which to provide them except the fees of the boys?—No funds.

1262. How many are engaged in teaching?—We have five resident teachers, four priests, and one layman, and we have one teacher, not resident, for music and singing.

1263. What branch is taken by the laymen?—Principally English and mathematics.

1264. Does each of the four clerical gentlemen take a separate class or a separate subject?—Mainly a separate class.

1265. How do you dispose of the fees?—We divide them amongst ourselves.

1266. Rev. Dr. MULLER.—They go chiefly to the maintenance of the College?—Exclusively, and of course we have to pay rates and taxes, and sometimes repairs of the College.

1267. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I see in 1882-83 you received £28 6s. 6d., in 1884-85 you received £34 2s. 4d., in 1885-86 you received £45 13s. 6d. in results fees from the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, my lord.

1268. Do you know what your amount will be this year?—It will be about £28, but I should point out the figures have been very varied—one year we got £128, last year we got £75 16s. 6d., the fluctuation is not attributable to any change in the school, but to changes in the rules of the Intermediate Board. The Board has only a fixed sum of money to distribute, and the numbers presenting themselves for examination vary from year to year, and as the fund is fixed the Board has to cut down its fees if a large number present themselves. If a small number present themselves the Board can raise its fees.

1269. Dr. TRAILL.—So that the more pupils the schools send in the less money they will get?—The more the country sends in. And the expense of examination is constantly varying too; the larger the number, the greater the expense of examination, and, therefore, the less will be the balance to be divided among the schools, and if a sufficiently large number presented themselves for examination you would not have a penny to give to the boys.

1270. It may make the amount less to each boy, but it would not make the results less to the College?—It will necessarily make the amount less to the colleges too, for at present the examinations cost £7,000 odd, and the administration costs between £3,000 and £4,000, so that is £11,000.

Oct. 18, 1887.
Rev. Denis Kelly.

Oct. 15, 1885.

Rev. Donk
Kelly.

1271. I thought you said the results fees were a constant quantity?—Oh, no, they are constantly changing. In 1886 the examinations cost £7,601 19s. 1d., and the administration cost £3,073, that is roughly £11,000 for the working expenses, that left about £23,000 to be divided among the schools in result fees, and the profits in exhibitions and prizes. Then if the number to be examined increases the expenses of examination and administration must be subtracted from the amount given to the boys and to the teachers.

1272. Rev. Dr. MOLLAT.—And that deduction principally falls on the result fees and not on the prizes?—Yes.

1273.—Lord Justice FRASER.—To what do you attribute the decline in the number of your boarders?—When we opened the new college in 1881 there was a considerable rush of boarders, our number of day boys had been much larger before that, and our number of boarders smaller; the average number of boarders in the college during the twenty-one or twenty-two years of its existence would be about forty-five or forty-six, but immediately after the opening of the new college there was a rush of boarders, several of those who had been day boys became boarders, therefore the number of boarders became artificially high, and the number of day boys declined, so that the number forty-three is not so much below the average.

1274. Do you consider the number forty-three or thereabouts represents the normal number that would require instruction as boarders?—Not the number that would require it, but the number that could afford to pay for it.

1275. Rev. Dr. MOLLAT.—Was the number that could afford to pay reduced by the depression of the times?—The number of day boys has been far more reduced than that of boarders, because the total numbers have gone down and the change in the times is the sole cause of the decline in the number of day boys.

1276. Lord Justice FRASER.—Do you think the decline in the times would affect day boys paying £6 a year in the same proportion as it would affect boarders paying £30?—It has affected them.

1277. Dr. TRAILL.—The day boys have not been affected as much as the boarders?—Much more.

1278. Not during the last five years?—But the number of boarders during the years you have in the return was abnormally large, and the number of day boys was rather small.

1279. In 1880 you had ninety-eight day boys, and in 1882 and 1883 you had only sixty-three?—Yes.

1280. Rev. Dr. MOLLAT.—If the times were better do you think some of the day boys would come to you as boarders?—Not, I think, of our present day boys.

1281. From what distance do your present day boys come?—Chiefly from the town of Ennis, and from a radius of about four miles around the town; they drive in, some walk and some drive.

1282. About what proportion come from the country parish?—The day boys who come from their own homes in a circuit around town, and those day boys who come from a distant part of the country and lodge in town, are about half the whole number of day boys.

1283. Lord Justice FRASER.—How do the age limits of the Intermediate Board affect you?—They press very heavily upon us. At the last examination of the Intermediate Board in June, in the senior grade we had sixteen boys (I mentioned eighteen in the return, but two left before the examinations, one of them became clerk of a union in the county), of the sixteen boys there was only one boy under eighteen years of age. Then in the middle grade there were twenty-two boys, and only five of them were under seventeen years of age; and in the junior grade we had two divisions making altogether thirty boys, of those there were only eleven under the limit of age; thus in the three grades we had sixty-eight boys all of whom had read the full course for the Intermediate in classics, mathematics, French, and English, except a couple of boys who had not read Greek, and we were only able to present seventeen out of three. Of those seventeen candidates, fifteen passed the examination; two obtained exhibitions; two retained exhibitions previously obtained; and four won prizes.

1284. The age limit prevented you in the other cases?—Yes.

1285. Professor DOUGHERTY.—How do you account for so many of your boys leaving over the age limit?—They come to school late in life. We get some boys who come to a grammar school for the first time at seventeen and even eighteen.

1286. Why is that?—The reason is that Ireland is poor and the people cannot afford to make education a luxury, they try to get the necessities of intellectual life as cheaply as they can, and they find that the cheapest way is to keep the children in the various districts in the primary schools until they have acquired a competent knowledge of English and Mathematics, and then about fifteen or perhaps sixteen they send them to the grammar school, and when they come to the grammar school they devote themselves almost exclusively to the study of Classics and French, and perhaps a little History and Literature, and in that way they get through their grammar school course in a very short time.

1287. Lord Justice FRASER.—Must not that have a tendency to correct itself; it is not in the end a very wasteful way to keep the expensive part of the education until the boy has reached a time of life when, if he had begun a little sooner, he would have been able to help himself?—I don't think that is so. There is very little use in a boy going to professional studies until he is seventeen years of age, and if that boy is sent to school at twelve he has to spend five years at the grammar school, and that will cost £150 if he is a boarder.

1288. Dr. MOLLAT.—Suppose he brought up a much primary knowledge at twelve as he now brings up at sixteen, why should he retain five years in the grammar school?—I will just explain: the usual system that we have found in this county is this, the best boys come about fifteen or sixteen to the grammar school, they have already got a primary knowledge of English and Mathematics. Then a very large number of them get through their grammar school work in two years, and they go to their professional studies at seventeen or eighteen, and then they have their professions at twenty-three.

1289. I understand perfectly well that this is the system they follow, but I don't understand that it is a good system?—I don't hold that it is a good system, on the contrary.

1290. And I cannot see that it is an economical system?—I differ with you there, I think it is economical.

1291. Lord Justice FRASER.—I suppose the amount of classical knowledge they require to qualify themselves for commanding their professional studies is not very great?—You have some idea of it in the programme of the College of Surgeons.

1292. Lord Justice FRASER.—For the preliminary solicitors' examination Latin is compulsory also?—Yes.

1293. Dr. MOLLAT.—Up to the time they finish their grammar school education they have not been in a position to earn any money for themselves or their families?—No.

1294. Would it not be more economical if they finished their grammar school education at seventeen than to begin it at seventeen?—It may not. I will give you an instance. There is a certain dispensary doctor in this county who came to school in his sixteenth year, he remained three years at school, and he went then to his professional studies; he took out the degree of the Royal University in four years, being then in his twenty-third year. Soon afterwards the dispensary which he now holds was about to become vacant, and there was much anxiety as to part of himself and his friends as to whether he should have completed the required age. In point of fact he was just in the nick of time the age prescribed by the rules of the Local Government Board. It would have been useless for him to have had his profession two years before, and therefore if he had gone to the grammar school at twelve instead of sixteen he would have had to pay for four years longer at school, and would not have been able to earn anything for himself until he was twenty-three.

1295. And is the case also true in the case of a scholar?—Yes, practically, or in the Church he could not become a clergyman.

1296. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is seventeen, not a very late age to begin a grammar school education?—I quite admit that, and I admit the custom is a bad one, but I think a system of education should suit itself to the conditions of the country, and it would be silly to try to suit the conditions of the country to a system of education.

1297. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—And do you hold it is desirable for a man who intends to become a doctor to keep back his grammar school education until he is sixteen or seventeen years of age?—I hold it inadvisable, but the people find it economical.

1298. No, the people think it economical?—Well, it is the same thing.

1300. A clever boy who can come up to the average of one in ten gets an exhibition of £20 a year, at least, for his education—does not that attract boys to study sooner?—I have known it to attract three or four perhaps, not more, and I believe for the future it will have less power, because the Intermediate system has been losing its novelty, and there is not as much curiosity or anxiety about it as in the earlier years.

1301. Do not the bulk of your boys, who are within the age, still go to the Intermediate examinations?—All who are within the age go, and we make a great effort even to bring in those who are not.

1302. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—And if they win exhibitions under this economical system they are not paid, because they are beyond the age?—They are not paid, and three-fourths of them are excluded altogether.

1303. Is not that an argument against your system?—After all, the chances of getting an exhibition are rather small, and if one boy succeeds in getting an exhibition, and thus lessening the expense of his education, what about the nine who don't succeed, and who have been at the expense of education since the age of twelve.

1304. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose if the boy had to pay for his own education, and then realize the money afterwards, it would be economical to go in earlier?—Yes.

1305. Lord Justice FRERESON.—Is there any prospect of an increase of students in your college?—It will depend on the state of the times, if the times improved there would be a very great and rapid increase indeed.

1306. What is the largest number you ever had?—I wish to present a list, during the twenty-one years that the college was opened 999 boys passed through it.

1307. How do you account for the larger falling off in boys paying £4 than in boarders paying £30?—A great many boys from the town went to the college to get somewhat a higher education than they could get in the primary schools in the town. Though they did not intend to turn their grammar school education to any particular purpose—such as the taking out of a profession—yet, as long as the times were good, a large number of boys went to the college to get something of a better education. That class of boys were generally day boys from the town and neighbourhood. In the bad times those boys are not prepared to pay for what I may call an accomplishment, and they have fallen off, whereas the boarders are mainly boys that come for the purpose of taking out a profession; they have a definite purpose before them, and their number has not been so much affected. You will remember, on the—Appendix B, No. VI. (c)—that I held in, that the numbers commenced to increase about 1871 and 1872.

1308. They rise then very rapidly for two years, and remain steady for six or seven?—Everyone knows that the times from 1871 to 1878 were exceedingly good, and during all that period the numbers were very high. In 1879 we had a sort of famine in Ireland, and the numbers suddenly fell twenty. Then we had a period of depression from 1880 to 1885; the times were not exactly bad times, but they were dull times, and during those years the numbers were steady, about 125 or 128, and the years 1889 and 1893 have been particularly bad years. I remember the Corcoran Commission stated that beginning January, 1893, there was a drop of 15 per cent. on the price of produce as compared with the previous years from 1879 to 1886.

1309. You have had a reduction of 30 per cent. in your numbers since 1879?—Yes.

1310. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Are your boys mostly the sons of farmers?—The sons of farmers, shopkeepers, and the sons of some professional gentlemen. The greater number, however, of the boarders are the sons of farmers; half the day boys would be the sons of shopkeepers and professional gentlemen about the town of Ennis.

1311. Dr. TRAILL.—When you say 1886 and 1887 are very bad years, do you mean in prices or produce?—I mean prices.

1312. Was not the produce very large?—No; the produce of butter was reduced to almost half—so I am told. I am not a farmer, but the quantity of butter, on account of the excessive heat in the summer, and the very small quantity of grass, was reduced.

1313. Do you depend mostly on butter and cattle in this country?—Yes.

1314. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The falling off in numbers corresponds with the depression of the times?—Certainly, and if the times improve our school is sure to go up again.

1315. Lord Justice FRERESON.—At the best times, your maximum number appears to have been under 1000? The numbers I have given there are averages; it is not the highest number that was actually in the school. I have brought the roll book of the college. I should say also that during these good years the school was conducted in the old college, and the accommodation was quite sufficient for those large numbers. I remember Dr. Ryan having refused to take in boys from the want of accommodation, and I think with the present college, if you had the times as good as they were then, we might safely count on 200.

1316. What has become of the old college?—It was a rented house, and has been taken up by a merchant and converted into a private residence.

1317. Where was it?—On the Mill road, near the County Infirmary.

1318. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Previous to coming here, your boys are educated chiefly at the National schools?—At the National schools and the Christian Brothers'.

1319. At about what age do they go to those schools?—About six years of age.

1320. Do they stay there from six to sixteen?—I think they remain permanently, or partly regularly, at school, between six and thirteen.

1321. Is there an interval between the time they finish their primary education and the time they come to you?—There is an interval. They are not going to school regularly, and there is a sort of interval before they go to us.

1323. Dr. TRAILL.—And in that interval their parents require them at home?—Well, they are supposed to be going to school. I quite disapprove of that system, and wish we could remedy it, but I don't see any hope of remedying it, unless Ireland grows wealthy.

1324. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—It seems to be founded on the same principle on which some farmers leave the hay out in the fields for two months before they draw it home—I don't think so; they save money by it. In the case of the dispensary doctor, if he went to school at eleven years of age his education would have cost him a good deal more.

1325. Would he have been more expensive to his parents if his education was finished at twenty-one instead of twenty-three?—They don't think it suitable to have a professional gentleman roving about at home without an appointment, losing his time.

1326. Professor DONAGHY.—He need not have lost his time, though he might not have been eligible for a dispensary appointment, which after all is not a very great thing—Oh, I don't agree with the system.

1327. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—If there was any aid available for a college such as yours, how do you think it could be most usefully applied, whether to free places, to additional teaching staff, or to additional appliances?—I think it could most usefully be applied to the maintenance of the college that exists, in the way of teaching staff and appliances for educational purposes.

1328. What are the greatest wants as regards your teaching staff?—It is very hard to maintain our teaching staff at present, and if the present times continue it will be impossible to do so on the feet of the boys. And then our educational appliances are very imperfect, especially appliances connected with natural science.

1329. If money was distributed in proportion to the work done, what test could you suggest as being fair to your colleges?—I could give you some information on the work it has done.

1330. How would you propose to establish your claim compared with that of other educational institutions, if paid by results—in other words how would you propose to assess the Intermediate Education test so as to make it in your opinion just to yourselves?—I understand you to say that it is not now just to you owing to the matter of age?—I would draw a very sharp line of distinction between boys who wished to gain scholarships and prizes in any system of education, and those who merely wished to stand the examination and bring results home. I think for the purpose of scholarships and prizes and exhibitions there ought to be limits of age, for it would be unfair to allow young boys to have older and more experienced boys competing against them. But for the purpose of standing examinations and bringing results home to the teachers there ought to be no limit of age, and I think that the Intermediate System is quite inconsistent with the other systems of education in the country. In the primary system of education the National Board never inquires about the age of the pupils presented for the results examination, and it pays the teacher for teaching them whatever age they may be.

1331. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You would propose that the results fees of the Intermediate Board should be paid according to the number educated, irrespective of age?—Yes.

1332. But you agree that there should be a limit of age for boys going up for exhibitions and prizes?—Yes. And in the universities I have not heard that there is an age limit with regard to entering the University and being taught there. I know there is a limit of age with regard to scholarships, but the professors will receive fees for teaching young men whatever their age may be, and I think it is unfair in the Intermediate System that the teachers should get nothing for teaching boys because they happen to be over the age.

1333. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—In the subjects and methods of conducting examinations is the Intermediate Examination a fair test of the work done?—I regard the examinations as fairly conducted, and I also consider the Intermediate System as improving the condition of the country, it has set up a system where there was no system before, and it has given some sort of standard by which people could go whereas up to that a very great number of schools had no standard to go by, and every school was following its own course. But when I have said that I am not a very great admirer of the system. Though the Act has done good, the system it has introduced is a bad system. I think a system of education conducted altogether by written examinations leads to teaching of a very defective kind. The great object of all our teaching is merely to get a certain amount of knowledge into the heads of the boys, and the training of pupils—the disciplined mind—is very much neglected I fear. I know for my own part I would not consider myself conscientiously justified in teaching my class in the method which would bring the highest results in the Intermediate Examinations.

1334. Dr. THOMAS.—Cramming in fact?—I would not consider myself justified and I never do so teach.

1335. Do you think the short course is suitable to the boys in the higher grade for instance?—The ending in our College was much more extensive before the introduction of the Intermediate system in all the grades, but I don't think the shortness of the course is the worst feature. I think the fact that you have only written examinations and that the teaching becomes largely mechanical is the worst.

1336. How would you remedy that?—to have oral examinations of four or five thousand boys, all over the country would be difficult, they ought to be examined equally?—I would be glad if there could be some corrective applied, if the Commission could distribute its funds by inspection it would be a sort of corrective to the Intermediate.

1337. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—I wish you would tell us what the Commission's funds are—I hoped they would be very large. I think I am to the end of the report of the Commission of 1838 that there was something like £200,000 in the endowments of the country, and I hoped the Commission would have a very large share of that.

1338. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Did you read the last paragraph of our report of last year?—I did, and it was very discouraging.

1339. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—We found about the whole of that £200,000 was tied down by the will of the people who gave the property, and of course it went to nonbenefit as they intended.

1340. Have you absolutely no help to maintain your staff except the fees from the boys?—We have a little endowment in that way, one of our priests is stipendiary to a convent and we get £50 from the convent and that helps.

1341. Helps to enable him to teach in the College, but that is not so endowment for teaching. Have you got any of your classes in connection with the Science and Art Department?—No.

1342. Why is that?—It does not fall in exactly with our system, the great bulk of the boys want to prepare for professional examinations, and they have to devote most of their attention to classical and French, and subjects that they require at their professional examinations, they don't have time to devote to drawing and the things that are of most importance with the Science and Art Department.

1343. There is a Science and Art Department for chemistry and science in connection with agricultural and engineering subjects?—We have some boys that go on for engineering, but I don't know that we could have a sufficient number to make it worth our while to establish classes for the purpose.

1344. Do you find any demand in the neighbour-had for instruction in the science of agriculture!—None.

1343. Is that because the agriculture in the surrounding district is perfect, or the people think it so?—We have very little agriculture here, we have so much rock.

1344. Rev. Dr. MOUNT.—I think you have conveyed to me that the bulk of your students are at a professional career?—Perhaps the majority, at least a large number of them do, but we have a considerable number who go to business, and a considerable number of the sons of the better class of farmers come to school, simply to get a better education than they get in the primary school.

1345. Something more than half go to a professional career, the rest to commerce and farming?—Yes.

1346. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I have mentioned that except with your own consent our Act of Parliament does not apply to your College, you could not be in better hands than I am you are, in Mr. McManus's, about your legal affairs, and it will be for your Bishop and trustees to take advice whether they should form an incorporated body to hold your property; if you wish we shall be glad to help you.

1347. Witness.—I would wish to make a short statement connected with the work we have done. Our former pupils occupy a very large number of public positions already in the county, and other parts of the country, and when you remember the school is only in existence twenty-one years and that they had to go through their professional course it is surprising the number of positions they hold. In the town of Kinsale four of the solicitors are our pupils, and one of the solicitors of Nenagh, who is also coroner of North Tipperary, a solicitor in Roscrea, a solicitor in Brier, and others in distant places. The medical officer of the Kinsale workhouse, and of the Greenbank district, the medical officer of the Kilmish workhouse, the dispensary doctor of Milltown Malvey, of Killybegan, and of Gredon are our pupils. In that part of Galway to which our influence extends we have the dispensary doctor of Bort; and a pupil of ours, who is a native of Gort, is at present conducting the dispensary of Oumacree. In Tipperary the dispensary doctor of Nenagh is a pupil of ours, and also a young man at present conducting the Silvermines dispensary. A very large number of our pupils are doctors in the army. From the town of Kinsale alone, four of our boys are doctors in the army, a doctor in Australia, in India, in the merchant navy, two in London, one in Dublin, and two or three others that I know are doctors, but I have not been able to follow their history, one was the son of a county inspector that was here some years ago. We have two landowners only, but we will very soon have a third. In the Island Revenue we have a large number, I think there are some fourteen or fifteen from the town of Kinsale.

1348. These take their appointments by competitive examination?—Yes, there are not very many local county appointments but such as there are, such as poor law clerks, poor rate collectors, and railway clerks, they are almost all filled by pupils of ours. From that then I would argue that we have the whole education of a large district under our control. There is no other Catholic Grammar school in the district, and I would wish to draw your attention to the size of the district. There is no other grammar school in the county Clare except the Erasmus Smith School, and the diocese of Killaloe extends also over all North Tipperary and two and a half baronies of King's County. The whole area of Killaloe is 1,073,059 acres, that is one-nineteenth of the whole of Ireland. Besides, as I remarked a while ago, the boys from the little diocese of Killybegan are educated exclusively by us, and also from a portion of Galway. But even omitting this portion of Galway and merely adding Burren and Corcomroe, the sphere of our action is one-seventeenth of the whole country territorially. Then with regard to population, the Catholic population of Clare is 138,908 and the population of all other denominations is 2,940, that is 97·9 per cent. are Catholics and only 2·1 are of all other denominations; and taking it from three times in the decade between 1871 and 1881 the decrease on the Catholic population was four per cent., and the decrease in the Protestant Episcopalian was eleven per cent., and the decrease upon other denominations was still greater, and from that I argue there is no chance of a school of any denomination getting on in Clare except a Catholic school. More than one-seventh of the population is generally at school. The Catholics have over 20,000 school children in the county Clare alone, and according to the one-seventh the Protestant population could not have more than 400. From the census it was 21,800 children that were at school in 1881. I may assume that half were boys, so that we would have in Clare 10,000 boys to select from, and a school of any other denomination could not have more than 300 boys to select from. The population of Kinsale is 6,307. The Catholic population is 5,988, and the Protestant population, 319, and therefore you see that we have great local work to do, and I see certain gentlemen in the room, who would be able to speak about the local work we have done. The number of young men, whose we have lauded in life, and the number of families from which five or six boys have all got into professions directly from our school is simply surprising. I see a gentleman in the room; he is one of five brothers, the eldest is the manager of a bank, the second is a doctor in the army, who has gone through his service in India, the third is a solicitor, and there are two others who went into the bank.

1349. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—There were all pupils of yours?—All passed their examinations directly from us. There are two or three merchants in town who have had similar experiences; the gentleman whose name is to this document has two sons doctors, a son a solicitor, and a son in a Theological College in Rome, and all passed directly from us. I could mention several families similar to that, so large we have been doing great local work. The population of Killaloe outside Clare is 50,000, so that altogether the population of the area in which our influence extends is 200,000, that would be one-twenty-fifth of the population of the whole country. I wish to bring those facts before the Commission, because I hold that it is of great importance to have a good staff and efficient appliances in a school of that size.

1350. Rev. Dr. MOUNT.—I suppose the logical conclusion is that you have a fair claim to about one-twenty-fifth of all the endowments in Ireland?—I hold that follows logically, and I am quite prepared to go the whole length of my logic.

*ERASMUS SMITH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—ENNIS.

*Richard R. Flynn examined.*Richard R.
Flynn.

1333. Lord Justice FLEMING.—How long have you been head master of Erasmus Smith's School here?
—Since February, 1879.

1334. You came from Dumdalk?—From a school at Dumdalk, endowed by Lord Roden.

1335. When you came to Ennis what was the condition of the college?—A very low state indeed. I had exactly ten boarders from this part of the world, and I brought thirty boarders with me from Dumdalk, and I had about 13 day boys.

1336. That would make a school altogether of fifty-three?—Yes, between fifty and sixty.

1337. What have the numbers been since you came?—They have fallen off gradually.

1338. What are the present numbers?—Eleven boarders, and fifteen day boys. The number of day boys remained thirteen for two or three years, then it went up to fifteen, last year it was eighteen or nineteen, it is now fifteen.

1339. Is the school substantially steady?—Yes, rather on an ascending scale.

1340. To what do you attribute the falling off of the boarders?—The most salient cause is the general depression in the country, and there is also the competition of English schools, and I think the disturbed state of the country has something to do with it, people at a distance where I had a connection, in the North especially, seem to be very much affected by the disturbed state of the country, and are, many of them, positively afraid to send their sons to this country. I know that.

1341. Where did your original boarders come from?—The majority from towards the North, in Dumdalk, I had a very fair Northern connection, and I had a fair contingent from Dublin too. I had one boy from Limerick in Dumdalk.

1342. What are the localities from which your present boarders come?—Three come from the Co. Kerry, I have only one at present from the Co. Clare, I have three from Dublin, and one from Roscommon, Co. Down, and one boy has been with us for a long time, his father is in India, and another boy has been with me since he was seven years of age, his father is dead. I have also one from Limerick.

1343. What are your terms for boarders?—Fifty guineas a year.

1344. Do they all pay at that rate?—They are supposed to do so, but all do not. In some cases I thought it fair to make a reduction of late years, because of the general depression in the country, and things have got cheaper too, I did make a slight reduction.

1345. How are your fees regulated?—By myself.

1346. Do the Board exercise any control over the amount of fees you charge?—None whatever.

1347. What fees are charged to the day boys?—From £19 to £6 a year. I charge £5 for English and Mathematics, and for French, Latin or Greek, £3 each extra.

1348. In the case of the day boys, do the Board fix the fees?—No, not in the case of any of the boys.

1349. Then what control is exercised by the Board as regards the pupils and the terms on which they are received?—I am under no control from the Board, except that the School is inspected twice a year by the Rev. T. T. O'Gry, Fellow of Trinity College.

1350. What about the buildings?—They generally keep the buildings in order themselves.

1351. Have they been making any expenditure upon the buildings recently?—They have.

1352. To what extent?—I don't know what the extent is, but they have expended a good deal of money lately on general repairs and improvements.

1353. What has been done for the expenditure?—The place has been put into general repair; they have introduced the water from the town into the College, and they have made new lavatories, and everything that way, and they have constructed a gallery from the private house into the dormitories, there are the principal improvements I think. They have also overhauled the drainage completely.

1354. Then there has been a large outlay on the buildings?—Yes.

1355. About what number of boarders could you take in?—At least seventy.

1356. And of day boys?—I should say certainly very many more day boys than I am ever likely to get. There are two excellent classrooms, and another room that could be converted into a classroom if necessary. The whole place would accommodate 100 boys.

1357. Then if you got seventy boarders you could accommodate thirty day boys?—Yes.

1358. Is there any other school in the neighbourhood open for the instruction of Protestants?—There is no school nearer than Limerick that I know of.

1359. They told us in Limerick they had reached of this class at all there?—There is Galway and Tipperary.

1360. They are at long distances?—Yes.

1361. Dr. TUNNICLIFFE.—How many free boys do you take for the endowment?—I did not say I took any.

1362. Are you not at liberty to take free boys?—That is in the hands of the Board. I can only apply to them to take in a free boy; they require me to send in the name of any boy who may wish to be admitted into the school as a free boy.

1363. Have you any free boys?—Not at present.

1364. Have you had any since you came?—Yes.

1365. How many in any one year?—Never more than three, I think.

1366. Did any apply to you for free places that you refused?—There was only one that I remember, but it was not I refused him, it was the Board.

1367. To what class in life do the boys belong?—They run mainly all of the upper classes, I mean the professional classes.

1368. Are there any commercial men or men in trade, shopkeepers in Ennis, who send their sons to your school?—There is only one at present, that I remember.

1369. This professional class of the neighbourhood would be the solicitors, doctors, and clergies?—Yes.

1370. Have you any elegiacs of any kind?—I have.

1371. Lord Justice NAULT.—Does the Board make you any money grant?—There is an endowment of £250 £100 is allowed for me, it is supposed to be my salary, and then there is £100 allowed for an assistant master, it is practically £200 for I must have assistant masters.

1372. Lord Justice FLEMING.—You receive from the Board £250 in cash, you have the premises, and they are kept in repair, that is the amount of benefit you derive from the Erasmus Smith endowment?—It is.

1373. What staff of masters do you keep?—I generally keep about three masters; at present I have only two resident masters.

1374. What branches do they teach?—One teaches classics, and the other teaches modern languages.

1375. Who gives instruction in science?—I myself.

1376. Have you any teaching of natural philosophy?—Yes. If you mean experimental philosophy, we have none, it is merely the outlines of natural philosophy that we teach.

1377. Have you any appliances for teaching Natural Science?—No, none at all.

Oct. 12, 1887.
Michael H.
Finn.

1398. Have you ever had 1—I have never had.
1399. For what are your boys preparing themselves?
—Almost all for professional pursuits.
1400. Do you send them into the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, I send some boys in.
1401. What number did you send in last year?—I think I sent in eight.
1402. What were their results?—I am not perfectly certain whether five or six passed, certainly five passed, but I really am not perfectly sure.
1403. Had you any exhibitions or prizes within the last few years?—Yes, we had—not many, but we got two exhibitions within the last four years I think, and we got two £10 prizes, and several other prizes, there was one medal.
1404. In what subject?—Modern languages.
1405. Modern languages taught by the assistant master?—Yes.
1406. Do your boys as a rule go to the university?—A good proportion of them.
1407. To the Royal University or Trinity College?—Trinity College.
1408. Had you any boys who distinguished themselves there?—Oh, yes. Two boys of mine got first place at the October entrance at Trinity since I came here, and one of them also got second junior exhibition, and first senior exhibition, and first honours in three different subjects, third mathematical scholarship, and third gold medal in metaphysics, also first place at the Little-go. The other got first Erasmus Smith's exhibition, first honours in three different subjects, and he got an inspectorship under the National Board a short time ago. He also got first place at the Little-go and the Provost's first prize.
1409. They say that is the hardest examination in the Civil Service except the Indian?—I think it is.
1410. What exhibitions are open to boys from Ennis?—What they call the Erasmus Smith's exhibitions are open for competition to boys from this school.
1411. With whom have they to compete?—With the boys from the other three schools, Drogheda, Tipperary and Galway.
1412. I suppose you have nothing to do with the management of the endowment beyond receiving £200 a year?—No, I have nothing whatever.
1413. Do you account with the Board for the assistant master's salaries?—I merely send in a receipt for the amount of the £100 from one of my masters testifying that I have paid to that amount.
1414. Dr. TRAILL.—You probably pay him more? Oh, yes, I pay a good deal more.
1415. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Is there any large number of boys from this neighbourhood who ought to take advantage of the endowment—how do you account for there being such a small number of boys?—I account for the small number of day boys by the fact that there are not boys to come, there may be a few more but not many.
1416. Rev. Dr. MOSELY.—Have you any Catholic boys?—Not at present.
1417. Is your school open to Catholic boys?—Yes.
1418. But they don't come?—No; not latterly.
1419. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you think your fees are not considered too high?—I never heard any complaint.
1420. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Do you know how your fees compare with the fees in flourishing schools in the North of Ireland, Coleraine, for example?—I don't know very much about that, but I charged almost the same fees in Dundalk, eight guineas, and ten guineas. My lowest charge in Dundalk was eight guineas, but the reason I fixed the charges as they are is that they were just in that state when I came here, when Mr. Whitty had charge.

1421. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You have not thought it necessary, in view of the depression of the times, to make any reductions?—No; because the depression affects me as well as other people.

1422. Rev. Dr. MOSELY.—Practically there are only thirteen or fourteen Protestant boys in the neighbourhood that want the kind of education you give?—I think that number has, fifteen or sixteen would be the average of late years; for the last two or three years the number has been up to seventeen or eighteen, and as far as nineteen and one time.

1423. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—The fluctuation between thirteen and eighteen might depend upon the size of the families from time to time?—Oh, yes.

1424. Would a number ranging from thirteen to twenty-five represent, one year with another, the total number of the class of local boys who can avail themselves of your school?—I could not very well say. The consideration of the board is a separate consideration; their number depends very much upon the pecuniary condition of the country. I think the smallness of the number of boarders is principally due to the general depression.

1425. The general depression does not affect the existence of the boys. Where do those boys get their education now, who would, if times were better, come to Ennis school?—I could not answer that question, but I know the numbers have fallen off in most of the Protestant schools.

1426. Dr. TRAILL.—The competition of English schools cuts the other way. If depression was a cause why the boys should not come, the competition of English schools could not be a cause. Would not the tendency of the depression of the times stop parents from sending the boys to England?—I think it has rather increased it, because although some of the English schools are very dear, some are very cheap too. You see advertisements frequently in the English papers from schools charging but £50 a year for boarders.

1427. Professor DOUGHERTY.—We had it in evidence that in the case of the Diocesan College the depression had affected day boys more than boarders, is that your experience?—No; that is not my experience, it has been the other way with me, the number of day boys I have had has increased, but the number of boarders has diminished.

1428. Dr. TRAILL.—But the boarders you brought with you gradually passed out of your hands, and were not replaced from the same places from which they came?—That had a good deal to do with it; they were from the North, and it was a long distance to expect them to come, besides there are so many good schools in the North of Ireland.

1429. What is the highest number of day boys you have had?—I am not certain, I think I had sixteen, and the lowest was about thirteen.

1430. Have you any boys from Limerick?—Yes; but I have only one at present.

1431. Any from Kerry?—I have no boy from Kerry; I have had boys from Kerry though.

Rev. Julius Henry Griffith sworn.

1432. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—What position do you occupy with respect to Erasmus Smith's school?—I am rector of the union of parishes, and my family have been, and are being educated at it.

1433. The union of parishes in which the school is situated?—In which the school is situated, some 37,000 acres.

1434. We have it in evidence that there are at present in the school fifteen day boys and eleven boarders; do you think that represents the full number of boys that ought to get advantages from the endowment?—No; it does not—out of borders.

1403. Of day boys, do you think there is any larger number available in the neighbourhood?—Not of Church of Ireland boys and other Protestant denominations.

1436. To what do you attribute the small number of boarders?—Primarily that some of that rank that used to be educated there send their sons to England on account of the smallness of the fees.

1437. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you mean that the fees are too high for boarders?—They prefer sending them to a place in England where they will get them educated for £35 or £35.

1438. Where will they get a decent education for £35 in England?—I have seen it advertised, and some of my friends sent their sons there.

1439. What report did they give you of the education they could get for themselves in England?—It was not as good as they could get in a school like this.

1440. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Do you know from what source the endowment of this school is derived?—Is it derived from estates situated in this neighbourhood?—I cannot say.

1441. Lord Justice FRYNGMONT.—Can you give us any suggestion to make the school more useful?—Yes, I think I could. I have known one instance of a boy going to another school because there was a small house studentship that he competed for. I believe the boy was at this school as a boarder, and he went there and got that studentship, and that was an inducement to him to go to another school. If there was more endowment for the master, to get efficient masters to assist in the school, and also to establish some house studentships, both for boarders and day boys, it would certainly attract.

1442. But there is an endowment of £300 a year?—But the boys get nothing. If you give a boy a £10 or £12 studentship, who wins it by his answering, many parents would send their boys there.

1443. Dr. TRAILL.—Should the boy get that before he went to the school or afterwards?—Well, I would, in some cases, have it after the boy had been a year there.

1444. Lord Justice FRYNGMONT.—At what age should an exhibition be open to the school?—About twelve years of age.

1445. What should be the value of an exhibition to have the effect of drawing pupils to the school?—About £15 would be the smallest.

1446. That would reduce his fees in the present school from fifty guineas to about £40?—Yes.

1447. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you use the boy's exhibition to reduce the fees for the benefit of the father, or give the money to himself?—In my own case I would not take it. I would give it to the boy.

1448. Lord Justice FRYNGMONT.—In that case the attraction to the father would be nil. Do you think the establishment of such an exhibition would bring any additional number of boys?—I think it would. It would bring out the talents of the boys and give them an inducement to study.

1449. Is there any provision for the education of girls in Bunde?—There is; a lady has a private school.

1450. How many Protestant girls are there wanting intermediate education in the neighbourhood?—I could not exactly say now.

1451. Do you think the governing of a school by a body in Dublin is of any importance with reference to the present state. Would a local governing body have a chance of getting a larger number of boys?—It might, but local committees generally hamper the manager. It may in a certain way make them take a deeper interest in the matter.

1452. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Would it be an advantage or a disadvantage, on the whole, to have it managed by a local committee instead of by the board of Erasmus Smith?—It might, if the committee were judicious men to work, not with self will, but for the advantage of the school.

1453. Dr. TRAILL.—But if there be only fifteen boys, what would be the advantage of the committee?—But you will draw boys. Many parents would send boys to board in lodgings, and go privately as day boys, if there was some inducement held out to them. There is one boy coming at present from Tulla to reside in this town in order to attend school.

1454. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Do you think endowment in Ireland are sufficiently abundant to enable us to pay boys to come to school?—You don't pay them to come to school; it is as much to encourage their application.

1455. Dr. TRAILL.—For one boy that would get the £12, you think ten boys might try for it?—Yes, and the school would have the advantage.

1456. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What do you think about the scale of fees here?—We would like them lower, of course.

1457. Do you think if the scale of fees was reduced more boys would attend the schools as day boys?—They might, unless they came from distant places.

1458. Lord Justice FRYNGMONT.—Is the education now given of the class the boys want?—Yes; they have gained distinctions in the University.

1459. I believe there was a proposal by the Erasmus Smith board to discontinue Bunde at one time?—There were rumours of it.

1460. If it was discontinued is there any other provision for intermediate education?—No, and perhaps this is the time to put in a resolution (proposed). That was passed at a large meeting of those interested in sending their children and friends to the school.

1461. What is the number of those so interested?—I don't know, I have letters from gentlemen who could not attend, about keeping it up—seventy gentlemen.

1462. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Practically they represent a population that can send from thirteen to eighteen children to the school?—Yes, there are more of the bursar class who do not attend.

1463. Practically from thirteen to eighteen is the number of Protestant children which the locality furnishes for intermediate education?—There would be more who could come perhaps.

1464. Would any of the county gentlemen who are so anxious to keep this school up send their own sons there?—Some of them have, both as boarders and day boys, but some of them that might send them do not send them.

1465. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Were the various Protestant denominations represented at this meeting?—They were, and the school is open to all, Roman Catholics as well as Protestants, and there have been some Roman Catholic boarders at the school since Dr. Fynn came—I don't speak that from my own experience, but from what he has told me—as well as Roman Catholic day boys.

1466. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Agreement there are several. Dr. Fynn.—There are none, but when I came here first there were three Roman Catholic boarders.

1467. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Then considering the large Roman Catholic population and the fact that no Catholic children are there, we may assume the school is not acceptable to the Roman Catholic body.

Dr. Fynn.—It is not.

Rev. Mr. Griffiths.—Our Bishop takes a great interest in the school, he was educated there, and several of our best men have been educated there. I think one thing that tends to the school not having more pupils is that Galway being an elementary school takes it to a certain extent, and Tipperary also.

1468. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you mean the Erasmus Smith school in Galway?—It is in connection I believe, with the Erasmus Smith board.

1469. It is not an elementary school?—Well, I am not sure.

1470. Lord Justice FRYNGMONT.—We have got a *Resolution sent to me by the chairman of the Town Commissioners (reads resolution).

Dr. Flynn.—I omitted to say that as far as I can see my prospects of having an increase of boarders—a substantial increase—are very good. I expect to have fully double the number of boarders next year, as far as I can judge.

1471. Where do you expect them from?—Several have promised to come to me, one is going from Dandalk, two from Dublin, there is a nephew of an officer out in India, and there are two from Rostrevor, and there are some others that I have a very fair chance of getting.

J. B. Molony, Solicitor, sworn.

1476. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Whom do you represent, and what views do you wish to bring before us about the school?—We had a meeting yesterday at which a good number of persons attended, and there were some of us asked to attend here to-day for the purpose of giving any information that the Commission would ask for.

1478. What is your view as to how it could be made more useful than it is at present?—My own view is that considering the depression at the times the school buildings are altogether too large for the wants, and then of course either the Executive Board or the master has to look after the maintenance of the building, and he is supposed to keep a higher class of masters than really can be remunerative to him.

1479. The buildings being there, how do you think they could be utilised?—I have not considered that.

1480. Would there be any possibility of getting money for them if a smaller school was established?—I am afraid, at present, there would not; all property is unsaleable at present.

1481. Is there any demand for such buildings in Ennis?—There is not. The falling off in the school is due to several causes. Dr. Flynn unfortunately succeeded at a time when there had been seasons which occasioned the falling off in the boys, and the depression coming immediately afterwards, has affected the numbers also.

1482. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—There is really no falling off in the school as regards the locality; the number of day boys is about the same as it has always been; the falling off is in boarders who come from a distance?—Not as I remember it long ago.

1483. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What was the largest number of day boys you remember?—We had considerably over twenty. I was at the school under the late Dr. King and under Mr. Barnes.

1484. And I believe some very distinguished men were turned out?—One was a very distinguished scholar in Trinity College and in Cambridge, Mr. Mac Collman.

1485. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—Has there been a falling off in the Protestant population since the time you speak of?—I think so. There were more persons holding official positions at that time who were Protestants.

1486. Then does not that account for the falling off in the number of day boys?—Yes.

1487. And the day boys are the only boys from whose education the population of Ennis derive any 1472. You think that the depression in the number of boarders is more or less temporary?—I think so, I never expect the school will rise to any great success, but I believe it will improve.

1473. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Are these all of one denomination?—They are.

1474. Are all your boarders at present members of the same denomination?—Yes, all Church of Ireland.

1475. You have no Presbyterian boarders?—I have one Presbyterian day boy, and I have one Presbyterian boarder from Rostrevor, he is the son of the Presbyterian clergyman there.

advantage?—There are several country gentlemen who would send their children there.

1488. It appears to me there is no falling off in the school as far as regards the advantage of the Ennis population, because the whole of the population that require this class of education are getting it at present?—They are.

1489. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you agree that the number of pupils attending the school practically exhausts the supply of pupils available for such a school?—I don't think it exhausts the supply, but there are a number of others, who, if the fees were lower, might attend.

1490. Have you heard any complaint with regard to the scale of fees?—Personally, I have not, but I think a great number of persons would avail themselves of the school if they were lower.

1491. Do you think the number of pupils would be increased if the fees were the same as at the Diocesan College?—I think they would.

1492. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—Supposing it to remain an Intermediate Middle Class School and the fees to be reduced by one-third, what increase of day boys would that bring to the school?—I don't think it would bring at the outset more than an increase of ten.

1493. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you think, if the existing buildings were given to local hands to make what they could of the place for education, local management would bring a larger number of pupils?—I think it would, because there would be local interest taken in it.

1494. Is there any class of education not given in the school at present that could be given so as to bring in a larger class of boys?—I don't think so, but if there was local management it would increase the interest taken in it.

1495. Dr. TRAHAN.—How would that increase the number of boys?—It may induce persons in the county who are sending their children elsewhere to send them to the college.

1496. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But for a parent who had to send his son to a boarding school it would make very little difference whether the boarding school was in the county or not?—It would not, but at present the facility for sending boys from country districts is greater, we have now larger railway communication.

1497. I don't understand any large proportion of day boys to come by train, one boy is said to come from Tulla?—There is no railway communication with Tulla, but there is to Corcfin and along that district to Ennistymon and Midgova.

1498. Are there any Protestant families of the gentry or middle class living in that district who would send their sons there?—There are about Corcfin, I know there is one who has had some of his children as boarders at the school, and there are other families in the neighbourhood whose children are growing up.

Dr. Cullen sworn.

Oct. 12, 1881.
Dr. Cullen.

1499. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Can you give us any advice or information about Erasmus Smith's School?—At present I have very little knowledge about the matter, but I wish to direct your attention, for one moment only, to the intention of the founder, which has been departed from very materially, and I think you should have regard to it, that is, that you should provide for technical education and sending out apprentices to be educated as tradesmen, that was one of the principal things intended by the founder, he was a practical man, as I pretend to be myself, and I would suggest that you should take that view of the case.

1500. I suppose you are aware that the Ennis School was not mentioned in the original instruments?—I am aware of that.

1501. We hear a great deal about technical education, but when we come to find out what people mean by it, it is not so easy. What class of education do you think would carry out the founder's intentions and at the same time be accepted by the people?—You might send out boys to learn practical trades; we require a number of tradesmen about here, and they have exceedingly good wages and employment, masons and carpenters, we would require plumbers (for we have a supply of water, and find it difficult to get plumbers), and tailors and smiths.

1502. How would you propose to teach them these trades in the school?—I would have a workshop in connexion with the school, and I would pay for it out of the funds of the Erasmus Smith School, you have those at your disposal, and you are bound to carry out the founder's intentions.

1503. In Limerick where they have an industrial school teaching trades, no later than yesterday I was informed by the manager that they were actually obliged to send the boys to whom they had taught these trades to America, because they could not get into the trades in this country after being taught in those institutions?—I don't think it would be desirable to send boys away, but when they are sent away it would be desirable that they should be enabled to live independently, and send home money to their friends. One of the principal intentions of the founder was to provide education for industrial people, trades people of all classes. As to scientific and classical education, that is abundantly provided for, and the Governors of the Erasmus Smith Schools expend a large sum of money in having English schools teaching English.

1504. They have withdrawn the English School grants wherever they could?—I did not know that, it would be most desirable to divert to other uses the supplies given to those English schools which are quite unnecessary, when we have National schools. Those funds might be diverted to the teaching of trades, and what is now so fashionable, technical education. And you might connect it with the large buildings you have here, and establish a workshop, and in that way it would be useful to the people. I know several tradespeople in this town who earn 6s. a day.

1506. Do you think the tradespeople would object with any great fervor, a proposal to establish a school in the town to teach trades which would lead directly to a very great increase in the number of artisans in Ennis?—I think trades might be taught by sending a boy to be resident with a master, you might send him out for £12 or £20 a year, and at the end of two years he would be able to support himself, right well, he would be self-supporting and he would pay the fee which you would have advanced for him, and the master would take him for such an amount of money.

1507. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Would the scholars generally be willing to learn these trades at school here in Ennis?—The present pupils would not, but the children of tradespeople, if you taught them you would find them coming to you and saying, "Send me out to be bound to a carpenter, send me out to be bound to a mason, send me out to be bound to a plumber."

1508. Dr. TRAILL.—Would not that class of education be better attached to the National schools than to Erasmus Smith's?—I don't go into that at all, let me say you have money, and should apply it in that way.

1509. Would not the primary schools be a better place to have these industrial operations taught in than in a Grammar School?—I don't see what difference there would be where they are taught.

1510. Would it not be very difficult to mix up in a Grammar School, classics and the teaching of plumbing and carpentry?—I don't say I would teach it in the school but out of the funds of the Erasmus Smith endowment.

1511. Then you would close the school?—Oh, no.

1512. But you cannot do both, there is only these endowments?—But there is plenty of money.

1513. Where is the money?—In Erasmus Smith's School endowment funds.

1514. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We investigated their accounts in Dublin, and unfortunately know how low money they have got?—I know too, they have £8,000 a year.

1515. Dr. TRAILL.—That is, they ought to get it of their hands, but they don't get it now?—They don't get it now, but that state of things will not last always.

1516. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You rise a bit the great want of the place is industrial training, and these buildings might be made available for this purpose?—To a great extent. What Erasmus Smith provided by his will and charter was that they should send out boys to be apprenticed, that is what I want you to do.

1517. There is no Model School in Ennis, or any school giving a superior education to which Protestants go?

Rev. Mr. Griffith.—No, there is not.

CHRISTIAN SCHOOLS, ENNIS.

Rev. Brother McNally sworn.

Rev. Brother McNally.

1518. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are you one of the Christian Brothers engaged in teaching the Christian Schools in Ennis?—Yes.

1519. Your buildings are near the Courthouse?—Yes.

1520. How are they held?—By lease.

1521. Is the lease to members of the Order?—I think so, I think the principal is Mr. Maxwell, there may be others in the lease.

1522. I presume all your trustees are Roman Catholics?—I think so.

1523. Are the people Roman Catholics also?—Yes, we have no Protestants.

1524. Have you any endowment or property connected with the school?—None that I know of.

1525. Except the buildings and residence house?—If you can call that an endowment, but we pay a rent of £21 10s. yearly.

1526. What number of boys have you attending?—We had 321 in school yesterday.

1527. How many brothers are engaged in teaching?—Four.

1528. How are the funds supplied for maintaining the school?—By subscription.

1529. You have no money endowments, and if you had, it would not be within this Act of Parliament?—None that I know of.

1530. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Then you don't want us to interfere with you?—Except you could do us any good.

1531. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What is the difficulty which prevents the Christian Brothers from getting grants from the National Board?—I think nothing but their own opinion, that is that they don't wish to comply with the rules of the Board.

1532. Do you know what the rules are that prevent them getting grants?—I cannot speak with authority, but I think it probably consists in the Brothers not being allowed the use of religious emblems in school.

1533. I believe there is also the point about the use of your own books?—I think that would be yielded by the Commissioners, I was given to understand so.

1534. Lord Justice NASH.—Suppose the rules of the Commissioners were so altered that you could take advantage of the National Education grant, and were paid in the same proportion as the ordinary lay teachers, do you think that would supply a sufficient endowment for the use of your school?—I think so.

1535. That would supply your purpose?—I think so.

The sitting then terminated.

Oct. 12, 1887.

Rev. Brother

PUBLIC SITTING—THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1887.

Oct. 13, 1887.

At the Grammar School, Tipperary.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NASH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.Sc., ARTHUR TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., was in attendance.

ERASMUS SMITH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Rev. W. B. Lindsay, LL.D., sworn.

1536. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—When were you appointed head master here?—1875.

1537. At the time you were appointed what was the condition of the school?—There were no boys here, for six months I think there had not been any, or one or two day boys at the outside.

1538. With what number of boys did you open the school?—Forty, all boarders.

1539. What is your present number?—Sixty-seven boarders and fifteen day boys.

1540. What have been the numbers since you came?—Very constant for five years; I had sixty-five which is my full number, then it went down to forty-two, and then it got up to what it is now.

1541. What is the cause of the fluctuation?—I think it was because I was by myself here, I lost my wife.

1542. What number of boarders is the school intended to accommodate?—Fifty.

1543. How are you enabled to accommodate sixty-seven?—I have two rooms in my own part of the house as additional dormitories.

1544. Where do the day boys come from?—From the town of Tipperary, and some from about five miles out, Banaha and Kilsheena.

1545. Do they come by train?—No, they all drive.

1546. What are the fees for boarders?—Fifty guineas.

1547. And for the day boys?—They vary, eight guineas for English, Latin, and Greek, two guineas for French and two guineas for German, twelve guineas would include French, German, all the English subjects and drawing.

1548. Are all the boys learning classics?—About half a dozen are not. Boys going in for banks chiefly, all the younger boys are learning Latin and Greek except the very small boys.

1549. Do you prepare directly for the University?—Yes.

1550. What proportion of your boys go to universities?—I should think about eighty per cent. They all go to Trinity College.

1551. Have you sent any pupils to the Royal University?—Only two.

1552. Did those boys go for scholarships?—They both got mathematical scholarships at Cork, they lived in Cork.

1553. From what parts of Ireland do the boarders come?—Chiefly the south, from Cork and Tipperary, a few from about Dublin.

1554. Is there any other boarding school competing with you in this part of Ireland?—There is a school at Limerick, and a school at Clonmel.

1555. These are schools capable of giving the same class of instruction as you give here?—I think so.

1556. We saw yesterday the Ennis School also, have you any boys from the county Clare?—Yes.

1557. How many?—Not more than three.

1558. Have you any boys from county Limerick?—Several.

1559. What assistance do you get from the endowment?—The school-house, and about nineteen English acres of land.

1560. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY (reading).—We have it here, seventeen acres two rods twelve perches.

1561. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you hold the house and land free?—At £10 14s. a year.

1562. Do you pay that rent to the governors or to a landlord?—To the governors.

1563. I presume that off that quantity of land you can get supplies for the school?—Yes, vegetables and milk but not butter.

1564. You have sufficient land besides for playgrounds, cricket, and football grounds?—Quite enough.

1565. Is the land suitable?—Very suitable.

1566. Is the house suitable for the number of boys that you have?—Yes, we are short of school room because of having to use the dining hall, otherwise it is a very suitable house.

1567. You use the dining hall as an additional schoolroom?—Yes.

1568. How is your school divided as to classes?—Into six forms.

Rev. Dr.
Lindsay

Oct. 15, 1906.

Rev. Dr.
Molloy.

1562. Then it is arranged on the English system?

—Yes.

1570. What staff of assistants have you?—Four assistants.

1571. What money do you get from the endowment, what is paid to yourself?—£100.

1572. And what sum for assistant masters?—£30 each for two, that is £100 altogether.

1573. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Then £300 is the entire grant you get from the Board of Erasmus Smith?—Yes.

1574. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—What do the board do for you with respect to your buildings?—They keep the outside entirely in repair, and any large work inside, such as extensive repairs or alterations, I have to do all ordinary internal repairs.

1575. What is the arrangement with respect to the furniture and appliances of the school?—Most of it is now mine. There are nine desks in the school-room, and seven of these belong to the Board; they have four tables in the dining hall, the rest are mine. The chairs are mine, and most of the forms are mine. The beds are mine, except in one dormitory. Some of the heavy articles of furniture belong to the Board, but all the rest are mine.

1576. What are the religious denominations of your pupils?—Chiefly Church of Ireland, I have no "Romanists."

1577. Have you any other Protestant denominations?—Four Presbyterian day boys; all the boarders are Church of Ireland.

1578. To what departments do your four assistants belong?—One classical, one mathematical, one for the junior boys, and one master that teaches French, German, and drawing.

1579. Are they all resident?—Yes.

1580. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Is your French master a foreigner?—He comes from Zurich.

1581. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—What are their salaries?—The classical master gets £300 a year, and his board, laundry, and medical attendance; the mathematical the same. The other two masters get £100 a year each.

1582. Then you pay £600 a year to assistant masters?—In money, besides the expenses.

1583. Then I suppose the subvention of the Board does not go near paying even their expenses and maintenance?—Oh, no; they consider that the rent, over and above the salary, is worth nearly £100 a year each.

1584. The school has been consistently and consistently successful since you have been here?—The drop I speak of only lasted for about nine months; for the whole thirteen years I have been here it has been an average of sixty-five.

1585. Have you applications for a greater number of boys to come in?—There are eight boys now waiting to come in. I had eighty-one boarders at one time, but I took an extra house in the town for them.

1586. Why did you discontinue the additional boarding-house?—There was too much expense and trouble, it did not pay.

1587a. If you had additional house accommodation here would you be able to receive more boarders?—Just now and then I would.

1587. How have your boys succeeded in the different places they went to?—Very well at Trinity College, and the Intermediate examinations.

1588. What number did you send to the Intermediate this year?—Twenty-nine.

1589. What were the results?—We got three exhibitions, and three prizes.

1590. Do you find the Intermediate examinations interfere at all with their preparation for the university?—No.

1591. Do you find the course convenient and useful?—Very convenient. The only class it would at all interfere with is the head class which is preparing for college.

1592. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—That is because the books required in the languages for entrance into Trinity College are different from those on the Intermediate programme?—Yes; but it is more than made up for by making the boys read other courses than they are preparing for.

1593. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you find, in the head class, the course of the Intermediate Board too short as compared with the university course?—No; it seems very well being short, if it was longer they would not be able to go on with it, a great deal of it is in parallel lines.

1594. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The only difference is in the text books prescribed?—Yes.

1595. Do your boys generally go up to the university in the same year in which they pass in the senior grade?—They generally pass in the senior grade in June, and go into the university in October.

1596. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Have you found any difficulty where a boy got an exhibition, say in the middle grade, in his keeping his exhibition in the senior grade, and the same year going into Trinity College?—No.

1597. Have you had boys who got exhibitions in June in the senior grade, and afterwards got good places in Trinity College?—Yes; only one boy I can think of now, but a great number of them hold exhibitions, and get exhibitions in Trinity in the following October. It is improbable that they would get an exhibition in June before they enter, because we prepare them chiefly in the Trinity College examinations, and make the Intermediate course to serve their education merely as it occurs.

1598. Do you consider the Intermediate examinations as they are at present conducted, a reasonably fair test of a boy's progress and ability?—Yes, I do.

1599. Of course always subject to the caveat that there is no real competition?—Yes.

1600. Is there anything you can suggest in reference to the school, that would be likely to secure its continuing as useful and successful as it is now?—Do you mean what I should wish if I had my own way as regards the spending of money on it?

1601. Yes, and management generally?—A grammar and extra classes are the only things I could think of.

1602. Have you any appliances for experimental physics?—No.

1603. Does your Board supply anything of that sort?—I have never asked them, as I don't wish for it. I know they have supplied it to another school that asked for it.

1604. Is there any demand here for education of a practical kind?—No, I have never heard of it.

1605. Dr. TRAILL.—How do you account for having so few boys as fifteen from a town like Tipperary out of all that can come?—None of the "Romanists" come to us.

1606. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do boys preparing for commercial pursuits attend your school?—There are some going into banks.

1607. Do all the boys in Tipperary who propose becoming business men come to this school for their education?—All the Church boys do.

1608. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the Church population of Tipperary, and the Protestant population generally?

Rev. Mr. HANNA.—About 250 or 300.

1609. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—As far as you know all the boys of the class in life who want superior education and belong to the Protestant denominations attend your school at present?—Yes.

1610. And their number is about fifteen?—Yes.

1611. Has there been much fluctuation in the number of the day boys?—It varies from twelve to sixteen.

Oct. 22, 1888.

Rev. Dr.
Lindsay.

1611. I see that Mr. Mahaffy in 1870 reported that at that time he found five assistants, forty-eight barbers, and twenty-eight day boys, of whom seventeen were Roman Catholics, in the school?—I suppose he got it from me, but I don't recollect it.

1612. Has there been any Intermediate School established for Roman Catholic boys in your neighbourhood since then?—Not nearer than Emily.

1613. What was that established?—I don't know, there was one established about three years ago, because our superintendent was the head master of it and it broke up, and then I heard since there was another one established.

1614. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How far is Rockwell from this?—About sixteen miles.

1615. Lord Justice FRASER.—Have you any school library?—Only a small one that the boys themselves have subscribed for.

1616. Mr. Mahaffy on the former occasion reported that there was a want of a school library and that vast well consumers?—Yes.

1617. Dr. TRAILL.—Do the boys care much about books?—All the books in their library at present are story books.

1618. You don't suppose they want books of reference?—No.

1619. Lord Justice FRASER.—Don't you think that a schoolboy requires other books besides books of reference?—Yes, but useful books would not be taken out.

1620. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—An interesting book tends to promote a taste for reading?—The books that are taken out principally are Dickens' works.

1621. I see this is called Tipperary Free Grammar School; in what sense is it a free school?—The Governors appoint day boys free here now and then.

1622. How many?—I don't know that there is any limit to their numbers.

1623. How many are there at present?—I think three.

1624. Three free boys out of sixty-seven hardly entitles a school to be called a free school.

1625. Lord Justice FRASER.—How are the free boys appointed?—The parent makes application to the governors of the school through me, he fills in a printed form and the board decides as to whether he should be admitted free or not, whether he is poor enough.

1626. Is there any competition for free admissions?—No.

1627. You are aware that the Governors have competitors in Dublin for free admissions to their schools there. Have they sought to establish anything of the kind here?—No, every boy who seeks for free admission if he can satisfy the Governors that he is entitled to it for poverty they give it.

1628. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Then I suppose there are no poor Protestants?—No, I have only known the Governors to refuse one.

1629. Professor DOUGHERTY.—For what reason?—They never give the reason.

1630. To what denomination did that boy belong?—Church of Ireland.

1631. Lord Justice FRASER.—Are the free boys taught and treated in all respects like the others?—Yes.

1632. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you ever known a presentation to the foundation of a boy who did not belong to the Church of Ireland?—Frequently, all except one I have now, I think have been free not belonging to the Church of Ireland. The free boys hitherto have been chiefly Romanists.

1633. Lord Justice FRASER.—Were the free boys educated as Roman Catholics?—I am sure that the religion is never asked. I could find that out from the form of—Appendix B, No. VIII.—mentioned he free admission if you let me show it to you (produced).

1634. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The baptismal certificate which is required would indicate the denomination of the boy, would it not—would it necessarily?—I think it would give a good ground for conjecture.

1635. Professor DOUGHERTY.—"Baptismal certificate" might mean a certificate from the Registrar?—It generally comes from the Workhouse; I don't know the religion of the boys myself, I never inquire. For instance two boys had been here for six months, and until a month ago I did not know what their religion was.

1636. Then you don't give religious instruction?—Not to day boys.

1637. Lord Justice FRASER.—What are the hours of attendance for the day boys?—From nine to twelve, and from one to three. On Wednesday and Saturday an hour shorter.

1638. Could you tell us the largest number of free boys you ever had?—I don't think I have ever had more than six free day boys.

1639. Have you ever been without any?—No.

1640. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do the Governors accept a certificate from the Registrar as equivalent to this baptismal certificate which they ask for? They ask for "a baptismal certificate signed by the proper authority"?—They accept any reasonable certificate that the boy is under age.

1641. What is the usual certificate?—It comes down from the Clerk of the Union.

1642. Lord Justice FRASER.—They are not Workhouse boys?—Oh, no.

1643. Then it is the local registrar's certificate?—Yes.

1644. That would be a certificate of registration; it would not be a baptismal certificate in the strict sense?—It entitles the baptism on it.

1645. What exhibitions and prizes are open to your boys going into Trinity College?—Each year there is one of £50 for five years, and one of £25 for five years, along with free rooms. They are not attached to this school, they belong to the four Erasmus Smith schools. I have not always got them.

1646. When you say there is one of £50 and one of £25, are there only the two exhibitions to be competed for each year?—That is all.

1647. Have you on any occasion got them both?—Yes, frequently.

1648. Where had you been before you came here?—At Newport School, about twenty-two miles from this, under the Incorporated Society.

1649. How long had you been there?—Three years.

1650. Was that the same class of school as this?—It was a house that was given me free. There was no endowment except the house and some acres of ground rent free.

1651. Is that still open?—No.

1652. Dr. TRAILL.—You brought your forty boys I suppose from that?—Yes.

1653. Were they all boarders there?—No, there were five or six day boys.

1654. Lord Justice FRASER.—So that during your time at Newport it appears to have supplied the want that at that time was not supplied by this school?—Yes.

1655. Dr. TRAILL.—Is Newport closed now?—Yes.

1656. What has become of the buildings?—They are taken by a farmer in the neighbourhood.

1657. The Incorporated Society have stopped using it?—As a school.

1658. Was that in consequence of the success of this school?—There was a master there after I left, and then it was turned into a barracks, and now it has been taken by a farmer.

1659. Where are the Erasmus Smith estates do you know—in this neighbourhood?—I believe so, but I don't know for certain.

1660. Is not the school built on the property of Erasmus Smith?—Yes.

1661. Do you know whether there is any adjoining ing property of his?—I know. Solobend belongs to it and that is about two miles distant.

1663. Have you ever had any applications from sons of tenants to be admitted?—Not to my knowledge.

1664. Nor, as far as you know either, on the form of application or elsewhere do the tenants appear as having any additional claim on the endowment beyond anyone else?—No.

1665. You don't know the estate sufficiently to know whether there are any Protestant tenants upon it?—No, I do not know anything about them.

ERASMUS SMITH'S ENGLISH SCHOOL.

Rev. David Hodson, M.D., M.P.

Rev. David

1666. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You are the Rector of Tipperary?—Yes, since 1885.

1667. What is the position of the Erasmus Smith English School in Tipperary?—When I came here I found that the late rector had been receiving the rent of the school-house, that is over near the railway station, and two acres of land attached to it, and he also received a grant, so I was informed, of £18 a year towards the payment of the teacher.

1668. Is the house out of which he got the rent still let to a tenant?—Yes.

1669. Did you continue to receive the same amount?—No, the grant was taken from me when I came here because at that time there was no school. There was only one boy, and they (the Government) notified to me they would withdraw the whole grant. Then I found a school was needed, and they continued to me the grant of the rent of the school house, but did not continue the grant of £18 a year.

1670. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the amount of the rent of the school house?—Since 1884, when I commenced the school, it has averaged £10 19s. 9d. a year.

1671. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Has it been rising or falling?—It has been stationary.

1672. Is it regularly paid?—No, it is not regularly paid. I received it from the agent. I have nothing to say to collecting it.

1673. Who is the agent?—Mr. Sanders, of Sandford Park.

1674. What is the state of the property out of which the rent issues?—There is a very good house and very good land.

1675. Have you reasonable security for your £10 a year?—I receive it as long as the Board desires to give it to me, if my school went down they need not continue to give it.

1676. Do you happen to know whether that house was originally a school-house?—It was.

1677. Where is your school held?—I have rented a house in the centre of the town for £10 a year.

1678. What number of children have you attending the school?—Thirteen at present.

1679. Is it a primary school?—It is taught by a female teacher, I suppose it is what you would call a primary school.

1680. The Board have never increased the salary?—No.

1681. Dr. TRAILL.—You pay £10 rent out of the £31?—You may say the rent and taxes I pay for the school-house is met by the grant from the Board.

1682. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Would the premises out of which you get £10 a year be suitable for a school?—Dr. Hall, my predecessor, thought they would not be suitable and gave them up, they are away beyond the Fair Green, and he found it very difficult to get the little children to attend, and there are several days when they could not come on account of the cattle being there.

1683. Dr. TRAILL.—Is not the house there value for more than the sum you receive?—Yes, it is, but there is a difficulty I understand about getting the rent.

1684. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Is the house a shop or a residence?—It is occupied by a farmer who lets the old school-house as lodgings, and generally taking there are soldiers lodging in it.

1685. It is not what we call an agricultural holding?—I don't suppose so. I don't even know what rent the man is paying, but I take whatever I get from Mr. Sanders.

1686. What other help have you for the school?—I get £5 from the Diocesan Education Board, and the school-fee amount to about £5 more, and we had a bazaar.

1687. Are the children all members of your own congregation?—All but two, there are two Presbyterians.

1688. Is there a Presbyterian congregation in Tipperary?—There is a small one.

1689. Is there any other primary school under Protestant management in Tipperary?—No.

1690. Are these the only available Presbyterian children?—They are. There are two lads (in the Grammar School), and two with me.

1691. Are there no children in connexion with the Presbyterian congregation?—There are the only children of that class that require free education.

1692. Dr. TRAILL.—How do you get £5 school-fee for your few children?—They pay me in a quarter, at least they are supposed to pay in a quarter.

1693. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Have you any connexion with the National Board?—No, I cannot at present get any connexion with the National Board.

1694. Why not?—In the first place my numbers are so small.

1695. But your numbers would not prevent your getting inspectors, books, and supplies free?—I must have an average of fifteen for six months, and keep up that average to get recognition. I suppose they would give me inspection and books. But the amount of books required for a small school like this is very little, inspection I would value greatly, but there are other difficulties.

1696. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What books do you use?—National School books principally.

1697. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—What are the difficulties?—I get £5 a year from the Diocesan Education Board, and I would come to get that if I had inspection.

1698. In your diocese, in connexion with the National Board a disqualification from getting a grant from the Diocesan Board?—I am ashamed to say it is.

1699. Dr. TRAILL.—What diocese is it in?—Cork and Emly.

1700. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—How do you hold the school-house?—I am personally responsible for it from year to year. I am the tenant myself.

1701. You don't appear to have any property that would make it really of any use to you to form a local governing body for your school?—No; I think there is nothing worth that.

1702. I see that the house now let with two acres of land at £10 a year was originally built at an expense of £216 1s. 2d.?—It is a splendidly-built house.

1703. Dr. TRAILL.—Why did the Board withdraw their grant from you?—There was no school here.

1704. Why did they not restore it to you when you got a school, for this is just the reason they assigned for taking away all our grants from us in the north, that they had to supply the south?—I know I am fully in want of money.

1703. What salary do you pay your teacher?—£35 a year, and I give her two tons of coal and some attendance.

1704. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Then, in point of fact, you are not able to pay such a salary as would be adequate for a first-class teacher?—No, and I have no funds. I run short of money.

1707. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you a collection in your church for it?—No, but I get subscriptions for it.

1708. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—What assessment has your congregation to pay for the maintenance of the parish church?—£180.

1709. They have other demands on them?—A great number.

1710. What is the whole number of parishioners?—About 250.

Rev. D. Humphreys, O.C., sworn.

1711. I am not prepared, my lord, to give any evidence, but I would be most happy to give a statement of what education is provided in the locality. There is a very great need here of intermediate education.

1712. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—What is your position in Tipperary?—One of the curates. Canon Cahill is the parish priest.

1713. What schools have you in Tipperary?—The Christian Brothers have a school, which is a primary school and an intermediate school combined.

1714. Lord Justice NABUL.—What is the class of intermediate instruction given there?—To prepare for the Intermediate course, I have heard from the Brother superior that they don't teach Greek.

1715. Do they teach Latin?—Yes, French and Natural Philosophy.

1716. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—How many boys are receiving intermediate education?—I could not tell you the exact number—about fifty.

1717. Is there any higher school than that in Tipperary or the neighbourhood?—No.

1718. What is the nearest school at which a classical education is given?—There is one in Dean, about nine miles off.

1719. How is that maintained?—It is taught by a priest, who is chaplain to the convent, and he is maintained principally by the fees he gets from his pupils. Then there is a school, I think at Killybeg. I am not certain it is there yet. It was there some time ago; it was what is called a classical school.

1720. Do you know anything of the school at Enly?—No.

1721. What number of Christian Brothers are there at the school here?—Four teaching, I think.

1722. How are their stipends obtained?—They have a collection every year in the parish, and they get some school-fee.

1723. What provision is there for the education of girls?—The Convent Schools, and the National Schools of the parish. In the Convent Schools there are about 470 on the rolls.

1724. Do you know whether they take any intermediate pupils or board the pupils at the Convent?—They have what is called a select school for the better class of children, it is still under the National Board.

1725. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Of what order are the Nuns?—Sisters of Mercy.

1726. They have a National School as well as the select school?—Their school is divided into a select school and schools not select, but the two classes of schools are under the Board.

1727. The pupils of the select school pay a fee, I suppose?—Yes; besides that they have an industrial school of over 100 children.

1728. Lord Justice NABUL.—In the case of Catholic boys that require to be educated in classics, where do they get their education?—Some of them attend the Christian Brothers' schools, others go away to boarding schools throughout the country, and Jesuit Colleges.

1729. Are there many boys of that description requiring classical education?—I should think there would be a great many in the place, it is a populous district.

1730. What is the population of the town?—I have heard it is about 7,500, including the military garrison and the poorhouse. There are attending the female schools about 1,000 children, including a number of little boys, and the male schools about 500 children.

1731. What is the nearest Catholic boarding school to Tipperary?—Rockwell.

1732. How many miles is that?—About thirteen, Thurloe is over twenty.

1733. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do the Catholics here derive any benefit from the Erasmus Smith endowment?—None whatever.

1734. Have they any claim upon the endowment?—I cannot say, I don't know the history of the endowment.

1735. Do you know where the estates are situated from which the endowment is derived?—I think there are some of the estates in Oola, and some about Thurloe.

1736. Are there any Catholic tenants on these estates?—I should think nearly all are Catholic tenants.

1737. Do you know that Erasmus Smith stated in his will he intended the foundation to be available for the benefit of the children of tenants on his estates?—I do not.

1738. Ought they not to look into that, and see whether they are entitled to any benefit from the endowment?—I would be most happy to do so, if I thought it would be of any use.

1739. Lord Justice NABUL.—We held an inquiry in Dublin as to the origin of the endowments and the claims upon them, and the Catholics were represented before us upon that occasion.

1740. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—And we are obliged to settle our scheme in accordance with the founder's intention.

1741. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you observe that in the will of the founder he makes the teaching of the catechism prepared by the Assembly of divines at Westminster obligatory; would you consider it inconsistent with your duty towards your Roman Catholic children to have them instructed in that?—I would consider it obligatory on me to have them instructed in the Catholic catechism and no other. If you pushed the will of founders to their logical issues it would go very hard with the Church of England people here far more all their property has been derived from Catholics.

1742. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you happen to know whether there is any teaching of the catechism of the Assembly of divines?—I don't know. I have heard the Rev. Mr. Lindsay say he never inquires into any boy's religion, so, I presume, he does not teach them religion.

Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The evidence we get in Dublin was that, if Catholics come to the schools of Erasmus Smith, they are not taught any religion, they are left to themselves; so the governors have departed from that provision of the will.

1743. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have any of your boys been educated in this school as free pupils?—I am not aware.

1744. Dr. TRAILL.—How long have you been here?—About two years and eight months.

1745. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—During that time Catholic boys have not come to this school?—I have heard one boy did come here, his name is Rice, he is not in the town at present, but the Catholics have been prevented by us from coming here.

1746. Lord Justice FITZGERDON.—They would not come with your approval, though I understand there is no other school where a boy can obtain a classical education unless he goes away as a boarder!—Except, as I explained, the Christian Brothers' school.

1747. These Latin only is taught, and that is very limited!—Yes.

1748. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you observe another restriction Erasmus Smith puts on, "to exclude the children out of Primate Usher's schoolship and explain the same to them," which "I desire may be observed on the penalty of forfeiting their place"?—Yes. Just in general I wish to say there is no place in an acquainted with in which an Intermediate school is more required than Tipperary.

1749. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Have you many Catholic children whose parents would be anxious to get an Intermediate education for them?—Oh, very many, not only in the town, but the country round.

1750. Do many of them go to Rockwell?—Yes.

1751. And they find that expensive; they would rather have a day school at home?—Yes.

1752. Lord Justice NAIRN.—We heard at Limerick in the case of Semin College that boys came from Tipperary to the day school?—Yes.

1753. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you know whether there is any demand for technical education in this locality?—I should think so, but I think the people know nothing about it.

1754. Lord Justice FITZGERDON.—What industry is there here?—There is a woollen factory at Banah.

1755. What provision is there in Tipperary for giving girls a good education?

Rev. Mr. HANON.—None, I have girls in my school of course.

1756. I mean for girls who want teaching in the higher subjects?

Rev. Mr. HANON.—There is no provision except there are some private teachers in town.

1757. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How many Protestant girls are getting a higher education here?

Rev. Mr. HANON.—The Presbyterian minister has a school in which he has a few girls.

1758. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What is the character of that school?

Rev. Mr. HANON.—I know nothing about it except that he teaches children.

1759. Lord Justice FITZGERDON.—Do you know of any girls from the neighbourhood going up to the Intermediate examinations?

Rev. Mr. HANON.—I do not.

1760. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Does he profess to give an Intermediate education?—I don't think so, I never heard that he prepared any one for examinations.

1761. Does he live in Tipperary?—Yes, about a mile outside, but I fancy from what I have heard there are very few attending.

1762. Lord Justice FITZGERDON (to Mr. Lindsay).—Have you ever thought of the system they have in the north of Ireland of giving girls education in the advanced subjects they went along with the boys?—No, I think it is impossible, I have more boys than I have room for, I mean as day boys.

The inquiry then concluded.

Oct. 12, 1887.

PUBLIC SITTING—THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Cashel.

Present.—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERDON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIRN, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.Sc., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., W.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., was in attendance.

* CASHEL CORPORATION NATIONAL SCHOOL.

1763. Lord Justice FITZGERDON.—We appointed to come here to-day in order to take evidence about two educational endowments. The first is an endowment created by the Corporation of Cashel, apparently, therefore, derived from a public source.

Very Rev. Dean Quirk sworn.

1764. I am parish priest of Cashel and as such the manager of the male and female parish school. I have always got £150 a year from the Town Commissioners which I expended on those schools, and supplied them every year with the account of every shilling I laid out.

1765. Do you know how that sum is charged upon their property?—I could not say; there was a scheme passed by the Master in Chancery, in Dublin, about 1844. There was a lawsuit, one of my predecessors, Dean McDonnell, demanded payment of this sum from the Commissioners. At the time they had some doubts about paying it, but they were compelled to give £100 for all time to come to the parish priest of Cashel, to distribute it between the male and female National schools. Immediately after I came here there was accidentally a good sum of money got from other sources, and the people immediately went on for establishing a school of Christian Brothers, thinking the National School was not doing so well for their boys. There were a great many complaints made to ourselves, and I said "if the people wish it, and it can be done, with all my heart, let it." There was a meeting of the parishioners, and great anxiety shown to bring in the Brothers, and they were brought in and a school established for them. Then there was a movement made to change the scheme in the Court in Dublin, and to give the Christian Brothers what we thought would be a reasonable share of this £150—£80 to the female school, and £100 to the two male schools. One of the principal male teachers went away, as he thought it to his interest, as the school broke up to a considerable extent when the Christian Brothers opened their school. The next thing we did was to try to get the scheme changed, and give the Christian Brothers a proportion of the £100 a year. It was tried at the time the Protestant Church was disendowed, and it went before one of the judges, who said this was no time for endorsements and he would not listen to it at all, it was treated very curtly. However, I got a statement drawn up by the parishioners, and it was submitted to two Queen's Counsel, who studied the whole matter; and they gave me the opinion that I was perfectly competent, as parish priest, to distribute this sum, dividing it among the schools in proportion to the good they were doing.

1768. Lord Justice NAUM.—What was the date of the first Chancery scheme?—I think 1853.

1767. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you happen to have the case you submitted to counsel?—I have (produced). It was to Mr. Green, Q.C., and Mr. Heron, Q.C.

1768. This will give us the whole history:—"19th January, 1843, a decree was made in the case of the Attorney-General at the relation of Robert Stinch against Farnedfather and others." I suppose the defendants in that suit were the Town Commissioners?—I should think so.

1769. (Reads case and opinion.) To put it shortly, Mr. Dean, it appears you were advised you might cause giving the money to the Christian Brothers if you liked, and if you did not like you should go into Chancery?—I was not to be overcautious for what I did, let them stop me if they could.

1770. Well what did you do?—I gave the surplus to the Christian Brothers and got good value for it.

1771. Do I understand that at present the Charter school premises and £100 a year are applied to the Christian Brothers?—The Charter school premises belong to the Christian Brothers at present, because they had double the numbers when we made the donation. We gave the larger house to the larger school, and the National school is going on very well; I did everything I could to keep it up.

1772. How is the house held in which the National school is?—The house, I suppose, would measure over 60 feet by 30 feet. The Town Commissioners have purchased it; we have it rent free and we are giving it every help and fair play. We never kept them back and they are giving very good work.

1773. Then the Christian Brothers have the old premises?—The Christian Brothers have the old premises where the larger school was when it was established. There is £80 going for female education, and then there is £100 for male education, and we give them all we can.

Rev. Brother Robert Dunn sworn.

1753. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Are you one of the Christian Brothers in charge of the Cusack schools?—Yes.

1754. What is the number on your roll at present?—We would be safe in saying 300—it might be over that.

1755. And your average attendance?—I would say 150.

1756. How many Brothers are engaged in teaching?—Three engaged in teaching, with some assistants, whom we pay. We have two schools. We accommodate our circumstances by using one as a sort of classroom during the day, so that we have combined three rooms into two, and we have two Brothers in one room.

1757. Have you any intermediate class?—We have an intermediate class of about one dozen pupils.

1758. Have you sent any boys up to the Intermediate Examinations?—We have, during the past five or six years.

1759. Have you been able to pass many of the boys?—We have won £300 during that period by exhibitions and prizes, with gold and silver medals.

1760. And all the instruction for that has been given by the community?—By the Brothers.

1761. What were the subjects in which you got prizes?—English and modern languages in the middle 1774. Where is the £80 applied to?—To the Presentation Convent.

1775. Then, in that case, you have no ownership in the house?—No, I give the money for the teaching of the poor—500 poor children.

1776. And there never have been any proceedings since 1873 to restrain you?—No. I think the public are very well pleased.

1777. What are the numbers of the Christian Brothers' school?—I think 100.

1778. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you take a legal opinion about the allocation of the £80 to the Convent schools at the same time that you took the opinion about the Christian Brothers' schools?—The Convent, you know, is a National school, and a very fine one too.

1779. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What number of girls are attending that school?—The average is a little over 300, and the number in the male National school has increased a good deal. The average number between the Christian Brothers and the male National school is about 300 more, divided rather equally between them, and I have always held very fair lines between them, and I think the public generally are very well pleased.

1780. You distribute the money according to what you think the interests are?—I distribute the money considering all the chances the National school teachers get. We have a principal teacher and two assistants, and three monitors. I give the monitors 10s. a quarter, the assistants £1 10s. each, and the principal man £5 each. That is in round numbers about £40 a year, and the Christian Brothers get the other £60. The whole of it is entrusted to the auditor, and I was never put to any trouble about it.

1781. Having regard to this opinion, which really only told you you might continue to pay the money until you were stopped, it probably would be the safest course for you to take to make the thing legal now, and if it really is an arrangement that satisfies the Catholic population of Cusack and yourself, you might have it sanctioned by a scheme?—Yes; I have acted honestly and above board, but at the same time, properly, not very legally.

1782. We should be glad to have from yourself or any of the Town Commissioners who take an interest in the matter about it, if you thought it advantageous, for example, to associate anyone else with yourself, representing the Catholic inhabitants, that could be done?—I would be very glad of that too.

grade, and this year a £10 prize for English and French combined, under grade; also we have got medals in Crotic, with other prizes.

1782. Was the gold medal for English and modern languages combined?—No, for English alone in the middle grade.

1793. Therefore, your boy was first in all Ireland?—Yes.

1794. In what year was that?—1885.

1795. For what calling was that boy preparing?—He is a son of an ex-sub-constable, and he is preparing for the Civil Service with us.

1796. Then are you able to give a more advanced education—is that out of school hours?—Sometimes we give education out of school hours in order to accommodate certain special cases. In one instance I remember the son of a professional gentleman availed of our services for the Royal University. Unfortunately, he had failed twice previously in other hands, and succeeded with us in the first arts examination.

1797. How is the money you get from Dean Quirkie spent?—Some of it for our own support, and the remainder for aid in teaching.

1798. Is the sum for your support limited as in some other places to 240 each?—From the church collections in some places it is limited, but not in all, in some places there is a small sum or endowment which supplements what is received from the parish priest or bishop, as in the present instance.

1793. What proportion of your children pay fees?—A small proportion, at not sixty per cent, and the fees are the smallest possible, not more than twopence weekly.

Dean Quirk.—There are a great number of poor children in Cuskel.

Rev. Brother Dunn.—It would be safer to say fifty per cent. pay.

1800. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is there any superior school nearer than Rockwell?—Nothing nearer than Rockwell.

1801. So that the Roman Catholic inhabitants are dependent on you for all instruction?—They avail of us as far as they require it.

Dean Quirk.—I always found the Town Commissioners as anxious to promote the interests of the school as I was myself.

Rev. Brother Dunn.—One of our pupils, a young lad named Kennedy, followed our instruction through the intermediate grades, and he has now got a very nice position on the Land Commission as Assistant Registrar.

ST. JOHN'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Very Rev. Dean Leach sworn.

1801A. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the Protestant Rector of Cuskel as well as being Dean of Cuskel?—I am.

1802. Do you receive from the Town Commissioners £10 a year under the Charney Scheme?—I do.

1803. How do you apply it?—I apply it towards paying the salaries of the teachers in two schools.

1804. Have you a boys' school and a girls' school?—Yes.

1805. How are the premises held in which your schools are?—They are both vested in the Representative Church Body.

1806. We find there is a record of a bequest from Richard Price under an old grant of 1745, do you get that?—I do, that is from the Incorporated Society, they pay me £13 16s. 11d. half-yearly, and also £15 a year on account of the Manse Trust.

1807. What was the Manse Trust?—Some land left by a lady of the name of Manse and the Incorporated Society between them, they purchased the land, and the £15 a year is given for that land.

1808. That would make up about £40 a year?—£40 18s. 10d.

1809. Twenty pounds from the Charney Scheme makes £60?—Yes, and then we have £18 a year from our Select Vestry.

1810. In your school in connection with the National Board or any other Board?—It is in connection with the Incorporated Society and our Diocesan Board of Education.

1811. How many pupils have you in attendance at the boys' school?—At present but seven on the roll, and six in attendance.

1812. How have the numbers fallen away so much since the last Commission when there were sixteen?—They were children of policemen attending school, and these policemen have been removed.

1813. How many are attending the girls' school?—There are twenty-six on the roll, and twenty in attendance.

1814. How does it occur that there are so very much more girls than boys?—I don't know. All the children coming to the school are of Protestant parentage.

1815. Dr. Traill.—Were all the policemen's children boys?—No.

1816. How is it there is not a falling off in the girls then?—What was the former number of girls?

1817. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Sixteen to seventeen. Are the pupils of your own denomination?—Exclusively so.

1818. Are there any Presbyterians or other Protestant denominations in Cuskel?—No, all members of our Church.

1819. Is your school inspected by the Incorporated Society?—It is, and by Mr. Rodkin, Inspector of the Erasmus Smith Schools.

1820. You are not in connection with the Erasmus Smith endowment?—No, we are not, it was merely a request that Mr. Rodkin would undertake it, and he kindly did so.

1821. On former occasions you were giving something more than primary education at the school, do you still continue to give it?—No, that failed.

1822. What provision is there in Cuskel for intermediate education for Protestants?—None.

1823. What is the nearest school open to them or available?—Thamesy Grammar School, that is not far.

1824. Do you give an account to the Corporation, or merely a receipt each year?—Merely a receipt; I keep a regular account.

1825. And the sum is irregularly paid?—Regularly paid, yearly.

1826. Is this sum charged on landed property of the Corporation?

Mr. Mullins.—It is charged on landed property.

1827. I believe the Cuskel Town Commissioners have a considerable Borough estate?

Mr. Mullins.—Oh, yes, very large.

1828. Have you any scholarships open to you?

Dean Leach.—In connection with the Incorporated Society, one girl went up a short time ago and answered very well, but she was over the age.

1829. Dr. Traill.—How did you come to be connected with the Incorporated Society?—Oh, it was before I was born.

1830. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Have you two teachers?—Yes, a male teacher and a female teacher; the male teacher receives £40 and the female under £30.

1831. How the male teacher any other post?—He is one of our chorists, and receives a salary for that.

1832. Has the female teacher any addition to her salary?—No.

1833. Have you thought at all of placing your school in connection with the National Board?—No, there would be no advantage in doing so. There are a few small boys in the girls' school.

1834. Dr. Traill.—Does the master teach any of the girls?—None.

1835. Do you use all his time on the six boys?—We do.

1836. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How is he qualified?—Very good, he was educated at the Public Institution near Kilkenny.

1837. And the female teacher's qualification?—Very good, she was trained at Kilkenny-place.

1838. Dr. Traill.—Was that under the old arrangement?—Yes.

1839. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long has the master been with you?—Two years.

1840. And the present mistress?—Twelve years.

1841. All the property of your school appears to be already vested in corporate bodies, so that there is no expense or risk about it, the Town Commissioners hold the manse, and the Incorporated Society hold the premises.

Dean Leach.—I supplement it myself with a subscription and there are two or three other subscriptions also.

The inquiry was adjourned.

* PUBLIC SITTING—FRIDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1887.

Oct. 14, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Cork.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIER, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, B.D., D.D., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.P., F.T.C.D., and Professor DODDINGTON, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, junr., was in attendance.

Lord Justice FITZGERSON made an opening statement.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' SCHOOLS.

Rev. Brother James Dominick Burke sworn.

1841. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—You are the Superior of the Christian Brothers' Schools in Cork?—Yes.

1842. How long have you been connected with the schools?—Nearly thirty-six years.

1843. How many establishments have you got in Cork?—Three separate establishments with twenty-two rooms, Penelope Lane, Blarney Lane, and Sullivan's Quay.

1844. How many distinct schools or classes have you got in Penelope Lane?—Twelve distinct schools with lecture gallery and science hall.

1845. What is your staff of teachers there?—The present staff is fourteen brothers and about twenty-two teachers, paid instructors or assistant teachers, former pupils of the schools.

1846. What is their remuneration?—The cost at present is nearly £300 a year for assistant teachers.

1847. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—It has been doubted since the last Commission?—Not exactly doubted but increased a good deal, it was then about £170 or £180.

1848. In the Report it is stated to have been £117 for the year 1878-81?—Then it has been more than doubled.

1849. Lord Justice NAIER.—For how many assistant teachers?—About twenty-nine altogether in the three establishments.

1850. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—How many brothers are at Blarney Lane?—Five.

1851. And at Sullivan's Quay?—Three. There are actually twenty-four members of the order engaged in teaching. I myself teach from time to time, there is another person discharged who also goes through the schools.

1852. Are you superintendent or superior of all three establishments?—Yes.

1853. What is the provision for the maintenance of the brothers, and the sources from which it is derived?—The first source from which the support of the institution is derived is from the foundation, the endowment, the second is from results, from various sources, such as the Intermediate and Kensington, the third a sermon, and the fourth a collection and the gifts of friends through the year.

1854. Lord Justice NAIER.—I suppose you get some school fees?—The school fees we cannot touch; they must be all devoted to the children.

1855. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—But they are devoted to the children in the way of providing books and school requisites?—Yes, and keeping schools in repair, and paying teachers.

1856. Lord Justice NAIER.—Of course they are not sufficient for the maintenance of the schools?—They are not.

1857. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What amount is provided for the maintenance of the Order, is there any rule in this respect about the amount?—There is not, we take the whole together, our place is very large, the grounds very extensive, the house quite ample for the accommodation of twenty-seven members, and taking all into account I think it takes at present £1,500 a year.

1858. Lord Justice NAIER.—Do you include the schools?—No, the house alone, the schools add £600 to that.

1859. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—That would make £2,100?—Yes, but that is by no means sufficient to do the work that we have engaged in, we have over 2,000 on the rolls.

1860. I want first to get the existing position of pecuniary affairs. What further expenditure is there besides the £2,100 for the maintenance of the schools?—At present that is our full income. That has to be made up from various sources.

1861. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you say it is not sufficient for the adequate maintenance of the schools?—It is not.

1862. But it is all you have available for that purpose?—All that we have available.

1863. Dr. TRAILL.—In what respect do you find it not sufficient?—In this, that all the teachers have more than enough to do, we should require for the work we are engaged in, about forty-five or fifty teachers. I find that if our schools were in connection with the Board of Education they would have 50 teachers for that number at least. We have 2,100 on the rolls, with a daily attendance of 1,800, and taking 50 for each person that would be 90 teachers.

1864. That is your present staff?—Yes, but then they would have also persons to superintend, who would go through the rooms and see how things were conducted, and they would have paid monitors or pupil teachers.

1865. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What is the number of your paid monitors now?—Twenty-nine.

1866. The 50 teachers according to the National Board rule would be exclusive of monitors?—Yes.

1867. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You have 2,100 on the roll?—Yes.

1868. I make it out that forty-two teachers would be required if we allow one teacher to every fifty pupils?—I take the average attendance only.

1869. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—How are the pupil teachers divided?—We have from one to two with each brother in the school, some have one, but most have two, and in one case there are three.

1870. What is the division of your classes as regards education?—From the earliest foundation of our schools in Ireland our upper scholastics were always Intermediate schools; our juniors were of course primary, and the same thing prevails at present, not only in Cork, but I may say through all Ireland. We have at present 250 receiving Intermediate education, the remainder are primary.

1871. Where do these 250 receiving Intermediate Education come from, how do they get into the range of Intermediate Education?—They are drafted from school to school according to their progress until at last they attain the upper course where they receive this education.

1872. Are all your 250 pupils drafted from the lower strata of education, or are any of them pupils who come to you as Intermediate pupils at the start?—Very few come from outside, they are nearly all from our own schools.

1873. Are they advanced in your schools for any other cause than as finding that their progress warrants it?—That is all.

1874. In fact they represent the clever boys who have got on quickest?—Yes.

1875. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—About what proportion of the total number in your primary schools eventually come to the Intermediate School; one in three, or one in four, or one in five?—I could not exactly say.

1876. At present you have 250 in the Intermediate class, and your total roll is 2,160?—2,100, that would be about one in eight.

1877. Dr. TRAILL.—Is 250 the number on the roll or in attendance?—The number actually receiving education, we generally have a few absent each day.

1878. Then you would compare 250 with 1,800?—I would compare them with the 2,100, I think.

1879. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—You have 250 on the roll in the Intermediate School, and 2,100 in all the schools. I suppose as you have been a long time carrying on this system, the number now in the schools fairly represents about the proportion that get promoted?—It does. I brought a few of our result sheets taken from the result book of the Intermediate Board for this year to give you an idea of the work done during the year.

1880. Before going to the details of the results I wish to ask what subjects are taught in your Intermediate schools?—The languages, mathematics—

1881. Do you teach Greek?—A little.

1882. Do you send boys up in the Intermediate Examination in Greek?—No.

1883. In Latin I believe you do?—Yes, we passed in Latin last year twenty-eight.

1884. How high do you go in mathematical instruction?—As far as trigonometry.

1885. Inclusive?—Yes, the course of the Intermediate for the senior grade.

1886. What number passed in mathematics last year?—143 in all grades.

1887. What modern languages do you teach?—French and Celtic.

1888. Do you teach any others?—A few have passed in Italian, and we are thinking of introducing German as being extremely useful to clever boys in getting good positions.

1889. Dr. TRAILL.—How much money did you receive in result fees last year?—I have made out the average since we commenced, to be £247 for the eight years since the commencement, out of that there is £100 expenses attending the working of the Intermediate. We have to pay for the forms, for the birth registration, to provide books for the use of the boys, and to get the best editions for the teachers. We calculate it takes £160 out of that to provide all these matters; £100 out of £247 each year.

1890. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—That is to say the extra expenditure which you have to undertake in order to turn these result fees is about £100 a year?—Yes.

1891. You have been more fortunate than other schools, because we have been told in other cases that the extra expenditure is greater than the result fees?—I have no doubt it would be so, and if we were to employ the full number of teachers to do the work that the result fees represent, we should have twice the number of teachers. We calculate instead of having the work done by five Brothers we would want ten.

1892. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—Is all the intermediate work done by five Brothers?—It is done by five Brothers, with the assistance of two paid monitors, and occasionally two or three of the other Brothers might take a class, but the work, I may say, is done by five.

1893. Do your receipts fluctuate much from year to year?—Very much—£298 the first year, £155 the second, the same the third; one year it rose to £368, and last year to £483. But it fluctuates so much we cannot depend upon it. This year it will not be equal to last year at all. That arises from the fact that several of the examination papers were of a very severe character, and so tested the junior children that they were unable to pass.

1894. Do you find much fluctuation in the qualification of the boys one year from another, one class better than another?—Not much; we find them, on an average, making the same.

1895. Your school is so large you would not find it so much so in a smaller number. I see you got, in 1887, 151 successes; new exhibitions, 15; exhibitions retained, 6; medals in Celtic, prizes, 20; passes, 109; special distinctions in the junior grade, first in all Ireland in Celtic, and two seconds, first in Celtic composition, second place in Latin composition, second place in drawing; full score in algebra, and in the middle grade one by full score in arithmetic, and in the senior grade second place in drawing?—Yes.

1896. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—In what subjects were the examination papers too severe?—Junior arithmetic and geometry, and in the senior natural philosophy. The style, too, in which the questions were put in chemistry and philosophy in the junior grade was embarrassing to young children.

1897. Do you find a considerable fluctuation in the standard of difficulty of the papers in successive years?—No, on the whole, we find the papers are very fair, but occasionally some examiner, not understanding the true character of children, sets a paper that would put a very advanced person to his wit to accomplish.

1898. A paper unsuited to the class of pupils going up for examination?—Yes; for instance, the junior geometry paper of this year was of such a character that it would require one to have the propositions of the three books thoroughly by heart, and to write as fast as he possibly could, without one moment's reflection as to what he was doing, in order to get honors in the first paper.

1899. That is, the amount of work was too great?—The amount to be done too great, it left no time.

1900. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—But I suppose there is hardly any system of examination that is not subject to some defects of that kind?—I suppose not.

1901. Taking it as a whole have you found the Intermediate examinations a fair test of the work done?—I have. I find, and our Brothers also find, that they can nearly anticipate the results of the examinations, they can well weigh place all the boys in the order of merit in which they would come out.

1902. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—That is a very good test of the satisfactory character of the examinations?—Yes, we do find it very satisfactory, but occasionally hard papers for the Junior Grade caused a great fluctuation in the number passing; last year the percentage of passes in Ireland was sixty-six, this year it fell to fifty-two, chiefly owing to the few severe papers in the Junior Grade.

1903. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is that because examinations new to the work are usually appointed to examine the Junior Grade?—I cannot say it arises from that cause, because we find men who have never set papers before very considerate in the papers they give. I think it arises from some peculiarity of mind of the examiner, or a very high estimate of the capacities of children.

1904. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it from the want of time allowed, or the great difficulty of the questions?—First from the want of time allowed, and secondly going to the difficult manner in which the questions are proposed.

1905. Distinguishing the questions 1—Yes.

1906. The ideal paper for full marks ought to be one by which the boy should be kept at work as hard as he could, and finish at the end of the hour 1—It so happens sometimes that even if he did all that lay within him he could not accomplish the work.

1907. Rev. Dr. Motter.—I fancy you would wish that a boy should be allowed a little time for thinking!—I think a paper that would not allow that would be defective.

1908. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Have you any natural science teaching 1—Yes, we are very extensive in that department. I may mention that we have teaching Latin at present 70, French 140, and during the past year seven of our pupils matriculated directly from the schools in the Royal University. And I may mention also that we find no difficulty in getting them passed, if they go well through the Intermediate education. Those seven did go through the Intermediate course, and it required only a very short preparation to enable them to pass the matriculation.

1909. Then you find the Intermediate course a good preparation for matriculation 1—The very best.

1910. Professor DONOVAN.—How does the matriculation examination in the Royal University compare in point of difficulty with the Intermediate examination 1—I think a boy who passed the Middle Grade would have no difficulty in passing the matriculation, it would become even easier to him if the authors for the matriculation were the same as those for the Intermediate. The difficulty at present arises from the fact that when they finish the Intermediate examinations in June, they have only then a month or two to look over the special nature in order to prepare for the matriculation examination. But if my arrangement could be made by which the two would be brought in accordance, I think very happy results would ensue from it. As regards philosophy, we have 300 at present learning natural philosophy, and 130 chemistry.

1911. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—What do you teach in natural philosophy 1—We have a science hall of large dimensions, well furnished with scientific apparatus. We have trained the amount there at present for £3,000, all the gifts of friends.

1912. What does that scientific apparatus include 1—It includes all that would illustrate all the branches of natural philosophy, mechanics, heat, light, sound, electricity and magnetism, and we have also a good supply of chemical apparatus.

1913. Have you any instruction that would be specially available for boys going into trades 1—Yes, we have a gas engine of half horse power, a part gift of Messrs Brothers; this engine works a dynamo of 1,000 candle power, and it also works about 33 feet of shafting from which all the little machines in the room are worked. We have also got a lathe, part present from the Britannia Company, thirty-two inches worth, and this we purpose showing the use of to the advanced pupils in the school. We have many other matters that are very useful to boys going on for the mechanical trades. Then, in connection with the school at present, we have an industrial museum, which you will see on the occasion of your visit; this includes the raw material and the stages of the manufactured articles up to the finished article, and we have perhaps about thirty or forty different processes illustrated at present, and from presentations. I have just got lately, I think I shall be able to extend it to twenty more different processes, the manufacture of tinware, pins, hooks and eyes, fish tackle, cutlery, and all kinds of electro-plating, and notions of that kind.

1914. The ordinary trades, shoemaking and carpentry 1—No, we cannot introduce these; they are incompatible with the ordinary working of a day school.

1915. Then you don't look very enthusiastically in mixing up technical instruction of that sort with your teaching 1—As far as I see it cannot be done; you must abridge the amount of literary and scientific matter which is given at present if you introduce trades, and then you must have a set of teachers specially adapted for that. I do not think it is possible for an ordinary teacher of a school to be made up in the mechanical arts, sufficiently to teach boys any trade, or even a part of it, and I think from what I have heard from the best mechanics that any attempt of that kind would only make the boys very indifferent tradesmen, and the work would have to be all gone over again by experts.

1916. You think it is better to keep instruction of that sort separate from school teaching 1—I believe so. If it is to be done at all it must be done after hours.

1917. Professor DONOVAN.—What amount of manual instruction would you give boys in your schools who are looking forward to entering workshops, where they would be apprenticed to different trades 1—I don't think we can at present give any. I have seen some of the technical schools in England—Bradford, Sheffield and Glasgow—and I find the schools are specially set apart for that purpose. There are evening schools for those engaged during the day at various trades. Of course the two things can go together, that is carpentry, fitting business, and machine drawing, together with the languages and the higher mathematics. The boys in those schools I found to be about fifteen or sixteen years of age; they had completed their course in the ordinary schools.

1918. At what age do your boys usually leave your elementary department 1—About twelve.

1919. And you don't think it is possible before that age to give boys, in addition to literary education, any technical instruction, going so far, say, as the use of ordinary tools 1—Yes, I would introduce the use of ordinary tools, we are trying to effect that, but I would limit it to the showing how they were to be used, I don't see that we could at all let the tools into their hands to use them. It would require another set of teachers, the teachers cannot be withdrawn from their present work to attend to that.

1920. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You would teach them to know "a hawk from a handsaw" 1—Yes, and the use of tools.

1921. Dr. TRAILL.—Could you not introduce tradesmen, as at Artisan. One half the boys during half the day are at workshops and come in for literary teaching during the other half of the day, and they change about. Could you not introduce teachers from amongst the ordinary tradesmen so as really to teach them properly 1—I don't think the comparison of Artisan school, or of any Industrial school, with an ordinary day school is at all a fair one; in those industrial schools the children live in the place, they have them all the day, they can arrange the teaching and the trades without any interference with one another. But having the day children from nine in the morning or half past nine until three, you cannot withdraw any of the time from them without great detriment to their secular education, and there is this to be noticed, if you let boys leave the school with a very indifferent English or mathematical education they can never recover that; they can acquire a knowledge of the trades after leaving school, but a defect in their education, made when young, remains, in my opinion, for ever. I would then prefer, by far, to give the children, the very poorest, as far as they can go, a good English education, and then let them learn all the trades they can in the evening or afterwards as far as their circumstances will permit.

1922. Rev. Dr. Motter.—Do you mean in the evening of their school days, or after they leave school 1—I mean after leaving school. But at the same time if a technical school were established in Cork that school could be availed of by boys attending daily in the primary and intermediate schools with great advantage.

1923. Dr. TRAILL.—Of what age?—Fourteen or fifteen.

1924. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—We found in Belfast an evening technical school attended by boys who during the day were engaged at school, or at their own business, earning some little thing for themselves. Is there any institution of that kind in Cork?—There is not.

1925. Do you close your working day at three o'clock?—We do.

1926. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you to feed the children during the day?—No.

1927. How do they last from nine to three?—They bring food with them.

1928. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you think it desirable or not that boys up to the age of fourteen should be left without any manual training—that is, training which teaches them how to use their hands in actually doing some kind of work?—My own opinion is, as I have already expressed it, that it would be better to give them a good education first, and subsequently, when they leave school, to carry on technical education.

1929. Supposing it was possible to bring them to the school outside the ordinary school hours—say, for example, to evening classes—should you then think it desirable they should be taught some sort of manual industry?—I don't mean a trade, but how to use their hands in actual manipulation of tools?—I think that would be most desirable, and it is a thing I would aim at for myself if it could be accomplished.

1930. Your opinion, then, is, that such manual teaching cannot be introduced into the ordinary school hours?—I think not.

1931. But it would be desirable, outside of ordinary school hours, in those cases where it might be found possible?—Yes.

1932. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—But it would require an extra staff to do it?—Yes. If an hour, or a couple of hours, were set apart during the week from the ordinary hours of instruction during the day, with a competent person to teach them, a different staff or an increase to the present staff in any school, I think it might be accomplished.

1933. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there not a good intellectual education itself, irrespective of all books, to be got from teaching boys to use the hand and eye together?—Yes, and so far I think we have introduced that. We have throughout the three establishments introduced drawing from the age of six up to the age of sixteen, and I don't see any better technical instruction for a boy than to know how to use the compass and rule in practical geometry. A distinguished clergyman, Fr. Klein, saw the work going on in our classes, and having a knowledge of what is done in Germany, said that there was no better manual training, no better training for the eye, than drawing, and especially the use of the compass and rule.

1934. Did you ever try modelling?—No; but we teach model drawing.

1935. But modelling with the hands?—No.

1936. Professor DOWDALL.—Do you teach drawing in your elementary department?—We do, from six to sixteen.

1937. What proportion of your boys are learning drawing?—All learn drawing.

1938. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—What are your provisions for art teaching, including drawing?—At present we are in connexion with South Kensington, and we have re-arranged the whole establishment so as to suit the programme that they have laid down. They require seven stages of drawing from the child of six up to the boy of sixteen, and we have to readjust all our classes to meet that requirement. We had a gentleman from Kensington up on yesterday to inquire into the matter. He is the person who drew up the programme, and is much interested in the carrying of it out, because it is a new departure in Kensington. Last year we passed 210 in drawing, we passed 71 in mathematics, a number in wood, light, and bent, and 33 in chemistry. But with regard to the drawing, the schools are now arranged so as to suit their requirements, and in that model drawing is one of the matters required.

1939. Then every boy in his class learns drawing of some sort?—Yes.

1940. How high does the drawing teaching go?—Up to model drawing.

1941. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you find that the knowledge of drawing is of great use to your boys in after life?—We have come to the conclusion that is every man in the world drawing is very important, but it is indispensable to a tradesman, it is the best technical part of his education.

1942. Then, in fact, even for tradesmen, the teaching of drawing is practically laying the foundation of his future success in life?—It is, and we find that the boys who leave our schools and have taken to the mechanical trades have risen in them, have always come to the front.

1943. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—What amount of money are you able to get from South Kensington by way of results fee?—The average is £120 for the two years we are in connexion with them, and we had there in £40 expense in working it.

1944. That includes the necessary appliances?—Yes.

1945. Have you any special expenses for teachers?—No; the Brothers teach themselves.

1946. Does the £40 represent the cost of appliances, and the fees to be paid for notices and entrance?—Yes; all the correspondence and expenses.

1947. How many of your 2,100 boys pay school fees?—We have 590 who pay nothing; we have 600 who pay one penny; 300 who pay two pence; 375 three pence; 243 four pence, and 330 six pence per week.

1948. How are the fees graduated from say six pence up to six pence?—It is left altogether to the parent. On receiving the bill they are asked what sum they could pay to help or subsidize towards keeping the schools in proper condition for the children, and arrangements are made to keep to that.

1949. About how much does your school income amount to in the year?—About £200; that is not sufficient to keep the three establishments in order, we have to supply all the requisites and fees for nearly six months of the year, and then we have to pay school teachers out of that.

1950. What is the qualification for paying nothing?—Simply the circumstances of the parents. They are all very willing and very disposed to give whatever they can, and once they say they are not able to do so we take that as a sufficient guarantee.

1951. Does the inability to pay, once it is established, in any way prevent the boy from being promoted on to a better class?—Oh, no; on the contrary the boys who pay six pence a week are not confined in any particular class; they are children of six, and boys of sixteen. We have boys in our intermediate class who pay nothing at all.

1952. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The payment then is regulated by the capacity of the parents, and not by the educational advantages which the boy enjoys?—Oh, no.

1953. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—Then a quarter of your children are not able to pay a penny a week?—Yes.

1954. What outlet have you for your boys—what becomes of them; what arrangements have you made, if any, for lodging them out in the world?—We have made no arrangement; but from the regulation of the school we are called upon by the gentlemen of the city, of all denominations, to send boys to different offices. This morning I have a call for three to very respectable positions for clerks and workshop business.

1955. Do you teach book-keeping?—We do.

1956. Do you teach shorthand?—Yes; several have gone on to the Press for the last four or five years.

1957. What positions in life have your boys attained to that you could mention?—They have attained to all the professions. A large number of them have gone to the Church. I counted, I think, about 100 who had become priests during my own time.

1958. Do you mean during the thirty-six years?—Yes; that would not represent all.

1959. About what per centage go into the Church?—I could not say, it is spread over so many years, but a great many go on for the Church. And I find from letters from America, and from what I can learn from tourists who come over, that a large number become priests in America, and attain to other professions.

1960. Have you any in good positions in commercial life?—Yes, they attain to the highest in the city, and in the States, and in England.

1961. Are you able to do anything for them at starting in life?—We have a small fund at our disposal which enables us to give an outfit and a little towards the start in life of those that require it.

1962. What is that fund?—A Mr. Fitzgerald of the city left £1,000 to us, he was an old pupil of the school himself and contributed during his life time £30 a year towards the institution, and when dying bequeathed £1,000, two-thirds of which is to go towards the fuel and clothing, the other one-third comes to the community and helps in £9 8s. 2d. a year.

1963. You mean the food and clothing of pupils?—Yes; and then Mr. Nicholas Mahony, of Harney, gives us about £22 annually for the same object.

1964. I presume you limit that to boys who cannot provide for themselves?—Oh, yes, and we have to dispose of it in a very private way. We find any public distribution of charity in that way rather tends to demoralize them than anything else, and when it is done privately the child or his parents receiving it without the knowledge of others, it keeps up his own self-respect.

1965. I believe the principle of your order is combined religious and secular instruction?—Yes, that is the principle from the foundation.

1966. Are the boys in your school all Roman Catholics?—All.

1967. And so of course are all the members of the Order?—Yes.

1968. If grants and aid from the National Board were available for your schools would that give you ample funds for all you require?—I have made a calculation and I have made inquiries from others who are in connection with the Board, and I find what is allowed at present would not be sufficient to meet the requirements of such establishments as ours, they are very large and necessarily the outlay must be very great.

1969. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—You mean what is allowed, ordinarily?—For capitation and for results of the examinations of the children.

1970. Lord Justice STAMM.—And for salaries also?—Well those who get capitation won't get salaries.

1971. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—Have you any idea of what the ordinary National Board capitation grant would amount to for your schools?—On the average attendance it would be 12s. 6d. a head if we retained the highest class, if not it would fall to 10s., that would be £1,100 or £1,300.

1972. Dr. TRAILL.—If you were paid according to the ordinary grants you would get salaries and not be limited to the capitation fees, would you not in that case get a great deal more?—I think it would amount to about the same.

1973. Would not result fees and salaries amount to more than the capitation fee?—Along with the capitation there are also the result fees, convent schools and religious men in connection with the Board get not only the capitation but they also get the result fees, those two are equivalent to the payment of a teacher together with the result fees that he would be allowed, I think they would come to about the same sum.

1974. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—At all events you would get, if in connection with the National Board, £1,100 or £1,300 a year more than you have now?—We would, but then they would require also that we should raise the teaching staff to the number that they have laid down, which would involve double expense.

1975. Dr. TRAILL.—But if you had that grant in addition to what you have got you could work splendidly?—I find to work such an institution as I have here at present in the city, the Peaseholme, Harney-street, and Sullivan's-quay Schools, the National Board would expend upon them about £3,000 a year; to work such a thing satisfactorily on our numbers I think would require about £3,500, that is to do full justice to 2,100 children.

1976. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Have you ever calculated how much you would get from the National Board if they paid you upon the same scale, according to the number of your pupils, on which they pay the Model Schools?—Well, I have calculated that a Model School having 600 children in it, irrespective of repair of schoolhouse, of rents, or of anything else, simply the teaching staff alone, including the result fees of the children, would come to about £1,500. I have over 1,800 and I calculate the cost would come to £4,500. Then making allowance for our people living in community I might take off £1,000, so that to do full justice to the three establishments I think an income of £3,500 would be necessary.

1977. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—Do you mean with an income of £3,500 your establishment could have full justice done to the pupils?—I believe there is full justice done to them at present.

1978. In one sense it is such, your staff is too small?—The work on each Brother is double what it should be.

1979. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—You think it could be efficiently worked, and with full regard to the health of the Brothers, if you had £3,500 a year?—Yes.

1980. Dr. TRAILL.—Then the increase of £1,100 a year would be a benefit to you?—Yes.

1981. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—I understood your existing expenditure on the place was £2,300?—Yes.

1982. If you were in connection with the National Board you would get £1,100 or £1,300 more?—Yes, but you must remember a portion of our income is got from a charity sermon and collection through the city, made in October.

1983. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—You think you might lose your claim on that portion of your present endowment?—I think that in justice to the people such provision ought to be made, that they would not be taxed several times for the same object.

1984. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—That is if the State paid the whole cost, but most National schools have subscriptions from private benevolence?—I think the demand at present is too great upon the people.

1985. What is the difficulty, to put it shortly, that excludes your order from National Board grants when other orders are in connection with the Board?—Well, it has been often stated to the Commissioners; it was stated in 1854, it was stated in 1859, and it was stated on Lord Rose's Commission a few years ago, and as far as I can see, it is simply this: Our institution was founded in 1853, by Brother Ignatius Rice, a merchant of Waterford. He established it for the purpose of combined religious and secular education. Statutes and religious emblems were put up in the schools, and books were got written by the members of the institute, containing religious lessons—in a word, the whole working of the body was on the fundamental principle of a combined religious and secular education.

of the child. Then the Board was started in 1833 on a different principle, that is, combined secular and separate religious education. Our Brothers then thought it would be a departure from the original principle of the Institute to take down the statutes, which the Board would require, and to adapt the Board's books, and give up our own, and rather than do that they continued to work on independent of the Board. The Board, all the time, made no advance towards them in the way of receiving them into connection with it by allowing any of those things which the Brothers considered of vast importance, in fact, fundamentally required in their Institute, and that has kept the Institute from any connection with the Board up to the present time.

1885. Then the two points as, I may say, has been stated everywhere, narrowed themselves to the use of your own books and permission to keep religious emblems in the class-rooms during the time of secular as well as religious instruction.—Yes. We have seventy houses, and we thought it would be very strange that we should take down all our religious emblems; we would look upon it as a kind of apostasy for the sake of any pecuniary advantage we might get from the Board.

1887. Dr. TRAILL.—Suppose the State yielded that point about the religious emblems, considering there are no boys of any other denomination attending, do you think that the State contributing the money of the taxpayers of all the community should not have any voice in approving of the books used?—One of the late Chief Secretaries of Ireland sent for a set of our books on the occasion of a Member of Parliament asking why our books were not on the Board's list, and he stated publicly in the House of Commons that he had read over all our books and did not see any reason why they should not be on the Board's list.

1888. Would your order amount to a rule that the books should be always subject to State inspection, because you might change them?—Oh, certainly.

1889. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—There has been no difficulty about submitting your schools to inspection or your books for approval.—I think not.

1890. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you think it necessary to teach history in your schools, though it should not be on the programme of the Board?—Certainly; we have made that a fundamental principle from the beginning, and I think that is another reason why the Institute never connected itself with the Board. I remember one occasion when Sir Lyon Playfair called at Marlborough-street Training College and asked for a class on Irish history, and when told by Mr. Joyce, the teacher, that it was not taught, expressed his great surprise that it should not have been taught there, and said such a thing as that would not be tolerated in England for a moment. That, I would mention as a third reason why we never connected ourselves with the Board.

1891. Do you teach English and Irish history?—Yes.

1892. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Is not that a subdivision of the other difficulty, for if you could use your own books you would have histories amongst them?—We have histories both of England and Ireland written by the Brothers themselves as well as a Universal History epitomised by Fred.

1893. I understand the first endowment you have is under a will of Dr. Bory?—Yes.

1894. In 1880 it is reported as having been a bequest under a will, 17th February, 1835, invested in the purchase of free-trade lands let upon lease which would expire 1910, at the annual rent of £416 18s. 8d., is that property still in the same situation?—In the same situation save for the last two years the rents from it have not been equal to what is stated there.

1895. Where are the lands?—Beyond Macroom.

1896. Are they agricultural lands?—Agricultural.

1897. Are the leases, so far as you know, within the recent legislation by which the rents are made subject to variation?—They are subject to variation, but I have heard from a good authority that Miss Parnon, who is the intermediary between our community and the tenants, gives them liberty to go into the courts, and I believe very few did.

1898. Then you receive this as a bulk rent from one tenant?—From one tenant.

1899. But her lease will expire and you will then come into direct communication with the other tenants?—Yes.

2000. You said you did not get the full amount.—We had to make her an abatement of one-eighth, she gave double that to the tenants.

2001. They got twenty-five per cent. and you gave her twelve and a half?—Yes.

2002. How long has that abatement continued?—Last year it commenced, and this year they require it again.

2003. What proportion does her rent bear to yours?—Very nearly double, we have to pay £450 the rent, we have to pay our portion of the taxes and also the income tax, and that for some years past has been returned.

2004. Then she has an equal amount to what you have?—Yes.

2005. Who is the legal owner of your interest in these lands?—The lands are vested in two gentlemen of the city, and two of the Brothers.

2006. I find in 1880 the trustees were Francis Lyons, Thomas Lyons, and two members of the community?—Yes.

2007. Are those trustees still living?—They are dead, but they have been replaced.

2008. By deed?—Yes.

2009. Who are your present trustees?—Young Mr. Tom Lyons, son of the late Tom Lyons, is one, and we have not yet got one to represent Mr. Frank Lyons, who died recently.

2010. As regards this, you heard what I said this morning, one of the things we can do for you if you decide—Go otherwise it is quite clear your schools are exempt—would be to get rid of the necessity of any more deeds, by incorporating a couple of laymen and one or three of your order, who would hold your property once and for all in trust for the existing purposes. The next endowment I find was donations and legacies invested in the purchase of houses in tenements in Portadown, Bantry-town, and Sullivan's-buoy, sold by weekly auctions, and, in 1890, producing a profit rent of £236 18s. 4d. 1.—They are small premises adjoining Portadown-hall School, erected by sum of money given by friends from time to time as an investment for a double object, as is stated in the report of 1891, that is of elevating the people by giving them suitable dwellings to live in.

2011. They are something in the nature of artisan dwellings?—Yes. I believe that one of the first elements in the elevation of the lower classes will be the giving them comfortable houses.

2012. A bout how many of those houses have you, and what do you get for them?—The rents at present are much the same as what they were, they have not fallen anything I may say.

2013. How do you manage the property?—We have an agent who collects the rent weekly, and renders an account every Monday morning to me of what he gets.

2014. In whom is that property vested?—In three Brothers only.

2015. I need not tell you that if you put your property into corporate hands, all the property should go into it, you can have any number of trusts but only one body to hold them.

2016. Dr. TRAILL.—What percentage do you pay the agent for collecting?—One shilling in the pound.

2017. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—There is a profit part of £17 13s. 6d. arising out of a house and lands near Ballinacorney, and £9 out of a house in Donnickstreet, Cork. Have you both those properties?—Yes, held yearly.

2018. Who hold those premises?—Three members of the order.

2019. Have you executed deeds conveying them?—Yes.

2020. You must have a good supply of deeds by this time?—Yes.

2021. Dr. TRAILL.—And it costs you a good deal of money?—Yes, we want a change in that respect.

2022. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Next a bequest of £800 lent on a mortgage, the Kelly bequest?—We had to borrow about £860 in order to purchase the estate, the sum left by Dr. Barry was not sufficient, and the interest had to be paid on that borrowed money until this gentleman, a leather merchant in the city, left that money. The mortgage was then paid, and since then the interest has come into the community.

2023. You have now got the capital of the mortgage?—We have.

2024. Has it been paid off?—Yes.

2025. Dr. TRAILL.—How does it bring you any interest if you paid it off to get rid of the debt?—The £800 was borrowed, and out of the result of Dr. Barry's estate the interest on that £800 had to be paid.

2026. Lord Justice NAHER.—You have not got £860 distinct from the estate at present?—No, we have paid off the mortgage.

2027. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—When did that transaction take place?—About fourteen years ago.

2028. It was returned after paying £800 lent on mortgage, bringing you in four and a half per cent.?—It was because it was not paid off at that time; the £800 that we got from Mr. Kelly was given to the party who lent that money, and since that time the interest that was going to the mortgagee, becomes a part of the income of the community.

2029. Dr. TRAILL.—Then it is merged in Dr. Barry's bequest?—Yes.

2030. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The next item is the sites of your three school premises; they were sold to be subject to £30?—Not the three premises but the residence and Pookochoo-lane School; we have a share, and the land rent is £30 each. We have to pay Lord Cork £15 for the rent of the Elmsay-street schools, and he allows £10.

2031. What is your tenure there?—I think unlimited; the Sullivan's-quay had a lease rent on it of £30, we borrowed money and paid that off altogether so that £30 now forms a part of the income of the community.

2032. Who own your interest in those three sites?—Three of the Brothers.

2033. And have you again to execute deeds with respect to those?—We have.

2034. Then you have five or six sets of trust deeds going on at the same time?—We have.

2035. You said you got £1,000 from Mr. Fitzgerald for special purposes?—Yes, that is in Chancery, we only get the interest.

2036. By whom is it paid to you?—It is lodged in the Hibernian Bank to my credit, twice a year.

2037. You don't happen to know how it came into Chancery?—He did not leave the principal to me. He left it in such a way that it is administered by the Courts in Dublin.

2038. Lord Justice MAHE.—How long ago is it since this money was left?—No more than five or six years.

2039. Who was the solicitor that had the winding up of the estate?—I don't know how it was done; we were not aware he had bequeathed anything to us until we got the intimation of it. He left money to several other institutions on the same terms.

2040. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You don't happen to know what it is invested in?—I do not.

2041. What is the amount paid to you?—£29 4s. 6d.

2042. Then it must be Three per Cent. 1.—There is something kept back, I think, for the administration of it.

2043. That is another matter we might save you; are there any other money fund investments?—Mr. Gould left us some money a few years ago that brings in four per cent.

2044. What is that invested in?—In estates which were left, and which had to be repaired, so that they had to be, I may say, rebuilt anew.

2045. In whom is your interest in those vested?—In the same three members of the community, the Superior-General and one of the assistants, and my name is generally inserted. The Superior-General is elected for life.

2046. Whenever there is a change, do you have a new set of deeds?—Not until the death of one trustee takes place.

2047. Lord Justice NAHER.—Does this property belong exclusively to the Cork Christian Brothers?—Exclusively.

2048. And have any of the other houses of your order any control over it?—Not the least. Whatever is left in any particular locality for the education of the children of that place must be kept for that place alone.

2049. Is there any control over it except the control of the Brothers of the particular house?—There is; the Superior-General has control as far as the disbursement of the money is concerned; he has to see that the money is received and properly disposed of.

2050. He has got a governing power over you as regards the carrying out of the trusts?—Yes.

2051. Dr. TRAILL.—Your teachers are very hard worked?—They are, too much so.

2052. How do you provide for them if broken down in health?—That is one of the things that should be attended to in any provision that would be made for our houses. In many cases the members are a little too passive in that respect. There is no provision at all made for the sick, or the aged, but the Superior, notwithstanding, has to provide, as best he can, when any such case or cases occur; therefore, in outlining what would be necessary for a community of any number of Brothers, regard should be always had for some provision for the sick or aged.

2056. Dr. TRAILL.—How many years' training do the Brothers get before you put them to such responsible business as the education of the Intermediate class?—About eight years.

2057. Where are they trained?—They receive their training in the Novitiate in Dublin, and then they are sent to any house that requires their assistance, and their studies continue there up to the time of their profession, which would be about eleven years after their entrance, but they would be qualified to teach this superior class in about eight years.

2058. Rev. Dr. MONTAG.—Part of their training consists in teaching the lower classes?—Their training first consists in going through a programme laid down by the order, and also seeing how school business is conducted by superior teachers. They are also examined annually on the science of teaching.

2059. They get some practice in teaching!—Oh, yes, under the experienced Brothers.

2060. Dr. TRAILL.—But, I suppose while they are actually engaged in a school like yours it is almost impossible for them to have time for private reading!—We rise early, we have time before school, and we generally leave, with the exception of walk evenings, two or three hours in the evening, and we have Saturday.

2061. You do wonderful work!—I can myself put in a chair, for I lost one of my eyes by hard work.

Timothy Mahony, J.R., sworn.

Timothy
Mahony, J.R.

2062. Lord Justice NASH.—I believe you are a member of the firm of Mahony Brothers, of Kilmory?

—Yes.

2063. And you take a great interest in the Christian Brothers' Schools in Cork?—Yes, and I have always done so.

2064. Mr. Burke gave us a very full account of the working of the school and of the endowments, and we would be glad to hear any observations or any suggestions you wish to make!—Being one of the chief maintainers, I may say, who was connected with the Christian Brothers' schools—my memory goes back nearly sixty years in connection with them, since I was a child—I had the pleasure of being intimately acquainted with the originators of the school, the two brothers Leonard and all those who succeeded them, and I have had for a very long time the advantage, and our firm had the advantage, I believe, in my father's time, of having the staff for our business recruited from their schools.

2065. Do you get a large number of young men who have been educated at these schools?—The principal part of our staff from time to time. In fact, just before coming over here, I went through the staff of our town workhouse, in which there are eight clerks, and wool sorters and others, amounting to forty-two in all, and of those forty-two had passed through the Christian Brothers' Schools, and one was at the National School. Their wages range from 45 10s. down to 6s. or 8s. per week, but on an average good and substantial wages, and they stay with us so long that they move up and get higher wages by rotation yearly. We have the wisest confidence in the manner in which they are educated, not only as to their classical education but also their moral training, in fact, we never had occasion to take security for any of our clerks as long as I can recollect.

2067. The few you do get are clerks?—Yes.

2068. Do you get any of your staff that superintend the school manufactures?—Some of our staff got educated in our place and become superintendents of the concern. Four or five out of eight clerks can translate French freely, which is an advantage, and one or two can even make an attempt at German, these are men who have been educated at the Christian Brothers' Schools. In a general way, apart from my own experience of our concern, I have known many boys who passed through their drawing school, and they have always succeeded in life. In fact, no one who has resided in Cork and observed things can fail to know that the principal traders of Cork, the majority of those who now do trade in the city, are men who owe their education to the Christian Brothers' Schools in a great measure, and some of these, as many people know, have attained to the very highest eminence.

2069. Is there any suggestion you wish to put before us as to the working of the schools?—The only suggestion I could put is as regards money. That the Christian Brothers can educate such an immense number of boys, and in a manner which must be admitted to be perfect, for the sum of money that they receive is little short of a miracle. And, if it be desirable that such a system as the Brothers have established should be continued, a great deal of money in aid of such an education would be certainly useful and necessary. Were it not for accidental circumstances of various kinds that throw money into the Christian Brothers' Schools, it would be impossible for them to give the education to the number of boys they have under their charge. That is my firm belief. I don't know whether Mr. Burke put that matter before you, but it is a thing that strikes those who are interested in the poor at present.

2070. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—From your experience of Cork, it is your opinion that the education given by the Christian Brothers is eminently suited to the wants of the bulk of the population of Cork?—It must be admitted by anyone who will give it calm consideration.

2071. And you think they have a decided claim upon any public endowment that may be available for the promotion of education?—The first claim I would say, without fear of contradiction. If it is possible to suppose that 2,500 boys could be educated in the manner the boys are educated there for an average of about 30s. a head—that is all it costs—I would ask anyone to take up the records of any other school, and see the small amount of education that could be had for the same money.

2072. Lord Justice FRERES.—It is a gain at a head, according to Mr. Burke—What other school could accomplish it for the same money?

2073. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—They get no money from the State for the work they do?—No money from the State.

2074. Lord Justice FRERES.—Except the Intermediate.

Rev. Mr. Burke.—That is not money from the State; it is the Church Endowment.

Lord Justice FRERES.—I quite agree with you; but they put it into the Act of Parliament as if it was something they were giving us.

Mr. Mahony.—I think experience will prove such a thing is not accomplished under any other system.

2075. Dr. TRAILL.—How would you be inclined to get over this difficulty about the books?—I think things should accommodate themselves to circumstances.

2076. Do you mean the books should be accommodated to the State requirements, or that the State should accommodate itself to the circumstances?—It all depends on what you call the State—whether it is the State should control or the people.

2077. Do you think any books used by any community should not be subject to State inspection?—They may be subject to State inspection—certainly.

2078. Lord Justice NASH.—I presume, if the rules of the Board were so altered that the Christian Brothers could come in and get a share of the National Board grant as other bodies—such, for instance, as the Presentation Brothers—that would go some way towards helping them?—If the rules were such as the Christian Brothers could avail of, it would be a great blessing and advantage to the community generally.

be approved, which they believed them to be, and also having religious emblems in their schools was a thing they would not give up!—I don't think they ever will, or that it would meet with the approval of their constituents or fellow-citizens if they did.

2080. Rev. Dr. MILLER.—The parents of the boys who go there are perfectly satisfied with the system passed!—Most certainly.

2081. Therefore there is no change wanted in the system of education passed, but only a change in the rules of the Board of National Education!—If it is the greatest happiness of the greatest number, the Board are the smaller number.

Dr. TRAILL.—But the Board represent the larger number.

Monthly Meeting, 22.

PRESENTATION BROTHERS' SCHOOLS.

Rev. Brother W. F. Shaw sworn.

2082. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Are you a member of the Presentation Order?—Yes.

2083. You have a school at Douglas-street?—Yes.

2084. That school appears from the report of 1880, to have been built with the proceeds of a legacy from Mr. Thomas Rockford, under Will of December 24, 1831?—Yes, portion of it.

2085. Is it a primary school?—Yes. The schools had been in connexion with the National Board before I became a member of the Order, nineteen years ago.

2086. What number of pupils have you?—The number on roll at present is 2,510 in all our schools.

2087. What number of schools have you got in Cork?—We have seven, the Greenmount School, the Lancasterian School, the Monastery School, Douglas-street, the Intermediate and University School, Grand Parade, the Civil Service School, and the Industrial School.

2088. Dr. TRAILL.—They are not all in separate buildings?—All these are in separate buildings, except the Civil Service School which is portion of another school.

2089. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Take the first, Greenmount, what is the character of that school?—The Greenmount School is also under the National Board; number on roll 811, number in attendance during the week 430.

2090. All are male schools?—All male schools.

2091. How are your premises at Greenmount held?—They are held from the Lords of the Treasury for 999 years at a rent of 30s. a year.

2092. Dr. TRAILL.—Was it public property, or used for a public building before you got it?—No, it was given by the Corporation to the members of the community.

2093. I thought you said it was a lease from the Lords of the Treasury?—Yes, but the grounds were given by the Corporation.

2094. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—What extent of land have you got there?—About one acre.

2095. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you erect all the buildings?—We erected all the buildings.

2096. What had the Lords of the Treasury to do with it. Why did you not get the Corporation to give you a lease direct, if they gave you the ground?—I really don't know.

2097. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Do you pay the 30s. a year to the Treasury?—To the Corporation.

2098. Then it must be a lease of municipal property from the Corporation with the sanction of the Treasury?—Yes.

2099. What is your second school?—The Lancasterian School, in Great George's-street, which is also a National school.

2100. Was it originally a Lancasterian school building?—Yes, it was.

2101. How do you hold it?—As far as I am aware, there is no lease of the place, but it is in our possession since 1827.

2102. Do you pay any rent out of it?—No rent; we have held it free since 1827.

2103. You have no deed or document of title that you know of?—No.

2104. Do you know how it was used before you got it?—It was used as a school under the system of Joseph Lancaster, that was the reason it was called the Lancasterian School, it was managed for a number of years by secular teachers, and in 1837, the trustees gave it to the community.

2105. Dr. TRAILL.—Who were the trustees at that time?—I have not their names.

2106. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—The numbers in that school?—636 on the roll, 472 present during this week.

2107. The third school?—Douglas-street School.

2108. That was the school in which Mr. Rockford's money was spent?—Yes, a portion of Mr. Rockford's money was spent in that.

2109. Is it also a National school?—Yes.

2110. What is the attendance there?—Number on roll 825, number in attendance during the week 435.

2111. Is it liable to a rent?—Yes, the rent of the Monastery Schools and premises adjoining is £20 a year payable to the South Presentation Convent.

2112. Are they your landlords?—They are.

2113. Do you know how they hold it?—No.

2114. What is your rent?—From 800 to 900 years.

2115. The monastery building is on that site?—Yes.

2116. Is that also a purely primary school?—Yes, under the National Board.

2117. What is the fourth school?—The fourth is an Intermediate and University school, 42, Grand Parade.

2118. How do you hold the house there?—We rent it.

2119. Have you any tenure of it?—No, we are building a school on the Marlyke, and I hope we will be able to transfer the pupils from the school on the Grand Parade within the next month to it.

2120. How do you hold the new premises at the Marlyke?—We have a long lease at £20 a year.

2121. To whom is the lease made?—Two members of the community and the Bishop of Cork.

2122. What pupils have you there?—A hundred on the roll, ninety in actual attendance.

2123. Kindly describe your system of teaching in that school?—In that school the children are prepared for the Intermediate examinations, University, and also some for the Civil Service. At the last examination forty-one presented themselves for examination, thirty-two passed, five of these got exhibitions, four of £20 a year, and one of £15. All in the junior grade.

2124. Did you send up any pupils in the other grades?—Two in the middle grade only. In the junior grade one pupil got a medal in Natural Philosophy, one got third place in Latin, third place in French, and third place in Chemistry, and another third place in drawing.

2125. Are you in connexion with the Science and Art Department, South Kensington?—We are at present, but we were not during last year.

2126. Have you means of teaching Natural and Experimental Science?—Yes.

Rev. Brother W. F. Shaw.

Oct. 24, 1882.

Rev. Doctor
W. F. Shaw.

2127. Are your pupils free?—No, all are paying pupils. The fees range from 15s. for infants to 30s. a quarter for advanced pupils.

2128. What do you call infants?—Children under nine years of age.

2129. Do you take pupils so young as that?—Yes.

2130. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you mean in the Intermediate School?—Yes.

2131. How can you call it Intermediate when there are children of that age there?—Although some are young, a good many more are advanced.

2132. Lord Justice FRASER.—I presume they are children of the better classes?—They are.

2133. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—They are children who come to you with the object of getting Intermediate education, but a certain number of them begin with primary education?—Yes.

2134. Dr. TRAILL.—How many of the hundred are under fourteen years of age?—I should say about thirty.

2135. Lord Justice FRASER.—In point of fact you have got a preparatory school attached to the Intermediate?—Yes.

2136. In one sense it is primary, but the pupils are children of the better class getting an education leading on to the Intermediate?—Yes.

2137. I understood you to say there is a University department?—Yes, students are also prepared for the University. In the present year two have matriculated, and two passed the First in Arts.

2138. How many are engaged in teaching in that school?—Four.

2139. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—We may take it that out of 100 there would be fifty reading the Intermediate or University course, and that the others are preparing to come up to that course subsequently?—Yes, either for the Intermediate or the University.

2140. Dr. TRAILL.—Trinity College, or the Royal University?—The Royal University.

2141. Lord Justice FRASER.—Now the last school?—The Civil Service School.

2142. Where is that?—That is in Great George's-street.

2143. How do you hold your house there?—That is portion of the Lancasterian School, but not connected with the Board.

2144. Is the school in premises held under the same title as the Lancasterian School, that is without any title except length of time?—Yes.

2145. What are the number?—The number on the roll in that school is fifty-one, and the school attendance forty-five.

2146. Describe your special education there?—In that school they are principally prepared for the Civil Service; within the last twelve months thirteen passed for the Civil Service, some Customs, and some the Excise. In the last seven years, eight passed for men clerkships, sixteen for Excise, and fourteen for Customs.

2147. Do these pupils all pay fees?—Not all, probably about forty of the fifty-one pay.

2148. What are your charges?—They vary; a boy from our primary schools will get a free place if he is not able to pay fees, if he is able whatever he can pay is taken from him, but boys coming from other schools have to pay from £1 to 30s. a quarter.

2149. Then the free pupils are selected pupils from your primary schools who are not able to pay?—Yes.

2150. Are the free places open to all pupils who deserve them and are not able to pay?—Yes.

2151. Then those five constitute all the establishments of your order?—There is also an Industrial School in Greenmount, but it is not attached to the public school.

2152. Is it on the same property of which you have given us the title already?—No; it is also held in trust by the committee.

2153. Do you mean a committee of the Order?—

Some members of the Order, and the Bishop of the diocese with some lay gentlemen.

2154. Are you certified under the Industrial Schools Act?—Oh, yes.

2156. Dr. TRAILL.—How much per head per week do you get?—It varies according to the district we get the children from. From the city and county of Cork we get 1s. 6d. a week, from Dublin city and county, 2s., and the other counties about 1s. over and above the Treasury Grant which is 5s. a week.

2157. Do the grants keep the institution going?—Yes.

2158. Why do they send there to you from Dublin when they have industrial schools there?—It appears they have not a sufficient number of industrial schools in Dublin for the number of children, sometimes the children are young, and they are sent to a preparatory industrial school for younger children, and then they are transferred to our school.

2160. Could you tell us the amount you gather year from the Intermediate Board?—About £38.

2161. Have you any invested endowment?—The only endowment we have is a portion of the bequest left by Mr. Rochford.

2162. That is of £500 left in 1831?—Yes.

2163. What do you receive from that?—£24 a year.

2164. How is it invested?—It is lent on mortgage on houses property in Greenmount.

2165. Who represents you in the mortgage?—Some members of the community.

2166. Then it is held under deeds?—Yes.

2167. Are the trustees named in the last deed also?—Yes.

2168. Lord Justice FRASER.—You have altogether 2,316 pupils on the rolls?—Yes.

2169. How many of these are on the rolls of the schools in connection with the National Board?—About 1,070.

2170. What amount of grant did you get from the National Board last year?—£1,084 10s. 3d.

2171. Lord Justice FRASER.—Does that include what you get?—Yes.

2172. Besides you get inspection and books?—Yes, the Greenmount School and the school in Great George's-street were examined recently; 643 pupils were examined, and 570 passed, that is a percentage of 88.

2173. Lord Justice FRASER.—Do any of the boys attending the National schools pay fees?—Yes. In the National schools there are 600 free pupils out of 1,070.

2174. What amount did the remaining 1,300 pay last year?—The amount from the three schools under the Board last year was £219 15s. 3d., but none of that goes to the maintenance of the community.

2175. It goes to the maintenance of the schools?—Yes, and we have to supplement that expenditure by some of the money we get from the National Board.

2176. In fact £219 would not be able to maintain the schools?—No.

2177. Lord Justice FRASER.—I presume all your trustees are Roman Catholics?—Yes.

2178. Are the pupils all Catholics?—Nearly all. I don't think we have more than one Protestant, he is attending the Civil Service School.

2179. He pays fees and gets no benefit from your endowments?—None.

2180. Your endowments appear to consist of one investment, the various properties on which the schools stand, and the mortgage money &c.—Yes.

2182. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you in connection with St. Kensington at all?—This is the first year.

2183. You had no difficulty in putting yourself in connection with the National Board?—We have been in connection with the National Board for many years.

2184. But you found no difficulty in connection with this question of emblems and books?—I suppose at the time that question was not raised.

2185. Do you have the emblems exhibited during school?—No, as we had not emblems up, we had not to take them down.

2186. You are satisfied with the books of the National Board?—Yes, the present list of books of the National Board is very much improved, and it could be further improved.

2187. Do you teach any history in your schools?—No, not in the National schools.

2188. Rev. Dr. MANNOR.—You are satisfied to take the grant on the conditions on which they give it?—Yes.

2189. But you think their system could be improved?—Could be improved.

2190. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You are exactly in the same position, as far as we are concerned, as the Christian Brothers, we must declare you exempt.

Oct 14, 1887.
Rev. Brother
W. F. Stiles.

ST. STEPHEN'S BLUE-COAT HOSPITAL.

2193. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—In 1880 you were the head master, agent, and secretary of the Blue-coat Hospital?—Yes.

2194. Have you since continued to hold that position?—I do.

2195. Your institution is managed, I believe, under a scheme settled by the Court of Chancery in 1831?—Yes. (Scheme produced.)

2196. The first provision is that the trustees shall be ten, all Protestants of the Established Church. When any of them shall die, become unwilling to act, go to reside out of Ireland, or come to be a Protestant of the said Church, the other trustees shall immediately meet and elect some other fit and proper person, being a Protestant of the said Established Church of England and Ireland. Provided that five at least of the trustees shall be present at every such election. Then there are powers of holding and managing land, and so trustee himself to take a house, appointing a fit and proper person to be receiver. They are to fix one day in every quarter for their meeting. It shall be the duty of the schoolmaster and his assistant to attend at every Board and act as secretaries. The funds are to be applied:—First in payment of a yearly sum of £250 late currency, reserved by a grant of 2nd September, 1699, to William Worth, his heirs and assigns, to be paid to four students of Trinity College in Dublin provided, and all taxes charged on the hospital and lands, keeping the hospital and buildings in repair; next to pay the schoolmaster a salary of £35 per annum late currency, pursuant to the deed of 2nd September, 1699, and such salary as the trustees shall from time to time order to be paid to the assistant schoolmaster; then to put out as apprentices the boys of the hospital, and to provide them with decent apparel—twenty to be the number of boys to be maintained. Each vacancy in the number of boys to be filled by the trustees in rotation, beginning with the highest on the list. No boy shall be admitted who is not legitimate, or who shall not, as well as his father and mother, be a Protestant of the Church of England and Ireland, and every boy admitted shall be a native of the city or some part of the county of Cork. No boy shall be admitted younger than seven or older than ten. Every boy on attaining fifteen, or younger if the trustees deem expedient, to be apprenticed to such trade and serve so many years at such trade as the trustees think fit. The boys to be removable for misconduct. If at any time the funds of the charity should be insufficient, the trustees at any vacancy may suspend the nomination of one or more boys. A register of the pupils to be kept.

2197. Is the number of trustees full?—The number is full always.

2198. How many of the original ten remain?—They are all dead except the Rev. Edward Newnham, he has gone to reside in England for some years and has ceased to be a member.

2199. Is the register written up?—The register of boys is regularly kept.

2200. Have you a register of your trustees?—I have.

2201. Kindly give the names of the present trustees?—W. L. Perrier, W. W. Lynam, R. J. Perry, A. Newman, J. W. McMillen, D. R. Sarsfield, H. L. Young, Edwin Hall, and Rev. Canon Evans.

2202. They co-opt to vacancies as they occur?—Yes.

2203. How many boys have you got in the institution?—Sixteen is the number at which we were obliged to stop for some years past. We happen to have three vacancies now which I expect will be filled within a few days, there is a board to-morrow, to admit one of them.

2204. Are there no funds forthcoming to supplement the endowment so as to keep up the number of boys?—We are entirely dependent on the endowment.

2205. Of what does the endowment consist?—It consists of the fee of the lands of East and West Ballinacorney, and the Spittle lands running south and east of the buildings; the rental of all the lands amounts to £430. The reason of only thirteen boys being there is that the boys' time is up at fifteen years, and they were obliged to go. There have been several applications since, most of which were ineligible, that is, born outside the limits.

2206. Twenty is the number provided by your deed, but you may reduce the number if the fund is not sufficient. I understood you to say it had been reduced to sixteen?—I may observe that this was a mistake, there were not twenty boys when the scheme was completed, there were eighteen and they remained at sixteen up to 1818 or 1820 when provisions became so dear it was impossible for me for the small sum allowed to maintain eighteen, and the trustees allowed two vacancies to lapse.

2207. Dr. TRAILL.—Provisions are cheaper now than they were those twenty years?—You don't find meat cheaper.

2208. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—How are the lands of Ballinacorney held?—By grants, for 999 years, from the governors; they hold in fee.

2209. Are they agricultural lands?—The lands at the south side are agricultural. Those at the north side, at the granting of the lease, were a furze brake, from the commencement at St. Luke's church, on to Silverpark. I suppose by reason of the lengthy tenure they have become the sites of villas.

2210. So that those rents are secured. What about the rents of the agricultural lands?—They are some thing better than the north lands, but never extended beyond agriculture.

Oct. 21, 1887.

James Carr

2298. Does the tenant of your governors occupy those lands, or are they sublet to other tenants?—They are all sublet.

2299. You have no agricultural tenants?—No; we get the bread or ground rent, and in some instances, I understand, there are four or five between us and the sub-tenants.

2300. Have the rents been regularly paid?—Regularly paid; the interest is large.

2301. To whom are they paid?—To me, as the agent. I account with the governors, and the accounts are regularly audited.

2302. I suppose all your boys are members of the late Established Church?—Yes.

2303. And the governors the same?—Must be.

2304. What instruction do you give them?—The instruction is laid down in the scheme, and the scheme is a re-scheme of the old; besides the usual reading, writing, and arithmetic, they are instructed in geography, grammar, and history.

2305. Do you send any of them up to the Intermediate examinations?—No.

2306. Why not?—They are obliged to go at fifteen years from us. If there were any boys that would send up I should have some assistant to educate the boys, because one individual cannot do everything. I find in my experience one thing greatly hampering the master, and that is, that probably four out of every six are sent, coming up to ten years of age, without knowing their letters, and I have all the drudgery.

2307. What class do the boys belong to?—A respectable class, most of whose parents have some better days.

2308. Do children of that class come in to you at ten years of age not knowing their letters?—Yes; the scheme says poor boys, and the parents are poor.

2309. Do you do all the teaching yourself, and the management of the household affairs besides?—Yes; it is plain that the institution was never founded as a purely educational one, but rather more to relieve the poor parents, I should say.

2310. By educating their children?—They are maintained and clothed.

2311. Dr. TRAILL.—Educating, maintaining, and apprenticing to a master?—The days of apprenticeship are gone.

2312. How is the money paid for the maintenance of the poor students in Trinity College?—That continues to be paid all through. The last four students so when we paid it were Mr. Deane—he is not out of College yet; there were two young gentlemen, sons of the Rev. Mr. O'Sullivan, and another; the yearly sum of £30 is divided into four parts, each student getting an equal part.

2313. Have you four students receiving that money yearly now?—No; within the last few months there have been vacancies; the Rev. E. Newman is the personal representative of the founder, and he generally nominates, and I have not received instructions yet.

2314. Do your trustees visit the institution?—We have one who visits every week, and the Board meet up there occasionally.

2315. Dr. TRAILL.—The boys for whom they pay in Trinity College don't necessarily belong to your school?—No.

2316. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Where do the trustees meet?—They are summoned legally to be at the establishment every quarter day.

2317. Do they attend?—And they attend.

2318. What number of the ten trustees usually attend?—Sometimes latterly we had not a quorum at the hospital.

2319. Why do you say "sometimes latterly"?—I mean within the last few years. There are a few of the gentlemen that have not been very strong in health of late, and to accommodate them we met at Mr. Ferrier's office.

2320. It was represented in 1858 that the state of instruction in the school was very unsatisfactory, that five members constitute a quorum, but that business was occasionally transacted when only three were present. That was stated also by yourself in 1873; does that state of affairs still continue?—Occasionally.

2321. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you got your minutes books?—I have not brought them down. I did not know whether they would be wanted.

2322. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—About what number of the prescribed four meetings in the year, are you with another, full for want of a quorum?—We have several meetings during the year, and at the majority of them a quorum attends.

2323. Dr. TRAILL.—When was your last meeting held?—Within the last ten days.

2324. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What are the arrangements made for feeding and clothing your boys?—You will see by the scheme that the master is allowed £16 a year for each boy to maintain and clothe him, but I don't get sterling money, for all the payments are in the Irish currency, and I get £16 Irish, not British.

2325. And are you supposed to feed, clothe, and teach each boy for £16 Irish?—Not teach, there is £25 a year for that.

2326. What do you give them for £16 a head?—The old system of dietary was oatmeal slabs and meat mornings in the week, and the other milk; now twice a week, and soup twice a week with the meat from which it was made; and potatoes and milk were the other three days' dinners; that has been improved since the failure of the potatoes, the boys get potatoes not more than twice a week, and they get bread then in the milk days instead of potatoes.

2327. Do you think it an improvement to give them potatoes only twice a week?—Very frequently the potatoes cannot be dispensed upon.

2328. What clothes do they get?—A suit of his clothes per annum.

2329. I suppose they want more than one pair of boots per annum?—They get equivalent to dressed boots.

2330. What check is there over the provision of clothing, do the governors look after that?—Not specially, but the governors have the opportunity of seeing that the thing is carried out honestly, that they get their clothes.

2331. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you bring the receipts before the governors at their meetings?—No, because they have entered into an agreement with the master. That has been the custom from time immemorial, he gets so much for clothing and maintaining the boys.

2332. Do the governors visit the institution but time to time to see how the boys are getting on?—Yes, the institution was always very well attended to well lately.

2333. How often do the governors personally inspect the institution, independent of board meetings, have they any relation amongst themselves?—No, but we have one of the trustees who regularly attends every week, the Rev. Canon Evans, and he attends the boys.

2334. Is he in Cork?—He is.

2335. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In the report of 1880 Mr. Moore reported, "This institution was in a most unsatisfactory condition both as regards the house arrangements and the school work; the only provision for washing is a filthy bath in a dark, downstairs room, and there were only two or three towels for the sixteen boys. The master's excess, that his boys were clean boys, seems rather paradoxical." Does that state of affairs still continue?—I think the Inspector misunderstood me decidedly.

2336. In what respect?—In the first place that bath-room was a good room, but when he was there it happened to be a very dull day in November, and we could not improve it inasmuch as for centuries back, when the institution was established, the rear of the concern was a burial ground, and this comes quite close to the wall. Of course nobody living is accountable for what was done two centuries ago when the institution was erected.

2247. The three towels were not of that ancient date. How many towels have the boys among them?—We have plenty of towels, but we find that they don't use more than three or four to a towel among the sixteen.

2248. Then you don't serve out each boy one towel?—No.

2249. What provision have you for washing?—We have one bath.

2250. How many basins?—Two.

2251. For the sixteen boys?—They don't require to be frequently washed in the day. It is true they are as a rule a clean set of boys.

2252. Every boy would want a basin at some time of the twenty-four hours?—At no time. When I find a boy's hands are not clean I send him to the basin.

2253. But when they turn out in the morning?—They are washed in the bath one after the other.

2254. Dr. TRAILL.—In the same water?—Yes.

2255. Sixteen boys in the same water?—Yes.

A lucky fellow, the one that gets in first!

2256. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—The next paragraph of the report is "The answering in arithmetic, spelling, and grammar, was decidedly bad; in geography somewhat better, and the writing of all the boys was excellent. This had answering is the less excusable when we consider the course of instruction which is very limited." Have you no help in instruction?—None whatever.

2257. "The school, being intended for the sons of reduced gentlemen, should impart a thorough English education, and also a knowledge of mathematics that would enable the boys to compete not only for places in banks but for the higher Civil Service; I do not think this institution is of any use but for the purpose of keeping boys out of harm's way when they are in it."—I never said one word of that.

2258. That is the inspector's report?—He must have misinterpreted me.

2259. Did he not examine them in arithmetic or spelling?—He did. But I never said it was intended for the sons of reduced gentlemen.

2260. That is his own observation?—And that is not right.

2261. What becomes of your boys?—They always get scholarships, and scarcely any of them are apprenticed to any mechanical trade. But, as a rule, the institution has been very fortunate. I had the register before me the other night, once or twice, and I was looking and I was amazed at seeing so many of them in most respectable positions in life, far and away better than I am myself.

2263. Are you not allowed to take paying pupils?—No, nor do I think that we would get any now for the simple reason the institution is out of the way. Even since my time, I have been thirty-four years master, there have been numbers of schools, National schools, Model schools, and so on, started up in the city, and now that so much can be done in the way of education they would not think of sending their children so far out of the way.

2264. What provision is there in Cork for the Intermediate education of the sons of people who are poor, but who had been previously in a better rank of life?—I am not aware of any.

2265. Primary education being supplied by the National Board, does it occur to you that there is a want in Cork of Intermediate Education to be helped by such an endowment as this?—I cannot say.

2266. Dr. TRAILL.—What do you teach the boys yourself?—Besides reading, writing, and arithmetic, they are taught geography and grammar.

2267. Only in subjects of primary education?—Yes.

2268. Do you teach them Latin?—No; I at one time had some smart boys.

2269. Could you not send them to the National school during the day time?—That would be a matter for the consideration of the Board.

2270. But would it not be a great chance to give the boys education at the National school so as to leave your hands free to look after the horses?—It might be.

2271. What becomes of this money that is payable to Trinity College every year?—The students get it.

2272. What students?—There are four students.

2273. You don't pay it directly to the students, do you?—I do.

2274. Who are the four students you pay?—I mentioned them a while ago.

2275. Do you keep accounts every year?—Yes.

2276. How many have you at present on this list?—I think only two now. There are two vacancies, and it is the Rev. Mr. Newnham has the appointment.

2277. Who are on the list now?—Mr. Deane, and I forget the other.

2278. Can you not bring your books here and let us get this information in the afternoon?—Yes.

2279. Lord Justice NAISM.—Have you all the papers connected with this institution?—Yes.

2280. Then you had better bring them here, it would be necessary for us to see them.

2281. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We would like to see the deeds mentioned in the scheme, and the Rev. Canon Evans, and we will take an opportunity ourselves of seeing the institution.

2282. Dr. TRAILL.—What becomes of the money in any particular year when you don't pay it to these boys; does it go into your salary or accumulate—the £13 3s. 3d. payable towards the maintenance of four students in Trinity College, Dublin?—There is never a year that they are not on.

2283. They are not on it at present?—That is Mr. Newnham's fault.

2284. But when it is Mr. Newnham's fault what becomes of the money?—It is in bank still, and when Mr. Newnham appoints, we are ready to pay.

2285. Do you keep a separate account in the bank for these studentships?—No, all the money is banked.

2286. Is there an account separately kept for these four boys for Trinity College every year?—I get the receipts, and when my accounts are being audited, I hand in those receipts.

2287. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Who audits your accounts?—The accountant of the Protestant Orphan Society, Mr. Penrose.

2288. Dr. TRAILL.—What do you mean by the accountant of the Protestant Orphan Society?—He is in the office; he is a book-keeper or accountant, I think.

2289. Have you got those accounts?—I can bring them down to-morrow.

2290. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Is there any education given in the institution at present that is not obtainable in a National school?—No, there is not.

2291. Is there any inspection of the school as a school by anybody?—No.

2292. Has anybody examined the classes to see what they are learning since Mr. Moore examined them in 1879?—No.

Oct. 14, 1888.

James Carr
Barnerville.

* It was my intention to have added that everyday, when washing is cold water, the boys get four clean or fresh towels each morning, equal to twenty-eight clean towels in the week; and, they are wiped in between after the warm water. In so many as any boy who has the slightest sign of any sort of contagious or infectious disease, permitted to wash with the others. I would likewise observe that there is a water pipe in the bath room, and a supply consequently always at hand—and finally, we have the warm water ready at the time of the work bath, to remove the dirt supply.—JAMES C. BARNVILLE.

24.11.1882.

James Carr
Schofield.

2293. Dr. TRAILL.—Any of the members of the Board competent to examine a class?—I don't know.

2294. Do they, as a matter of fact, ever examine the boys themselves?—No.

2295. Or ever ask any inspector to come in from outside to see how they are getting on?—No.

2296. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—I think you said one of them was a catechist in the school?—The Rev. Canon Evans being a clergyman as well as a governor comes every week and imparts religious instruction.

2297. Dr. TRAILL.—Does he give anything but religious instruction?—No.

2298. Does he not inspect the secular education?—He gives the boys exercises in spelling. I am very glad to hear from your lordship that the Commissioners will visit the place. It was quite a misunderstanding about the condition of that room.

2299. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—From what was this property originally derived?—It was originally a sequestrated hospital, and it appears that those diseases had disappeared at a certain time.

2300. When was it first devoted to the purpose of the school?—In 1698.

2301. Have you any documents showing the foundation?—The deed of foundation. I can bring it to-morrow. Perhaps it would be no harm to make one remark in reference to those long tenures: the original leasing power in the deed was twenty-one years, and the parties appeared to have thrown up the old leases even before twelve years were at an end, and Baron Worth revoked the leasing power and gave them an extended leasing power. Baron Worth was the founder.

2302. Why do you call him the founder?—It was he founded the educational institution.

2303. Was the property his at the time?—Not his exactly, but he assumed it was his when the necessity for the first trust ceased, and there was no necessity for the other hospital.

2304. It was stated in 1880 that there was a fund of £400 payable by the Corporation of Cork?—£200 Irish of that has been since paid in and re-invested with the remainder of the sum the trustees got as compensation from the Corporation for taking some portion of the garden premises with a view to an improvement which has since been made.

2305. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What is it invested in?—In the West Cork Railway Debentures.

2306. Is the interest on the Debentures regularly paid?—Regularly paid.

2307. The Corporate bond in 1880 was for £268 18s. 5d. What is the amount you have now invested in money?—£250. The other portion of that was produced by compensation from the Corporation, as they were contemplating improvements in the locality; they ran through a corner of our land—the garden premises.

2308. You had one acre of land formerly?—About one acre of land. It is not much beyond half an acre now.

2309. Are the premises in Stephen's-street in a useful locality for such an institution?—Now it is, and when first founded; the houses and premises themselves are very fine.

2310. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Is there accommodation in the house for more boarders than you actually have?—The dormitory always, up to 1846, accommodated twenty-two, and we can at any time that there was a fund—we have the beds—and we can have the twenty-two again.

2311. Is that the full extent of accommodation for boarders?—It is.

2312. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Supposing you to have twenty-two boarders, how many day boys could you accommodate and instruct along with the boarders if you had a proper staff?—Probably close on eighty twenty.

2313. And I think you said at one time the name was allowed to take twenty?—Yes.

2314. Then it could be made a good Intermediate school for forty boys, including twenty boarders?—Perhaps we had better say three dozen, hardly forty.

2315. How do you keep the place in repair?—It is in very good repair; that is paid for by the trustees as a first charge.

2316. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you any servants?—I pay the servants out of the allowance to me.

2317. Who looks after the buying of the food and that sort of thing?—My wife looks after the household arrangements.

2318. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Kindly let us have the register of pupils, a copy of the grant, the accounts, and the minute books of the board. We will take up the case again to-morrow.

2319. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—In consequence of some evidence we have had as to the East Cork School, it is right that I should at once mention that we have just seen the school. Things are often very different when they are looked at from what they appear by description. We found the boys apparently well cared for and well fed, and as far as appliances went, comfortably provided. We say nothing at present as regards the quality of the education—they are only receiving primary education—but nothing that appeared in evidence to-day should be taken as at all reflecting, so far as the means at his disposal go, upon the treatment of the boys by the master. He has very little means, and he appears to do for the small number of boys a great deal for the money he gets. We found the place extremely clean, and not cleaned up for the occasion. We found the boys at their dinner, a good dinner for boys in their position in life; their appliances are rough, but I saw quite as good as they would have at home. I say this in justice to Mr. Somerville and his wife. That, of course, does not affect the question of whether the usefulness of this very considerable endowment might not be very considerably extended.

ST. ANNE (SHANDON) GREEN COAT SCHOOL.

2320. Mr. H. B. Colthart, B.A., on behalf of the Governors (instructed by Mr. Croker, solicitor).—The draft scheme has been carefully considered by the Board, and I have to ask the Commissioners now to sanction a scheme which substantially embodies the draft that has been lodged. I should mention a few leading facts and dates showing the origin and nature of, and the mode in which, these endowments have been administered, and then call two of the trustees, Dr. Knight, who is also honorary secretary, and Mr. Chillingworth, honorary treasurer, and Mr. Croker, the solicitor to the trustees, who will give the particulars of the endowments which are set out in the schedule to the scheme. This is, undoubtedly, a mixed endowment, only partly educational, and comes within section 8, but I think the Commissioners will have no difficulty on that account, because the governing body of the endowment assent to the scheme. An endeavour has been made to leave the non-educational part of the endowment as much untouched as possible and to provide that it shall be administered in the future as it has been in the past. The founders appear to have been many, because they are mainly subscribers, and although we can in some cases trace bequests, we don't know the names of the givers, and in other cases we know the names of givers, but the bequests have disappeared. In 1715 a sum of money had been collected from several subscribers, the founders of these schools, who resolved, "to receive a few poor children of this place and neighbourhood"—meaning the parish of St. Mary, Shandon, which now comprises the parishes of St. Anne, St. Mary, and St. Luke, it was in its inception not a parochial but a local institution—"in some measure serviceable

to their country, and useful in their generation, and accordingly agreed to erect two charity schools, one for boys and the other for girls, the children of both sexes to be bred up to constant business as well as religion. The boys to be taught to read, write, and cast accounts; the girls, besides learning to read, to knit, sew and spin, and both to be instructed in the principles of the Christian religion as taught and professed in the Church of Ireland, and in such other things as might be suitable to their several conditions and capacities, in order to qualify them for being put out apprentices or servants, as the governors and trustees of the schools shall see most convenient." They resolved to receive twenty boys and twenty girls, the number of each to be increased as the revenue improved. They concluded to build the schools in a waste piece of ground belonging to the incumbent of St. Mary, Shandon, which he gave for that purpose. On March 6, 1715, these schools were founded; the building cost £311, which was raised almost entirely by subscriptions, and on August 12, 1716, the schools were opened. By the " addition of new annual subscribers the trustees were enabled to add ten poor children more to the foundation, and accordingly resolved that fifty should be the number clothed, and that fifty more should be supplied with books and schooling, as probationers, to succeed the former when put out to trades. Boys clothed, 25; unclothed, 25; girls clothed, 25, and unclothed 25—in all 100." At the very inception of the undertaking we find—" Thus was the foundation of these charity schools, together with a house for the master, and a decent apartment adjoining for the convenient reception of eighteen despoiled housekeepers of the same parish, announced. See, happily laid March 6th, 1715." I read from a report published by the trustees in 1721, which also contains the following among other regulations for the school:—" The subscribers have laid it down as a fundamental rule that the master be a member of the Established Church of Ireland, of a sober life and conversation, one that frequents the Holy Communion, one who is approved of by the minister of the parish, before he is presented to be licensed by the Ordinary, a person of known affection to his Majesty King George, and the Protestant Succession established by law. The business of the master is to attend the school during the hours appointed for teaching—viz., 7 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 2 p.m. during the summer half year; and 8 to 11 a.m., and 1 to 4 p.m. in the evening during the winter half year. He is to teach the children spelling, reading, and writing, with arithmetic, in order to fit them for service or apprenticeships. But above all, he is carefully to instruct the children in the principles of the Christian religion, taught and professed in the Established Church, and laid down in the Church catechism, and to explain it by some good exposition approved of by the minister. The master is to instruct the children three every week in the schools—Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, in the afternoon, and to bring them regularly to church to be catechised by the minister." Therefore it was established as a school for the children of one denomination. In 1717 we find the funds increased, and sewing and spinning classes were added to the school, and a certain amount of technical instruction was given. At page 80 of the report of 1731 I find "that industry and learning might both keep pace together. The Honorable the Trustees for the Linen Manufacture resolved to encourage the poor girls educated in these schools to be employed in spinning hemp and flax, by a present of twenty wheels, and a further bounty of £35 to the managers of the charity, in order to carry on that useful branch of trade in this kingdom." It states that the girls "in a short time were no other linen but what was wrought with their own hands, and provided for the boys' wants in the same way." In 1717 an "Act of Parliament was passed incorporating the trustees, and a number of bequests were afterwards made to them—we don't find what trusts were attached to them, with one exception, that of William Masters. This Act of 1717, 5th Geo. I., cap. 14, recites the subscription that there were two schools called the Green Coat Hospital, that there were 100 children educated in the Protestant religion, established by law; it also mentions the almonshouses, and assigns that the ground and buildings shall vest in the governors, the Right Honorable Robert, Earl of Kildare, and James, Earl of Barrymore, and their heirs; the Right Reverend the Lord Bishop of Cork, and his successors; the Mayor of Cork, and his successors; the Honorable Sir John Broderick; Sir Standish Hartington, Bart.; the Honorable Brigadier-General Robert Stuarde; John Rogerson, Esq.; Edmund Knapp and Edward Haare, Esq., Members of Parliament for the City of Cork; Dr. George Rogers; Captain James Maude; the Minister and Churchwardens of St. Mary's, Shandon, Cork, and their successors, with other persons of worth and distinction, together with Francis Edwards, of London, Esq., who has generously given £11 a year for ever towards the support of the hospital.

2331. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What was the total number of the governing body?

Mr. Colthurst.—There are over fifty of them now. Twenty-five was the original number. It was further enacted that the governors, or any five of them, being met together in the library of the hospital, the master of the said hospital for the time being having notice of such meeting, shall have full power to direct the disbursement of such money as shall be given for the use of the hospital. Such money is to be spent in maintaining children, placing them out apprentices, and paying their respective salaries to the master and mistress; towards the support of eighteen poor housekeepers, keeping the building in repair, &c. The trustees may add and select from time to time such other trustees as they shall see convenient. In 1718 there is a legacy from Wm. Maude, of £300, which was expended in paying a debt, apparently due on the building, and on January 4th, 1718, vested—"The first settled endowment was made on this foundation by a bequest of £4 per annum for ever, left by Captain Robert Rogers," and that bequest appears in the schedule.

2332. Lord Justice Stamer.—Is it still paid?

Mr. Colthurst.—It is.

2333. Out of what fund does it issue?

Mr. Colthurst.—Premises in Pope's Quay.

2334. Mr. Colthurst.—Proposals were afterwards made by the Corporation of Cork to the trustees to take a piece of adjoining ground for a separate almshouse now called Stiddy's Almshouse, and with which the Green Coat Hospital has nothing to do but to receive £1 per annum, trustees having made the Corporation a freehold lease for ever of the site of the new almshouse at 20s. per annum, or to clothe one poor child in the hospital, which the city planned. The city has pleased to pay the £1 per annum which appears as 18s. 6d. in the schedule. On the last day of 1719 a charitable endowment of £11 per annum out of the lands of Ballyvourney was made by Francis Edwards, a gentleman of the city of London, in consideration of a kind promise. That is now paid by Sir George Colthurst. The next bequest is under the will of William Masters, dated March 31st, 1737, it is a very involved document.

2335. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If you could tell us what you have been getting out of it of recent years, that is what we would deal with—£250 to be paid to the treasurer of the Green Coat Hospital, that he, and the minister of the parish of St. Mary's, Shandon, do employ £250 every year following, that is, where a Protestant family in said parish, or on the march that has a trade, and can have two credible neighbors to certify as being a careful industrious man, and that they believe 40s. may assist him, so as to put him above want, then it is my will that such family shall be encouraged, not only one year, but as often as the above persons shall think fit. Where it is found that any family becomes idle, and do not improve by that money, such family so to be refused over after, unless there is good authority for their reformation, so every year eight families have 40s. each, and 25 every year for ever to the charity school. That 25 to the charity school appears in the schedule in the shape of £3 13s. 10d. It appears that in the manuscript of this will, an ancient copy in the minute book or account book, this sum of 25 was taken down 24, and has accordingly been paid 24 a year for a large number of years. Not with the exception of that 24 the rest of the £30 Irish has been regularly received by the treasurer of the Green Coat Hospital, of which 24 Irish is credited to the school, 28 Irish is paid to the Rector of St. Mary's, 28 to four children of St. Anne's, Shandon, and the balance is kept for marriage portions. This endowment was not left to the Green Coat trustees, but to the treasurer of the hospital, that he and the minister of the parish should apply it. They are both trustees of the Green Coat School, and have concurred in this draft scheme. Mr. Chillingworth, who is honorary treasurer both of the Green Coat Hospital and Masters' will, will produce the accounts. There is a balance of 250 or 200. In 1730 St. Mary's parish was divided into two parishes—St. Mary's and St. Anne's—and St. Anne's has been since subdivided into St. Anne's and St. Luke's. This is an entirely local endowment, not a parochial one, and it is the object of the trustees to preserve that local character, and leave themselves at liberty to admit to the almshouses or school, housekeepers in one case, and children in the other, from the entire district embracing the ancient parish of St. Mary's. The number of pupils now attending are—boys, 19, and girls, 64.

1326. What is the qualification for becoming a governor or trustee?—There are four schools times appointed for the electing of trustees, namely, the second Sunday in every quarter, and the trustees are to assemble every Monday after the monthly communion. I understand that they elect from time to time a member of their body on giving a month's notice.

1327. What do you propose in the scheme?—That the governing body shall be reduced to eighteen, of whom three shall be the Rector and the two Churchwardens of the existing parish of St. Anne, Shandon.

1328. How do you propose to represent the former St. Mary's, Shandon, and the new St. Luke's?—There are three classes of governors, ex-officio, representative, and those that might be co-opted. The ex-officio are to be the Rector and Churchwardens of St. Anne's; the representative governors are to be the members of the Select Vestry of St. Anne's, and in the co-opted governors there is ample room for the representation of the other two parishes. You cannot represent people by co-optation.

1329. Dr. TRAILL.—Why don't you take the boundaries of the existing St. Mary's?—Because as a matter of fact for a great number of years the charity has been administered almost exclusively by members connected with the existing parish of St. Anne. It is quite close to St. Anne's, Shandon, church, and it has been mainly administered by persons who are connected with it, and all these familiar with it are connected with St. Anne's.

1330. Rev. Dr. MOSELY.—In fact only a very limited number of the trustees were summoned to the meetings—about twelve I think?—About fifteen. There were a large number of the trustees who disappeared altogether; the list of trustees does not appear to have been corrected for a great number of years, some have died, some have gone away, and only a very small number appeared at any meetings.

1331. Or were summoned?—Dr. Knight, the Secretary, is here, and will give you an account exactly of what the practice was. The number of trustees was so large it was almost impossible to summon the whole without very large expenses, which the charity could ill bear. So that I think a practice grew up and has continued of summoning only those who attended at reasonable intervals.

1332. Dr. TRAILL.—How could they attend if they were not summoned?—You are arguing in a circle.

Rev. Dr. MOSELY.—At all events it is a most reasonable proposal to reduce the body to a manageable number.

Mr. COLLESTON.—There are six members of the Select Vestry—there are six life trustees. With reference to the application of the income, we propose the amount to be devoted to the almshouse shall not exceed £30 a year, which is over the sum hitherto devoted to it, and which is mainly applied to keeping it in repair.

1333. What is being done with the almshouses?—Thirteen persons are allowed to live there, they may receive aid from the parish, but they don't receive aid directly from the endowment; the house is kept in very good repair. Then we provide £8 shall be paid to the Rector of St. Mary's, Shandon, in perpetuity in lieu of the sums at present paid to him for the benefit of the old men under the will of William Masters. Then the sums allocated under the will for marriage portions shall be applied to the same purposes in the scheme. Then the governors shall have power to admit to the almshouses a number not exceeding eighteen, and have power to contribute to their maintenance an annual sum not exceeding £50. I think we may take it that at present nothing is given for their maintenance. As to the schools, the governors shall continue to maintain the existing boys' and girls' schools. There are no changes proposed except that they shall have power to place them in connection with the Board of National Education, and also that they shall have power to carry on in the schools such an amount of technical education as they may think fit.

1334. Lord Justice FRY-GIBSON.—In every scheme we have settled up to the present for schools like this we have introduced a clause giving power to the governing body to introduce technical education as rapidly as they can efficiently, but we have rarely been unable to define it.

Mr. COLLESTON.—That is exactly what the trustees are asking for, and I hope I have satisfied the Commissioners that that is in accordance with the spirit of the founder's intention, where technical education is distinctly mentioned.

1335. I see you make a special provision which, unless you have some special reasons, we would rather have out, "that it shall be in the power of the Chancery Division to alter the provisions of this scheme on application by the governors." Had you any objection in preferring the Court of Chancery to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—This scheme was drafted a year and a half ago, and I think that was a common form at the time.

1336. You have no funds in Chancery?—None.

1337. Then in that case probably a clause giving you power to apply to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests would be sufficient?—Yes.

William J. Knight, LL.D., sworn.

WILLIAM J. KNIGHT, LL.D.

1338. Mr. COLLESTON.—Since when have you been secretary?—Honorary secretary for the last four years.

1339. You produce the minute books?—Yes.

1340. How are the trustees elected?—At any meeting of the trustees. Anyone of the trustees is at liberty to give a month's notice of any other person whom he considers eligible to become a trustee, and at the subsequent meeting the election is either confirmed or declined.

2341. You are unlimited in number?—Unlimited in number.

2342. Have you any qualifications?—None.

2343. What are the numbers attending the school?—I produce a certified return of the numbers on the roll for the year 1885; the average number in the male schools for 1885 was 13-9 per day; for 1886, 16 per day; and for 1887, 17-04. For the girls' school the average attendance in 1885 was 36 per day; 1886, 37-8; and for 1887, 40-4.

2344. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Then your girls' school has been increasing?—Yes; and the boys' school also.

2345. What is the reason of the great disparity of numbers between the boys and girls?—The funds available for the teacher being so small, and our inability to place the school under the National Board, prevented us from having a master up to the work.

2346. What did your inability arise from?—From our special Act of Parliament. That is one of the objects we have in the scheme. We are asking the Commissioners to free us from that, so as to enable us to place our school under the Board.

2347. Lord Justice NASE.—You refer to the Act of Geo. I?—Yes.

2348. How did that prevent you?—We have applied, and been refused, on being a very special merit.

2349. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—I presume on account of the compulsory trust to give instruction in religion, and that the children shall be taught in a special manner?—Yes.

2350. Your numbers are apparently sufficient, if you enter this as a mixed school, to obtain a grant from the National Board of a master's salary?—Certainly.

2351. Mr. Collier.—What is the number on the roll?—Seventy on the girls' school, twenty-seven on the boys'—ninety-seven altogether.

2352. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Then you are very nearly in a position to have two separate National schools?—Very nearly.

2353. Mr. Collier.—Have pupils of any religious denomination other than the Church of Ireland attended at these schools from time to time?—Yes.

2354. Who?—We have some Jewish children there at present.

2355. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Have they any other schools available for them?—I am not aware that they have.

2356. How many Jews have you?—Three.

2357. One family, I suppose?—Yes.

2358. Are they strictly primary schools?—Strictly primary.

2359. You give no industrial teaching?—Except sewing.

2360. Mr. Collier.—Do any of these children pay fees?—Yes, some of them pay one penny, others two pence, others are free.

2361. How are these fees disposed of?—They are handed in to the Board every month, and returned to the teachers in the shape of result fees; it is a kind of encouragement from the Board.

2362. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the amount of the school fees?—The last entry I have on the books is 16s. 1d. for the girls, 5s. 6d. for the boys, and the month before is 18s. 3d. for the girls, 5s. 8d. for the boys.

2363. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—About £1 a month, I suppose, putting the two together?—Yes.

2364. What teaching staff have you for the boys?—Only one master.

2365. How do you pay him?—£40 a year.

2366. Has he a residence?—Yes.

2367. And for the girls?—A principal teacher and assistant teacher. The principal teacher gets £36 a year, and the assistant teacher £11.

2368. They have got residences also?—The principal teacher has, but not the assistant.

2369. Then the National Board salaries, if you were able to get them, would enable you to get a higher class of teachers?—Oh, yes.

2370. What are the qualifications of your master?—He is at present reading for entrance into Trinity; he can read Greek and Latin—he is an educated man.

2371. Is he a trained teacher?—I think he was trained by the Church Education Society.

2372. Is your principal teacher in the girls' school trained?—No.

2373. How long has she been with you?—A number of years—before my recollection.

2374. Dr. TRAILL.—Did I understand you to say she was a more efficient teacher than he is?—Perhaps so. I would rather read a report of the examination of the classes from the Diocesan Inspector, the Rev. Mr. Alcorn, and of the non-National schools in the whole diocese, he places the Green Coat schools first—boys and girls—and he appends a note as to each as deserving of special mention. With regard to religious knowledge, he puts St. Anne's, Shandon, first of all the schools in the city, whether National or not; eight first prizes more than any other school in the whole city.

2375. There is a source of income for schools that we are glad to hear of arising from subscriptions. Have you anything of that sort to supplement the endowment?—No.

2376. It was originally established by subscriptions. Have you any provision for collecting them?—No, not now.

2377. Lord Justice NASE.—What is the total income of the endowment at present?—About £150.

2378. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—If you utilized that £150 as a nucleus, could you not supplement it by subscriptions if you had a provision in your scheme for giving subscribers a voice in the election of the governing body?—We have such a large number of objects to bring before the parishioners from time to time that I think it is out of the question. They must be very fortunate parishioners if they are not called upon to subscribe to their parish schools.

Mr. Collier.—The only time they were called upon was when the building got out of repair, and they subscribed very willingly.

2379. Mr. Collier.—Where do the children come from?

Dr. Knight.—Some from St. Mary's and some from St. Anne's, but we have none from St. Luke's.

2380. You would admit them from St. Luke's?—Certainly, it is open to all.

2381. Archbishop Auckland.—Do you not sometimes send pupils to St. Luke's?—We do not.

2382. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Would there be any objection to inserting a clause in your scheme, enabling representatives from the other parishes to be put on the governing body?—I think not.

2383. Lord Justice NASE.—In the three parishes you mentioned, are there any schools under Protestant management in connection with the National Board?—Yes.

2384. What ones are they?—The Archbishop can tell you about St. Luke's and Canon Powell can tell you about his schools in St. Mary's, I am not able to tell you.

2385. The same class of children go to these schools as to the Green Coat School?—Yes.

2386. Mr. Collier.—From what district do you admit to the almshouses?—From the three modern parishes.

2387. Could you mention any instance of persons admitted to the almshouses from St. Luke's or St. Mary's?—Oh, yes.

Dr. Knight.—The last inmate admitted to the almshouse was Eliza Gray, a deaf mute from St. Mary's, and before that Susan Dineen from the parish of St. Luke's.

William J. Knight, M.A.

William J.

2388. Lord Justice FAIRER.—Do you think, if it were possible to put this school under the National Board, as you propose, it would be more convenient to work it as a separate school or in connection with some of the National schools at present in these parishes?—I think if it were under the National Board it would occupy such a position, it would become the main school in the north of the city.

2389. It would draw away children from these other schools?—Yes, absorb them altogether.

2390. Dr. TRAILL.—Then how do you expect a grant from the National Board on these terms?

Mr. Colthurst.—I find in the early records of the school, the children are to be children living in or near the parish of St. Mary's, Shandon, and further, any person that subscribes 20s. per annum may recommend a child to be taken into the school on a vacancy, that is apparently from any district.

2391. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Are the schools and widows' almshouses in the same building?—All under the same roof.

2392. Dr. TRAILL.—Is that all the privileges you extend to the adjoining parishes, to take the deaf mutes off their hands?—We have three from St. Mary's parish in the almshouse at the present moment, the last happened to be a deaf mute.

2393. Mr. Colthurst.—You always summon the meeting of the trustees?—Always.

2394. You send out summonses to all who have attended in recent time?—Yes, unless there is an almshouse of an entire year when I stop.

2395. Dr. TRAILL.—If the persons who are in the habit of attending are not in the habit of summoning those who have not attended for a year's time, and they have power to name certain persons, would not the tendency be for those persons to fill up the places to the exclusion of everybody else?—There is no election held.

2396. But you don't send notice to those persons who don't generally attend?—We send notice to those who habitually attend.

2397. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Is your very clear statement that you have printed for us, you point out that the constitution of the Board is entirely non-parochial?—Quite so.

2398. In the draft scheme you have lodged, you propose to make it to a considerable extent exclusively parochial, confining it to St. Anne's Shandon?—Yes, largely.

2400. Dr. TRAILL.—Are not the Rector and Churchwardens of St. Mary's members ex-officio?—Yes.

2401. Are they always summoned?—No, Canon Powell has expressed indirectly a wish that they should not be summoned.

Canon Powell.—I beg your pardon, I don't agree to that.

Dr. Knight.—I said indirectly.

Dr. TRAILL.—If they are ex-officio trustees it would be a hard thing to ask us to strike them off.

2402. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—You state that no less than seven of the most regular attendants of the Board are residents in St. Luke's?—Yes, I beg to hand in the seven names.

2403. Dr. TRAILL.—Do they attend St. Anne's church?—I have seen them all at St. Anne's church.

Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—You yourself are a resident of St. Luke's.

2404. Archbishop Archbishop.—I think I may ask Dr. Knight whether the Rector and several of the Vestrymen of St. Anne's are not those alluded to by him, they are actual office holders of St. Anne's, they are not registered in St. Luke's.

Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—That is, although resident in St. Luke's parish they are attendants at St. Anne's church and are registered vestrymen.

Dr. Knight.—One of them is the Rector of St. Paul's church in the city, I don't know that he is registered on our vestry.

Thomas Hans Chillingworth sworn.

Thomas Hans Chillingworth.

2405. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Do you act as a trustee of the Green Coat Hospital?—Yes, for about twelve years.

2406. Do you keep the accounts?—I keep the accounts for the past seven years.

2407. Have you got your accounts for last year?—Yes, I have the printed accounts during the time I have been in office, since 1880 (produced).

2408. I see the first large receipt is Rickenhead, £105 8s. 8d., how is that paid to you?—Half yearly.

2409. Do you know where the lands are or how situated?—I have a very imperfect idea, but it is in the neighbourhood of Dublin, Coolock.

2410. Is this in the nature of a profit rent?—It is a rent direct from the tenant.

2411. Do you know how the tenant holds?—By lease.

2412. What is the name of the tenant?—Jonathan Alley.

2413. Dr. TRAILL.—Is that a short lease or one in perpetuity?—I have never seen it and I could not say.

2414. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Have you any idea of whether the rent is well secured or not?—I have no personal knowledge of the place, but I have been told that he has fair value in it. It is regularly paid, and he has never asked for any reduction.

2415. The lands are stated to be 76a. 3n. 10r., held at £208 8s. 8d., at Rickenhead, county Dublin, and you don't know the terms for which he holds. I see you have some donations in your list, you receive some benefactions?—Yes, at different times; there might be some special object perhaps for repairs of buildings, that the funds would not admit of, and we get subscriptions then and donations.

2416. But you don't try to increase your income by collections or subscriptions?—No, not lately.

2417. Your whole income appears to be about £250 and you spend the greater part of it?—Yes.

2418. Mr. Colthurst.—That is with reference to the Green Coat School, you are also the treasurer of Masters' charity?—Yes.

2419. Is that (produced) the balance sheet?—Yes, that is the sheet for last year.

2420. Perhaps you will explain the amount you receive and how it is expended?—The accommodation at present is £23 13s. 9d.

2421. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Do you know the number of registered vestrymen, or the number of Protestant inhabitants in the parish?—I think there are about 170 registered vestrymen.

2422. I see in your printed report that you have a great number of parish families, and a good deal of money passes through the hands of the parish officers from year to year?—Yes.

2423. In the account for 1886, I see "this institution though situated in the parish, is not a parochial one, it is managed by a Board of Governors, the income for the hospital is quite inadequate for its maintenance, and the inmates have to be supported entirely from parish funds. . . . These are the only schools in the parish, a sum of £100 is urgently needed for repairs." Did you collect the money since?—We got £100 since, which did the repairs.

2424. Dr. TRAILL.—Who gave you the £100?—The late Mr. Wyse.

2425. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What is your idea as regards the Governing Body?—I think my view is fully stated in this draft scheme, but at the same time we have no objection to a representation from the other parishes, as far as I am concerned I would rather welcome them.

2426. Do you think a representation of subscribers might be added?—I think so, I think it would be a very desirable thing.

2427. If we give you three representatives from each of the parishes, some number of representatives in proportion to money sent in, and a power of co-opting to fill up the number to fifteen, do you think that would be good?—I think it would.

2428. Mr. Colthurst.—Are there many applications for marriage portions?—Very few; it is very difficult to fill all the different conditions in the will. They require to be educated in the schools and serve apprenticeships and all that kind of thing, so that very few come up to all the conditions.

2429. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—When they do come up to the conditions what is the amount to be got?—£5.

2430. Mr. Colthurst.—The last two payments were made in December, 1884, and March, 1885?—Yes.

2431. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you think these funds could be more usefully applied to education?—Certainly they could. I think those all decayed tradesmen's fund might be very well put into the educational part too.

2432. Have you been spending it on the decayed tradesmen?—Oh, yes; we have always spent that money.

2433. Mr. Colthurst.—That is, only to the extent of £8 a year?—Yes.

2434. In the scheme I think they have counted to this £8 being diverted to the almshouses and the schools, as the case may be?—We considered that as St. Mary's parish had a claim to four old men's portions we could not divert that to our schools, and we left that portion remain as it was; but if we had a general scheme for the three parishes it would not be necessary to make that limitation.

2435. Mr. Colthurst.—Do you think the situation of the school convenient?—I do. I think it a very central, healthy situation, and we have improved it very much by taking down a number of walls and putting railings up, which gave air and light to the place. In my memory the place was never in as good a condition as it is at present. There have been at least £200 or £300 spent on the improvements of the schools.

2436. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Where was the money got to spend in that way?—Collected from the parishioners of St. Anne's.

2437. Are the schools near the church?—In the churchyard adjoining.

2438. Dr. TRAILL.—How far are the schools of the other parishes off?—St. Luke's is about a mile, and St. Mary's a short distance—about a quarter of a mile; but we consider St. Mary's altogether too far away from our children, because they mostly live near the St. Luke's district, to the eastward of the parish, and there is a very objectionable passage to St. Mary's by Mallow-lane for our children.

2439. Would St. Mary's children have to come that way to your school?—I never contemplated that they would come.

2440. Would not the passage be quite as bad for them as for you?—Quite as bad, only we have more children.

2441. In stating the object of the institution, you say, "100 poor children to be educated in the principles of the Protestant religion"—do you mean in the principles of the "Church of Ireland"?—That was my intention.

2442. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you know how the lands of Bickenshead are held?

Mr. Corker.—We appear to hold in fee. It is a 99 years' lease the tenant has from 1837.

2443. How are the lands described?—All that and those the townlands of Bickenshead, situated in the parish of Clongrass, barony of Coolock, county Dublin, containing 45a. 1r. 30p., plantation measure.

2444. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you know the lands at all?

Mr. Corker.—No; I have not the remotest idea of them.

2445. Dr. TRAILL.—Could the tenant go into the Land Court with that land?—That lease would let him in.

Archdeacon Jellicott examined.

2446. Archdeacon JELlicott.—I was asked by the Diocesan Board of Education to attend here and make a statement with regard to this matter. It was stated by Mr. Colthurst that the object of this scheme was to make this charity local instead of parochial, but I think to anyone who listened afterwards to what he said, and listened to the evidence, it would plainly appear that their object was to make it parochial, and not local. At present it is local, and the Diocesan Board of Education want to make it more local, but the trustees who drew up this scheme want to make it a purely parochial charity of St. Anne's parish.

2447. Dr. TRAILL.—How do you distinguish local from parochial?—I only adopt the phrase from Mr. Colthurst. By "local" I suppose he meant district. The object of the Diocesan Board of Education, with regard to the city of Cork, is to try and put an end to purely parochial schools, and establish district schools. They want to try with the present endowments, and such aid as can be got from the National Board of Education, to get up some really good schools, and they propose a plan for establishing four district schools through the city of Cork. The resolutions that are on this paper (produced) were drawn up by the Diocesan Board in conference with the city clergy and city churchwardens. Of course they were carried only by majority, for the parish of St. Anne's declined to join. The Board look to the Endowed Schools Commissioners that they will if possible sanction this plan, if they consider it better than the existing plan, for the establishment of really good schools. There is a considerable sum of money in Cork for the endowment of primary schools, but it is so divided that—with perhaps one or two exceptions—there are no really good primary schools in Cork. We consider that this school of St. Anne's as far as the boys' school is concerned is a failure. They cannot get boys to attend it. Within the last few days they have raised their number to twenty-seven, but a very few days ago there were only twenty on the roll, as I am informed, and when our Inspector was there last there were only nineteen. In that school of nineteen boys, according to the report of our Inspector, there is nothing taught but the most rudimentary things, there is not even any history taught. The children are almost without exception in the lower classes. There were only four children, when he inspected the school, in the third, fourth, fifth, or sixth classes, so that the number of grown boys is very small indeed. It is simply a higher class of infant school, if we may judge by this return. We think that the considerable endowment which this school enjoys may be much more advantageously used if they would consent, as the majority of the clergy have, to throw all their funds into one common fund, and out of that to establish such a number of really good schools as are wanted for the city of Cork. That is the plan which I have been requested to submit to you. My friend the Archdeacon of Cork and Mr. Powell, both of whom are connected with these parishes, are willing to give evidence.

2448. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Does the position of this school correspond with "the north side of the river, not far from North Gate Bridge"?—It is not far from the North Gate Bridge, but we did not consider the position of the school a satisfactory one or as available for St. Mary's children as it ought to be. Mr. Chillingworth has told us that in order the St. Mary's children should go to that school they would have to pass through a very bad locality.

2449. Had you any existing building in your mind?—We had not. St. Mary's schools are near the North Gate Bridge. There is a site to be got, and we probably would be able to dispose of St. Mary's School and build a very good school.

2450. Dr. Traill.—Did your Board contemplate the possibility of making a selection from all the schools so as to have an intermediate school?—I am afraid as far as the funds belonging to the primary schools in Cork are concerned there could be no provision for an intermediate school.

2451. If the primary schools were all under the National Board would there be enough children from the condensed district on the north side to justify an intermediate school being got up for boys or girls, or both combined?—I doubt if that would be a good place for an intermediate school. There is a first-class school in the St. Luke's parish where they give a first-class education.

2452. Would you think of having a technical school for the district where those that wanted to learn the different things you have heard of could do so, whether as regards trades directly or indirectly?—Do you think it would be a good thing to have a central school of that sort for children to be selected from all the parochial schools?—It would. I don't know whether the north side would be the best for it.

2453. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If you had a body representing St. Luke's, St. Anne's, and St. Mary's, with power to take the endowments of the existing schools, and apply them jointly, would not that answer?—We don't want to interfere where the incumbent of the parish and the parochial authorities are opposed to it, and in that case we would rather have it left open, so that a future incumbent could bring it in.

2454. This is not an endowment in the hands of the incumbent or churchwardens?—We consider it would be better to throw these endowments into one and have really good schools.

2455. Dr. Traill.—Are there many more endowments in that district that could be amalgamated with this one?—No.

2456. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—There is an endowment of 2450 a year connected with the Blue Coat School?—That is at the other side of the city. That would be a very proper thing, as we think, to form an intermediate school out of.

2457. If that endowment was placed in the hands of your governing body would it not give you the nucleus of an intermediate school?—We should be very happy indeed.

2458. Perhaps Mr. Chillingworth can tell us how many of the twenty-five trustees were present when the scheme that has been sent forward was agreed upon?

Dr. Knight.—There were several meetings held. Archdeacon Jellatt.—I know I am one of the trustees myself, and was not summoned. Of course, being in the country, as I do, and as they meet in the evenings instead of the morning, it was impossible for me to attend, but I have always attended when any important matter came under consideration, and I would have attended if I had been summoned.

Dr. Knight.—In November, 1885, when the matter was first broached, there were six of us present.

Archdeacon Jellatt.—Mr. Powell and Mr. Milnes, I may say, are not in favour of your scheme.

Dr. Knight.—At the meeting afterwards the Lord Bishop was in the chair, and there were eight present.

2459. Archdeacon Jellatt.—The largest number of trustees who drew up this scheme were eight, then?—Dr. Knight.—I did not say that.

2460. Archdeacon Jellatt.—Well, how many trustees were present when the scheme was finally decided upon?

Dr. Knight.—On the 27th January, 1886, there were seven present.

2461. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I understood from Mr. Colthurst that under the provision for selecting they intended to represent the other parishes, but that is not the best way of doing so.

Archdeacon Jellatt.—Mr. Knight spoke of the past proficiency of those children, and how they were placed at the top of the list. That is altogether imagination on his part. I am sorry to say, as far as religious education, it is quite the reverse. Out of sixty-four children in the girls' school at the last inspection, there were only eighteen that passed in religious knowledge.

Dr. Knight.—I will sharply ask permission to be heard in the report of the Inspector, in which there are eight first class prizes.

Archdeacon Jellatt.—That is not a report of the Inspector at all, begging your pardon.

Dr. Knight.—It is a report of the Diocesan Board of Education.

Archdeacon Jellatt.—It is; but it is not the report of the Inspector.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In secular subjects it is placed among the non-National schools deserving special mention.

2462. Mr. Colthurst.—Are you acquainted with the Green Coat provision?—(Witness).—I am.

2463. Are they not very suitable?—I did not say that they were unsuitable, except as regards that position.

2464. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—This is an almshouse as well as a school for the three parishes, and it would be well to provide that if at any time they wished to remove the school, and utilize the whole of the buildings for almshouse purposes, they could do so on having a better building elsewhere.

Mr. Colthurst.—The intention of the scheme is to keep the school where it is. It is a very old foundation, and the schools have been eminently successful. We say that there is no more suitable place in the district.

Dr. Knight.—Certainly not.

Mr. Colthurst.—That is their opinion, their belief and carefully formed opinion. Those resolutions deal only with primary endowments?—(Witness).—Yes.

Mr. Colthurst.—But you propose them to direct the endowment of the Green Coat Hospital to intermediate education?—Oh, no; these are for primary schools altogether, a scheme for four primary schools for the City of Cork.

2465. The trustees have absolutely had no notice of this proposal?—The rector and churchwardens were present at the discussion of these resolutions.

2466. Lord Justice NASH.—There are some other parochial schools on our list; do those resolutions affect them?

Archdeacon Jellatt.—The rector of St. Nicholas has not consented to the scheme, but the rector of St. Fin Barre's, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Luke's, have consented.

2467. According to these proposals the endowments of these schools would be amalgamated?—Yes; that is what we want.

Mr. Chillingworth.—I may be allowed to call one observation with regard to the boys' school. We fully admit it has been a failure, but the cause is we are not able to put our school under the National Board, and there is a strong feeling in favour of masters educated under the National Board, and their certificates, in all parts of the city.

2472. Lord Justice NAISH.—If you had a master of that kind would you draw the children you would get away from the other schools?

Mr. CHILDS.—There is a Scots' school that a great number of our boys go to at present, it belongs to the Presbyterian body, and they go to it because it is the most convenient of the National Schools in that district.

2473. Professor DONNERBERG.—Why do you call it a Scots' school?—It belongs to the Scottish church in King-street. We are very favourable to amalgamation, but we believe our site to be the best. The reason why we would still wish to uphold our scheme is in order to establish the site.

2470. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you be in favour of amalgamation if your site was adopted?—Yes.

2471. Mr. COLLIER.—But if your site was not adopted you would not be in favour of amalgamation?—No.

2473. Dr. TRAILL.—If every parish says that, how is it to be settled?—We are not a parish, we are a district school, and we believe we are in a most suitable place, and we believe the alternative sites are not at all to be compared with ours, and if they were inspected by the Commissioners we think our site would be found to be most suitable.

ST. LUKE'S SCHOOLS.

Venerable Archdeacon Jellist, sworn and examined.

2474. Lord Justice FRIGGESS.—Would you give us your views?—I would first tell you the position of St. Luke's as regards education. St. Luke's is an integral part of the district included under this trust. We have in St. Luke's parish three schools.

2475. There is on our list St. Luke's School, is that one of your schools?—It is. I will explain the matter now if you wish.

2476. How long have you been Rector of St. Luke's?—Nearly sixteen years.

2477. What schools have you got in your parish?—Three schools, Boys' National School and Girls' and Infants' National and Charity School which we call the Free School.

2478. Where are those schools situated?—All near St. Luke's church.

2479. Are they all together?—Very nearly all together. The Free School is not more than 500 yards from the church.

2480. What number of children attend?—Taking the Inspector's report the number of Church children last year in the boys' school was 111, but then there were certainly twenty or thirty more than that of other Protestant denominations. St. Luke's girls' had eighty-nine, probably over 100 if you take the total numbers. The Free School numbers considerably at present the number on the roll is about 60. It is the school, I think, that you put on your list. We had within the last three or four years two or three bequests left to us. There was a bequest by Mrs. Deane, I think £75, but her affairs are not administered to fully yet, and I don't expect that that bequest will be available.

2481. Do you get any money from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—No, we have no endowment.

2482. How do you hold your school premises?—The house is rented annually.

2483. Dr. TRAILL.—How much do you pay a year?—£25 a year.

2484. Lord Justice FRIGGESS.—Have any of your schools any endowments of a permanent kind?—None whatever.

2485. Either in money or land?—None whatever.

2486. What is the site of the Church schools?—We are without a site now. They were formerly held under St. Luke's church, in very large and spacious rooms. We are taking advantage of the calamity that happened to our church, and are about rebuilding there at a site close to the church. We propose to build there as United National Schools, and rent them to the Diocesan Trustees, and these schools would then become one of the four central schools proposed by the Board of Education. We propose now to build our boys' and girls' schools in a thorough way.

2487. How is the land held on which you propose to build?—It is land which the select vestry took chiefly for the purpose of a glebehouse, but on it there is already a schoolmaster's residence built in connection with the National Board; and these school buildings will become part of the parochial institutions with the glebe house and schoolmaster's residence.

2488. Dr. TRAILL.—Would it not be well to delay the building of these schools a little until you see the result of this attempted amalgamation?—The opinion of the Board of Education is that St. Luke's ought to be a centre.

2489. But as these are turned down it might be a favourable opportunity for changing the centre?—It is a centre, I think, in any case. On the whole we are educating in St. Luke's about 350 children, and I would point out to the Commissioners, with great respect, that it is impossible in a city like Cork to have a thoroughly efficient national school unless you have a considerable number of pupils. It would be impossible to maintain, for instance, a boys' school where the education would be quite efficient with a number very much less than an average attendance of certainly 70, that would probably mean over 100 on the roll.

2490. Lord Justice FRIGGESS.—That is a sufficient number to have a master and assistant?—Yes, and the quality of the master is a great point. We have in our school a master classed First of the First, with good service pay, and we have a mistress who has been rising annually, and she is now in the highest class.

2491. Dr. TRAILL.—What are you doing now when the schools are turned?—We have rented premises in Patrick's place.

2492. Lord Justice FRIGGESS.—What salary do you pay the master?—He receives nothing from us, he receives in pupils' fees considerably over £100 a year, he receives from the National Board first-class teacher's salary, and his result fees. We always pass over 80 per cent. of the pupils. We have never been under that, nearly 100 per cent. each year. He receives in result fees for himself and his assistants, I should say, considerably over £100 a year. I reckon that our master earns, without any parochial aid, between £300 and £400 a year. I am quite within the mark when I say that. His result fees from South Kensington this year were over £80, he has science and art classes, and his pupils nearly all pay.

2493. Your school seems to occupy the position that is occupied in the North by Sullivan's School at Hollywood, as being a first-class school?—Yes, not only that but we have received two or three exhibitions from the Junior Grade, and every year we have received prizes. Our girls' school is not so successful as the boys' because it has to compete with the Summerhill Girls' School, which is connected with the Trinity Presbyterian church, and they have splendid school premises built by the Presbyterian body, with a very first-class mistress. The Presbyterian National School in our neighbourhood is of the very same character as ours, and those two schools really stand foremost as the schools for giving primary Protestant education in the city, and the result is that they draw from that side of the river the children of all the respectable artisans and others who are anxious to have their children advanced. I am speaking of my own now particularly, but I must say for the others that I think they run ahead, for the masters are identical in their qualifications and standing. We have pupils in the Royal University, we have pupils in Trinity College, several of our pupils were distinguished in the medical school at the Queen's College, and except for grinding for the specific subjects they were going to they received no education except in those schools. One of the schoolmaster's sons is going out to India for the Indian Medical Service after passing very well at Netley. Both St. Luke's and the Carmichael Presbyterian school have educated a very large proportion of the Protestant boys who have distinguished themselves in the Intermediate schools in the city into which they have passed from these schools.

2493. Dr. TRAILL.—What Intermediate schools?—The private Intermediate schools.—Mr. Fawcett particularly, I think. But I wish to point out that it would be utterly impossible for a boys' school situated at St. Anne's, within a short distance of these two schools, and placed there under the National Board, with these endowments, it would be impossible for it to be a thoroughly efficient school.

2494. Unless it had your master!—Then the result would be that there would not be the Protestant population in the neighbourhood to support so many first-class National schools.

2495. Are you very far from these schools!—Dr. Knight says we are a mile away, but we are in that very district to which the endowment belongs, and I would very strongly suggest that endowments like these might be applied to technical education; and the technical teachers might be so arranged, if we had four central schools, that they could attend all these schools, and give that advantage to all, if they were under the same government. Canon Powell will no doubt tell you that St. Anne's would not suit his parish for a boys' school, and if he had a National school like mine there would be no room between the two for a boys' school at St. Anne's. With regard to our Free School, we are giving clothing in a private way, and paying a teacher entirely from voluntary means. The school is composed of the children of the very poor, and we find it working our National schools these children are very likely to be neglected; charitable ladies have to look them up, and see that they attend; and then we have to look after their clothing, and children not attending regularly in an efficient National school will not be regarded with favour by the teachers—they will be backward, and will be thrown out. We have the military barracks in our parish; that was formerly in St. Anne's, the boundary of the present St. Anne's ends by it, and we have to educate all that class of poverty-stricken children that belong to soldiers married without leave, whose children are outside the barracks, and we have a large amount of poverty connected with us in that way. We feel we are entitled in some way to some portion of this endowment for education, provided it is not thrown into the general scheme which the Diocesan Board proposes. I am entirely in favour of the scheme, and I am quite prepared to give up the personal management of St. Luke's school, and vest it in the Board.

2496. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—For St. Luke's School, you say, you have a piece of land available. It is within the power of the Commission to set upon that as an endowment. Do you think it would be advisable to form a representative body of these three parishes which are interested in the Grosvenor Endowment, with power to them to do whatever was best for their own portion of the city?—It would, provided you did not adopt the whole scheme of the Board of Education; but I think that scheme, considering the limited population we have to deal with, would be far better.

2497. Would it have some difficulty in doing that, on account of this being a mixed endowment for different purposes. Must there not be a separate body to administer that endowment?—The educational part could be well administered together with the general diocesan scheme.

2498. Dr. TRAILL.—Would the Diocesan Board make any attempt to divert the charity from that side of the city to the south side?—My idea was that the whole thing would be thrown into the common purse, to be administered by this diocesan body.

2499. Would it help to work out the plan if the infant schools were separated from the ordinary National boys' and girls' schools, and put entirely under the control of the clergy?—I think it would. I think an infant school must be regarded from a different point of view. I think an infant school at St. Anne's church would recommend itself very strongly as a necessity; girls and infants won't go as far to school as boys.

2500. But when the children get old enough to travel to the central school, it would be for the benefit of the district to have a central school?—Yes.

2501. And would St. Luke's be central?—It would be very central; this endowment applies to the parishes on that side of the river, a school in St. Luke's, where we propose to build it, is certainly a necessity.

2502. Is the bulk of the Protestant population on the north side in St. Luke's parish?—We have over 2,000, and that exceeds the population of the other two parishes.

2503. How far does St. Mary's extend?—It is a mile up.

2504. So that between the three they occupy the whole northern bank?—Yes.

2505. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Is the Grosvenor Hill in St. Luke's?—Yes; it runs as far as Trillick station.

2506. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the church central in the parish of St. Luke's?—It is very central.

2507. Mr. CATHART.—What is your idea of the distance from the Grosvenor Hospital to the new site proposed for your schools?—As Dr. Knight stated, I think it is about a mile.

2508. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—If we formed now for the three parishes a representative body, it would quite fall in with the proposal, as I understand it, that on the Central Board there should be an adequate representation of the three parishes?—It would, quite so; I would not personally oppose the maintenance of the girls' and infants' school at St. Anne's church for that district; it is a very poor district about them, and it would be rather a hardship to ask the girls and infants to go, and to a certain extent it is successful. We have a school of the same character up at St. Luke's, which would have an equal claim to the endowment.

2509. A mile in the city is much farther than girls or infants can travel to school.

Mr. CHIFFINGWORTH.—It is a very long mile, up Hill and down.

2510. Mr. CATHART.—Supposing the Grosvenor was put under the National Board, don't you think it compen-a suitable position for a good boys' school?—I do not at all.

2511. Supposing it was made attractive, is not the population around quite sufficient to enable a good boys' school to be established?—There is in St. Mary's a National school already, and there are two National schools in St. Luke's, one belonging to the Presbyterians, and the other to us, and I don't believe a boys' school, intermediate between the two, will ever be successful; I don't think you could possibly have the number of children to enable it to have a first class master. At the present moment a very considerable number of boys come to St. Luke's from St. Anne's.

ST. MARY (SHANDON) SCHOOL.

Rev. Canon Dacre H. Powell sworn and examined.

2512. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the Rector of St. Mary Shandon?—Yes.

2513. What is your Protestant Church population?—About 700.

2514. You're one of the three parishes on the north side of the river?—Yes.

2515. What schools have you?—I have a mixed National school at St. Mary Shandon under Messrs Deane's endowment. That is the only school in the parish.

2516. What is your attendance?—On the roll 63; the average attendance is 43, including boys and girls and infants.

2517. So that you have only an attendance sufficient to claim one class salary for a mixed school; do you give anything more than primary education?—Nothing more.

2518. Where are your buildings?—Close to North Gate Bridge, on the river.

2519. How far from St. Anne Shandon and the Greenock Hospital school?—I suppose about five minutes walk on the lower level.

2520. Which of the two sets of buildings is the more suitable for a school?—I think there is a difficulty about both of these. I don't think our buildings are suitable for a mixed school for the whole district, and I think the St. Anne Shandon people are thinking the difficulty in the construction of their own buildings. There is some difficulty with regard to position, and there is still more difficulty with regard to the size of the rooms at their disposal, and my opinion is that it would not be possible to have an efficient boys', girls', and infants' school on the site at St. Anne, Shandon.

2521. Do you think it would be possible to have an efficient girls' and infants' school there?—I do; and I don't see any great difficulty in inducing our girls and the more grown of our infants to attend there, because it must always be remembered that the site of the present St. Anne was the school for the district, though of course the district has now gone out into the country then it did. I think the plan to be adopted would be to have a good and efficient boys' school at our buildings, and to have a good and efficient girls' and infants' school at St. Anne's. There would be a difficulty with regard to the young infant children that live in the neighbourhood of Sundays Well; they would have to be considered; but with the exception of those—say a dozen children of four or five years old—there is no reason why our girls and infants should not go to St. Anne's, and our schools be utilised as a boys' school.

2522. You think that one of the primary schools to be established under section 3 of the resolutions could be provided by a boys' school in the present buildings of St. Mary's, and a girls' and infants' school in the Greenock building?—Quite so. I for a long time felt the great necessity of amalgamating the schools. We never can have a really efficient boys' school when we have only an average attendance of sixteen or seventeen children. Our object ought to be to have a number of children gathered together for a school, and we are forced to amalgamate in order to obtain that.

2523. Lord Justice NAIRN.—That involves your bringing the boys from a greater distance?—I think we all observe in our parochial schools that boys move about the city very freely. Our school at present contains boys from St. Finn Barr's and Christchurch, and boys that come from the country; and there is no difficulty, provided the children are persuaded there is a good education to be got in the place. I don't think you would have any difficulty at all, provided there was not another very efficient school over the way established in direct antagonism.

2525. Professor DODDINGTON.—Do you know how far the Presbyterian school is from the Greenock school?—About half a mile nearer than St. Luke's. I would say the Presbyterian school was about a mile from St. Anne Shandon.

2526. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Supposing a body were constituted with power to establish schools and amalgamate them, do you think the persons interested in the different parochial schools would agree to amalgamation?—What I would prefer would be that the whole scheme would be as far as possible carried out. I think that the great object should be to have one complete plan for the whole city of Cork, and I quite feel with you that that plan cannot be forced on any particular parish; but if we had a body such as is named there, that body acting with discretion and caution would very soon find the whole thing smooth and easy for them. There is a very important point, which is against myself in one respect—it is this: the school endowments of St. Anne Shandon are rated to be £150; the endowments of St. Mary Shandon are £200 a year. I think that is more than sufficient for what we want on the north side of the city, and I don't think we ought to be regarding merely the advantages of the children in our own locality, but we ought to look broadly over the whole city.

2527. Dr. TRAILL.—The income of the Blacount School is more than the incomes of the other two endowments put together?—That is a boarding school. I think if that school was utilised for the benefit of promising boys for the whole city it could be made a sort of intermediate school.

2528. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If we establish a governing body for your endowments—St. Mary's, St. Anne's, and St. Luke's—what representation do you think would be likely to be efficient and work harmoniously?—How would you set about forming a governing body?—The governing body we have already agreed to, and allow that body to divide itself into a sub-committee for the management of schools in any particular locality.

2529. Supposing we begin at the other end, and formed first an integral portion of the governing body for the north side of the city, would you see any difficulty in the working of the three incumbents with two laymen such?—Yes.

2530. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the Church population of St. Anne's?

Rev. Mr. Gadsby.—830.

2531. Canon Powell.—Our Church population is 700 or 800, but they don't attend many children for a primary school; they are persons in business, and they go very largely to the Carmichael School. We have not many of the poorer children who need a primary school—in fact, the children at that school are gathered from all the parishes of the city.

2532. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you agree with the previous witness that in such an arrangement as you propose, of four primary schools for the whole of Cork, it would be desirable to apply a portion of the funds to provide a staff of teachers for technical education who would go from one school to another, and be equally available for all?—I do.

2533. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—You also lodged a draft scheme for St. Mary Shandon?—I did, but I would be delighted to withdraw it in favour of a more comprehensive scheme.

2534. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You don't see any difficulty in a comprehensive scheme to embrace the whole city?—None; and if it were judiciously managed, and the feelings of the different parishes consulted, we would all work harmoniously. In fact, if it was understood there was to be a boys' school at St. Mary, Shandon, and girls' and infants' at St. Anne, Shandon, I don't think it is any breach of confidence to say everyone would agree to that.

2535. And the funds could be applied more economically by dealing with the city as a whole?—Yes.

2536. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—How is the endowment under Moses Deane's will paid to you?—By the Commissioners of Donations and Bequests; they have the whole fund.

2537. Do you remember the terms of the foundation?—It is to be for the support of twenty boys and twenty girls.

2538. Do you know whether the endowment is land or money?—I believe it to be money. It is a capital sum of £2,050, that yields 261  $\frac{1}{2}$  p. a year.

2539. Is it not fluctuating?—Oh, no.

Rev. W. J. Galsworthy, B.A., sworn.

Rev. W. J.
Galsworthy, B.A.

2540. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—You are the Rector of St. Anne Shandon?—I am.

2541. How long have you held that post?—For five years.

2542. You have heard the account given of the Greencoat Hospital schools?—I have.

2543. And also the proposals from St. Luke's and St. Mary's with regard to the forming of a body for the management of the endowment?—I have.

2544. What is your opinion as to the fitness of the Greencoat Hospital for both boys', girls', and infants' schools?—The present buildings are not suitable for our school, but the idea is to build larger buildings if the scheme is passed.

2545. Are St. Mary Shandon suitable for good schools?—They have two good rooms, but have no accommodation for a playground. We have plenty of accommodation for that; so that, I think, neither building would be suitable for very large, good schools.

2546. Do you think your building could be made suitable for one large school if the boys were in St. Mary's and the others in the Greencoat?—Yes, I think that arrangement could be carried out, and the present buildings would do.

2547. Do you think it would be advantageous to this part of Cork to make an arrangement of that kind?—I believe it would. We could have better schools under a management of that kind than at present. If I thought by adopting the Greencoat scheme we would get a good boys' school immediately I would go in heartily for it as a separate scheme. But if we would get up a good boys' school there—as we would, I think, in course of time—we would draw away the children from St. Luke's and Carmichael's.

2548. Do you think you would have a greater chance, if you go in with St. Mary's, of getting up a better school between you without getting into the hands of the builders?—I think so.

2549. Dr. TRAILL.—How much space have you?—We have half an acre of ground available.

2550. Mr. COTTEWELL.—And with a little alteration would not St. Anne's make a more suitable place for a boys' school than St. Mary's?—I believe it is more suitable; it is less surrounded by houses; there is more open space.

2551. And the situation is higher?—Yes.

2552. Archbishop JELLET.—Do you think you would ever have a good boys' school at St. Anne's?—It would take some time.

2553. Would you ever get one?—If we had all the boys in the parish we would.

2554. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it advisable, where the population is limited, that one parish should get up even a successful school at the expense of its neighbour?—I think not.

2555. If the success of your schools can only be at the expense of the neighbouring schools, is it not more advisable not to increase the buildings, but to separate the girls and the boys in the different parishes, looking to the interest of the three parishes?—I think it is.

2556. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The Greencoat, as I understand, belongs to the three parishes?—The governors from the other parishes have not attended, and I think some of them did not wish to be summoned to the meetings; so that the working of the institution has been entirely in the hands of the St. Anne's people.

2557. Do you think a joint board of the three parishes would work the widows' almshouses and the other part?—If they would work with us.

2558. Dr. TRAILL.—If their children got the benefit of the school would not they be likely to work with you?—I don't think their children would come.

2559. We have evidence that St. Mary's children would come?—Oh, yes.

2560. Surely they would have an object in working with you if their girls were accommodated with you, and your boys came to their parish?—Yes.

2561. Archbishop JELLET.—How many of your boys go to St. Luke's?—The number varies, eight or nine, there are more going to Carmichael's.

2562. You don't think even if you get a good National school at St. Anne's you could give as good an education as they get at St. Luke's, having regard to the small number?—I don't think we could, but we would naturally wish to have them educated in our own parish.

2563. Archbishop JELLET.—It seems to me very undesirable that the same denomination, in the same locality, should be competing with one another, it injures education.

2564. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—We have a body of evidence that it is extremely desirable that the schools of these three parishes should be under the same management, and worked together, each supplementing the other, more especially with regard to St. Mary's and St. Anne's. As at present advised, it would occur to me that we must have a separate governing body for this Greencoat charity, which involves other matters besides schools, but we could give that body, when formed, power to fall in with a general system under the Diocesan scheme if they thought it desirable to do so. As regards St. Luke's Schools the Archbishop tells me he is prepared to bring them into the general city scheme. As soon as we can, we will prepare a draft and send it to the solicitor, and he will submit it to the trustees. We might take their views into consideration even before we published it for the first time. After we publish it everybody in Cork will have an opportunity, during two months, of seeing it, and suggesting any defects in it.

2565. Mr. Cullinan.—The governors are anxious to maintain the schools on the present site, and they regard it as more desirable than St. Mary's.

2566. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You heard the proposal to utilize St. Mary's Buildings for a boys' school, and your buildings for a girl and infants' school, what would be your view on that?

Dr. Knight.—I think the best plan possible would be to build upon our site, there is ample room, and we would have a first-class boys', girls', and infants'-school.

2567. Dr. TRAILL.—What funds would you have for that?

Dr. Knight.—I think that large subscriptions would be forthcoming. I think subscriptions would flow into us at once; we have only to make out a case, and ask the people of Cork for subscriptions, and they flow in.

2568. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—There is no doubt about that, provided you satisfy them it is a good case. Suppose you had this, and the money for it, would you or would you not lay St. Mary's existing school?—I think so, I think we should close it altogether.

2569. Therefore, you don't want to have both going on together?—Certainly not.

2570. Then should there not be a joint governing body for both, with power as soon as a joint school is established, to close any one that is useless?—Certainly. The objections I have to St. Mary's are the surroundings of the school, the surroundings are very objectionable.

2571. Archbishop ARDAGH.—Would you allow me to say that in the administration of this charity population is most important, and population is constantly running out in our direction, and considering we have in the military barracks a large Protestant population, and a considerable part of this unwashed is for clothing, we ought not to be left without the uniform altogether.

2572. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—One present opinion would be that the governing body should have representatives of each of the parishes on it.

2573. Archbishop ARDAGH.—I hope you see we are entitled to a large representation. Although I have been sixteen years in the parish, I was never asked to become one of the governing body.

The inquiry was adjourned to next morning.

PUBLIC SITTING.—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1887.

Oct. 15, 1887.

At the Court-House, Cork.

Present.—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERALD, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAISH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.C., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., M.B., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

ST. STEPHEN'S BLUECOAT HOSPITAL.—(continued).

J. C. Somerville further examined.

(The original grant, dated Sept. 2, 1689, produced.)
2574. Lord Justice FITZGERALD (reads grant).—It is witnessed that William Worth, out of the pious and charitable intent that a convenient house should be built upon the spittle lands of St. Stephen's Chapel, in the South Liberties of Cork, and that a certain number of poor boys should be educated and maintained in the said house for ever, and that a maintenance may also be provided for such schoolmaster and schoolmasters as shall be from time to time hereafter appointed to teach the said poor boys, and to provide convenient meat, drink, lodgings, and apparel, makes the grant of the house and lands to certain trustees, at the yearly rent of £20 sterling."

Mr. Somerville.—That is what is divided among the college students.

J. C. Somerville.

2575. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—There is a provision that the boys and schoolmaster shall be of the established religion, the schoolmaster to instruct the pupils in reading, writing, and arithmetic. The £20 rent to be paid half-yearly amongst four students of Trinity College, Dublin. Then there is a lot at the end which is perfectly illegible.

Mr. Somerville also produced the grant of extended leasing powers, made eighty-eight years afterwards, the register of the boys, commencing in 1780, and the accounts of expenditure.

Rev. Canon F. E. Sears, B.A., sworn.

2576. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You are one of the governors of the Bluecoat Hospital?—Yes.

2577. How long?—Between four and five years.

2578. How are the governors appointed?—They select themselves. I think they agree to elect. I was invited by Mr. Perrier, who wrote a letter asking me to consent to become a governor or trustee, if appointed. I wrote to say I would. Then I was referred to Mr. Jerny, the solicitor, and I was regularly instituted.

2579. Are you the only clergyman on the Board?—The only clergyman.

2580. Are the other trustees resident in Cork?—I think they are all in and about Cork. There are ten altogether.

2581. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you a parish near this?—I have, Inniskerry, between four and five miles from Cork.

2582. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How does it appear that none of the city clergy are governors?—I cannot say. I don't know.

Rev. Canon Sears.

2583. How many of the ten governors take any particular interest in the place?—I cannot say they take any.

2584. Have you attended many meetings since you were appointed?—Many meetings.

2585. What was the largest number of governors who ever attended?—I don't think more than four or five.

2586. How are the boys admitted?—Each of the trustees in rotation is allowed the privilege of nominating a boy.

2587. Is there any qualification required for the boys?—He must be in sound health, and have his faculties.

2588. Are the boys, according to the deed, all of the same religious denomination?—They are.

Oct. 25, 1887.

Evans.

2589. What connection, if any, is required between the City of Cork and the boys?—The endowment was originally intended for the boys of respectable citizens, Protestants, connected with the City of Cork, and failing such boys, the trustees then had the permission to nominate a boy out of the city.

2590. As a matter of fact how many of the thirteen boys that are now in the place are of the city?—I think all are. The Bluecoat School adequately supplies what otherwise would be a missing link—the opportunity of providing for boys of a better class, as also those for whom the Protestant Orphan Society and the Industrial School would not be available. If the institution were closed it would be a decided loss in this respect.

2591. Have you made any nomination since you were appointed?—I have had one.

2592. Had you many applications for it?—There were two persons applied to me, very respectable persons indeed.

2593. I believe you take some interest in the place, and attend at a catechist?—I take very great interest in the institution.

2594. It appeared to me yesterday that the education that the boys got was of a very rudimentary kind?—It is very elementary, but I think, considering the ages of the boys, and their circumstances, and their future prospects, it is an average education.

2595. Do you think it is up to the average of an ordinary National school?—No; I do not.

2596. Why should this large endowment be applied to giving thirteen boys an education not up to that of an ordinary National school?—It would be very desirable to have it such, but I cannot say it is a large endowment.

2597. We have this morning seen a number of large and very vigorous schools that have no endowment at all. If this endowment was applied to supplement other provisions, might it not be made more useful?—It might, certainly. I attend regularly once a week to superintend the education of the boys.

2598. Dr. TRAILL.—The religious education, is it?—I also do the secular, but chiefly religious. I examine the boys in a general way. I examine their writing, and they write remarkably well. I examine them in grammar, their knowledge of that is very elementary indeed, but still they know something about it, they spell well.

2599. How far does the best boy in the school go in arithmetic?—I think fractions.

2600. Could he do a sum in simple interest?—I don't know that.

2601. Mr. Somerville.—Four of the senior boys have gone through the National School arithmetic; two or three have gone over Thompson's arithmetic.

2602. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you satisfied of the school, generally?—No, completely voluntarily.

2603. Have you any schools of your own?—No, my parish is very small, just out in the suburbs—a rural parish. The young people in the parish live near Carrigrohane, Ballinacolly, and attend school there, which is more convenient to them.

2604. Would you and the trustees be inclined to put this school on a new basis so as to be more useful for Cork generally?—I should not like to see the endowment of that school perverted.

2605. Lord Justice FRANCIS.—What do you mean by perverted?—To see it applied otherwise than to the original intention.

2606. But at present it is only giving to thirteen boys an education not as good as they could get for nothing in any national school. Is that not "perverting" it?

2607. Dr. TRAILL.—You mean it should not be applied to other denominations, but if it was for the "Church of Ireland" would you be glad to see it reconstituted?—Yes, anything for the good of the school.

2608. Would you consent to any scheme that would be part of a general parochial scheme for Cork, in which this endowment could be utilized for helping forward the Church boys generally?—I would take most heartily.

2609. You, as a trustee, would give every facility for such a scheme?—I would.

2610. Would your co-trustees be inclined to do the same?—I cannot answer for them.

2611. Would you have any objection to bring such a matter formally before the Board?—I would do so. I would have no objection. I would be glad to consent to anything, or assist in any way that would promote the education and interest of the boys. I have only one object.

Archdeacon Jellett further examined.

Archdeacon Jellett.

2612. Lord Justice FRANCIS.—We are very anxious to hear your views on this institution?—It is, I think, plain to you from what you have seen of the city of Cork that the provision for primary education of our Church children is tolerably good, or that it is capable of being made good with the present endowments and the help that can be derived from the National Board; but the defect or disability under which our children labour is that there is really, with the exception of what is done at St. Luke's School, no provision whatever made for any intermediate education. We cannot compete with the Roman Catholic Church in that way, they have opportunities of giving higher education that we never can, it is quite impossible. They have a large number of persons of high education in their monastic orders, who are willing to devote themselves to the work of education in the most laborious and self-denying way. Whether rightly or not, we have no such provision in our Church, and there is no means provided for the intermediate education of our children here. As you yourself have stated, here is a school with a considerable endowment, and it does nothing more than give a very rudimentary primary education indeed to thirteen children; of course it feeds and clothes these, too, but that feeding and clothing of thirteen children out of this large community is a matter of very little importance.

Canon Evans.—I beg your pardon, the average number is more than thirteen.

2613. Rev. Dr. Meehan.—Sixteen.

Canon Evans.—Sixteen is the average number, it happens to be low at present.

2614. Archdeacon Jellett.—Why is it that the other places have not been filled up?

Canon Evans.—I cannot answer that question.

2615. Archdeacon Jellett.—It is plain that either the want does not exist, or the trustees who have these nominations have not acted.

2616. Canon Evans.—There is a new boy to be appointed this very day.

2617. Archdeacon Jellett.—Why have these three vacancies remained for a long time unfilled if there are persons suited for them?

Mr. Somerville.—It simply arises from this—we have had several applications, I think eight or nine, that we had to refuse, as they were not eligible, and of course we cannot go behind the scheme.

Archdeacon Jellett.—That is exactly what I say.

2618. Lord Justice FRANCIS.—Is it the case, Mr. Somerville, that there have not been applications from eligible persons sufficient in number to fill up the places?

Mr. Somerville.—The vacancies have but recently occurred, and in the usual way the trustees were notified, and some of them had boys; and even another boy can be admitted, I think, next week; I understand that a clergyman of one of the central parishes of the city is interested for another boy.

2619. Dr. TRAILL.—Who has the nomination this time?

Mr. Somerville.—To-day's nomination will be Mr. Edwin Hall's.

2620. I thought you said yesterday that Mr. Nowenson was still a member of the Board?—I did not, he resides in England, away from the country.

2621. Archdeacon Jellett.—For my argument the difference between thirteen and sixteen children is very small indeed. Allow that they give this very rudimentary education to sixteen children, at a cost of, I suppose I may say, £300 a year at all events.

2622. Mr. Somerville.—That is a mistake, the boys are maintained and clothed and get an outfit.

2623. Archdeacon Jellett.—You said yesterday the entire property was £400.

2624. Mr. Somerville.—Excuse me, our entire income I said yesterday was £450, that is gross from the rents. We have £20 of recent increase, as I explained yesterday, we pay some £35 for poor rates, then there is £30 payable to the four students of Trinity College, the Board gives me £20 for all that work of collecting the rents and keeping the accounts, I am secretary to the Board also, but I get nothing for that, the scheme binds me as that as the schoolmaster. So that our available resources would be £370 in round numbers, and our outlay is £360 on an average. There are one or two instances where it is up to £370, and £384, and varying that way.

2625. Archdeacon Jellett.—I said there were sixteen boys receiving a very primary education at a cost of over £300 a year. I think that £300 could be used more advantageously employed.

Mr. Somerville.—And the boys maintained and clothed, and the schoolmaster paid £25 a year!

2626. Archdeacon Jellett.—I say that the money could be much more advantageously spent for the benefit of the children of the city, and as this Commission has the power of applying it in that way, I certainly, as representing the Diocesan Board of Education, would strongly urge upon them to adopt some plan by which this money might be utilised for the benefit of our children. It is practically doing very little indeed for education. Whatever it does is simply in the way of clothing and feeding sixteen children, but as to the education, it is retarding their education, it is an injury to them. I maintain that these sixteen children would be receiving better education in other schools if they were not there, so that for all educational purposes I maintain this institution is an injury to the children of the city. It is a benefit to sixteen children in the way of clothing and feeding, but if it is supposed that this money is to be applied to education, I maintain it should be applied in some other way than at present, and I want to point out a way in which it could be utilised for the very great benefit of the children of this city. If a superior class of Intermediate school was founded, to which children from all our other schools in the city should be promoted into this school in the way described here yesterday in reference to the Christian Brothers, we would be able to send them forward to the Intermediate examinations, and to give them an education which would put forward the clever children in a way in which we have no opportunity of putting them forward now. Our children are labouring under a terrible disadvantage in this city, they are being driven out of the field, there is not the smallest doubt about it, by the Christian Brothers' schools. All credit to the Christian Brothers schools for driving us out, but it is not at all reasonable that we should be glad to be driven out, and we wish to get any money that is available, for the purpose of putting our children on a level as regards educational advantages with the other children of this city. I would, therefore, urge upon the Commissioners, if they could see their way to it, that they should devise some scheme by which this money could be utilised either for technical or intermediate education, or both. It would be very possible to have a technical school in the evenings, and an intermediate school in the day. If this school were put under the Board of National Education, with an endowment of over £300 a year, there might be a first rate school. I quite agree with Mr. Barker as to the mixture of secular and technical education, I think it is impossible. But it would be very possible to have an evening school, to which all the boys who wished to receive instruction of that kind could go, and that and an Intermediate school could be both maintained by means of this endowment.

Canon Evans.—The design of this institution is to supply very much what otherwise would be a missing link, that is an opportunity of providing for boys of a better class than what the Protestant Orphan Society or the Industrial School could supply. If this institution was closed it would be a decided loss in that respect.

2627. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—How can you say you are providing for boys of a better class when you are giving them a worse education than the humblest boys get in the National schools?—It is not in that point of view, my lord, of course it is bringing them down from the better class to the worst class, I would be very glad if they could be sent to the Model School.

2628. What is to prevent your sending them there at the present moment?—That was considered by the trustees, and we were informed by Mr. Jernys, the Solicitor, that it would be inconsistent with the deed to have the boys educated outside the walls of the building.

2629. There is no change in the management of this institution that cannot now be made with your consent, the only obstacle to any alteration in the constitution of this school now is the want of the consent of the Governor?—I hope you will bear that in mind that this institution does provide a home for boys of a superior class to what the Industrial School would.

2630. I certainly must say that it does not provide a home to which any parent, however humble, would send his son if he desired him to get an education enabling him to keep a good position in life. Mr. Somerville is doing all that is possible for him to do, perhaps a great deal more than anyone else would do, in the way of feeding and clothing these boys, and keeping them out of the place clean. The one matter the Commissioners could not understand, I say so far as all, is how Mr. Somerville was able to keep himself and the hospital and its inmates as he does for the sum of money he gets, but the education is absolutely fit only for boys of the poorest class.

Canon Evans.—The boys are very happy and well cared for. I have had occasion to visit the school when Mr. Somerville was ill, or away, and I have been most agreeably astonished at the discipline of the boys; I have seen them keeping order amongst themselves under the head monitor, and when they did not expect me I have come upon them and found the schools in the best order.

2631. Archdeacon Jellett.—Would you allow me to say a word—the reason I speak in that for the sixteen years I have been in the city, perhaps no one has been more intimately acquainted with the progress of primary and intermediate education in the city. I have been intimately connected with the High School, which you have seen, and the Grammar School, and I was the person who founded St. Luke's National Schools, and I am also engaged in other departments of education connected with the diocese. As to principles I entirely agree with the Archdeacon of Cloyne. Archdeacon Jellett, with this exception, that I think if the Commissioners could see their way to carry out the recommendation of the Board of Education as regards the primary parochial endowments, those en-down-sets which clearly are for primary education generally for the poor of the city, and which can hardly be diverted from that purpose, it seems to me they would be ample to provide such special education as the technical education referred to. I entirely agree with the Rev. Mr. Burke and Archdeacon Jellett as to the almost impossibility of effectively giving technical education during the hours appointed for education in National schools.

2632. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—I beg your pardon: Mr. Burke said he thought it was not practicable to teach trades or handicraft during the ordinary school hours, but in point of fact he teaches drawing, which is a very important element in technical education.

Archdeacon Archdeald.—It is in that sense I take it, the teaching of trades; we all agree that drawing ought to be universally taught. It seems to me that this endowment with the consent of the trustees might very fairly be applied to intermediate education. In the first place the endowment is intended for the children of a better class, and although at the time this endowment was formed it was intended these children should be taught trades, education has so progressed now that it is not necessary they should go to trades, and, I believe, it is these conditions in connection with the endowment that have circumscribed the number of candidates applying. I don't, from my own knowledge of the city population, believe any respectable parent, I don't believe any respectable artisan, I don't think a respectable woman's widow, learning and appreciating as they do the advantages of a primary education given in national schools in this city, would consent to sacrifice the education and the prospects in life of their children by sending them to this school as it is now constituted. I know, from experience of several years, that most promising boys educated in primary schools, educated in my own primary school, for want of some little help for further education, after passing through the curriculum of the National Board, have had to give up their further education in order to earn their bread. I have known instances of boys who took honors in the Intermediate examinations out of my own schools (the sons of respectable persons engaged in business) who have had to go to sea after that education, because they had not the means of going on for two or three years to receive a higher intermediate education. If this endowment could be applied, either in connection with boarders or day pupils, to supplement primary education, as it is represented in the Christian Brothers' schools, I believe there are at present at least 100 boys, most promising boys, educated up to a certain point, who would be eager to avail themselves of it—boys unconnected with our Church in the way whose abilities are lost to society practically from want of means to go on to higher education. It seems to me there is no endowment in the city which could be fairly applied to that purpose except this. I could be prepared to give many instances of boys whose prospects in life, for want of means, have been sacrificed for want of such aid as an endowment such as this would afford. I think the means could be very easily found for giving that intermediate education with the machinery that at present exists in Cork.

2633. Dr. TRAILL.—How regularly has this money to Trinity College students been paid?

Mr. SOMERVILLE.—It has been paid every year.

2634. Dr. TRAILL.—I have searched the minutes, there is one payment on the 8th September, 1883, there does not appear to have been any payment in 1884. I have not come to any payments in 1885 yet.

Canon SKEENE.—I understand that every year four students were paid.

2635. Dr. TRAILL.—What becomes of it in a year in which it is not paid, there is none paid in 1884 or 1885?

Canon SKEENE.—There was, I know, an interruption in the case of one student, he was a clergyman's son, but for a time the grant ceased, his parents thought that circumstances occurred which would not render it necessary to accept it, and very liberally he declined the acceptance of it, I think, for a year.

2636. Dr. TRAILL.—But there was not a fitting paid in 1884, 1885, or 1886 to anybody?

Canon SKEENE.—That very much surprises me. I think Mr. Somerville could answer it.

2637. Dr. TRAILL.—I mean to say it is not on the minutes. I have the minutes of September, 1880, when it is paid to four gentlemen named. What is the quantum required by your Act?—Five. There is a very great difficulty in collecting the trustees together, and on occasions we have gone through the business with a less number than five.

2638. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The conclusion we have come to with respect to the Blinnett School is, that on the evidence and on our own inspection of the school, we are satisfied that the present application of the endowment is not at all as useful as it should be, also that the present administration of the charity under the existing scheme is unsatisfactory. We therefore direct the attention of the governors to the provisions of the Educational Endowments Act enabling us to make a ready and complete means of extending the usefulness of this endowment, and securing its efficient government in future; and we express our strong opinion that it is highly desirable that the governors should consent to the endowment being dealt with under the Act so as to extend its benefit to the city, as it was intended it should be. It is, however, except from our jurisdiction, and we can take no further proceedings at present. We must ask the governors to meet and consider this matter, and if they pass a resolution in the terms of the 7th sec. of the Act, we can then make the charity as useful as it ought to be, otherwise recourse to the Court of Chancery would be the only course open, and would result probably in such expense as would cripple the endowment.

Canon SKEENE.—I desire to say that I most cordially accept the proposal.

2639. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We hope you will take steps to convene a meeting of your governors which ought to be attended by these city governors who take no part in the management of the institution beyond nominating boys when their turn comes, and not doing their duty.

Canon SKEENE.—I believe that proposal will tend to the advantage of the institution.

ST. PETER'S NATIONAL SCHOOL.

Rev. John H. Thompson.

Rev. John H.
Thompson.

2640. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are the Rector of St. Peter's parish?—Yes.

2641. I believe that is one of the parishes on the flat of the city?—Yes, it shares the flat of the city with Christ Church and St. Paul's.

2642. What school have you got in your parish?—I have a mixed boys' school in the school-house given by Sir Thomas Denne, and a mixed infant school in the house at the other side of St. Peter's Church-lane, which was hired by the Select Vestry, as being more convenient than the site given by Mrs. Henry Shearman in Thomas-street.

2643. Your school appears to have a number of endowments, the first under the will of Moses Dune, 2nd October, 1796, £1,107 13s. 10d. lent to the Corporation?—It was in the first instance ordered to be invested in lands in the county Cork, and by some means it came into the hands of the Corporation, we don't exactly know how; it is now in their hands and the dividends are paid to me by the City Treasurer.

2644. What is the amount he pays to you?—£20 4s. 6d., that is divided, £40 a year for the master's salary, £5 12s. 6d. for coals, and £4 10s. for cleaning schools.

2645. The next item reported in 1886 was £300 Government Stock?—£300.

2646. £300, it was stated at that time; what is the amount now?—£300, that is supposed to be accumulated interest. For a time the charity seems to have been in abeyance and this money accumulated. It was then lent on a bond to Mr. Lynght and subsequently recovered from his executors by the Court of Chancery and invested in the funds in the names of the Archdeacon of Cork and the Rector of Saint Peter's.

2647. Is it vested in their names?—Yes.

2648. Where is the money?—In the Bank of Ireland, and paid direct to the Rector of St. Peter's.

2649. The next is a charge of £50 under the will of Sir Thomas Deane, 1st October, 1784?—This will was in abeyance, and in 1845 a late Rector of Saint Peter's, Archdeacon Kyle, brought it into operation through the Board of Charitable Donations and Bequests. He intended a school for twenty poor boys and girls, the children to be instructed in the principles of the Christian religion more especially the doctrines of the Church of Ireland. £5000 is given annually to the master and mistress, £3 a year to the master for teaching the singing of the psalms, £42 for clothing twenty boys and twenty girls, 23s. for providing a sermon, which is in abeyance; rent, £3; repairs, £5; water 10s., £1 1s.; making £64 1s. for educational purposes. That rent of £3 is paid by me to the Select Vestry for the use of the playground which we have on lease. Next, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith's will, 15th January, 1803, Chancery Scheme of 9th February, 1873, £1279 11s. This is paid to me through the Board of Bequests, two-elevenths for the Eliza Smith church school, four-elevenths for the education and clothing of poor children. And the funds of this charity are disposed of by me as follows:—£37 to the schoolmaster, £10 to the mistress, £8 10s. for clothes, and £1 12s. 6d. for repairs, making £47 7s. 6d. received from the Smith's charity for educational purposes. Then there is £11 10s. 16d. received as the sermon account which goes to the curate of St. Peter's, according to the Chancery Scheme.

2650. There are all the endowments connected with the boys' and girls' school?—They are a mixed school, the school that exists under Sir Thomas Deane's will, but the Smith's Charity portion goes to the infant school. Now, for the infant school, in 1794 Archdeacon Possessory bequeathed £180 Irish in trust to the Bishop and Archdeacon of Cork for clothing and keeping at school no more than twenty poor boys of St. Peter's parish as the funds would admit. This money is now in the hands of the Corporation who pay me 28 per cent.

2651. Mrs. Mary Sheehan's endowment was stated in the former report to be £212 6s. 2d., Corporation bonds, it may be Irish, it was stated to produce £20 13s. 6d. a year?—This Possessory and Sheehan charity were not sufficient, each to maintain an efficient school, and on the advice of the late Recorder of Cork they were doubled to support co-educational school. Mrs. Mary Sheehan on 24 August, 1728, bequeathed £10 annually to the Archdeacon and Mayor of Cork to found and erect a charity school in the parish of St. Peter; the children to be taught to read, write, and if convenient, the Latin tongue, which is not convenient. In 1793 Archdeacon Reader left a house for the school subject to the yearly rent of £2 10s. 4d., which is paid at present by me to the representative of the Rev. Robert Staveley, that is the house No. 1, Thomas-street.

2652. How is the house used?—The house is unfit for the purposes of a school, so the Select Vestry provided a room close to Sir Thomas Deane's school, and in this house to a tenant, and use the rent in paying the rent of the room, and in keeping it in repair.

2653. Dr. TRAILL.—How much is the house set for?—It is set to a very bad tenant; the letting is one thing, and the actual receipt another; it is nominally £16 a year, but the rent has not been paid.

2654. What is the head rent?—£2 15s. 4d. The rent has not been paid regularly, and the Vestry in some years have really lost by the transaction.

2655. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Are there any other endowments?—There are all for education. Sir Matthew Deane, by will of the 16th May, 1708, endowed an almshouse adjoining St. Peter's Church, where there are eight persons, six men and two women, supported. They receive free rooms, and coal, and clothing £10 a year, and a weekly allowance of money—on an average about 1s. 16d. each. The money is paid to me by the Board of Bequests.

2656. Is the whole endowment of the almshouse paid through the Board of Bequests?—The Board of Bequests pay to me every half-year the money for Sir Thomas Deane's school, and the almshouse.

2657. How are the almshouse held?—I could not answer that question.

2658. How are the school premises held?—I cannot trace. We simply have the schools. They were built, I think, on church property in the first instance.

2659. One of them is stated to be held under a lease, at £5 a year rent?—That is the infant school in Peter's Church-lane I spoke of, which the Select Vestry hired, a room and playground, as a better place than the original, No. 1, Thomas-street.

2660. It is also stated that the school was rebuilt in 1873?—That is Sir Thomas Deane's school.

2661. Have you now good schoolrooms and buildings?—I have one good school, the one that was rebuilt, in which the mixed school of boys and girls is held; the other one hired by the Vestry is capable of a great deal of improvement.

2662. What are the attendances?—In the mixed school in Sir Thomas Deane's schoolroom the number on the roll is 30 boys, average attendance 18-8, and the average age of these 10-9. Girls on the roll 25, average attendance 15-6, average age 10-6, making a total of 55, including boys and girls on the roll, and average attendance of 34-4.

2663. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—That is short of the number entitling the master to a first-class salary?—The master receives a third class salary; there is an average daily attendance of 34.

2664. What is the attendance in the infants' school?—On the roll 44, average attendance 28-3, and average age of the infants 5-5.

2665. What is the teaching staff?—For the school in Sir Thomas Deane's schoolroom there is a master, Richard Nugent, he is First of Third, appointed in March, 1861. The schools were put under the Board in 1874, and he submitted to examination, and received his certificate.

2666. Dr. TRAILL.—What pay does he get?—He gets from the endowments £75 a year, and he gets from the National Board £25 a year, his rental fees last year were £17 11s., making a total of £127 11s. The schoolmistress who teaches in the infant school, Lucinda Nugent, wife of the schoolmaster, was appointed in July, 1863. Formerly she was at the Model School in Cork, and her certificate is First of Third; her income is £19 from the endowment, £37 10s. from the National Board, and 26 11s. rental fees, making a total of £204 1s.—her annual income.

2668. What class of children attend your school?—Extremely poor. On the roll the occupations of the parents are 3 tailors, 5 smiths, 4 carpenters, 5 printers, 5 cobblers, 4 painters, 8 coopers, 5 clerks, 1 shoemaker, 8 widows, 2 distaff workers, 5 working jewellers, 2 wheelwrights, 1 bookbinder, and 1 blind man, &c.

2669. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Have you taken part with the other parishes in the proposal to establish district schools?—The education imparted to the boys in St. Thomas Deane's school is very inferior, and I think that having regard to the large amount of the endowment we ought to be able to give an infinitely better education for the money, and that we are not giving that education to the children that the endowment would warrant. For these, and perhaps for other reasons, I am certainly most heartily in accord with the scheme to have district schools, and so far as I am concerned I should certainly feel that the right thing to do would be to have a large and efficient school at Christchurch, which is only a few hundred yards from my church, where there are large school-rooms, and it would be quite possible to have a first-rate school, with a first-rate master, and there would be adequate pay for him. I think in justice to the children of St. Peter's parish they ought to get an infinitely better education than they do, and it is not in my power to give them a better at present. I feel that boys cannot be well educated in a mixed school with boys and girls together.

2662. Dr. TRAILL.—How long are you rector?—Nine months.

2670. Then you found all these masters and mistresses there?—I found them there, and had not time to make any change.

2671. Who was your predecessor?—Rev. Mr. Quick, who is rector of Douglas.

2672. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Then, in your opinion the best way to improve these schools would be to place them under a central board, on trust to maintain four schools, of which one would be in your neighbourhood?—Yes; but I wish to say with respect to one item—you will observe our endowments are first to keep the schools in order and pay the school-master, and then there is an endowment in each case for the purpose of enabling the children to go to school—namely, to provide them with clothes. In any scheme that would be adopted the sum that has been hitherto given for clothes should not be diverted from that purpose, and nothing should be charged from St. Peter's parish but that which was for purely educational purposes. I think, having regard to the social condition of my children, it is absolutely necessary they should receive some assistance in that way.

2673. Dr. TRAILL.—Does part of your parish come to the north side?—It comes to the Northgate-bridge.

2674. Would any of your children be likely to attend school on the north side?—Their sympathies are not in that direction, but exactly in the other direction.

2675. So you think a condition ought to be attached to the working of the central scheme, that, as far as your children are concerned, their clothing should be looked after?—That is the point. It may be objected that the giving of clothes has a pauperising effect. That need not be done in the school; and, as far as I can see, that seems to be purely a matter of arrangement. It depends on the judicious distribution of it by whoever has charge of it.

2676. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Would it suit your views if the scheme was to provide that a portion of the endowment equivalent to the amount hitherto given for clothing should be at the disposal of the representatives of St. Peter's parish on this joint body, to be spent in clothes, if they thought right, otherwise to go into the general fund?—Yes; the clothing really enables them to go to school.

2677. Dr. TRAILL.—What proportion goes to clothing?—£50 15s. out of £180—£42 under the will of St. Thomas Deane and £3 15s. under the will of Mrs. Elizabeth Smith.

2678. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you been in the habit of spending that amount in clothing?—Yes; I could furnish the Commissioners with the names, and that has been going on as long back as I can trace it.

2679. You think you could continue to expend that amount usefully?—I think I could expend half as much again usefully. You must remember it is the poorest parish in the city—a very large number of poor shoemakers and people of that class, whom trade has been greatly injured by the introduction of machinery, and the character of the houses is such that poor people only are likely to dwell in them.

CHRISTCHURCH SCHOOLS.

Rev. Canon Harley sworn.

Rev. Canon
Harley.

2680. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How long have you been Rector of Christchurch?—Nine years this month.

2681. What school have you in your parish?—When I came to the parish the schools had been just put under the National Board. We then had two schools—a boys' and a girls' school, separate, and we were able to have a mistress for that school. I failed to maintain my average of seventy, so as to demand an assistant mistress from the National Board. I was obliged then to ask that my school should be allowed to be a mixed school, and in that way we have gone on for about five years. The numbers on our roll at the present moment are 169, the average attendance for the last two months 163, the average attendance last month 74. I am thankful to say we have a good hope that we shall be able to get back our paid mistress, and get our girls' school started again.

2682. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the average attendance for the year?—Fifty-seven. I think. We were unfortunate in the middle part of the year. Fever set in in the flat of the city, and I lost my average which was well maintained before that. The school was closed for a little while on account of scrofula.

2683. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What are your premises and how are they laid?—I have three school-rooms available, one 34 x 26, another 46 x 26, and another 31 x 23, with a master's residence, and library, and various necessary things of that kind. Attached to these rooms are chambers where four women sit at present living, and the sexton of the church lives in another part of it. They are very large buildings, built some years ago at a large cost by the parish, and they are now very suitable and splendid buildings.

2684. In whom is the property vested?—We have it so long we don't know; it was glebe property. I think the churchyard and all are vested in the Representative Church Body. There is a public lane that is not used except as a pass between the school and the churchyard and church, there are no houses in it, and it is a sort of a private lane between Grand Parade and South Main-street. With regard to the moneys now, the master receives £50 a year, an assistant mistress £20 a year, the first and the cleaning, &c., connected with the school £30 (approx. produced). The National Board salaries, £87. The mistress is not paid by the Board but I have two monitors. Rent for £25 11s. 6d., and gratuity £2 10s., that makes £27 11s. 6d. Our local contributions include £12 6s. which I have from Sherman's Begones (account produced). I have the amount from 1836 of the expenditure of the Sherman's Begones. I receive about £35 a year. It is distributed, £13 Irish to Christ Church, £10 Irish to St. Peter's, and St. Fin Bar's and the Greencoat Hospital receives £3 Irish. The assistant charges on account of the poor rates

This money is all paid from the lands of Bellmalinda. I am called upon to give £10 Irish to the general poor of Christchurch parish.

2685. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the £15 Irish given for?—Directly for the schools, the same as St. Peter's gets the £10, each of the parishes are mentioned in that deed. My master is a classed teacher of the National Board, either first or second. He is a B.A. of the Royal University, and prepares pupils for commercial situations, Civil Service appointments, banks, sciences and art examinations, &c., in extra hours. We have special subjects in the school at all times, and I have been able to put out an average of about ten boys a year into offices and places in the city. I never can keep my sixth class, because it is always taken from me. I have the honour of feeling that my boys after their fifth class are looked for, and I leave applications from various merchants and friends to say, "Have you a boy for me," so I never can keep my sixth class, it comes on to business life.

2685a. Lord Justice FRY-GREEN.—The property that you have in the way of endowment appears to be confined to the Shewmen's Bequest, and the interest of the school premises, which are vested in the Representative Church Body?—Yes.

2686. What are your views about the establishment of district schools?—There is £10 Irish given to the general poor of Christchurch, which I expend, just as Mr. Thorpe does, in trying to provide clothes for the children of my parish, to provide books and things to prevent the children being different from the others. It does not stop at £10, it is nearer to £58, because I have the same class of children as Mr. Thorpe. I was much interested in his description because I had not my statistics as well prepared, but I can add one trade to his list, that of a basket-maker. Our parents are similarly circumstanced, and the numbers of my poorer children are not as large as they used to be. Several of the trades people are now going out towards the new buildings about the city, the Hilberts Buildings and the Belmore Buildings, St. Nicholas' on the one side, and St. Anne's on the other. The children in the school come from all parts of the city. The actual residents in my parish at the present time are some few under 900, they were up to 1,300, but the tendency to live out in the suburbs has reduced my numbers in the dist. of the city. My parish extends from Patrick's Bridge all round the river to the North Main-street. St. Paul's parish comes out at one side of St. Patrick's street, and St. Peter's joins that.

2687. Dr. TRAILL.—What is your Church population, Mr. Thorpe.

Rev. Mr. Thorpe.—Somewhat over 500; it is very variable, because that class of people move about a good deal.

CANON HARLEY.—You asked me my views with regard to the scheme. The Archbishop, as far as I have heard him, has stated what is the result of my mature decision, that is retaining the Model School; if we had four schools for the north, middle, and south, dividing the city just as the Roman Catholic Church has divided it, is to my mind what ought to be. St. Luke's is absolutely necessary, to my mind. And in that way I believe that all the educational wants of the city would be provided. I am perfectly satisfied that a Board such as we have proposed would be able to meet all the difficulties, and to arrange such schools as would not only supply the wants of the parents, but meet the necessities of the clergy.

2688. Dr. TRAILL.—Whereabouts would you place an Intermediate school in that system, for all the clever boys from the other schools?—I was not calculating upon picking the boys out of the schools.

2689. We have endowments mentioned here which might be made available for Intermediate schools under the parochial system?—I want to get rid of the parochial system altogether.

2690. I mean an amalgamated parochial system, would it not be well to have an Intermediate school for the clever boys?—I think we ought to develop the Grammar school as much as possible.

2691. Do you think the Clark Grammar School would meet that want?—Most decidedly. The boys would rather go out of the city for quiet for their studies. As to technical education, if it was possible in some kind of way to give us technical education through the Bluecoat, it is a want that must be supplied somehow.

2692. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Have you an opinion whether it would be more desirable to establish a separate school for technical education, or to provide a staff of technical teachers who would go from one school to another and teach in all successively?—It is new to me, and I have hardly formed a judgment upon it, but I think either way would work very well; I think I would rather have it locally at one particular place, and the children to go at a particular hour for that technical education. Of course, as you asked a question to a former witness about drawing—a school could not be a school at all if it did not teach that much, and all that is possible of the theory of technical education.

2693. One good drawing master could teach in the four schools?—Yes.

2694. And there would be a great economy in that arrangement?—My master teaches drawing as well as he is able, and we have been very successful in that branch of our technical work.

2696. You have spoken of the Model School, do you regard the Model School as belonging to your Church?—I beg your pardon if I left such an impression, but it is so used by my people that I delight in it, and I am so thankful to have it, it has done more good than I could tell you. My boys have gone there and had a first-class education, and children of better classes, that don't like to mix with the brawler children (I don't approve of that at all, but still I cannot force my parents, and don't do so), have taken such advantage of the Model School, Carmichael's, and St. Luke's School that I have felt quite thankful that there was that opening for Intermediate education. Those who could not afford to go to more expensive schools were able to take advantage of the Model School, Carmichael, and St. Luke's, and have obtained a first-class education.

2697. How many are at the Model School?—I think 212.

2698. Dr. TRAILL.—Then the Model School has been successful, you think?—I delight in it as being most successful, it has filled a most important gap.

ST. FINN BARR'S SCHOOL.

Very Rev. Samuel G. Madden, D.D., Dean of Cork, sworn.

Very Rev.
Samuel G.
Madden, D.D.

2600. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You have under your charge St. Finn Barr's Parochial National school?—Yes, I am the manager.

2700. Has the school any endowment except under Mrs. Shearman's will?—Nothing.

2701. What are the school premises?—There is one large schoolroom, built many years ago, chiefly by subscriptions of the clergy, in honour of the late Dean Newman. It goes by the name of the Newman Schoolhouse, and we have just built a residence for the schoolmistress. These are all the premises we have.

2702. How do you hold those premises?—There is another house on the same portion of ground; we hold the whole under a lease, and the rent of this other house, which is not in our possession, pays the rent of the whole, so that practically we don't pay any rent.

2703. By whom is the rent paid?—I really could not tell you.

2704. Is it Church land?—No.

2705. Is your property indemnified in some way against the rent?—It is, we don't pay any rent.

2706. You don't know what your term is?—I do not. Mr. Verling Gregg would be able to answer those questions, the documents are held by him.

2707. Is it on the same piece of land you have built the teacher's residence?—Yes.

2708. What attendance of children have you?—The average is thirty-nine.

2709. Is it a mixed school?—It is, but we have only Hibernian boys, because, before I was made Dean, a boys' school we had was joined with the Christchurch school, and our older boys go to that school.

2710. What are your views upon the future management of the school?—I am very much in favour of this proposal to have four district schools. I have a great deal of experience of many of the parishes mentioned, for I was curate of St. Peter's for seven years, I was Rector of St. Paul's and Christchurch, and I am now rector of St. Finn Barr's, and I know their wants, and am of opinion that the education given to our boys in these schools is not at all what it ought to be, and what I hope it may be if this proposed scheme is carried out. I don't know whether I would be much affected, because I have a pretty good school as it is for girls and infants; but our boys, I think, would be very much benefited by the change. Part of the scheme was that one of the district schools should be somewhere in the neighbourhood of the cathedral and St. Nicolas' church, but nothing has yet been done about the site.

2711. It would be prudent to utilize your existing buildings?—I have a very fine schoolroom in a very suitable locality.

2712. How is Mrs. Shearman's money paid?—Through the Rector of Christchurch—£10 Irish—practically £8 6s. yearly; that is the only endowment I have. It is charged with the condition of teaching the rudiments of the Latin tongue if convenient, but it is not convenient. I might remark that under the will of one of the Donors, Moses, I think, it was intended that a portion of the endowment should go to Christchurch; for some reason, I believe the property having failed, Christchurch got no advantage. This would strengthen the claim of Christchurch to have a district school and get some of the endowment, because it was plainly the intention of the testator that a portion of his property should go to Christchurch.

2713. Canon Hurley.—Allow me to say that my Vestry are determined, if matters are not arranged, that they will put in their claim for a proportion of the £2,000 that they did not receive, from whence came; that Moses Deane's bequest ought to be equally divided between the different parishes mentioned. We believe we have an equitable claim, but we don't want to raise any question if the scheme can be so arranged that we shall receive the benefit educationally of the endowments.

2714.—Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You speak not only for yourself, but for your parishioners, in advocating this proposal of the Diocesan Board?

Canon Hurley.—Entirely, and I also wish to mention that we wish the £8 6s. that is given for clothing out of Mrs. Shearman's bequest to be added to the £13 6s., and go into the educational fund, we consent not to receive it for clothes any more, or for the general poor, but to throw it into this educational fund in order to get all the benefit educationally we can.

GLENBROOK NATIONAL SCHOOL.

2715. Mr. W. D'Esterre Parker.—I gave notice some time ago about the endowment of the school at Glenbrook, and I wish to know if your lordship can hear it at this inquiry.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We looked into it, and we came to the conclusion that there was no substantial endowment with which we could deal.

Mr. Parker.—The schoolhouse, ground, and building have been diverted from the original intention.

2716. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—There was only the site and building?

Mr. Parker.—No more.

2717. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The school is inoperative, and we could never settle a scheme for the future management and government of a mere building where there is no fund.

Mr. Parker.—Are the children to be deprived of the instruction?

2718. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is it not used as a school?

Mr. Parker.—It is under the National Board at present. It was originally given by my father to educate children under the Kilmore-street Society's rules, and then circumstances compelled us to put it under the National Board. Now some of the Church people have converted part of the building for Church purposes and send the children upstairs to a room which is quite inadequate—they have been grabbing the room.

2719. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Who holds the place?

Mr. Parker.—The Bishop and the Rector, the trustees in whom my father vested it. I am my father's representative. I don't object to the Church people using it on Sunday.

2720. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It is not a school that comes within our compulsory powers, and there is no endowment except the building. The whole point is as to the management of this house; the trustees could set that right, and, if they are not administering the property in accordance with their trust, the Court of Chancery or the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests, or probably the County Court could remedy it.

Mr. Parker.—That would be expensive.

2721. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It would not be expensive to write a letter to the Commissioners of Charitable Bequests calling on them to exercise their powers to compel the trustees to carry out their trust, if they are not doing so.

Mr. Parker.—Thank you, my lord.

CORK GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Oct. 18, 1897.

Archdeacon Arkdall examined.

2722. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—I believe the Grammar School is the property of a Limited Liability Company?—Yes. Major Knapp is secretary, and I think the Articles of Association would give you the information.

2723. How many shareholders are there?—Seven.

2724. What is the capital?—Now £3,000.

2725. The schoolroom cost, with improvements, £3,000?—There has been about £3,000 lost on the working of the school, and all that has been borne by the founders.

2726. Do you know how the proprietors desire, if they do desire, to alter the constitution of the place?—The school was founded entirely for the purpose of giving a better class boys' school for higher education in theory. The Bishop of Cork, and the Dean of Cork, and myself, Mr. Usher, Mr. Gosling, and Captain Pigot Bennis were the original proprietors. We paid £2,000 for the premises, and spent about £200 afterwards. We engaged a very highly qualified and a very considerable staff of teachers for all departments. The public for some reason did not second our efforts. We have no object whatever in carrying the school on except for the public advantage and would be most anxious that the premises should be used for an intermediate school—a school for higher education, in any way that the Commissioners might consider desirable. If we could obtain an endowment I don't think you would have any difficulty in dealing with the company.

2727. Would you be in a position to take advantage of the proposed scheme for organizing the Cork schools?—We would be quite happy to place it in the hands of the board you would constitute for managing the other schools, and such a board would, very well administer the school.

2727. Then we will ask you to call a meeting of your shareholders, who are the only people really at liberty to deal with the matter, and if you send us a copy of your articles of association with a statement of what you are willing to do, we shall be glad to carry it out for you.

2729. Would you think it to be an advantage that the boys coming from primary schools could come in on cheaper terms, and the income derived from them could be supplemented by the larger fees paid by the sons of gentlemen?—I think so. It seems to me that there is a great want in Cork to enable boys who have received a very good primary education going on afterwards to the higher grades, and these boys are often turned aside for that reason.

2730. Would it be a good allocation of the money of the Bluecoat to pay fees for boys coming from those National schools to this school?—I think it would.

2731. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—It is not a school for which we would undertake to settle a scheme under the Act of Parliament, it is really a private unendowed school, although owned by a company, but if the company wish to act with the others, we will be happy to exercise our powers to help you.

ST. NICOLAS' SCHOOL.

2732. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—The only other parochial school on our list is St. Nicolas'?

Dean Medden.—That is a very large parish school.

2733. How do you propose to deal with it?—The incumbent, Dr. Webster, is a very great educationalist, and I am sure he would fall in with the views of the Commissioners. It is a parish that bounds mine, there are a great number of new buildings for mechanics there, and some of the children attend my school. It is a parish in which it is absolutely essential there should be a good school, and there is a good school there.

2734. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—There is a large endowment connected with St. Nicolas' from Moses Deane and others?

Rev. Mr. Thorpe.—Portion of my endowments comes to me through Dr. Webster, the Rector, £235 half-yearly.

Dean Medden.—The sixth of the resolutions we passed contains this clause:—

"That, in any scheme proposed to the Commissioners, a clause should be introduced to the effect that, without the consent of the present incumbent of any parish, there shall be no interference with existing parochial endowments during his incumbency."

Rev. George Webster, Rector, sworn.

2735. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—You are the rector of St. Nicolas' parish?—Yes.

2736. How long have you been rector?—Nearly thirty years.

2737. There are several schools in your parish that have property. First, St. Nicolas' Parochial National Boys School appears to have an endowment from Moses Deane?—Yes.

2738. What is the present amount of the endowment?—£165 a year.

2739. The former report states it was £3,550 17s. 8d. Government Stock, producing £164 16s. a year?—Yes, that is quite right.

2740. You receive that from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—Yes.

2741. Do you know under what trust they hold it?—Well, it is under Moses Deane's will. When I came to the parish I found an entry in the will as if he wished to spend about £1,000 on an almshouse in St. Nicolas' parish, and I wrote to the Commissioners, putting the facts of the case before them. They wrote back to say that they would not interfere with a question that had been settled in 1831. They would make no change; so accordingly the whole endowment ever since 1831 has gone to the support of the Moses Deane's school.

2742. That school is in connection with the National Board?—It was amalgamated in 1856 with the Parochial National School.

2743. Were they not connected with the National Board until 1853?—No, but they were wretched, miserable, parochial schools, and were always kept up in connection with Moses Deane's school.

2744. Have you separate schools for boys and girls?—Quite separate.

2745. What is now the average attendance?—The average I have now in a paper before me does not include the industrial boys. In the higher female school the number on the rolls this year is 44—average 36. Female infant school, on the rolls, 48?—

Archdeacon Arkdall.

Rev. George Webster.

SAL. 18, 1887.
 Mr. George

average 36. Male infant schools, on the rolls, 52—average 37. In the higher male school the number on the rolls, 59·6—average 40, which is a marvellous average.

2746. That makes four schools?—Yes; I call Moses Deane's school five, and the Industrial school six.

2747. What is Moses Deane's school? I understood you to say that your schools were amalgamated?—Oh, no, we have to carry out the bequest of Moses Deane's will, and clothe twenty boys and twenty girls, according to the terms of his will, which, of course, would not give that school anything like the character of a parochial school.

2748. Is that clothing given to pupils who attend the National school?—They attend the National school.

2749. Are they educated separately?—No, they are taught together.

2750. Are the children in the school called Moses Deane's included in the numbers you have given us?—They are.

2751. Then you have five separate schools under the National Board, and under Moses Deane's bequest you clothe twenty boys and twenty girls?—Yes.

2752. Is Moses Deane's trust devoted exclusively to clothing?—To clothing and education.

2753. How do you apply the £168 16s. 1—Out of Moses Deane's fund I give my head master £35 a year, my head mistress £35, one of the senior mistresses £12, and another £35.

2754. You spoke of higher schools: what is the highest class of education given in the schools?—The National Board programme, quite up to the sixth class—of course including drawing, and all that kind of thing. Then the teacher teaches special classes, if they wish to learn French or anything of that sort. We call them "higher" merely for the purpose of giving distinctive names to them.

2755. Are they all in the same locality?—They are all under the same roof—a very large building, quite close to the church.

2756. How do you hold the buildings?—That is the most important thing that I wish to bring before the Commission. Up to the present the buildings are in a most unsatisfactory state. I want to know first, whether the Commission has power to create a body that will hold the property, for instance, of an Industrial school?

2757. We have power to create a body to hold any educational property whatever, including that of an Industrial school. (Fitzmaurice).—I am very glad to hear that, because I was greatly afraid it was otherwise, on account of the possibility that once this property passes into the hands of my successor he might turn them into corn stores.

2758. Kindly tell us how the schools are held?—It is complicated. First, part is built upon a large property that used to belong to, or was held in trust by, the Bishops of Cork for the support of the choir in St. Fin Barre's Cathedral, called St. John of Jerusalem. A strip belongs to that property, which has been bought by a private individual. The Bishops were never able to give more than a forty years' lease, and I am extremely anxious about it, because the lease of it will expire in 1902.

2759. Is it a renewable lease?—I don't know what the present landlord would do.

2760. Is it a renewable lease?—I don't know what changes the law has made, but the present proprietor, Mr. Reeves, is a clergyman in this diocese. He has bought the whole property.

2761. You mean to say that he has bought the reversion upon your lease?—Of course, I am secure up to 1902.

2762. Is the property devoted to educational purposes?—It has been devoted to educational purposes from time immemorial. The building was built in 1831, at the time Moses Deane's will came into operation. Moses Deane's charity, as far as I can make out, was property left in the last century, and it was worked up by the late Dr. Quinry, who was a clergyman in this city, and some others, and I got other property called St. John's Charity.

2763. What rent do you pay for that portion of the property?—It is a curious thing that I pay £30 a year rent for the first take, and part of that property which is embraced in the £30 belongs to a gentleman, Mr. Alcock Stawell. I took more property afterwards, and part of that which I have now taken belongs to St. John of Jerusalem, and part of it belongs to Mr. Alcock Stawell.

2764. What interest have you got in that?—I built two very splendid schools.

2765. What is your tenure?—I hold under a lease that will expire in 1902.

2766. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—How many leases are there?—There would be really only two. One strip belongs to St. John of Jerusalem, and the strip facing Cove-street belongs to Mr. Alcock Stawell.

2767. When you speak of St. John of Jerusalem what do you refer to?—A very large property granted by Charles II. to the Bishops of Cork for the support of the choir of the cathedral, and which the Bishops of Cork administered as long as the Church was established, but when the Church was dissolved the property went to the Church Temporalities Commission, and it has been sold in the market and has been bought by this private gentleman.

2768. The portion of your schools built upon that property is held under lease, as I understand, which will expire in 1902?—Yes.

2769. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We could not extend the term devoted to educational purposes if the reversion on that term is private property. We cannot take private property and give it to educational purposes?—That is the very question.

2770. But we can create a corporate body to hold whatever property is devoted to educational purposes, and such a body might have a better chance of preserving the endowment and of dealing with the proprietor of the reversion?—I think so.

2771. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—To whom do you pay rent?—I pay rent to the agent of Mr. Alcock Stawell.

2772. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I don't quite understand your title between Mr. Alcock Stawell and the other lot?—Mr. Alcock Stawell really owns the entire holding, and I bought a second part from Mr. Reeves who held under Mr. Alcock Stawell.

2773. Was what you bought only the tenant's interest?—That is all.

2774. Does that tenant's interest expire along with the other in 1902?—That is what I was going to tell you. You may make it all one under Alcock Stawell. There is a corner that I cannot find out when it fell into the hands of the parish, and I have no lease of it. It is part of the £30 a year rent, and Mr. Alcock Stawell has no lease, and his tenant has no lease, and how it came to the parish is to me a mystery, or how it was held originally. All I can find out is that in 1821 they paid £15 a year for one part of that, and that then £15 a year was added. I cannot find out when. That is at the corner of Nicholas's Church-lane. How the land is really held by us I cannot say, it is held by us under no lease whatever, only there is a presumption of course that the property was handed over and the buildings put on it. It was before my time the £15 rent was added.

2775. You get one receipt for the whole £30 a year rent?—Yes.

2776. Has it been all treated as held for the same term?—I cannot say that, because the lease of part is for 999 years. That used to be an old approach to the church and is Mr. Alcock Stawell's. We wanted to get a lease for this and he was quite willing to give it, and I think he is quite willing to give it now, but he could not give it at the time the select vestry wanted him to give it, in 1871, because he was under age, and then the select vestry took the whole thing out of my hands since 1871, and nothing has been done. If they had left it in my hands I would have paid the whole thing off in a few months.

2377. Lord Justice NASH.—Do you think you could get an extension of the lease?—Yes, in a couple of months.

2378. Has any attempt been made since to get the lease extended?—No serious attempt.

2379. Dr. TRAILL.—Mr. Alcock Stowell would be ready to do it now?—Well, he is of full age, and the select vestry are a great body.

2380. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—And they might have got a lease for the whole?—Yes.

2381. Who pays the £30?—I know nothing at all about that.

2382. Why don't the select vestry pay it if they have taken it out of your hands?—The select vestry pay £25 for the additional part which I took, which was the almshouse and the girls' schools.

2383. Is the almshouse in the same building as the schools?—No, the almshouse and the girls' schools and the new approach to the church were all one take. I got it up by giving £50 to Mrs. Roche as an annuity for her life, and paying £25 a year rent. She is dead long since, and now the select vestry pay £25 a year upon that. They are two or three years in debt, I think, but I don't know.

2384. What is their interest in that?—I don't think their interest is more than twenty or thirty years more.

2385. Who is the owner of the reversion at the end of the twenty years?—Mr. Alcock Stowell—Mr. Alcock Stowell again.

2386. Dr. TRAILL.—I think you said there was a lease of 900 years of part of that?—No. The approach to the church was taken, when the new church of St. Nicolas's was being built, on the faith that the corporation would improve the condition of Cove-street, build a new city hall, and put a bridge across the river there. The corporation have not done any of those three things, but the people of St. Nicolas's pay £9 a year for that.

2387. Lord Justice FRERGINSON.—You have a long term for that?—900 years.

2388. What part of your school property is built under the 900 years' term?—My workshops, my big schoolrooms, and what we call No. 7 dormitory in the industrial school—a very large room.

2389. Have you any steps of these buildings or holdings?—I really could not say. All the documents were handed over to the collector to the select vestry in 1871, and I got two or three the other day by begging for them, but they are of no great importance.

2390. How would you propose to constitute a body to hold all that property?—I think the great advantage—to my mind the exceeding advantage, and the absence of it I would call a blot—would be that there should be a body created in Cork of some sort who would see that the schools would be always preserved for educational purposes. I, my own self, collected £7,600 for building them, and I certainly would leave the man after my death, if I could, who would turn them into corn stores. I think if the Corporation appointed some sort of Corporation, who would hold the property, it would make the chances of that industrial school. Also the industrial school, which is equally undefended, would require the same provision, for there is no body to protect the property, not even the rector and churchwardens, and the only persons mentioned in the leases are people that have ceased to exist now.

2391. How is the industrial school building held—is it all on the one property, or is it on an independent site?—The places I have told you of are built on the top of that building—that is what we call No. 6. No. 6 dormitory is built on the top of what used to be the infant schools. I built two large girls' schools at the Great Gate, as we call it in St. Nicolas, at very great cost, to bring the girls out of the boys' school altogether. They are only day schools.

2392. Whether do you propose a parochial body to hold this property, or do you fall in with the proposal to have a general body for the whole city of Cork?—I would certainly rather have a body extending over all Cork.

2393. Do you approve of the proposal in reference to St. Nicolas's, that this property to which you have referred should be vested with the property of the other schools of the city, in some general body for the purposes of management?—With certain limitations of their powers—certainly.

2394. Lord Justice NASH.—What limitations would you propose?—I did not attend the meetings of my reverend brethren, but I am utterly opposed to the destruction of parochial schools in Cork; and I cannot understand how any clergyman would wish to have his children sent to what is called a district school. There is a very large district school in my own parish, inside the walls of which no clergyman of the Church of Ireland has put his foot for many years except the clergy of my own parish, that is called the model school; and I don't understand how any clergyman could possibly wish to have the children of his own congregation handed over to the charge of other clergyman.

2395. What are the limits of St. Nicolas parish?—It embraces the whole of the south side of the city up to the cathedral.

2396. Would it suit your ideas if the property was vested in a joint body in trust to manage this school as a school for the parish of St. Nicolas?—Certainly; because when I am gone the Free Church, which is in my parish, will be created an independent rectory, and will take off a majority of the people who are worse anything in the way of money, and then St. Nicolas parish will be the poorest parish in the City of Cork with an enormous Protestant population.

2397. What is the Protestant population of your parish?—I think it is 3,000. Some think it is only 2,500. It was 3,000 the last time I made an accurate count.

2398. Dr. TRAILL.—Would your parish be inclined to join a central system so far as to have an intermediate school to which your older boys and girls might be sent?—I am utterly opposed to it.

2399. Do you approve of the intermediate system of education?—I don't take any interest in intermediate education.

2400. Have you got boys and girls fit to enter upon a course of intermediate education?—I would not be bothered sending them.

2401. What becomes of their education after they leave you?—I don't know exactly what you mean.

2402. What I mean to say is—after they arrive at an age when they would be fit for intermediate education have they to go and get that education in other schools in Cork?—I believe some of them have gone looking for those money prizes in other schools, but I don't take any interest in that matter.

2403. Do you think that education should stop when a pupil leaves a National school?—I don't think it should ever stop.

2404. How would you provide for it then?—I keep them as long as I can myself. I keep them for the sake of their continued improvement.

2405. Do you keep a class yourself for intermediate education?—I do not.

2406. Then how are those boys who become old enough for it to receive intermediate education?—As well as they can get it. The teaching they are getting in my school is simply sufficient; but they are not educated.

2407. To what age do the pupils remain in your school?—I am sorry to say I cannot keep them very long—they are so frequently picked up for situations to which they are taken.

2408. Do they remain with you up to the age of sixteen I—I don't think I have a boy of sixteen in the school. I have one stupid boy.

2809. Are there boys and girls continuing to attend the schools up to the age of fourteen?—About that time they leave me.

2810. Do they leave you for occupations?—Yes.

2811. Are there none of them clever enough to get further education in the future so as to better their position in life?—I never clip the wings that God has given any child. I have some of my boys in Holy Orders, and I have some of them in other very responsible positions.

2812. Now take the boy that gets Holy Orders—how did he get the education that fitted him for the Church?—By honest diligent study.

2813. Under your own personal supervision?—As far as he ever wanted it.

2814. What is your objection to their getting intermediate education?—Cramming.

2815. But do you not think a good intermediate school could be kept up?—I don't think that any intermediate school could be kept up unless it went in for the money prize.

2816. There is an attempt being made in the Cork Grammar School to give intermediate education?—I am sorry to hear it.

2817. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You understand, Dr. Webster, that it is perfectly possible that one incorporated body should hold any number of different lots of property under different trusts, and it is equally possible to create a separate corporate body for each quantity of property that is held for the same trust. The proposal is to create one corporate body for all the Protestant parochial endowments in the city of Cork, which will hold all the property and see that the several trusts are served out. I understand you desire that St. Nicholas's endowment should be vested in that body?—I do, very much.

2818. The proposal is that the body should be constituted of the clergy of the various parishes with laymen elected by the various vestries. In that body the representatives of St. Nicholas's would be a constituent part, but nothing more, but the least on which each part of the property is to be held would be declared. As to St. Nicholas's, it is independent of any other parish now, and you desire that its endowments should continue to be applied for the benefit of the parish, or if it comes to exist that they should be preserved for education. We will ask you, at your leisure, to give us an accurate statement as you can of the property. If you have any difficulty in making out your complicated title if you can send us any original documents that you have we will read them rather than put you to costs. We also wish you to give us a full statement of the trusts that you would wish to impose on the new governing body. We cannot bind ourselves to carry out exactly your wishes, but we cannot settle any scheme without giving you ample opportunity of being heard. I rather gathered from the statements of the other gentlemen that St. Nicholas's was intended to form a district in itself, and whatever the effect may be in other parts of the town the "district" of St. Nicholas's would be the same thing as the parish.

2819. Have you any endowment for the Industrial School?—None whatever.

2820. Is it maintained entirely by the Corporation and Grand Jury grants?—No, indeed. I have very hard work in begging for it besides. I must get £100 a year to keep the school going.

2821. Is voluntary contributions?—Yes, up to £150 a year. Without that money we could not possibly keep up the school.

2822. What number of boys have you in the Industrial School?—Seventy.

2823. You are certified for a hundred?—I am certified for a hundred.

2824. Why is not the school full?—I say it is because of the utter indifference and selfishness of the Protestants of Ireland.

2825. Do you mean in allowing you to want subscriptions?—Not at all. In not seeking for poor starving children, and bringing them before a magistrate and sending them to schools such as this.

2826. Dr. TRAILL.—You mean the Protestants of the south of Ireland?—The school is open to all Ireland.

2827. You would not expect us in the north of Ireland to send children to your school?—I have children in my school from the extreme north of Ireland.

2828. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Would there be any appreciable increase in the expenditure by raising the number from 75 to 100?—It would be much more easy to sustain it at the full number.

2829. What is the nearest Protestant Industrial male school to you?—At Murlis Hill, Blackrock, near Cork.

2830. Does it take the same class of boys?—Yes; and I think there is a reason for that, because the boys in that school have only a means of learning agriculture. To a certain extent they are boys made intended for agricultural work, because they have got land; my boys have an opportunity of taking drish and things of that sort.

2831. What instruction do you give to prepare them for such things?—They get the full round of the education of the National Board. They are taught with the day boys, and we go by the law of the Commissioners who very shrewdly won't allow us to count them among the averages of the day boys—they are not so counted—just as the Incorporated Society for twenty years would not allow a child educated in a National school to compete for the Parnock Scholarship. Since I won the victory in Harcourt-street, after twenty years of fighting to compel the Incorporated Society to allow Protestant boys in National schools to compete for the Parnock, it was transferred to Marlborough-street to the National Board, and that board will not allow industrial schoolboys to be counted in the averages of the day boys. The Incorporated Society would not give us any encouragement because they are kept up to maintain Protestant schools, and now the Commissioners of National Education will not allow us any encouragement because they are forbidden to keep up urban schools; and to the present hour I say they are most stupidly refusing to allow industrial boys to be counted among the averages of National schools. There are very few persons in Ireland who allow National and industrial schools under the same roof, and who foster their education given in common, under the auspices of the Commissioners.

2832. Your seventy industrial boys are being taught in the same school with the National boys?—Yes. Of course, the masters are specially paid for them, and the head master gets a grand deal for his pains from the Industrial School Fund.

2833. Dr. TRAILL.—Why won't they allow them to be counted in the National school averages?—Because the Commissioners in Marlborough-street were founded by her Majesty for the purpose of supporting National schools, and they admit children of every denomination. They are an un denominational board, while the industrial schools are denominational, and it is their function in life to destroy denominational schools.

2834. But if they come from a denominational school to an un denominational school like a National school why should not they be counted among the averages?—As to that you must ask the Commissioners of National Education, and I wish to goodness you could get them to give an answer.

2835. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—So far as I know the reason is that there is a grant already given for the maintenance and instruction of industrial boys which is supposed to be sufficient and therefore they will not give a second grant from public funds through the National Board?—That is not the real reason, and I am in a position to say so. That would be an exanswerable argument if the Government, which only pays 5s. a week, gave to who are the patrons of industrial schools enough money to both clothe feed and educate the boys; but they don't give it, or anything approaching to it. The whole thing would not cost the Commissioners £500 a year, and for this 2500 a year they are grudging us what we so urgently need, and creating irritation among all the managers. There is one revered mother at Kinnale, and there are one or two others in the North—where the Roman Catholic National school has a lady patron who is manager of the industrial school.

1886. The industrial school money is not paid through the National Board?—Certainly not. It is paid through Her Majesty's Treasury.

1887. They both come out of the Treasury in the end?—Yes, in the end. The argument would be answerable if the sum got from the Treasury, Corporation, and Grand Jury was enough to clothe, educate, and feed the boys and girls. But we don't get enough. If the case of my friend of the Greenmount School was examined it would be pretty much the same as mine. The Blue Book can be referred to, and you will see that the average cost of the boys in my school is much the same as in the Greenmount School—and pretty much the same all over Ireland. We are all agreed that we do not get enough money for the support of our boys and girls.

1888. How much is allowed?—5s.

1889. How much do you receive from the grand jurymen?—That depends a great deal on the grand jury.

1890. Do not the grand juries give 5s. 6d. 1.—Some grand juries do, but one grand jury that meets in Glencolm won't give me anything and owes me £25. Grand juries are not bound to give a halfpenny. The grand jury of Cork only gives 1s., but the other day I believe we waited 6d. more out of them.

1891. You think that there should be a grant for industrial school education in addition to the grant for maintenance?—The question is a very complex one. Any real friend of the National Board knows the awful importance of it. We get that which everyone knows the importance of getting—that is teachers of the same class as National school teachers. For example, my second master is in the industrial school, and is a highly qualified teacher under the National Board, but I have to pay him very largely in order to get his services, and the fact of his teaching in St. Nicholas Industrial Schools has not disqualified him from taking a position in a National school if it offered itself. But it is not a money question so far as I am concerned, it is the esprit de corps, it is the morale of the thing. I pay my teachers very largely, and I also pay the National school teachers school fees out of the industrial school fund, and the result fees also, so as to keep the children on a level with the others. The people I am trying to fight are most insouciant. If the Commissioners said they would not allow an industrial school to be at all connected with a National school that would be intelligible; but the late Judge Longfield and other persons of great influence carried so far with the Commissioners that they acquiesced in the proposition that where there was the same patron of an industrial school and a National school the industrial boys might be taught in the National school, but that they were not to be counted in the averages. Therefore they are tabooed. I demand that I should get the sum of money which I pay to have the children raised to precisely the same level and not have one looked upon as inferior to the other.

1892. Then your proposition is that where there is the same patron and where the industrial school pupils are ranked up with the National school pupils for all purposes as regards their school education, for school fees and results fees they should be counted in the averages under the National Board system?—Quite so.

1893. I don't think that is a matter we can give effect to, but we can give precedence to your view?—That is the reason I mentioned it, because you are taking such evidence, and it is most important.

1894. Would it be equally beneficial to girls? Yes. In reference to the Blue Coat School, if I had been allowed to be one of the governors thirty years ago I should have had all those boys sent down to my schools to get a tip top education instead of leaving them to Mr. Somerville, who has had an enormous amount of labour and trouble for the last thirty years; but I was not allowed to go near it at all, though it is in the same parish.

1895. Dr. TRAILL.—If the pupils of the Blue Coat were taken into your school and educated there would that meet your wishes?—Yes. And in my industrial schools; take off what you wish for the education of the children, and let me send all the children to a good National school in place, and I will be satisfied.

1896. Lord Justice FRYGIMORE.—As I understand you, all you want is to have the industrial pupils taught in a National school as if they were ordinary pupils?—Yes.

1897. Can you give, in your school, to the pupils now in the Blue Coat School as good an education as they are getting in that school?—The thing is not to be compared. I go miles beyond them; Mr. Somerville cannot work miracles. He has done wonders as it is, and is as good a man as ever lived, but you can't make an empty sack stand.

1898. What is the endowment of the Woodley Scholarship?—There was a lady in my parish going to put a window up in memory of a little child that died, but she said she would do whatever I liked in reference to it. I said that a much more rational thing than putting up a window would be to found a scholarship. Accordingly she founded the scholarship, and left me to be the manager of the whole thing. I invested the money in Three per Cents, and the dividend I devoted to a prize. The boy or girl who gives the best answering in "Woodley's Evidence" every year is to get the prize.

1899. Is the money standing in your own name?—Yes, in my own name individually.

1900. Would you desire to transfer that into a corporate name?—Yes, on trust for the Woodley Scholarship.

1901. With regulations as at present, or such other regulations as the rector for the time being might desire?—No. The lady who gave it is still alive, she first gave it for boys, and I had great difficulty in getting her to extend it to girls; and she takes great interest in it. It is to be called "The Woodley Scholarship"—after the name of the child who died; and it is to be devoted by my desire to the study of Archbishop Woodley's "Evidence," and nothing else but that one book.

1902. Lord Justice FRYGIMORE.—For all the parish schools that have come before us we have no difficulty in undertaking to draw up a scheme, I don't say precisely, because matters of detail must be considered, but substantially in the way proposed—that is, to substitute for the parochial system, a district system consisting of primary schools and, above them, a better school for the Protestant inhabitants of Cork in each area as those best acquainted with the town from time to time may find it to be the best. As regards any parochial schools at present not within the proposed, the body which we will constitute will have power to deal with other parishes, as circumstances may enable them to bring them in without compulsion. There are two endowments before us that are in a different position. First, the Blincoet, in which we have done all that is now in our power to do, in directing as urgently as we are able the attention of the governing body to the present waste of that endowment, and the great need of bringing it in with the others, and making it most useful for supplying intermediate or technical or superior education above that to be given by the primary schools. As regards the Greencoat School, it would not be possible to bring the endowment as a whole at once into the district scheme. Some of the purposes of the charity are very distinct from those of the parochial charities which are to be amalgamated, but we are strongly of opinion that the portion of the funds available for educational purposes ought to be administered jointly with the rest. The mode of doing this would be, perhaps, inter alia matter for lawyers' consideration, in framing the scheme so as best to utilise the funds. We went there this morning, and also to St. Mary's, Shandon, School, and I must say that the result of our inspection was that the Greencoat Hospital does not appear to us to be a very eligible building for a school. It is very old, much more fitted for the purposes of the almshouse than for the educational part of the charity. The schoolrooms are old-fashioned and gloomy, and not in good repair, and altogether it is a depressing place, which is perhaps the worst thing that could be said of a schoolroom. But it is there, and it would be a pity to waste money in building another school until money is more plentiful than it is at present. St. Mary's School is a much better building, and until people become more luxurious, it would appear rather wasteful to discontinue that as a schoolhouse. But it is our duty to make every possible endeavour to utilise the Greencoat Education Fund in aid of the general educational system of that part of the city. We will ask the gentlemen representing each of the endowments included in these proposals to send us a detailed statement of the property, describing his school premises, and stating the title to them, because if we are to vest this property in a new body we must describe it as it would be described in a deed; and also to give us particulars of any other available funds. Although we have a good deal of this information before us, it should be furnished separately and certified to be correct. As soon as we have a schedule of the property to be included we will prepare a draft scheme. When the scheme is drafted and published, everybody concerned, during two months, can make suggestions which will be considered before the scheme is agreed. I must say that it is exceedingly gratifying to find a continued effort made here to utilise these ancient endowments. In every city we have found a number of endowments running away in dribsles, no use to anybody, whereas if all were gathered together they might be used well, and Cork has set an admirable example in this matter.

HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, CORK.

Ven. Mervyn Arundell, Archdeacon, examined.

Ven. Mervyn
Arundell.

2853. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What was the origin of the High School for Girls, Sydneyquay?—It began by the late Mr. Gosling and myself taking pity on the infants of the better class whose teaching was of a very trying kind compared with that of little children in National schools taught by trained teachers. We were the first, I think, in this country that introduced an English trained Kindergarten teacher, and we had a very large infant school for children under eight years of age of the more respectable people of the city. It was not a school school, but it was a school to which we sent our own children, and which we were very glad to have. When those children grew up, there was no institution in Cork for Protestant girls of the higher classes, that carried on a trained system of teaching, and we were at a loss to know what to do with the girls. The boys of course went to other schools. We brought over an English lady, Miss Arthy, highly trained and experienced, who carried on the school. The High School has been going on for eight years. She was here about four years, and then Miss Martin took it up as her success. Mr. Gosling first undertook the cost of it, but he found large and improved schoolrooms and appliances would be necessary, and he associated with him, on bearing the cost, the late Mr. Usher and Mr. Robert Hall, and with them we had a Board chiefly of clergy, the Dean of Cork, and myself, and Canon Harley, and the Bishop was Visitor of the school, and is so still. The lay gentlemen of the Board laid out a large sum of money on it. This school has always been conducted by the proprietors with a large amount of liberality. The non-proprietory members of the Board associated with them have been allowed equal privileges in the conduct of affairs, showing that it was a public spirit and desire for public education that influenced the proprietors. They have never gained any interest on their outlay from first to last. This programme (produced) will give you information as regards the present position of the school. The original cost of the buildings as taken from the original accounts was £2,767 to the proprietors.

2854. How was that money raised?—They gave it out of their own private means. They never made anything by it. We understand that the proprietors have the control of the funds, but they have always allowed the Board, originally constituted by Mr. Gosling and me, and since filled up by the Board itself with non-proprietors, a larger number than the proprietors, a full voice in the matter. But I am sure that the proprietors, if the Commission could see their way to have an endowment for Intermediate Education for this school, would accept a scheme, reserving their proprietary rights, but limiting any profit that they may derive from the outlay on the school which has already taken place.

2855. We have no endowment that we could give. What we did in a similar case in Dublin, that of the Alexandra College and School, was to incorporate the managing body of the institution, vest the property in that body, sleeping delegates upon it which represented the original cost still unpaid, and providing for the regulation of the education by an educating body, not part of the supreme body but represented on it, and for the election from time to time of a governing body. Except by thus equipping you more completely to take advantage of the Intermediate Education system I don't know that we can do much. We thought it was possible you might have some funds for Protestant Intermediate purposes that you might be able to give us. We don't participate in the county Cork in any of the endowments under the Erasmus Smith Board or the Incorporated Society, and I don't know a stiffer object than the High School. We have 111 people on the roll, and although the majority are members of the Church of Ireland all the Protestant bodies of the city and neighbourhood are represented. We have not only a Church of Ireland catechist but a Wesleyan catechist for religious teaching, and the school is quite open in every way, and taken advantage of by all the Protestant people. There is nothing to hinder our Roman Catholic neighbors from taking advantage of its religious instruction is not compulsory. When I tell you that with all the depression in the south of Ireland for some years past, the school is at this moment more swelled of and in a better position than it ever has been before, it is evidence of how it meets a want in this city.

2855. What is the most pressing want to be met, if any small sum of money were available as an endowment?—The endowment of teachers for special branches of higher education. Our trained teachers are necessarily limited as regards the subjects they teach. The trained teaching goes chiefly to the ordinary branches of education. At present we supplement it with modern languages, and also with a certain knowledge of Greek and Latin and Higher Mathematics. You cannot expect the trained teachers to have a thorough acquaintance all round with those subjects, and the great want is thoroughly skilled teachers, professors, male or female, who could help us in such subjects. Also it would be very useful to give certain scholarships, if the money was to be had, to those girls who are going on for teachers. We have on our Board Professor Ridgway, Professor of Greek in the Queen's College, who takes a great interest in it, as do the Board generally. Miss Martin is most anxious to advance the education in the school up to a point necessary to enable the girls to go through the University.

2856. Can you give us your views as to how a Governing Body ought to be constituted?—What you stated with regard to Alexandra College ought to be very nearly the lines. There ought to be a body that would have absolute control of the education. Reserving the rights of the proprietors I think the educational body should be as representative as possible.

2857. Dr. TRAILL.—You mean when the profits reached a certain point, as soon as they get five per cent. on their money, for instance, the rest should be spent on the school?—Yes.

Mr. R. Gregg.—The proprietors would be quite willing to accept that.

2858. Archbishop Archedell.—There are three proprietors and Mr. Gregg can speak for them.

2859. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What representative body do you say they ought to be?—I think there should be a certain ex-officio representation.

2860. What offices would you look to?—I would say my successor in the office of Archbishop of Cork, it is a more popular appointment than it was in past times, and one or two city clergymen, perhaps the rector of St. Luke's or St. Anne's, and if it were possible to have education represented by certain professors connected with the Queen's College or other educational institutions.

2861. In the Alexandra College they have a certain number of clergymen or professors, and those who occupy them constitute the council of studies, but they have larger numbers to draw upon than you have in Cork?—Quite so, I think you should have the Board practically elected from certain classes in the city, and representative also of the interests of the parents of pupils.

2862. In some schemes that we have settled, persons who have paid a certain amount of school fees elect a representative on the managing body. Do you think that would be a good element?—I doubt it, at present in Cork, I think, it would be a dangerous element.

2863. Dr. MOLLOY.—Outside the ex-officio element you speak of, how would you provide the other members of the Board?—I think at present it ought to be done by co-option.

2864. Suppose we put in a provision that the members co-opted should be persons versed in education?—I think that should be necessary, and they should have some distinction in connection with education, some university degree, or a position in connection with literary societies.

2865. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you give a veto to persons who subscribed £100?—I think so.

2866. Or would you approve that annual subscribers of £10 should elect one—something of that sort?—Yes.

2867. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Is there any machinery at present for collecting subscriptions?—The school has been entirely supported by the proprietary members, and now it is practically self-supporting, but we would wish very much to have means of endowing certain professorships connected with the school to make the more advanced teaching thoroughly efficient.

2868. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The governing body would, of course, be empowered to receive endowments, and accumulate or apply any funds available, and take their share of any open endowments, such as the Intermediate Education Fund. With regard to the endowments you have mentioned of the Incorporated Society and the Erasmus Smith Board, we have fully investigated their origin, and we find that with perhaps one very small exception, all the Incorporated Society's endowments are derived from private donors, and many of them limited to particular places or purposes; they are in fact an aggregation of a number of totally distinct endowments under the management of one governing body. We therefore could not, consistently with the Act, divert them from the intentions of the founders, but, so far as they are denominational (and without positively sanctioning our decision, we say so) the tendency of the evidence is that they are denominational, we would endeavour to create a central body representing the denomination to which they belong, which would have power to assist, from any fees funds they have, any institution that they thought proper. The Erasmus Smith's endowments are in a different position. We have not advanced as all so far in the inquiry with regard to them, but the whole of that property is derived from a single donor, and is covered by his intentions, which are complicated in some respects, but I know nothing tending to the conclusion that we could extend them to Cork?—If we could get a scheme of incorporation, we would be far more likely to induce the Board of the Incorporated Society to give us aid afterwards.

2870. What is your present staff?—Miss Martin can give you the particulars, but our head mistress has always been a lady recognised as trained and educated, thoroughly understanding the whole discipline and order of girls' school-teaching in England. We founded it on the principle of the English High Schools, and have always tried to obtain the same class of teachers. We were not able to get the class of teachers, from a social point of view, trained here in Ireland; and therefore we have had always hitherto to bring them from England, and especially our head mistress, and also the head mistress of the Kindergarten. We have found that the education imparted was of the most thorough character, the classes had all attained a certain standard of knowledge just as they do in the schools under the Government inspection, only of course embracing a wider curriculum, and I don't think there is in Ireland at present any other school conducted as ours is on the principle of the English High School.

2871. You have a very extensive Kindergarten establishment; do you find the teaching of modelling, drawing, needlework, &c., useful?—Very useful. We have girls who began in the Kindergarten and went on through the whole intermediate course, junior, middle and senior. We never sought distinction in the course, because that requires special training, but girls went up out of their ordinary course and passed most creditably; the average of passes has been far above the average of ordinary schools. At the same time we cannot do much as an intermediate school because the parents of girls don't care to have them go to except in special cases.

2873. Do you think they are getting out of that feeling?—To a certain extent they are; it depends a good deal on whether the head mistress encourages it or not. Miss Martin did not in the past, because she did not see the bearing of the examination, but now I think she does.

2874. The northern teachers told us the great difficulty was with the parents; the parents thought it was bad for the girls, but the teachers told us the children who went in for these examinations were better, and happier, and more industrious than those who did not.—That is my experience. On one occasion we sent three of our girls up to Trinity College examinations, and one of them was elected next to the Provost's daughter, and they all got high places, but we found parents in Cork don't care to send them up to Dublin. Our great difficulty in Cork is to get well-to-do parents to leave their children in the hands of the teachers, so as to deal with them in the most advisable manner; they lay down conditions and make special arrangements by which we cannot advance the children. But I hope the Commissioners will be enabled to say that this school is unique as regards the character of the head mistress, and the system under which it is conducted.

2875. We saw it was an extremely well arranged and very well-furnished institution, occupying apparently a very high position, but having seen the Alexander College in Dublin, and the Ladies' Academical Institutions in Belfast and Londonderry, don't ask us to say your school is "unique" though it seems certainly up to anything we have seen elsewhere.

2876. Dr. MONAGHAN.—We think your institution is highly efficient and does excellent work, but we have seen other institutions which seem not less efficient or deserving of encouragement. I think Mrs. Byers, in Belfast, does quite as much as you do at that superior intellectual training which requires specially trained teachers, only Mrs. Byers has not been obliged to go to England for her teachers, because she trains them herself.—They have a class of trained ladies in the north of Ireland which we have not got here, and we had to go to England on that account.

2877. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I suppose your girls in time may supply you with that class.—That is one of the advantages the school gives. There is one of them at least in the school acting as a trained teacher.

2878. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—I quite agree with everything you said except the word unique.—I mean in this respect that it is the only school in Ireland that is strictly on the lines of the English High School.

2879. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is that in respect of having teachers trained in England?—Perhaps I am wrong as regards Belfast, I could not say, I don't think in any provincial town of our dates with a limited Protestant population there is anything like it.

2880. There is another northern town, Derry, equally well provided with ladies' schools.—Well, the Commissioners have a wider experience than I have, at the same time there has been a great difficulty from ear limited population, and the very large and worthy competition of private teachers, and it is a very difficult thing in Cork to maintain a thoroughly efficient system of education carrying on the pupils all through a regular curriculum. We certainly have had great difficulties in working the school up, now it seems to have attained a position where it is appreciated and our position understood and our numbers are increasing. There is another school that will come before you—Rochelle, in which I take a great interest, it has acted as a training school, and I think it would be great pity if one of these schools should clash with the other.

2881. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—There is no hostility, I believe, between the two?—None, whatsoever.

Robert Gregg, solicitor, answers.

Robert Gregg.

2882. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are one of the proprietors of the High School?—I am.

2883. Can you tell us from a lawyer's point of view what your position is?—There are two separate leases under which the property is held, one portion, formerly the school occupied by Mr. O'Brien, is part of the Kindergarten; of that we have a lease made in 1852 for 500 years at a ground rent of 28 s. a year. In 1881, for the enlargement of the school, Messrs. Goulding and the other proprietors took a new piece of ground upon which the greater portion of the school you saw to-day was built.

2884. How did they become proprietors of Mr. O'Brien's interest?—By assignment from time to time they purchased the interests, and eventually Mr. Goulding took an assignment of the lease to Mr. O'Brien. He afterwards took a lease to himself, Mr. Osborne, and Mr. Hall of the other portions of the ground upon which the classrooms are built, for a term of 500 years at £15 a year.

2885. Then you are liable to 225 s. for the entire premises?—Yes, and Mr. Goulding laid out about £1,050 on the premises. The property remained vested in Mr. Goulding, Mr. Hall, and Mr. Osborne.

2886. Was any trust declared?—No, except that it was stated in the deeds to be taken for the purpose of increasing the accommodation.

2887. Are any of these gentlemen still living?—Mr. Hall is living.

2888. Is he still a proprietor?—No; Mr. Goulding having died his interest vested in his son, Mr. Wm.

Goulding, who lives in Dublin, and he and Mr. Hall assigned their interest to Messrs. Robert Day, W. H. Hill, and myself.

2889. Do you hold as assignees for value or as trustees?—We hold as assignees for value, we have purchased them completely out for the purpose of keeping it as a school.

2890. What amount of money did you apply for that purpose?—£1,000.

2891. How was that £1,000 made up?—Made up evenly between Mr. Day, Mr. Hill, and myself.

2892. Then the private money now in the place is represented by £335 6s. 8d. for each of three proprietors?—Yes.

2893. There was £1,797 more spent by Mr. Goulding?—Between them there was a loss of that amount to the previous proprietors.

2894. Archibald Archibald.—Mr. Osborne's representative went to live in England, and previously handed it over to Mr. Goulding and Mr. Hall; he had mortgage on it, and they paid him his mortgage, so his proprietary interest was vested in them.

2895. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—There was a contribution at all events of over £1,700 by the three outgoing gentlemen?

Mr. Gregg.—That would be the result of it.

2896. And the three present gentlemen have paid £1,000?—Yes.

2897. What is the claim of the three present proprietors as to that £1,000; how far do they hold themselves bound by any trust for education?

—There is no trust of any kind; we merely purchased the interest in the premises, and whatever the good-will of the school, if it might be so called, is.

2988. How is the financial business of the school carried on?—The secretary, Mr. Harrison, receives all the monies each term; he sends out the accounts to the parents of the children, gets in the money, and pays everything, and up to the present it has never done more than pay the actual outgoings without any interest.

2989. But you have not had to advance any further money?—No. The deed was only executed on the 14th September last; we had arranged about twelve months ago for taking it up, and we have it since June, 1886, actually under the proprietary.

2990. If the place is finally devoted to educational purposes by a scheme under the Act, what demand should be maintained against it in the interests of the proprietors?—The proprietors would, of course, be delighted to hand over their interest for the money they have given in order to keep it up as an educational establishment.

2991. Would they be satisfied with a charge upon the premises for £1,000 principal, and not to receive payment except out of any surplus after keeping the institution going?—That would be my own opinion, and I am certain Mr. Day has the same opinion. I have not spoken to Mr. Hill on the question.

2992. Rev. Dr. Motley.—Should you be willing that all the income derived from pupils fees should go to the maintenance of the institution, and that no part should be set aside for the profit of the proprietors?—Decidedly. If there was any surplus afterwards to go to payment of interest for the money, I would not say that they would not wish to get some small interest for it.

2993. There never will be a surplus if you devote all the money to improving the school?—I think from what I heard expressed the other day by Mr. Day, that he looked upon the money as gone, and that would be my own view.

2994. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Would it satisfy your view that your £333 6s. 8d. should be treated as money invested on these buildings, subject to a joint trust for education, and that you should get your money back out of the premises, for that plainly would be just, if it ever ceased to be a school?—I am quite satisfied.

2995. In other words, you are quite ready to hand over this £1,000 as an endowment for the institution?—Yes.

2996. And if it ever ceased to be an efficient institution, you should receive back the premises or your money?—That would be only fair.

Archdeacon Arkdall.—I think those gentlemen ought to have a clause in any deed drawn up, by which interest at five per cent. should accrue to them, provided the educational requirements of the school would be met.

2997. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The educational requirements are very elastic, and will always go as far as the money will reach.

Rev. Dr. Motley.—It will simplify matters very much if we regard the school buildings and premises as an endowment.

Archdeacon Arkdall.—The earning for 1876 was exactly £751, and the expenditure was over £600. We are earning now at the rate of over £300 a year, so that that would leave some little surplus.

2998. Rev. Dr. Motley.—If we may deal with this as an endowment, we must constitute a governing body to manage it, and incorporate that body and make it perpetual. We must therefore provide in some way for successors to the present governing body. There are three proprietors at present; as regards these proprietors, perhaps the best way would be to allow each of them to nominate his successor. In case any proprietor does not nominate his successor, we should provide for the succession in another way; but we might, in the first instance, give him the option?

Mr. Gregg.—Yes, sometimes it is rather difficult to get people to accept a trust.

2999. Rev. Dr. Motley.—Next, I think it would be desirable to enlarge the governing body in order to give the school an opportunity of expanding; and the Archdeacon has suggested that possibly we might put on ex-officio the clergymen of the parishes from which the pupils come as persons that will take an active interest in the institution. I think you mentioned three; one of them was the rector of St. Luke's?

Archdeacon Arkdall.—They come from the whole city.

3000. Dr. Traill.—The great difficulty is that some clergymen who would be on ex-officio might take no interest in the school.

3001. Rev. Dr. Motley.—Then should you object to the ex-officio element, or should you think it desirable to have at least the rector of the parish in which the school is situated?

Mr. Gregg.—I certainly would like to have the rector of the parish, and one or two others associated with him in addition to the lay proprietors.

3002. Dr. Traill.—Would it satisfy you if the clergy of Cork were to choose representatives amongst themselves?—Not if the board was constituted with too large a number.

3003. But supposing the clergy chose two representatives, selecting in each case the most suitable person, whether he be the rector of St. Luke's or of any other parish?—I think so.

3004. Rev. Dr. Motley.—Should you think seven too large a number for the governing body?—I would not, we have six at the present moment.

3005. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Who are the six?—The proprietors, the Archdeacon, Canon Hanley, and Professor Ridgway.

3006. How did you appoint them?—We nominated Professor Ridgway ourselves.

3007. Rev. Dr. Motley.—Suppose you decide upon having a board of seven or eight; you have already got the three proprietors, and the rector of the parish; the Diocesan Council might elect one person who would represent the general interest of the Protestants of Cork, and then the board could co-opt two persons interested in education, so as to bring the number up to seven?—I think that would be a sufficient way of doing it.

3008. As a matter of fact you have the rector of the parish at present?—We have.

3009. Is it in St. Luke's?—It is not. I happen to be one of St. Luke's congregation, although I am further away from it than the school, in fact it is St. Anne's, Shandon. I would have no objection whatever to have the Rector of St. Anne's, Shandon.

3010. Suppose we put on the two rectors of St. Luke's and St. Anne's?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The only ex-officio member of the Alexandra College Board is the Archbishop.

Mr. Gregg.—Our present Bishop is a visitor.

3011. Dr. Traill.—Is there anything parochial about it?—No, the only reason I mentioned the rector was because I was dealing with the Archdeacon and thinking he was the rector at the moment. The religious instruction is looked after by a clergyman of St. Luke's parish.

3012. Do your board feel themselves free to invite any clergyman they choose?—We always like to take one who is close to us.

3013. Would it not be better that all the clergymen of the different parishes from which the girls come should themselves choose one or two or whatever number of clergymen you wanted to be on?

Archdeacon Arkdall.—It would occur to me that the Board you propose to constitute for the management of the primary schools would have the clergy of the city and certain lay men on it, and that Board might have the power of nominating one or two members.

Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—We could give the nomination to the Diocesan Council, or to any body authorised to act for the Diocesan Council, (as the Board of Religious Education in its constitution might not be sufficiently permanent).

2923. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You have no body of subscribers at present?—None whatever.

2924. Suppose benevolent persons were to contribute largely to the institution, should you think it desirable to give them a right of nominating to the Board in some way proportionate to their contributions, say all subscribers of £100 and upwards?

Mr. Gregg.—I don't know whether so small a sum as that.

Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—The backbone of northern institutions is this franchise for subscribers. There have been five gentlemen up to the present who have given large sums of money to this plan.

2925. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—It would not be desirable to do anything that would swamp the original proprietors. But do you not think it would stimulate people to come forward and subscribe, if subscribers were allowed to have a voice in the selection of the governing body?—I don't think there is much chance of it.

2926. Dr. TRAILL.—Provided the number to represent those subscribers was not more than three or five?—Oh, decidedly, if it did not exceed a certain number, did not exceed seven, I think that would be quite a sufficient number to be on the Board, you never had more than three or four to attend.

2927. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—We have already provided for seven, three proprietors, two elected by the Diocesan Council, and two voted in education council?—That might be sufficient.

Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—We might add two more to be elected by subscribers of a substantial sum, say £20 or upwards, if the number of such subscribers reached a certain figure.

2928. Dr. TRAILL.—Would it be possible for the present proprietors to sell their interest to a variety of persons, suppose each of you sold £100 to another person, could the number of proprietors be increased in any way?—It could, for instance, if we were to make it a limited company it might be done in that way.

2929. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You are aware that these English schools to which the Archbishop referred are generally the property of a limited company?—I believe some of them are.

Archbishop ARCHBISHOP.—I am sure the proprietors would be glad to distribute their contributions over a large number, making a subscription rather than a limited liability company. I think the school is unique in this respect, that you won't anywhere else in Ireland in a small community find so many gentlemen losing their money for a class which certainly are not objects of public charity.

2930. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—This is to a great extent a private institution, and therefore we would be very slow indeed to pass any proposal on you against your will, at the same time we will do all we possibly can to make your undertaking permanently successful, and when we propose a draft we will ask you to give your views on it fully.

Archbishop ARCHBISHOP.—I do not think it fair that these gentlemen should allow their £1,000 to be swallowed up, if the Commissioners could find it in this way, that subscribers going in and receiving these contributions to any extent should have in the nomination of the governing body, certain privileges, I think that would be met by others in Cork who would wish to have a share in a school of this kind.

2931. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—Make it a sort of company with £100 shares?—Quite so.

Dr. TRAILL.—You would call it a £100 donation, the word share always involves the notion of getting money back in the way of interest.

2932. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What occurred some was a provision by which we might fix upon a particular sum, say £100, and that any person who subscribed this sum, should have the right to nominate a governor, but that the total number so nominated should never exceed ten.

Archbishop ARCHBISHOP.—It would be desirable to have a larger number of donors who would take an interest in an educational institution of this kind.

Miss Harriet A. Martin, sworn.

Miss Harriet A. Martin.

2933. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—Kindly give us the particulars and the qualifications of your teaching staff?—I think I told you in Dublin my own qualifications.

2934. Then, tell us the staff at present working with you?—My first assistant is Miss Florence Florry, she has a first-class certificate in the Dublin University, Trinity College, and also a certificate from the Science and Art Department, and in drawing. Miss Jane Haden, my second assistant, was taught in the Model School, Cork; she has no special certificate. She was partly trained by myself, and has been with us ever since I have been in charge of the school. Modern languages are taught by a Diplôme of Hassen-Darmstadt. We have a second language teacher for German with a similar diploma. The lady in charge of the Kindergarten has no special certificate; but she was specially trained in the Kindergarten system under the High School Mistress at Plymouth.

2935. You have a music teacher also?—Yes.

2936. Altogether six ladies besides yourself are engaged in teaching?—Yes.

2937. We see Dr. Knight's name as Professor of Mathematics?—Yes, but he takes only the advanced class.

2938. Have you any other gentlemen who teach?—Mr. Harper, he is a trained teacher—teaches Latin only.

2939. Your subjects are in the lower classes—religious instruction, English, writing, arithmetic, elementary geography, object lessons, singing, drawing, French, Kindergarten occupations, and calisthenics. And in the upper classes—religious instruction, English history and literature, geography, arithmetic, mathematics, French, German or Latin, natural science, drawing, class singing, needlework, writing, and calisthenics?—Yes.

2940. Dr. TRAILL.—Who teaches calisthenics?—Miss Harley.

2941. Lord Justice FRYGUSON.—Your fee in the High School are—from 9 to 12, 2½ guineas; from 12 to 14, 3 guineas; instrumental music, £1 15s. per term; and you have three terms in the year?—Yes.

2942. The Kindergarten: age, 4 to 8, one child, 1½ guineas; two children, 2½ guineas; three children, 3½ guineas; instrumental music, £1 15s. The special states you have made arrangements for playing boarders with ladies in the neighbourhood. How many are boarding in the neighbourhood to attend the school?—All the boarders don't live with boarding house keepers. Some have their own special arrangements. I have fifteen altogether living in Cork for the special object of attending the school course.

2943. Dr. TRAILL.—The rest are all day girls?—Those are day girls too as far as I am concerned.

2944. What are the ages of the girls in the Kinder-gates School!—They come in at about three, and remain until nine years old.

2945. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you find that those who come to you so young generally remain until their education is practically finished?—My experience is amply long enough for that, it is only three years.

2946. But so far, have they remained with you?—We have some girls in the higher classes who were pupils in the Kindergarten when it first opened twelve years ago.

2947. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Is there anything in addition to what you told us in Dublin that you would like to mention now?—You might be interested in the number of pupils, in 1884, when I took charge of the school, there were in the High School, 43; Kindergarten, 53; no advanced class; total, 96. We lost several pupils because the lady who had been teaching in the lower school took some of our pupils with her, that reduced our number; in 1885 we had—High School, 51; Kindergarten, 27; total, 78. 1886—High School, 54; Kindergarten, 10; that was owing to the very bad Kindergarten teacher we had at that time which lost us pupils; total, 64. In 1887 we had 79 High School, 25 Kindergarten, 10 advanced class, making a total of 111.

2948. Then, your numbers this year are the largest you have yet had?—Yes, since my experience.

2949. How are the teachers appointed?—By the Board after selection by myself.

2950. You select the assistants?—I found my first assistant in the school when I came, and she is so efficient, that of course, she remains.

2951. The salaries?—I could not give them to you in Dublin; but this year, with the two extra teachers, the salary list is £675.

2952. That includes your own?—That includes mine.

2953. There is no residence for any of the ladies?—No.

2954. Dr. THOMAS.—What is your own salary?—£305.

2955. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The Archdeacon mentioned that you don't prepare the girls specially for the Intermediate, but some of your girls do go. How many did you send up this year?—In the senior grade, 3; in the middle, 1; in the junior, 3.

2956. Did they all pass?—One failed in the senior and two in the junior. We had two passes in the senior, one in the middle and six in the junior; of course more girls could have gone in, and I may say those were not a fair sample of the girls we prepare, for some of my best prepared girls did not enter.

2957. What was the reason of their not entering? The parents objected.

2958. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you yourself think it is advantageous for them to enter?—I prefer girls to work with an object.

2959. Such an object as these examinations?—Yes, or something on similar lines.

2960. Dr. THOMAS.—You may have some pupils who may not desire exactly to follow the course necessary for the Intermediate examinations?—They are bound to work with the classes.

2960. And your classes are formed according to the grades of the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, they are open that kind.

2961. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do any of your girls go to the Royal University?—Yes, we have a lady B.A. now, she will have her degree confirmed this October.

2962. Did you prepare her for the University examinations?—For the second University since I came, and we have one that was prepared for her Matriculation and has passed her second University.

2963. And they continue to attend the school after passing the Matriculation Examination?—Not always.

2964. Were they prepared by your teachers for the University Examinations?—Yes, in Modern Languages and English; but they attend the Queen's College now, we are in connection with the Science and Art Department, both for drawing and science.

2965. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you get result fees?—No, very little, because the limits of the department are such that we may not claim fees for pupils whose parents have an income of more than £250 a year.

2966. What advantage then do you derive from your connection?—The opportunity of sending in for examination. I find that girls who go in for that examination enter for the Intermediate.

2967. It is a stimulus for girls to work?—Yes.

2968. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Are these girls who have taken a University Degree desirous of becoming teachers?—Yes.

2969. And you think it an advantage to have the Queen's College open to them?—Yes.

2970. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Is it a rule of South Kensington that the girls' parents must have not more than £250 a year?—That is one of the restrictions.

Archdeacon Archbold.—That is a specific rule, I have to sign a document that it is not so.

2971. I find your present Board of Management consists of eight persons. Mr. W. J. Goulding and Mr. Hall are not in it now?

Mr. Gregg.—They are out of it altogether.

2972. And their places are filled by Mr. Hill and Mr. Day?—Mr. Day and Mr. Hill were on before Mr. Goulding and Mr. Hall had assigned their interests. It consists actually of six at the present moment. Mr. Goulding's brother was very anxious to be on the Board, and I think he is one of those that would be likely to assist us.

2973. Mr. Hill is an engineer, I see?—He is.

2974. He probably would represent education to some extent?—Yes.

2975. And Mr. Hilgeway also?—Yes.

Archdeacon Archbold.—I may say Mr. Day in a very reasonable way represents education; he belongs to a family distinguished always for their love of education. He is a member of the Royal Irish Academy, and an antiquarian; he is a gentleman very highly esteemed for certain peculiar powers he has in that direction. He has been now a second time elected Chairman of the Cork Literary and Scientific Society, and although an amateur he is a distinguished man.

GLOUNTANE PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Rev. Canon Wilson sworn.

2976. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What endowment have you?—Nothing but the ground with house and office.

2977. Lord Justice NANCE.—Have you not some rental?—No, all is and must be in the immediate possession of the master according to the lease.

2978. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—You have applied for a scheme?—Yes. The only proposed change was drafted to make it clear that the school need not be under the roof of the original building. It is not conveniently situated, and is an old and depressing room. The late Mrs. Margaret Newman, feeling this, built out of her own pocket a new schoolroom which is by a mile more central. The old building remains as a master's residence.

2979. The property is at present vested in the minister and churchwardens of Kilsahmrig parish?—Quite so.

2980. You are aware that under the operation of the Church Act, the minister and churchwardens have ceased to exist as a corporate body?—I noticed that, and I would suggest that the representative of Dromore House property, being a member of the Church of Ireland, should be connected with the incumbent and the bishop as trustees; which would make us fall in with the terms on which the schoolhouse has been granted by Mr. Newman, the owner of Dromore House.

2981. You have a fee-farm grant of 4 acres 6 perches with a residence—is that the old school?—Yes; the grant was from the Misses Lambard; it is not very good land, some of it is on a steep hill, facing north-west and could not be profitably reclaimed.

2982. How do you propose to utilise these premises if you remove the school?—The house is occupied as a schoolmaster's residence, and is within a mile of the new schoolhouse.

2983. Four acres is a large quantity of land to give with a schoolmaster's residence?—It is chiefly in grass, and he has always had it as part of his perquisites.

2984. What number of children attend the school?—On the roll 30, and our average attendance 24; we have an unusually good attendance. Within the last two years we have put our school under the management of the National Board, and have a better schoolmaster.

2985. Dr. TRAILL.—That is for capitation fees only?—Yes; we are very near the margin for having recognised fees.

2986. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How is the master classed?—Third class. He could not, having regard to the numbers, take a higher class. He has £40 local endowment, and has a capitation grant.

2987. You have no money endowment?—Not connected with Glenties, but we have connected with this new schoolhouse, for the late Mrs. Newman has given us £32 a year. The proposed scheme will enable us to combine the two. She erected this new schoolhouse because of the inconvenience of the former site, involving as it did the going through a Hindu village of public houses.

2988. Dr. TRAILL.—You think her schoolhouse would do for the two parishes?—There is but one parish and she has but put it into a more convenient position in that parish; it was rather to one side of the parish, and the bulk of the children would have to pass the new schoolhouse going to the old one.

2989. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—To whom is the grant of the new schoolhouse made?—To the incumbent of the parish, and to the proprietor of Dromore House, being a member of the Church of Ireland, and that is the reason I suggested Glenties should be treated likewise.

2990. Dr. TRAILL.—Who is the proprietor of Dromore House?—Mr. Newman.

2991. Was not the grant from the owners of Dromore House?

Mr. Newman.—Yes, it should be to the incumbent of the parish, and to the proprietor of Dromore House.

2992. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—It is made at present to the Rector of Kilsannig and Mr. J. A. K. Newman and their successors, namely the Rector for the time being of Kilsannig, and the owner or tenant in possession of the Dromore estate, being a member of the Irish Church, for 999 years, at a rent of one penny if demanded, &c. In the case of parochial schools the governing body we have generally formed, include the rector of the parish and one or two vestrymen elected by the Select or General Vestry; we have also got some instances where the owner of the estate is joined. Do you desire to have a governing body of that kind?—I would not have the slightest objection to forming it as you described.

2993. Mr. Newman, what are your views about it? Mr. Newman.—I am quite content, but I said in the deed in case we disagreed the Bishop should settle it.

Canon Wilson.—Mr. Newman's own suggestion, coming up in the train, was on the lines of what you said. It might be preferable to say, as now proposed, some members elected by the Select Vestry.

2994. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is not there any failure on the part of the Select Vestry to elect, I suppose the council of the Diocese should nominate somebody.

Canon Wilson.—I should not have the slightest objection.

BAHAN (MALLOW) SCHOOL (COTTER CHARITY SCHOOL).

Rev. Canon Wills sworn.

Rev. Canon
Wills.

2995. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Are you the rector of the parish in which the BAHAN schools are situated?—Yes.

2996. You appear to have considerable endowments?—About £70 a year now, it was originally about £150.

2997. The first endowment referred to in the last report is derived from Henry Johnson Cotter, who made a will in 1833 of 219 acres of land?—Yes. Mr. Cotter in that will left this property for the purpose of promoting scriptural education in the parish of BAHAN, that was acted upon for about thirty years. He appointed the Rev. Geo. Cotter as trustee, with power to appoint other trustees. The Rev. Geo. Cotter accordingly, in 1833, appointed three trustees to carry out the terms of the will, these were the bishop of the diocese for the time being, the rector of the parish for the time being, and the occupant of Rockfeast House, being a member of the Established Church. But the Rev. Geo. Cotter at that time proposed a new scheme with the consent of the trustees, which I believe was approved of by the Court of Chancery, and acted upon since. The majority of the present trustees think that was a misapplication of the funds of the donor.

2998. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the misapplication?—The original bequest was for the purpose of scriptural instruction in the parish of BAHAN. We understood that to signify that it was for Protestant instruction, the instruction of the Protestants of BAHAN. I think there can be no question that that was his meaning. However the Rev. Geo. Cotter, about thirty years afterwards, conceived the idea of trying to—I don't like to use the term—proselytise; at any rate he conceived this idea, that a portion of that money might go to the Roman Catholic schools of the parish on the condition that they read the Douay version of the New Testament every day in the school. That was his proposition, and it was sanctioned and has been acted upon ever since.

2999. Sanctioned by whom?—It was approved of by the trustees then existing, and sanctioned by, I believe, the Court of Chancery, and it has been acted upon since.

3000. How much goes to them?—We get only £25 out of the whole sum.

3001. Out of how much?—It was originally £150, now it has been reduced to about £70 a year. We only get £25 for a very small school. Our idea is that it was a misapplication of the intention of the donor, and we think it ought to be given to the purpose for which he intended it.

3002. Rev. Dr. MONRO.—Who authorised this application of it?—It was proposed by one of the trustees in 1838.

3003. Who authorised it?—The Court of Chancery, I think. There is a question whether they really did sansction that, they certainly sanctioned the appointment of the three trustees.

3004. Lord Justice NAISH.—Who are the trustees now?—The bishop of the diocese, the rector of the parish, and the occupant of Rockforest House.

3005. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—The report of 1880 mentions the object of the endowment to be for a resident schoolmaster, being a member of the Established Church, to teach children, nominated by the minister or greater, English and arithmetic, and to teach children of the Established Church the Holy Scriptures and Church catechism. Do you know what became of the deed of 21st March, 1821, on the strength of which your school buildings were built for these purposes?—Which school are you referring to?

3006. Rahau parochial school, it is a very confused institution. It would seem from the report of 1880 Mr. Cotter was the acting trustee and distributed the fund?—In conjunction with the bishop and the occupant of Rockforest House.

3007. They are not mentioned at all. What has become of Mr. Cotter?—He is dead, but there are three existing trustees under the will. The will authorized the Rev. Geo. Cotter to appoint three trustees and he accordingly did so; their successors are now living; the Lord Bishop of the diocese is one, I am another, and the third is Sir James Cotter, the occupant of Rockforest House. Mr. Henry Cotter who gave that money intended it, we maintain, for Protestant education in the parish of Rahau, two-thirds of the money has been given to Roman Catholic schools on condition they read the New Testament, we think that really was not the intention of Mr. Cotter.

3008. You appear to be the trustees yourselves?—This was done by the trustees before us. Have we power to alter it?

3009. I am afraid we cannot give you a legal opinion. Where do you get the money?—From three tenants, the gentleman who collects it is present and he pays the schoolmaster.

3010. Do you apply it for Scriptural education?—Yes, in the case of Rahau School (Protestant), but we object in the case of Knuttery (Roman Catholic), for which the Testate never intended it.

3011. Why do you pay it?—The agent, Mr. Crough, pays both schoolmasters, in accordance with the provisions of the Chancery Scheme.

A. G. Crough, sworn.

3012. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are the agent for the lands mentioned by Mr. Willis?—Yes, I was asked by Sir James Cotter, on the death of his uncle, as I was managing property adjoining this, if I would look after this, so I said I would. At the time I took it up the rents were £118 6s. 8d.

3013. Dr. TRAILL.—In what year was that?—I think that was in 1879 or 1880, I am not quite sure. Two of the leases of the tenants fell out, and they applied to go into the Land Court, and the rents were reduced accordingly to £95 17s. 2d. Four years ago I considered that the rents were high, and I suggested to the trustees that I should be allowed to give a further temporary allowance of 10 per cent., which reduced the rental to £23 6s. 8d., which is the present amount received by me.

3014. Has it been paid at that rate?—At that rate.

3015. You said you consulted with the trustees, which trustees?—I merely mentioned to Mr. Willis and Sir James Cotter that I thought it would be necessary to give an allowance to the tenants.

3016. For whom do you hold yourself to be acting as agent?—I imagine for the trustees—the Bishop, the rector of the parish, and whoever is owner of Rockforest for the time being.

3017. How is the £23 6s. 8d. applied by you?—There is £1 10s. paid for rent of ground on which the parochial school at Rahau is built. There are two rentcharges—one to the Church Commissioners and one to Mr. Longfield—£19 16s. 1d. The agent's fees £4 3s. 4d., and a bailiff whom I found there and continued was paid £2, that would be £18 6s. 8d., that reduces the available funds to £5, and that £4 I pay to three persons, Michael Fleming, the male teacher of the Knuttery National School, £2; David Bruton, of Ballymagoghy Parochial School, £2; that is the Protestant school; and I also pay £2 to the female teacher at Knuttery.

3018. Is Knuttery school under a Roman Catholic manager?—I think Sir James Cotter is patron.

3019. Lord Justice NAISH.—There appears to have been a Chancery scheme, and there is an extract from it in the Report of 1880, but I don't think it is complete; have you a full copy of the scheme?—I am afraid I haven't it.

3020. Is Knuttery your school?

Crown Wills.—No, that is the school I say ought not to get it.

Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—It is only receiving under the Chancery scheme what you deem fit to give it.

Crown Wills.—You think the trustees need not give it.

Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I cannot give you an opinion on that.

3021. Lord Justice NAISH.—As a matter of fact how much is paid to Knuttery?

Mr. Crough.—£26 and £2, Knuttery and Garinellig are the same.

3022. Lord Justice NAISH.—Then £28 is to be paid for books for the Cotter Charity School, is that Rahau?

Crown Wills.—No, it is Knuttery, it should be called the Cotter Charity School; that scheme is not acted upon for it ought not to be a National school but called the Cotter Charity School, and also there should be daily Scriptural teaching.

Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—We can do nothing whatever with this matter without seeing a full copy of the Chancery scheme. If you can find a copy send it to us.

3023. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—How much do you give at present to the master and mistress of the Knuttery School?

Crown Wills.—£26 and £2.

3024. How much do you give to the Lavalley National School?—Nothing.

3025. This is given in accordance with the provisions of the Chancery scheme?—As far as we can judge it is.

Mr. Crough.—I have been acting under a Chancery scheme.

3026. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—And acting under that you have given this sum each year?

Mr. Crough.—Yes.

3027. Dr. TRAILL.—But that scheme gave the trustees power to say how much should be given?—Yes.

3028. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—When did the sum cease to be given to Lavalley?—It ceased from the date of my appointment.

E. Flynn.—I have only just come in. I am the teacher of Lavalley. In July, 1880, I ceased to get it.

Mr. Crough.—He applied to me for his usual stipend which he said Mr. Cotter gave him.

Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—It appears from the last report that the head teacher received £8 per annum from the endowment, in addition to £35 salary, and rent fees amounting to £32.

3029. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Laval School was reported in 1880, rightly or wrongly, to be getting £8 for its head master, and £4 for its assistant teacher, and the head master says that since 1880 he has got nothing. I have looked over the papers, and it appears "that out of Government Stock the trustees were directed to apply such sum, not exceeding £200 sterling, as to them should seem necessary for the building and furnishing a suitable school-house upon the townland of Kentry, containing suitable apartments for a male and female school, and for the schoolmaster and schoolmistress thereon. The new schoolhouse when built to be called the Cotter Charity School." Is that the Kentry School to which you pay £36 and £24?—Yes.

3030. There appears to be a provision that, out of the rents and profits of the lands bequeathed by the will, the trustees should apply such sum as to them should seem fit, not exceeding £45 a year, in payment of the salaries of the master and the mistress in the Kentry School aforesaid, and such sum as to them should seem fit, not exceeding £5 a year, for books, stationery, and other school requisites for the said Cotter Charity School; and also such sum as should be necessary for keeping said school in good repair, and that the said trustees should apply the residue of said rents and profits yearly, and every year, in aid of the salary of the master and mistress of the male and female school. Until we have the whole scheme we cannot tell what that male and female school is. It goes on "in each of the schools in aid of which the trust funds should be applied all children attending should receive daily a Scriptural education. That the trustees for this time being, on a majority of them, shall have power to make such rules and orders for the internal management of the said Cotter Charity Schools as to them shall seem fit, provided that the same are consistent with the rules as to Scriptural education aforesaid." We must see the whole scheme, but as far as we can see the thing is in the hands of the trustees.

Mr. Crough.—Yes.

3032. He is the representative of the person who left the endowment?—He is.

3033. This expenditure of the endowment has been entirely with his consent?—Quite so.

3034. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—And with the consent of the other trustees?—When I took up the management, this teacher applied to me and told me Mr. Cotter always paid him £8, and I told him that I was quite sure he did, but that I had no funds. I showed him that the year previously Mr. Cotter must have paid the money out of his own pocket, because he could not by any possibility have got it out of this place. I spoke to Sir James Cotter about it, and he told me that he found on looking over his late uncle's papers, that he was in the habit of spending £40 a year on these schools over and above what he received out of the property, and since I have had the management of it, it has been considerably reduced.

3035. Would that £40 suffice to make up the sum stated in the Report of 1880 to have been paid to the Kentry School and these other two schools?—I should say it would, fully.

3036. Dr. Tamm.—On which of the three schools has the reduction fallen, have you reduced it equally on all?—I am giving the same amount as usual to the Kentry School, but I reduced the other one—the Ballymagool School.

3037. From what?—He was getting £5 a year more.

3038. From £35 to £30?—Yes. I told him I had not it to give him, and furthermore, I have nothing for repairs and nothing for school requisites.

3039. On whose authority did you reduce it on one and not on the other?—I did it on my own authority, I told the man I didn't it.

3040. But you had it if you distributed it equally?—I thought he was getting enough.

3041. Have you got the exact proportions that used to be paid to those three when the rental was £118 6s. 3d.?—I could not say.

E. Flynn.—I beg your pardon, you did not show me anything, and you only told me by word of mouth, and I had to believe your own words. I went to Sir James Cotter, and he did not know anything about the matter; and Mr. Crough, might I ask you, who gave you the management of the estate after the late Mr. Cotter being dead?

Mr. Crough.—Sir James Cotter.

E. Flynn.—I have it from the people about that it was taken by him without any authority whatever.

3042. Lord Justice Fitzgerald (to Mr. Crough).—Kindly look among your papers for a copy of the Chancery scheme, and a copy of the will of 11th June, 1813, under which the thing was funded.

E. Flynn.—I have a copy of the will (produces).

3043. Canon Wills.—Has this Commission the power of carrying out the original intentions of the donor?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—That is what we are constituted for, especially when we find trustees are not doing it for themselves.

Canon Wills.—We think that it is misapplied at present.

3044. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Why do you misapply it?

Canon Wills.—If you give us authority we will not do so any longer.

3045. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We can only settle a scheme for the future management of the property, and until we do so you have only to apply it in accordance with the scheme.

Canon Wills.—The parochial school at Rahon is a very small school, there are not more Protestants attending the school than half-a-dozen, and our idea was that this Commission could secure the whole of this money for the parish, and as the parish of Rahon has been since added to the Union of Malware, it should be considered whether the spirit of the will would not be carried out if the money was spent upon the Protestant schools in the Union of which Rahon is a part.

E. Flynn.—It was left simply for no denomination.

Edmund Flynn sworn.

3046. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long have you been master of your present school?—Since August, 1873.

3047. What is the proper name of the school?—Rahon National School, it is built in the townland of Laval.

3048. Who is the manager?—Rev. Dr. Wignoon, the parish priest. The present Bishop of Cloyne was assessor when this money was given. Dean O'Regan of Miltelstown was afterwards manager, and Dr. Wignoon is the manager at present.

3049. Dean O'Regan was the manager in 1880?—Yes.

3050. What money did you get from the Cotter fund?—I got £8 a year.

3051. How long have you been receiving this sum?—I got it from when I came there in August, 1873, up to the late trustee's death.

Mr. Edmund
Flynn.

Oct. 18, 1887.
Mr. Russell
Fryer.

3057. Lord Justice NATHL.—Who paid you?—For a part of the time the Bishop of Cloyne gave it to me, the money was handed by the late Rev. George Cotter to him, and from him to me, on condition of my carrying to him a receipt.

3058. Dr. TRAILL.—The Protestant Bishop of Cork?—No, the present Roman Catholic Bishop of Cloyne, Dr. McCarthy. Here is one of the receipts. "Received from Rev. George E. Cotter the sum of £3 for superintending the reading of the Domesday Testament in the Rahon National School for three months ending 30th June, 1880. Signed, Edmund Flynn."

3059. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Then you understood the money was given to you for Scriptural education?—Certainly.

3060. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you teach Scripture still?—I did until Mr. O'neill quitted our parish.

3061. Did you stop altogether then?—No, but not so regularly, I am teaching it again.

3062. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—How is your school maintained since?—Only by the school fees of the children, and a salary from the National Board.

3063. Dr. TRAILL.—What salary?—£44 a year.

3064. To what class do you belong?—Roman.

3065. Dr. MOLLOY.—Did you get £4 for an assistant?—Yes, £8 for myself and £4 for an assistant.

3066. On what plea did your assistant get the £4?

—The same. There was a correspondence between the Rev. George Cotter and the present Bishop. The present Bishop in order to comply with the will bought the testaments by money that was given to him by the late Rev. George Cotter. The testaments were sent by the present Bishop to our school.

3067. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—About what date?—1873.

3068. Where did you get this copy of the will?—From Mr. O'neill's clerk.

3069. How is the passage in the will, "The bond for £500 of James, which I have, and which was left to me by my late dear brother, George Bourne, together with Gurnacree, left to me by my late dear father, I leave and bequeath to my brother, the Rev. George E. Cotter, in trust for the purpose of promoting Scriptural education in the parish of Rahon, and I desire that trustees may be appointed by him to carry such my wishes into effect, as he is himself mortgaged, so that my wishes may be fulfilled in this respect for ever."

3070. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Does Sir James Cotter ever visit your school?—No, but the late Rev. George Cotter visited the school, also the Rev. Mr. Gifford while he was rector.

3071. Was he satisfied that the intentions of the will were carried out in the school?—Exactly, that was the correspondence that passed between the Bishop and himself.

3072. Dr. TRAILL.—Was he the clergyman of the parish?—No.

3073. Did he examine in Scripture himself?—No, that is against the rules of the National Board; he was residing in the parish, but he was clergyman of Meenaminia.

3074. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Did you know the Rev. George E. Cotter, the gentleman mentioned in this will?—I did perfectly well; I often had conversations with him.

3075. He must have been a very old man when he died?—He was about eighty; he died in July, 1880, and since then I never got a halfpenny; fortunately I got the quarter's salary the day before he fell sick. We have at present a number of Domesday Testaments in the school. I have the bigger school of the three, there are 103 on the roll, and Mr. O'neill might make an equal division or an equal reduction, but ought not to stop it totally from my school and not from the others.

3076. Dr. TRAILL.—Is Nuttery getting more now than it did before?

Mr. O'neill.—It was getting something more at one time.

3077. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—In 1880 it was only getting £20 a year from the endowment towards the master, and £8 a year to the female teacher, and something for repairs.

3078. Dr. TRAILL.—Then it has lost nothing except £3 for repairs?

Mr. O'neill.—I got back £7 for income tax about two years ago, and that I spent on Nuttery School; it was in very bad order, and would have required even more than that if I had the money. For the second year that I had it I paid the teachers myself for I could not get any rents at all, and for a whole year I paid out of my own pocket both Nuttery and Rahon. I advanced the money.

3079. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you repay yourself afterwards out of the school?—Certainly, I did.

3080. Dr. MOLLOY.—The Rev. George E. Cotter was a brother of the testator?

CORONER WILKS.—He was.

3081. And he was also his executor?—Yes.

3082. And it was under his direction and supervision that this fund was divided between the different schools of the parish?—Yes, thirty years after the death of the testator.

3083. He had the last opportunity of understanding what his brother meant by "Scriptural education in the parish of Rahon"?—He had, but he had his own peculiar hobby.

3084. And he provided for Scriptural education in the parish, according to his ideas, by dividing the fund between the different denominations which give Scriptural education in the parish?—Which gave it in that way. We object to it; we think it is not carrying out the wishes of the donor, we maintain he meant Protestant education.

Mr. Fryer.—The word is not in the will.

CORONER WILKS.—Perhaps the Commission would decide the question of what is the meaning of the expression.

3085. Dr. TRAILL.—How many years elapsed between Mr. Cotter's death, and the time his brother made the change?

CORONER WILKS.—Thirty years, he died in 1833, and the Scheme in Chancery was 1838, the original intention was carried out for thirty years, and then the Rev. George Cotter conceived this idea of converting Roman Catholics to this way.

3086. Had he to get a Chancery Scheme to enable him to do that?—So it seems. Our school was not built when the Chancery scheme was drawn.

3087. Was the change made immediately after the Chancery Scheme?—Yes.

3088. Were there any trustees associated with him in that Chancery Scheme?—There were.

3089. Were they associated in the change?—I suppose they were.

3090. Who were they?—The late Bishop and the Rector, the Rev. Mr. Boldwin.

3091. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Was not the rector of the parish a trustee of these funds from the time of the settlement of the Chancery Scheme?—Certainly.

3092. Had he the same views as Mr. Cotter?—But he is dead also, and since then the parish has been added to the parish of which I am rector.

3093. During the time Mr. Cotter and the rector were trustees did they both concur in this method of disposing of the money?—I think they did, and the bishop too, I don't say that they did not.

3094. Dr. TRAILL.—You don't know of your own knowledge whether they did or not?—I don't know, I suppose they did.

3095. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The present Sir James Cotter has offered no opposition?—He has not. He told me he would not wish the money to be taken from Rahon Parish.

3096. On the contrary he is quite satisfied?—He is satisfied to leave things as they are, I fancy.

Oct. 16, 1892.
Mr. Edmund
Flynn.

3092. Dr. TRAVERS.—What are the views of the present Bishop?—He quite agrees with me that the original intention is not carried out.

3093. And you think that the original intention is interpreted by the acts of thirty years?—Yes, the first thirty years show his death.

3094. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—We know the facts about the matter, and we must get a copy of the Scheme, we now have a copy of the will. We would be very glad when you send the Scheme to have your views put forward; speaking for myself, I think it would be hard to withdraw a provision that has been so long made, or least while there are any vested interests, but probably it will turn out that the whole matter is in the discretion of the trustees.

Archdeacon JELF.—There are two distinct propositions that they make, one with regard to the endowment and the other with regard to the working of the school, they wish to move the school into Mallow, whether they get the whole endowment or not.

3095. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—It is plain the first thing to be done is for the three trustees to meet on the matter.

Mr. Flynn.—It is not mentioned for any particular denomination.

3096. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—So we understand, and apparently under the will it is with the intention of giving Scriptural education to all denominations, but what we have to look to is to see the authority on which that was done. If it was only done by the discretion of the trustees we cannot prevent them exercising the discretion as they think proper, but I am afraid in any respect of it. Locally it is excluded, for there is no money now available for it unless it is taken away from the other schools.

*CROFTON ENDOWED SCHOOL, MACROOM

Rev. Denis O'Sullivan sworn.

Rev. Denis
O'Sullivan.

3097. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—Are you Rector of Macroom?—Yes.

3098. Your school is known as the Crofton Endowed School, Macroom?—Yes.

3099. Under a will of 1825, you are stated to have £10 Irish, and two acres of land?—Yes.

3100. What is the £10 Irish charged on?—On the Crofton estate in the parish of Clonsilla.

3101. Are these lands capable in value to secure it?—Yes.

3102. Is it regularly paid?—Yes.

3103. It is for the maintenance of the school and furnishing each child who attends with a bible?—Yes.

3104. What is the present state of the school?—It is very low, and for that reason I would ask the Commissioners to transfer it as has been done, under similar circumstances with a school also founded by Mrs. Crofton in the county Wicklow, that was transferred from Inchagappa to Ashford.

3105. Where do you say it ought to be transferred to?—The town of Macroom.

3106. What distance is it from Macroom now?—About three and a half miles.

3107. Is there any parochial school in Macroom itself?—There is.

3108. Under your management?—Yes, and I would like to make the two because the number of children is reduced to seven, and I am not satisfied with the efficiency of the school in any way. In the interest even of the seven I would wish it removed to Macroom.

3109. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—How could these seven children get into Macroom?—They would be quite as convenient to Macroom as to the school, when I am sure to be in the future residence in parish.

3110. What school have you in Macroom to attach to it?—We have a very suitable school-house and school.

3111. How many children have you in it?—About twelve.

3112. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—Then you would have about thirteen or twenty between the two?—If we had the two schools united with the two salaries we would have fully thirty children.

3113. Dr. TRAVERS.—What salary do you pay your teacher in the Macroom School?—£36 a year, there is no endowment, it comes from contributions and subscriptions.

3114. Could you get the attendance up to thirty-five to get a National Board grant?—I don't know that this school could be placed under the National Board unless the Commissioners had the power to give us thirty.

3115. We can give you permission?—Then I would like it.

3116. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—How is the school at Macroom held?—It is a parochial school. We had been recently in connection with the Erasmus Smith Board, and through want of funds they gave notice they could not pay us any more.

3117. How is your school-house built?—On church land. Under the Church Act, it went to the Church Body. I beg to hand in a statement.

3118. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—Was it under an Order of the Court of Chancery the school was changed from Inchagappa to Ashford?—I presume so. A great number of children would come in if we had a suitable master because several go at present from Macroom to Cork to school, and if we had an efficient school there I am quite certain the number of children attending it would increase.

3119. Who receives the £10 a year now?—I receive it.

3120. From whom?—The trustees of the Crofton Estate—through the Receiver under the Court.

3121. Do you know in whom the legal right to receive the money is vested?—Manager or Donations Commissioners.

3122. Lord Justice FRYNGROVE.—Do you get any money from the Commissioners of Donations and Bequests?—That was all spent by lawyers in a dispute about it, I think in 1861 or 1865.

3123. The statement in the report of 1890 that arrears amounting to £208 stock were recovered in 1890, part of it was spent in rebuilding the school-house and the balance invested in £325 Government Stock producing an annuity of £9 10s. a year payable to the rector by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—I never get a penny of it and never heard of it until now. Mr. McDonald, the secretary, told me all the money they had was spent in a law suit.

3124. I think this passage may account for it. Complaints having been made to the Board that owing to the circumstances of the locality and the conditions imposed by the will with respect to the gift of a bible the grant had become practically useless, the Board sanctioned an application to the Court of Chancery.

You never got any money since?—No.
The Inquiry was adjourned to Monday.

PUBLIC SITTINGS—MONDAY, OCTOBER 17TH, 1887.

Oct. 17, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Cork.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAISH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., B.D., ANTHONY TRALL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JURE, was in attendance.

ST. FINN BARR'S SEMINARY.

Rev. Dr. O'Mahony sworn.

3125. Lord Justice NAISH.—How long have you been President of St. Finn Barr's Seminary?—About one year. I was appointed last November.

3126. How long has the seminary been established?—It has been in the hands of the Bishop and the secular clergy for the last eleven years.

3127. Where is it?—The seminary building is on the Wellington-road.

3128. What property is there belonging to the seminary?—None whatever.

3129. You have buildings and land?—There is no land attached to the building, but there was money bequeathed to build it.

3130. I suppose all the persons engaged in the management are Catholics?—Yes, they are all Catholics.

3131. And the boys?—They are all Catholics.

3132. Is there any connection between St. Finn Barr's Seminary and the new building on the north side of the city?—No, they are for different purposes altogether.

3133. The other is a diocesan seminary?—It is a diocesan seminary for the education of pupils intended for the priesthood, while St. Finn Barr's is simply a classical school for the education of Roman Catholic boys, under the patronage of the Bishop, and promoted over by diocesan clergy.

3134. Dr. TRALL.—That is your school?—Yes. That is the institution on your list.

3135. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—How do you hold the house?—The house is built on a piece of fee-simple property purchased by the late bishop.

3136. And conveyed to him?—Yes.

3137. Has it been conveyed to trustees, or is it now vested in the bishop?—It is vested with the present bishop.

3138. He is in possession?—Yes.

3139. Lord Justice NAISH.—With the exception of this house there is no other property belonging to the seminary?—None whatever.

3140. How many boys have you in the establishment?—At present I have 120, but the average is about 160.

3141. Are they all day boys?—They are, with the exception of seven or eight who reside in the Diocesan Seminary and come to St. Finn Barr's Seminary in the morning and go back in the evening.

3142. What is the course of education?—A good intermediate course, and university up to the first arts.

3143. Do you send boys to compete at the Intermediate Examinations?—Yes.

3144. What fees do the boys pay?—They vary according to the class. Junior boys pay at the rate of £1 a quarter, second class boys at the rate of six guineas a year, and senior boys at the rate of eight guineas a year.

3145. How much do the fees come to in the year?—About £300 in the year.

3146. What result fees do you get from the Intermediate Board?—About £50 is the average, sometimes more sometimes less—in recent years not more than £50.

3147. There is no doubt that you are exempt from our jurisdiction, and it will be our duty so to declare. If there is any purpose which you think you could accomplish by means of this Commission, either by incorporating a body or otherwise, we will, if you wish, not in that direction?—I have not been authorized by the Bishop to suggest anything, and I think there is nothing that I could suggest.

3148. Dr. TRALL.—But suppose the property happened to be vested in the legal representative of the late bishop, would it not be better to have some properly constituted body who could in future deal with the property?—I don't know.

3149. Would that question not be worth while inquiring into. Your present bishop may think he holds it, but it may be legally vested in the representative of the late bishop?—I don't know. All I am at present in a position to state is that I have no suggestion to make.

3150. Lord Justice NAISH.—Is Dr. O'Callaghan now from Cork as president?—He is in Dublin.

3151. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—I understand that under the late Bishop's will the property is now vested in the present Bishop?—Yes. I didn't know that before.

CORK DIOCESAN ENDOWMENTS.

The Right Rev. Dr. Gregg, Lord Bishop of Cork.

3152. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—(To the Right Rev. Dr. Gregg, Lord Bishop of Cork.)—I may mention to your lordship that we have asked the clergy of the city parishes to send in a list of their educational endowments, with a statement of any special trusts on which they wish those to rest in the proposed governing body, and also that as regards the Elm Coast School, we are extremely anxious that the trustees of that school should send in the written consent necessary to enable us to extend the usefulness of that endowment.

3153. The Lord Bishop of Cork.—I should like to explain, in reference to some remarks that fell from Dr. Webster, if you look at the printed paper which we handed in, our idea was that the Diocesan Trustees should be incorporated to hold school property throughout the whole diocese including the city.

3154. How do you propose that these trustees should be themselves appointed?—They are elected by the Diocesan Synod from time to time. The Bishop is one.

3155. It would be necessary to set out in any Right Rev. Dr. Gregg.

Oct. 27, 1881.

scheme the provisions for their succession. We could not merely declare that the Diocesan Trustees should be incorporated.—That is the reason that we have not called them Diocesan Trustees, though the five gentlemen named are the Diocesan Trustees, and are elected.

3156. It makes very little difference how the incorporated body is itself constituted, if those who have the management of the endowments have their duties defined.

3157. Dr. TRAHER.—What you want is that the educational body that will look after the working of the system shall not necessarily be the body that shall hold the property.—We think that a small body to hold the property might be incorporated.

3158. Lord Justice FRYGIE.—But if the management is vested in the larger body there would be no object in incorporating a smaller one. You can incorporate 100 just as easily as six.—The idea was that there are also a great many parochial trusts throughout the county which are vested in clergymen and churchwardens, and which I believe are derelict at the present time—at least you expressed a strong opinion about it yourselves.

3159. You allude to the report of 1880. Our opinion was that if the Diocesan Trustees were incorporated they would be a very fitting body, not merely being a city body, but also a county body, to hold such trusts throughout the whole diocese. We could not vest property in trustees without knowing exactly the nature of the trusts. We ought to set out the various properties in the scheme which you want to vest in this Diocesan body. We can give power to the body to accept other property, but to have derelict property vested or conveyed you would still be obliged to go to Chancery unless you vest it by the scheme. Therefore, while this Commission exists, it would be vastly important to get up as much as possible of this derelict property to show that it is educational, and to vest it by the scheme in the body you look for.—We would endeavour to do so if we understood from you that such a body would be incorporated. I know many places in which application would be made to vest this particular property in this body.

3160. Frequently local bodies are jealous of being merged into a large general body, and in such cases we could frame schemes for their independent management. In other cases we have been anxious to create a central school body to hold property upon various trusts. The Roman Catholic Church has a quantity of valuable property legally vested in ecclesiastical persons, whose laity and parsonal representatives may be very hard to find. Your church has a great deal of property generally vested in ministers and churchwardens, or in ministers or other trustees who have ceased to exist. Our course of dealing in both cases would be the same—do form some body representing the denomination whose property is in question to hold that property and administer it according to defined trusts.—That is what we are really anxious to get on behalf of our county and the city, and we are quite satisfied with whatever body the Commissioners think best, but we want to have some body that can take other property and financial trusts.

3161. You have given us extremely good heads for a scheme, and we would ask whatever committee has this in charge to define what they want, and describe what property they have.

3162. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Would you, as regards the endowments you would vest in the central body, give them power to apply them generally, or would you compel them to apply them in the districts in which they are at present applied?—I cannot say that there would be any difference about that. Possibly some might be necessarily applied in the districts in which they are at present applied, but I think that some of them might with more advantage be applied generally.

3163. I take it that there would be an objection to allowing an endowment to be removed from a district or parish where it has hitherto been applied.—In the case of endowments which are of a mixed character, partly for charitable purposes, such as the clothing and feeding of poor children, and partly for educational purposes, I think we would have to contend against very strong objections to touching the part of the endowment that goes for charitable purposes, but we do not propose to do that.

3164. We would not have the power of interfering with these endowments.—I think the arrangement that we are anxious to make would provide amply for every district.

3165. Dr. TRAHER.—Of course if you found a district under a fair plan, it would be your object to continue that as it is, while if you found in another district the endowments going wrong, you would make a change. You would like to extend your plan over as large a district as possible.—Certainly. Some of the small schools are of a very inferior class.

3166. Some of these schools are probably without titles as to lands attached to the school. There is a doubt whether they are vested in any body or not, and some are vested in private proprietors.—Yes.

3167. Would the body in Cork city for educational purposes not be large enough, considering all the objects it has in view, to incorporate it for that, irrespective of the incorporation of the Diocesan Trustees for the county generally?—It would be a body composed of persons connected with the city, and would not be satisfactory as a body to act for the whole county.

3168. Would it not be better to have separate bodies acting for the county and for the city; would not the educational endowment of the city be large enough to place under a separate body?—That would meet our views.

3169. Rev. Dr. Webster.—Did I understand the Lord Justice Fitzgerald to say that where properties throughout the country are not specifically mentioned, or where trusts are not legally established, the corporate body which you would establish would have to go through the expensive process of Chancery proceedings?

3170. Lord Justice FRYGIE.—Not necessarily; on the contrary, if we could ascertain this educational property, define it, and transfer it by our scheme, nothing more would be required; but if that opportunity is lost, though the incorporated body could afterwards accept any other property, it could be conveyed to them only by some legal trustee or agent, and if it was doubtful it would be necessary to go to Chancery in order to get it vested. In other words you can now do through us, without expense, what, under other circumstances, the Court of Chancery could do for you. Where property is vested in a legal trustee he could convey it to the new corporate body, but still he would have to pay for the deed, and we can do it without expense and without any deed up to the 31st of December, 1888, but we must know what the property and the trusts are.

3171. Rev. Dr. Webster.—I think it is of very great importance to take notice of what you have said, for if we lose this opportunity it might involve enormous expense by-and-by, and a great deal of work that would be avoided if we now specifically identify our property.

3172. Lord Justice FRYGIE.—If you take up the Blue Book of 1860 you will find that there are hundreds of small educational endowments, schools, sites, and even small properties derelict.

LAPP'S CHARITY.

Oct. 17, 1887.
Right Rev. Dr.
Grigg.

3173. (To the Lord Bishop of Cork.)—Perhaps your lordship would give us some information about Lapp's Charity. Since we came to Cork our attention has been called to the fact that in 1858 there was a sum of £31,427 15s. 8d., of which the surplus was applicable to the establishment of schools for girls or boys being Protestants, or the children of Protestants, after the establishment of a charity for the relief of aged and infirm Protestants. Chancery proceedings have been taken since. Can you tell us whether any part of that fund is available for schools?—No, there is no part available. The whole fund was expended on the institution.

3174. How does that happen?—There has never been any surplus.

3175. We find there was a Chancery report dated December 22, 1860. Then a bill seems to have been filed in Chancery in 1876, and £11,000 seems to have been lying idle in Chancery from 1858 to 1876. Do you know what has become of that now?—I did not become personally connected with the charity until 1878, which was after that. The whole fund is now expended under the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests on the asylum.

3176. How many objects of charity are in the asylum?—I think there are twenty indoor pensioners and some outdoor pensioners.

3177. Dr. TRAILL.—Does that swallow up the entire fund?—That swallows up the entire fund.

3178. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Might not some portion of that fund be made available for what you need so much, provision for primary and intermediate education?—We find the greatest possible need for the charity as it is. This year there was some difficulty in the payment of some of the rents, and we were obliged to limit the number of appointments.

3179. Lord Justice NASSAU.—Who holds the estate, and what is the income?—I think it is about £1,500 a year. Dr. Webster is also a trustee of it.

3180. About how many outdoor objects of charity are on the fund?

Rev. Dr. Webster.—I think there are about twenty.

3181. The Chancery Scheme seems to have calculated on providing schools for children?—It requires us to do it if there was a surplus. We never have had any surplus. We were required by the Court of Chancery during the time that I have been connected with it to put the building in thorough repair. We were also required to build an expensive bridge over the river and that we have been obliged to take out of the charity.

3182. How was the obligation thrown upon the charity of building the bridge?—By the application of the person who gave the lease of the property—the owner of the property.

3183. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—You will never have a surplus as long as you spend the whole of the money on one of the objects. The founder proposed to provide an asylum for aged and infirm persons, and when the funds are sufficient, schools for natives of Cork, being Protestants or the children of Protestants?—There never was any surplus that could be applied to any purpose outside the charity.

BRETTBRIDGE'S CHARITY.

T. H. Savage, Solicitor, sworn and examined.

3184. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What is the instrument under which this charity is administered?—Under a will which has been since amended by a scheme from the Court of Chancery. I beg to hand in a copy of that scheme. (Document handed in.)

3185. The first thing you have got to do is to pay £s. a week, and give £3 a year for clothes to each of seven old soldiers?—Yes, we have always kept the number up.

3186. What is the income now?—For the past year £205. (Balance sheet handed in.) Part of the income being from land it varies in amount.

3187. Where are the lands?—Near Kintyre.

3188. You have £2,675 3s. 10d. in consols?—Yes.

3189. And the income last year was £216 8s. 8d. 1—Yes, unfortunately the income is falling off very rapidly. In consequence of the land agitation we cannot get money from the tenants.

3190. Then you are to pay £5 apprenticeship fee to the master, and £10 reward for each deserving apprentice?—Yes, that is so up to this year.

3191. How many children do you apprentice?—Forty.

3192. What fee do you give?—If we find that the apprenticeship has been faithfully served by the master and by the apprentice, we give the master £10 and the boy £5; these are rewards. In the case of a girl we give £25 to the mistress and £5 to the apprentice.

3193. Are those all soldiers' children?—There are one or two that are not.

3194. Have you got a sufficient number of applicants from among old soldiers to keep up the number of pensioners to seven?—Always sufficient.

3195. Can you get children bound in Cork for a £5 fee?—We can.

3196. In what trades?—The majority of the boys are getting taught the trades of shoemakers and printers. The girls are principally taught dressmaking.

3197. How often do your governors meet?—According to the Scheme we are bound to meet four times a year.

3198. How many Governors have you?—Five trustees and seven administrators.

3199. How are they appointed?—All by the Court of Chancery.

3200. Have you to go to the Court of Chancery every time you want a new trustee appointed?—Yes, we have. We get the appointment made on summons.

3201. And what does it cost?—About a £10 note.

3202. Dr. TRAILL.—Is that a provision in the Chancery Scheme?—Yes.

3203. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The next item in the Scheme is £20 for clerk's salary. What has he to do?—His duties are defined under the scheme. I have to keep all the records, to pay the pensioners every week, and so on.

3204. Dr. TRAILL.—Who collects the rents?—I collect the rents also.

3205. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—For the £20?—I am allowed a commission on that. That is also provided for in the Scheme.

3206. Do the Mayor and other ex-officio trustees take part in the administration of the charity?—They are nominators. There are five trustees and seven nominators, and they are quite distinct. Their proceedings are kept separate. The trustees are bound to meet four times a year and the nominators twice a year.

3207. Do the Mayor and Recorder take part in the nomination, it being a Protestant charity?—The Mayor does not.

3208. Do they nominate?—No.

3209. Dr. TRAILL.—What amount of income do you collect?—About £140.

3210. Professor DETONNERY.—What is the total amount of your salary in connection with the adminis-

tion of the charity, including everything?—About £30 a year. Owing to the land agitation it has been reduced latterly.

3211. You don't charge poundage when you don't collect rent?—I charge nothing except on what I receive.

3212. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Are your tenants tenants from year to year?—They are leaseholders.

3213. What quantity of land have you got?—About 400 acres.

3214. Out of 400 acres of land near Kesh, you only got £140?—That is all, and they hold it very nearly at the valuation. We have offered 33½ per cent. reduction, and done all we can to try and get the rents, and we cannot get them.

3215. Are your tenants in occupation or have they got under-tenants?—They are occupiers.

3216. Dr. TRAILL.—When did they cease to pay?—Within the last two years.

3217. Do they ask for an abatement?—They have been met liberally by the trustees.

3218. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Provision for apprenticeship may be dealt with as educational endowments and are within the powers of the Commission, and you appear to have a not very satisfactory Governing body. You have ex-officio trustees who do not attend, it being a Protestant charity, and you have to go to Chancery and pay £10 every three years to appoint a new trustee. We cannot help that. But you could help it now by getting a scheme.

3218A. Venerable Member Archdeacon, Archdeacon of Cork.—I may be permitted to make an observation. I live in the parish from whence a great number of these apprentices go, because it is the parish in which the military barracks are situated, and where the military people reside; and from my experience of this apprenticeship system I would say that if the trustees can see their way to apply the endowment to the education of the poor in some other direction, for technical education or otherwise, it would be a great benefit to the class of children who are apprenticed out of doors—especially as regards the girls. I know as a matter of fact that girls go to be apprentices simply in many cases that the fee may be obtained without any very large amount of beneficial instruction being given. All the higher class of drummers do not take these apprentices, and they are apprenticed to a lower class. The number of drummers is far in excess of the demand, and is likely to continue so.

3219. Rev. Dr. Webster.—I entirely confirm what the Archdeacon has said, and I look upon Bertridg's Charity as not at all fulfilling the purposes that the founder intended. I found in my parish that if a fellow had been a militiaman or anything in that way he could call himself a soldier, he not only obtained the benefit of this charity, but I find that he actually sells it long before the governors can give the money—he will sell his sevenpenny interest in this fee and he will take his boy away from school and nominally bind him to the shoemaking business for a few months, wanting to get the money. That injures the future of the boy, who gets no trade at all, and he is in the end absolutely ruined by the Bertridg Charity, not that I blame the trustees.

Mr. Jermyn.—The trustees do all they can to avoid anything of that kind.

3220. The Archdeacon of Cork.—I have known instances in no less than two cases of girls being bound three and four times to the one person, and without having attended to learn their trade for a single day. My attention was called to it when a drummer applied for the fee for fulfilling her trust, and I found she had laid her hands on the reward before I could intervene. I have no doubt this has gone on in other cases.

Mr. Jermyn.—The mode that the trustees have adopted is to get certificates from parties who have themselves seen them serving their time.

3221. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Written certificates?—No, they are printed.

3222. Do the trustees themselves see whether the apprentices are learning their trades or not?—No, I cannot say. Certainly they have sent parties for the last two or three years, and they believe they have served them faithfully.

3223. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Who are the persons who give these certificates?—They are all very respectable people—all honest people.

Rev. Dr. Webster.—I never signed one.

3224. Professor DOUGHERTY (to Mr. Jermyn).—Do the trustees ever bring the apprentices before them to see what they have learned?—We get the apprentice and the master up before the trustees and ascertain from them that the apprenticeship has been faithfully served.

3225. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you ever find that after leaving your charge they follow those trades?—We don't follow that up.

3226. You don't take any interest in them after they leave you?—We don't follow that matter up.

3227. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Who gets these certificates signed?—We give them to the master.

3228. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—You give the form to the master and he brings it back signed?—Yes, but we must be satisfied of the integrity of the person signing it. It is to the effect that the person certifying has called to where the apprenticeship is being served and has seen the apprentice serving his time. The master is given the form to get filled up, and we must be satisfied that the person giving it is satisfied of the truth of its contents.

3229. That he has seen the apprentice at his trade?—Yes.

3230. During the period of his visit?—Yes.

3231. Lord Justice MAINT.—Are your pensioners inmates of Skiddy's almshouses?—We have nothing to do with those.

3232. Are your pensioners in the same building?—On the ground floor of a wing of Skiddy's.

3233. How much money is spent on the pensioners in the year?—Five shillings a week, and £5 a year each for clothes.

3234. Dr. TRAILL.—They are all living in the lower part of Skiddy's?—Yes.

3235. Who has to bear the cost of repairing the house?—We do the repairing of our own portion.

3236. Who repairs the roof?—The Skiddy's are responsible for that.

3237. The Skiddy's appears to be the Victoria Company of London as far as one could gather from a stone in the wall. Do you happen to know when they got their funds?—I have nothing at all to say to them. I don't know anything about that.

3238. The number of pensioners is limited to seven?—Yes, and under an old will they get £6 a week.

3239. Professor DOUGHERTY.—How much have you been in the habit of spending annually on apprentice fees?—I think the average would be £50 or £60.

3240. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—I see that last year you invested £100 in Three Per Cents.—That is surplus money.

3241. Dr. TRAILL.—How did it happen that you had surplus money?—It accumulated over what we required for the year.

3242. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is that because you hadn't a sufficient number of applicants?—Certainly.

3243. Dr. TRAILL.—Did that £50 or £60 include the £10 you pay at the end of the term as a reward fee?—No, they are separate.

3244. The fee is £5 you said when they are being apprenticed, and you said that afterwards, if they faithfully carried out the apprenticeship £10 was given to the master and £5 to the boy?—Yes.

3243. What is the period of apprenticeship for boys?—Six years.

3244. For girls?—Three years.

3245. For every £30 there ought to be added between £10 and £20 a year more on an average if every six years you have to give £10?—Yes, of course, £10 to the master and £5 to the boy.

3246. We found elsewhere that it was impossible to apprentice either boys or girls for a small fee—do you find difficulty in getting good apprenticeships?—No.

3247. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—You don't appear to find any difficulty in getting people to take your £10?—The class of parties who come to us are generally of a very humble class.

Oct. 11, 1887.
T. H. Jermyn.

Venerable Morgan Archibald, Archdeacon of Cork, examined.

3250. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Can you give us any suggestions as to the application of this money? The Archdeacon.—I am not one of the trustees.

3251. Therefore you are the less prejudiced in your opinion?—The trustees, from their own experience, really have no supervision over these apprenticeships, which are clearly unsatisfactory. Most of the masters and mistresses are not of a high class. Most of the boys are apprenticed either to tailoring or shoemaking. The shoemaking trade is overstocked, and there is no class in which poverty is more prevalent amongst the lower class of Protestants in this city than amongst the shoemakers, who are only half employed. It is a pitiful thing bringing up boys to that kind of employment. The same thing applies to girls. We clergy who know the habits of life of the lower class of girls know that the business of sewing is entirely overstocked. What we want for that class of children is some educational means of raising them so as to fit them, as they are fitted in the Christian Brothers' Schools, for higher places, either as intelligent educated artisans, or in some other way. I would strongly suggest, if it is in the power of the Commissioners, leaving the parsonages as they are, that all this money now applied to apprenticeship fees should be devoted to primary or technical education for the benefit of the children of the class for whom it was intended. If this money was placed in connexion with our general scheme for primary education in this city it would be most desirable.

3252. It is only since we came to Cork that we heard of the Bretridghe Charity and of Lapp's Charity: if the gentlemen interested will look into it we shall be happy to see what we can do. Bretridghe's Charity clearly comes within our act after satisfying the first object as to the seven old parsonages?—My conscience is perfectly free to say that I don't know any charitable foundation that is more ineffective than this. It would be most desirable to have it placed in the hands of trustees for educational purposes.

3253. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it as bad as the Green Cow School?—It is worse. I don't think the trustees are in any way responsible. The respectable people who are asked to sign these certificates for apprentices will not do so. I may mention one fact, that as I made some difficulty about signing them three or four years ago I have never since been asked to sign one.

Rev. Dr. Webster.—I have not signed one for thirty years.

3254. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Were you ever asked to sign one?

Rev. Dr. Webster.—Oh, yes, long ago.

3255. Lord Justice FRYGROVE (to Mr. Jermyn).—You have given us the accounts for 1885 and 1886. We should like to have the two previous accounts.

3256. The Lord Bishop of Cork.—Am I to understand that it would meet the approval of the Commission if our Commission, which is setting in regard to the general scheme, were to apply to the Trustees of Bretridghe's Charity to ask them to get power to turn over these apprenticeship fees to the purposes of primary education in connexion with the proposed Board?

3257. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—This is not an exempt charity, because the Governing Body are not all of the same denomination. They are under our compulsory powers, and accordingly we will do all we can to make this an efficient charity. There is another matter that strikes me, the word "Protestant" is general, and the charity would appear to be open to Protestants of all denominations. (To Mr. Jermyn).—As a matter of fact what denominations has this charity been open to?—It has been treated as open to all Protestants.

3258. If so the powers of the Commission are unlimited in extending the usefulness of this charity to people who ought to be benefited by it, and we are not bound to keep it for apprenticeship fees. We cannot presume to think ourselves qualified to suggest off hand the best way of dealing with it. We would be glad to get suggestions from the trustees on the subject.

Mr. Jermyn.—I am sure on hearing from your lordships that the trustees will be happy to give you any information.

3259. You will bring the matter before the trustees at their next meeting, and communicate with us?

Mr. Jermyn.—Certainly.

Venerable
Morgan
Archibald.

Rev. Canon
Dore H.
Fosell.

The Rev. Canon Dore H. Fosell examined.

3260. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—I believe, Canon Fosell, you wish to make a statement in reference to Bretridghe's charity?

Canon Fosell.—I wish to explain that Bretridghe's charity is for two purposes—one for providing a home for soldiers—the other for providing apprentice fees for the children of soldiers. There are no endowments connected with the fund for educational purposes properly so called. We are working under a scheme sent to us about four years ago. I understand that the other Commissioners heard that there are certain objections to the administration of the funds, and I wish to give a very emphatic denial to any statement which intimated that there was looseness in the management of the funds of this charity.

3261. It was not exactly looseness that was alleged.

It was stated that seven old soldiers got their five shillings weekly and their clothes, and that the remaining funds were spent in paying apprenticeship fees, very small in amount, and that the children who got those fees were not really taught trades and got very little value for the money?—That is quite a mistake. We exercise the greatest care, and are really doing an important work with these apprentice fees. We bind boys to all the important trades of the city—plumbers, gasfitters, tailors—and a large number of girls as dressmakers. We never bind to any tradesman unless we have a certificate of a clergyman of the parish as to their suitability, and, indeed, unless we all ourselves know them to be suitable.

3262. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you bind apprentices in all the parishes of the city?—The children of soldiers who bind through the city no matter in what parish.

3253. Have you at present apprentices bound in the various parishes of the city?—Yes, we have. And when the apprenticeship is served we require to receive the evidence of three independent respectable persons who have been frequently at the place of business, and who can state of their own knowledge that during the term of the apprenticeship they have seen the apprentice at work, and know that the apprenticeship has been faithfully served. It is quite true that we discovered efforts to impose upon us, but we discovered them and we put a stop to them.

3254. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long have you been engaged in the management of this charity?—For about nine years.

3255. It was suggested, and we got evidence from the bishop, from Dr. Webster, and from the Archbishop, in support of that view, that this money would be more usefully applied in education than in these apprenticeship fees, do you concur in that opinion?—I don't think that that is so. Besides I am not aware when an endowment is in no part educational, whether it comes within the scope of your powers or not.

3256. There is a special section of our Act, apparently passed in consequence of the general inability of these apprenticeship fees, enabling us to treat them as educational endowments?—There is no inability about these apprenticeship fees, as far as I can see. There is a strong opinion that they are very fairly worked, and Mr. Jernyns can give you important documentary evidence of what I say.

3257. We see that you invested £100 last year, surplus money, how did that arise?—Our tenants now are not paying us at all. We have great difficulty in knowing what to do. We have made the very largest abatement we could in surmises make, and they are refusing still to pay. A special meeting of the board is to be summoned, and those savings of money are not recent. I believe that is the surplus of years gone by. We have been anxious to get liberty under our scheme to bind children who are not the children of soldiers, but we are not able to admit any other children because our funds are really required for the soldiers' children.

3258. Do you keep a record of the apprenticeship?—A most careful record; Mr. Jernyns will put the documents before you. The books are kept most carefully. The greatest care is exercised in the administration of the charity. We have been obliged to have several old pensioners removed from the institution, because old soldiers are not always temperate, and we have had the greatest difficulty in securing men of respectability as occupants of the institution; we have already removed several objectionable men.

3259. Professor DOCUMENT.—Have you made any provision for a governor to visit the employers or the apprentices from time to time?—It is a rule of the board that that should be done.

3260. But never acted upon?—It is not acted upon except in a case where a difficulty arises.

3262. I understand your plan is to hand this printed form of certificate to the employer and he brings it back signed?—I beg your pardon, that really is not done.

3263. Then you are not contradicting but contradicting the evidence of your secretary, Mr. Jernyns?—The papers are signed by persons that we believe to be respectable.

3264. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Mr. Jernyns said, that he had a printed form, that he gave that form to the master, and that the master brought it back signed; we had also evidence from the Archbishop that if you are not satisfied with those names you get others; but we had evidence from the Archbishop, Dr. Webster, and others that these children had not really been taught any trade well?—The papers must be given either to the master or to the apprentice.

3265. If you ask me, I would say that giving such certificates to either master or apprentice to get them signed by other people as evidence of a fact which the Governors ought to ascertain for themselves is a most unsatisfactory proceeding.

Mr. Gregg (Crown Solicitor).—In nine cases out of ten those certificates are a perfect humbug. And furthermore there is a great difficulty in getting the children of soldiers—to my certain knowledge on one or two occasions when we tried to get young girls as apprentices they were not the daughters of soldiers. The difficulty is in fact to prevent an accumulation of the funds that ought to be applied. And I agree distinctly with what has been already said, that it would be a great deal better if you had the power to apply this charity to the cases of education.

Canon Powell.—Mr. Gregg is making a general charge, but for the last nine years, during which time I have had experience of these cases, I say that the greatest pains are taken in apprenticing the children, and that we are perfectly satisfied as to the apprenticeship being faithfully served, before we even give the money.

3266. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We hear also that the largest sum of money that is ever given is £10; and everywhere else we have been told that it is perfectly useless to give so small a sum as an apprenticeship fee, because as a rule an apprenticeship cannot be got for less than £30, and £20 is the very smallest that we could trace as being of any value. I believe the master gets £10 at the beginning and £5 at the end.

The Archbishop of Cork.—Mr. Jernyns said that the master gets £10 and the apprentice £5.

Canon Powell.—The master gets £5 at the beginning and £10 at the end of the apprenticeship—£15 in all. I have not got the book with me that will tell you distinctly the persons who took our children, but they are all respectable tradesmen of the city. Our apprentices are supposed to be Indian, but that is never carried out now, but the apprentices are quite respectable, and the leading men of the city take them.

3267. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We had a case mentioned of a militiaman who sold in advance his right to the apprenticeship fee?—That has not occurred for the last nine years. There is no act bringing up cases that are ancient history. If any one will bring a case of that kind forward new and substantiated it, I shall be happy to meet him.

3268. Professor DOCUMENT.—As a matter of fact everywhere else this system of apprenticeship fees is obsolete?—I am not wanting to express any opinion upon that, I am only saying that our Board has managed its trust fairly.

3269. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Does this system of paying small apprenticeship fees prevail for other children generally, or is it only those few who have this fund available who are bound upon such fees?—I suspect the people in all these trades require fees from all apprentices. There is also a certain scale of wages given from year to year according as the apprenticeship is served, and I think our children get some advantage in that way, but I really cannot speak with authority on the subject.

3270. Is that the only advantage they get?—These children might not be taken without that advantage if they hadn't the Board at their back, being the children of soldiers.

3271. The Archbishop of Cork.—I wish to say that since Canon Powell has been Rector of St. Mary Shandon and connected with this fund, there has been a great change as regards the just administration of this fund, and some of the abuses referred to were before his time, but it entirely depends on gentlemen like Canon Powell continuing in that position, and there is nothing to control that kind of thing that has been referred to occurring hereafter. I think that Canon Powell must agree with me that to apprentice those girls to become dressmakers in a market glutted with that kind of work—instead of giving them an opportunity of getting a better education to fit them for the duties of life—perhaps in a more remunerative and better way, where we have this opportunity now of having the fund allocated in that way would be a mistake. It would be a great pity to continue on with these apprenticeships when we could apply that money for technical education and in other ways more useful for educational purposes than the way the fund is now applied.

Canon Powell.—I am quite aware that the advantages of the fund are very small, particularly as the Archbishop has said, in making girls dressmakers, which is really only training them to poverty.

3282. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Would you then be prepared to fall in with the Archbishop's suggestion and to apply those apprenticeship fees in the general scheme—for technical or other education?—Yes. I was not aware that Mr. Jermy was examined, but I wanted to protect myself and the other nominators from the idea that this fund was wasted or unfairly dealt with.

3283. It was chiefly alleged that the fund could be better applied?—It is as useful as that sort of thing can be made. It is well administered—that is all I want to say.

Oct. 12, 1888.
Rev. Canon
Powell.

Mr. T. H. Jermyn again attended, and produced the books of the Charity.

3284. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You have fifty-eight names of apprentices entered since 1880?—Since the new scheme.

3285. The terms range from seven to three years?—The girls are three years, the boys range from five to seven.

3286. Would you ask your body to submit their views as to the best way of dealing with the money?—Yes (Form of certificate handed in.)

3287. Professor DEQUENARY.—Do you give notice to those persons who sign certificates that they are expected to visit the apprentices at their work from time to time?—They are quite aware of that, and they won't be paid without the certificate.

Mr. T. H.
Jermyn.

ROCHELLE GOVERNESSES' SEMINARY.

Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—In this case a draft scheme has been lodged.

Mr. James Lane sworn.

3288. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You act as solicitor for the trustees of the Rochelle Governesses' Seminary?—Yes, for many years.

3289. You appear with a view to settling a scheme for the future management?—Yes.

3290. It was founded under a deed of April 22, 1841?—Yes.

3291. What is your property?—It consists of an interest in the residence of Rochelle, which is somewhat valuable. It is held under lease for 300 years, and a large sum of money has been expended upon the house as required for the use of the institution.

3292. Dr. TRAILL.—How much?—Nearly £3,000. There is also £1,500 Stock of the Barrow Navigation Company, which was put in trust in 1841, and two further sums, £1,764 3s. 8d., Victoria Inscribed Stock, and £200 India Stock.

3293. Since 1881 what has been the annual produce of the Barrow Navigation Stock?—Very little for some years past—almost nothing.

3294. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is it worth anything now?—Hardly anything. It cannot be sold.

3295. What is the nominal amount?—£1,300.

3296. What does it produce?—It varies very much, sometimes 1½, sometimes 3½, but never more than 5 per cent.

3297. You mentioned some other investments—when did they come from?—They are the result of an effort to create an endowment for the institution. It was originally hoped and expected that £5,000 would be collected, but it realized only £1,000. And £1,764 3s. 8d. is invested in Victoria Inscribed Stock, and £200 in India Stock, in the names of the Bishop of Cork, the Dean of Cork, and Robert O'Connell Hall, as Trustees.

3298. To what purposes is the income of the securities applied?—Those two sums are applied specially to reduce the ordinary payment for pupils attending the Seminary which has been hitherto £27 for each pupil. It was arranged at the time of this collection that each person who subscribed £200 should have a nomination, and that the nominated child should pay £20 instead of £27. Inasmuch as £1,000 was collected there were five nominated children entitled to the reduced rate. The ordinary pupils pay £27, and these five pay £20. It was merely to encourage donors to give that they have the nomination of children at a reduced rate. The donors nominated the pupils to the Board.

3299. What is the present governing body?—The trustees have almost all died. I think the Rev. John Woodroffe is the only surviving trustee of the original trust.

3300. You desire now to vest the property in a newly constituted body?—Yes.

3301. Dr. TRAILL.—I thought you said that the trustees now were, the Bishop, Dean, and Mr. Hall?—Yes of that particular fund. The Rev. John Woodroffe was the surviving trustee of the old fund.

3302. Do you propose to put both funds into the same hands?—Yes.

3303. Rev. Dr. Webster (to Mr. Lane).—Was not Mr. Woodroffe originally appointed as Rector of St. Nicholas and not as Mr. Woodroffe?—Not as Rector of St. Nicholas. He was appointed as the Rev. John N. Woodroffe, not because he was Rector of St. Nicholas.

3304. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is the institution in the parish of St. Nicholas?—It is.

3305. What is the qualification of the pupils?—Nothing except that they must be the children of gentry.

3306. You propose that they should be the daughters of clergymen, of members of the military profession, or of other respectable gentlemen whose altered circumstances preclude them from affording education to their children in conformity with the orthodox principles of the Church of Ireland?—Yes.

3307. The Lord Bishop of Cork.—At the time of the endowment from the Barrow Navigation fund,

Mr. James
Lane.

 Mr. James

which was given by the Colvill family in the year 1841, there were five trustees appointed, that is why the number five was taken. Mr. Woodroffe was at that time the predecessor of Dr. Webster as rector of St. Nicholas's, and I would say one reason why he was appointed was because he was rector of St. Nicholas's, but he was personally appointed and he never resigned the trust. It appears that he is the only surviving legal trustee. Dr. Salmon at one time gave a legacy of £500, which was entrusted to him, to the institution. That was expended in adding to the building, and he was therefore made one member. Mr. Colvill, a member of the Colvill family, was also made one member. Those two gentlemen represented the trust, and the Bishop is ex officio. My own opinion would be rather that the number should be made seven instead of five, because Dr. Salmon and Mr. Colvill could not be expected to attend, and it would be very hard to have a satisfactory quorum without them.

3308. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Would you see any objection to having a representation of contributions to the fund on the Board?

The Bishop of Cork.—I could not see any objection.

3309. In the case of the Belfast Institution they have a franchise of subscription, and, if the subscribers fail to elect, the others may co-opt?

The Bishop of Cork.—I should see no objection to that.

3310. Who really manages the concern?

The Bishop of Cork.—Miss Whately has resided voluntarily, and without any remuneration whatever, in the school for many years, and all the practical working of the school has really devolved upon her.

There has been such general confidence in her that the general constitution is very much also in her hands. That is the actual fact.

3311. But we must provide for the future, and things cannot always go on as they have hitherto done?

The Bishop of Cork.—We put Miss Whately in the scheme before, and we are anxious that a scheme that has worked harmoniously should go on so.

3312. Would you think it advantageous that the Lady Principled should be a member of the Governing Body?

The Bishop of Cork.—I don't think we would. Miss Whately is exceptional, because she is residing here at present, but if the Board had to employ a lady to manage the school I think it would be better that she should not be a member of the Governing Body.

Rev. Dr. Webster.—May I say that although what the Bishop says is strictly correct—that Mr. Woodroffe never resigned the trust—all my predecessors, and I myself as the rector of the parish, up to a certain date, were always summoned as Governors of this institution; but I have never been summoned for the last twenty-five years.

3313. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—(To Mr. Lees).—Would it be well if the rector of the parish was an ex officio Governor, with the Bishop at the head? The two "representative" Governors will not really, when Dr. Salmon and Mr. Colvill drop out, be representative at all, and, except the Bishop, you will have a merely co-opting body, which is not always satisfactory?—Certainly.

Rev. George Webster, D.D., examined.

3314. Dr. TRAILL.—How many years were you on the Board, Dr. Webster?

Rev. Dr. Webster.—Five years.

3315. Were you put off the Board?—No.

3316. Is your name on the minute books as a member of the Board?—Certainly, if they are correctly kept.

The Bishop of Cork.—What Dr. Webster says is perfectly correct. His name is recorded in the minute books for some years; but there is no resignation recorded of Mr. Woodroffe who was the previous rector.

Rev. Dr. Webster.—Mr. Dannecombe, my predecessor, who was always summoned, and not only that but he had a very strong conflict with the trustees in 1862, and settled the question, and he got them to consent absolutely and formally to him, as rector of the parish, going in and catechising the children.

3317. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you catechise them now?

—No, I have not been able. I have been ignored for the last twenty-five years.

3318. When did that arrangement cease?—Just this time twenty-five years. I think it is very anomalous to have a church institution in the parish without having the rector associated with it. If there are any ex officio Governors surely the rector of the parish ought to be one of them. It was only found out, when I was working there for five years, that Mr. Woodroffe hadn't resigned, and I never heard that Mr. Woodroffe hadn't resigned until quite lately.

3319. I see a provision in the draft scheme for religious education according to the principles of the Church of Ireland. You think the institution should have some connexion with the parish church?—The girls never attend the parish church. They always attend a church in the parish over which I have no control, called the Free Church.

3320. The institution is some distance from St.

Nicholas's church?—Not more than a quarter of an hour's walk.

Mr. Lees.—It is convenient to the Free Church, and the pupils have attended the Free Church ever since the foundation of the institution.

3321. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—(To the Bishop of Cork).—If we made the governing body even could we not provide for its continuance otherwise than by making it a merely co-opting body?—Would you recognise either the Diocesan Board of Synod or the Diocesan Council, and give them the function?

3322. We have in several instances of Church institutions given representation to the Diocesan Council?—I am sure we would be perfectly satisfied if the Diocesan Council nominated two members.

Miss Whately.—But I think we should have the right of veto.

3323. Dr. TRAILL.—Where do the girls come from?

Miss Whately.—The pupils come from every part of Ireland, north and west.

3324. Mostly I suppose from the county of Cork?—Generally from over Munster.

Rev. Dr. Webster.—They come from Galway and Derry and all over Ireland.

3325. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—We might make provision for the appointment of two members of the board by subscribers.

Miss Whately.—There are no subscribers.

3326. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—All the large institutions in the north have been founded on a rule on that system; if there were subscribers they should have a voice in appointing a couple of members, and, as long as there are none, those places might be filled by co-option. The Diocesan Council might appoint a couple, and so get up an external interest in the place. We should like to see some proposal for getting an authorised representative of the parish church on the board.

Mr. Lorne.—Under the original deed the Colvill family had power to nominate, and they have by letter surrendered that right.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We should be glad now to hear Miss Whately on the present condition of the institution.

Oct. 17, 1887.
Rev. George Webster, D.D.

Miss M. J. E. Whately sworn.

3327. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You have been residing for a long time at the Rochelle Seminary?—I have been honorary secretary of the Rochelle Seminary for over forty years, and I have been residing there for over eight.

3328. Does your honorary secretaryship go back to the foundation?—No, I don't know much about the foundation. My first knowledge of it is the deed of 1841, and I was not then honorary secretary. It was established before 1841, but I cannot tell you how long.

3329. How many pupils have you at present?—At present forty-three pupils—thirty-eight resident and five visiting.

3330. What is the course of education?—We prepare them for the Intermediate Examinations, some have matriculated at the Royal University, and one pupil went a point farther.

3331. I believe you have been very successful at the Intermediate Examinations?—Yes, we had several exhibitions, and we have got £10 prizes, books, and medals, and we have been successful with the Synod's Board of Religious Education.

3332. Lord Justice NASH.—Are the young ladies all trained with the object of ultimately becoming governesses?—That is the intention, but they are not compelled to become governesses, though the greater number do. Four of our pupils went directly from being our pupils to being our teachers. Some afterwards occupied very high positions as teachers in other places. One became the second mistress in the Clergy Daughters' School at Bristol, and they were so pleased with her that they made her head mistress—she held that position until her health obliged her to resign. Another pupil as teacher at a school in England got board and residence, and £80 salary. One of our pupils is at this moment the second mistress at the Cork High School.

3333. Then the large majority of your pupils want to qualify to maintain themselves in life by teaching?—Yes, and a great many have been governesses in private families.

3334. How many have you got accommodation for?—Eighty.

3335. What is the largest number that you have had at the same time?—Eighty.

3336. When did the numbers fall?—They have gradually decreased since 1860 or 1861.

3337. To what do you attribute the decrease?—Very much to the circumstances of the country. They were unable to pay the small stipend of £37 a year, and I could not attempt to tell you how many letters I have received inquiring if we could not take them at a smaller sum than £37 a year, and because we could not the idea of sending the girls in question was given up.

3338. We were told you had a fund which enabled you to reduce the fees?—Yes, for five pupils.

3339. How are the five pupils selected?—It is in the hands of the committee, but they never manage the school, and it is left in the hands of the honorary secretaries, and the selection of these five pupils practically to me; the donor of the larger part of that £1,500 voluntarily relinquished that right, and said he would rather it would remain in the hands of the managing committee.

3340. Then the managers of the school can select five pupils to get the reduction?—Yes.

3341. Upon what grounds do you select?—More poverty than proficiency—suitability of mark.

3342. Have you any pupils who pay more than £37?—Not now, we had eight or nine—possibly ten—who paid £42 at different times.

3343. Does the £37 pay the expenses?—If the school was full it would, but it does not pay now with the reduced number.

3344. How do you meet the deficiency?—On one occasion a kind friend helped us by giving us £220 that we were deficient, and ever since by effort and watchfulness we have kept within the amount. I don't think our income this year will, as far as I can calculate, altogether meet our expenditure, but last year we had somewhat of a balance, that balance will now be reduced, but will we shall not be in debt as far as I can calculate.

3345. How do you apply the results fees of the Intermediate Examinations?—That amount, whatever it may be, goes into the general fund. The first year when the fees were large we gave part of the sum to the teachers; but we have not been able to afford that since.

3346. Lord Justice NASH.—Can you tell us exactly what the income of the establishment is?—When we first got the Barrow Navigation Fund it was 4 per cent.—which was £78. It was £78 for a good many years.

3347. Lately it has fallen off very much?—Two or three times we have had no dividend at all.

3348. What did you get last year?—Last February we got at the rate of 1½ per cent; this August we got at the rate of 2½ per cent.

3349. You got during the year £24 or £26?—I suppose so.

3350. What other funds have you?—I don't know that we have any fund except the pupils' payments, and the interest on £1,000.

3351. How is that invested?

The Bishop of Cork—£200 is in Indian Stock, and the remainder in Victoria Inscribed Stock.

3352. Lord Justice NASH.—That brings in between £56 and £57 a year?—Yes.

3353. In addition to the interest on the Barrow Fund and this £60, you have to rely altogether on the payments made by the pupils?—Yes, and the results fees, and then we have an interest in the house.

3354. Do you pay any rent for the house?—We do.

3355. What rent do you pay?—We pay £60 a year, and the stable and coach-house is let off for £10 out of that.

3356. I see it stated in the report for 1880, that you have an assignment of a 500 years' loan subject to £40 yearly rent?—£90 we pay.

3357. What quantity of land have you?—I think the whole of the land is considered to be about 3½ acres, and there are very large buildings upon it.

3358. Is the whole of the ground occupied for the purposes of the school?—Yes; there is a large kitchen garden and a tennis ground. There is no money made except from the coach-house and stable, and a few shillings for hay.

3359. Professor DOCUMENT.—What amount did you earn by results fees last year?—I have not the details with me. It has varied so every year. I think it was a little over £30; in 1886, £42 6s. 4d.

3360. Have you any table showing the success of your students?—I have extracted a few heads. There is this young lady that I have spoken of at the Clergy Daughters' School, at Bristol, and the lady who got £90 a year. There was another young lady who became the Head of Flossie's Asylum, and Miss Huxley, who is in the High School here in Cork. We have had about five exhibitions. Three were retained during the three years, and two or three others didn't go up afterwards.

3361. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—At what age do you take in your pupils?—We can take them at any age from ten to sixteen.

3362. How long can you keep them?—There is no fixed limit.

3363. I see there were seventy-five pupils in the school in 1880?—Yes. We can accommodate eighty.

3364. Have you the numbers for the years successively since then?—There were eighty pupils in 1879, and an average of sixty-three since.

3365. Do your pupils come mostly from the county Cork and from the city?—I could not say readily. They vary from one year to another. A great many come from Dublin. Some from the north; some from the west, but I suppose the bulk come from Cork, and the county of Cork.

3366. What is your teaching staff?—We have at present six resident English teachers. We used to have two foreign teachers, but we prefer to have English teachers trained abroad. The French government has been trained in Paris, the German government has been trained in Germany, and our English Teacher has passed in the highest grade in the Dublin University, and is a first-rate teacher. All our English pupils get honours without an exception in the Intermediate examinations, and the other examinations. We have another lady a most valuable English teacher, and we have an English lady who has matriculated in the University of London. She teaches mathematics and Latin. One of these teachers has been trained in the Training College of St. Andrews. We have six resident teachers, besides five visiting masters.

3367. What are your ideas about the committee of management?—I think five most suitable trustees in addition to the bishop have been named.

3368. But two of those are not resident in or near Cork?—But they take a deep interest, both of them, in the school, and have sanctioned it. I think that those five would be the best judges as to who it would be suitable to nominate in their places.

3369. Professor DOUGHERTY.—But could you be quite sure that their successors would be the best judges as to those who ought to succeed them?—I think that is the best security we can have, and, I think, we might make it compulsory on the survivors of those five, that they should immediately with the bishop co-opt a person in place of each one removed, and so make it compulsory not to let it lapse.

3370. What annual subscription do you think should entitle a person to have a voice in the selection of members of the governing body?—Well, a subscription is a completely new idea to me. A good many years ago, in fact before I had much connection with it, there were subscriptions, and there were charity sermons, but they were both found rather derogatory. So practically we have not had anything to say to subscriptions, except £50, since I took it up.

3371. But you got the £1,000 during the last four years?—That is an endowment, and not a subscription in the ordinary sense.

3372. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You mean annual subscriptions to keep the daily expenses down?—Yes.

3373. Surely subscribers to an endowment would be an advantage?—It appears in the draft that a contributor of £500 will nominate one of these pupils.

3374. Dr. TRAVERS.—Suppose a donor of £500 had a voice in electing part of the governing body, would not that help me?—I do not know anything about that.

3375. Would you not be glad to get money on the terms, not for every donor to go on the governing body, but for every ten donors to elect one, so that the whole number could not exceed twenty?—I am not prepared to answer that question, that is a new idea.

3376. Suppose five donors of £500 pay £1,000 into the funds of the institution, would not that be worth taking an extra member on your board for?—It would be very well worth having—also £1,000.

3377. Would it not also be worth while to have an additional governor on the board to secure such a sum?—It depends very much upon his fitness.

3378. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We will take this draft scheme, and send you a printed copy of our own scheme, in which we may throw out some suggestions about modifying the governing body; then you can call a meeting of the trustees, and let them communicate with us about it.

3379. (To Miss Wexford).—Are all the pupils members of the Church of Ireland?—No, they are all Protestants, but there are Wesleyans and Presbyterians. They all, however, attend the Church of Ireland, and they are all educated by a Church of Ireland clergyman.

3380. They all receive religious instruction in that denomination?—Yes, and they are told beforehand that they must do so.

3381. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You don't see your way to widening the basis of the institution by allowing the various Protestant denominations to be represented upon the governing body?—No. I don't think it would work well.

3382. We find in the north that the various denominations work together harmoniously in the management of similar institutions?—We admit them all to the same religious communion no matter to what Protestant Church the pupil belongs.

3383. You compel them all to go to the Church of Ireland?—Yes, and when they are told that they do not make the least objection. I have had a few Roman Catholics who sought entrance to the sanctuary. I have said to them, "I will not refuse you, but you must be prepared to go to the Protestant church, to attend family prayers, be instructed in the Holy Scriptures, and you must be prepared to be educated by a Protestant clergyman. If you agree to that you may come."

3384. Lord Justice NAISB.—And of course they didn't come?—They did not come, and I didn't expect they would.

* CORK SCHOOL OF SCIENCE, ART, AND MUSIC.

Dr. WILLIAM K. SULLIVAN sworn.

3385. Lord Justice NAISB.—You are president of the Queen's College, Cork?—Yes.

3386. The School of Science, Art, and Music was established in 1878 under the Acts of Parliament regulating public libraries in Ireland?—Yes.

3387. Were you connected with it from the start?—Yes. I am one of those who took an interest in getting the whole thing done.

3388. Before advantage was taken of these Acts of Parliament, was there a school of music in Cork?—No.

3389. Was there a school of art?—Yes, for a great many years.

3390. Was that the nucleus of the present establishment?—It was.

3391. What was the history of that school?—There was always a sort of voluntary school of art in Cork, and when the Act of 1866, extending the Museum and Libraries Act was passed, the Cork Corporation at once met the trustees or managers by taking advantage of the Act, and they gave them out of the Borough Fund a sum equivalent to what a half-penny rate would produce.

3392. When was that grant commenced?—In 1855, immediately when the Act passed.

3393. With the aid of that rate was the School of Art carried on successfully?—Yes, except as regards the building.

3394. Where was the building?—It was then the old Chancery House, which now forms part of the School of Art, but it was a wretched building.

3395. What was the course of instruction?—It was brought under the South Kensington Department of Science and Art and worked exactly as it is now.

3396. Was it taken advantage of?—To as large an extent as it was possible to accommodate those who went there.

3397. Did the pupils receive instruction in drawing and painting?—Yes—as now.

3398. And modelling?—Modelling only to a small extent—more from the absence of accommodation than anything else.

3399. In addition to the rate and contribution made by the Corporation, what other funds were available for carrying on the school?—The results fees.

3400. What was the next stage of development in the institution?—A meeting was called of citizens interested in the matter. The first meeting was in 1874 or 1875, immediately after I came to Cork. I had a principal part in the calling of that meeting, and we agitated the question for two or three years for the purpose of getting the Corporation to enlarge their grant with the result that a penny rate was adopted in 1876. A committee was appointed on March 24, 1876. Mr. Nicholas Dan Murphy, then the senior member for the city, an active member of the committee, brought in a bill which became the Act of 1877 by which two gaps in the Act of 1855 were filled up—namely, a clause enabling the Governing Body of the school to borrow money for building, and the power which didn't exist before to the Corporation of bringing in external modules upon the committee of management. They also asked music to advance and art.

3401. You have been working under that Act since?—We have.

3402. Your present committee is appointed under the Act of 1877?—Yes. And I should like to say, although we have a considerable number of members of the Corporation itself, the Corporation have acted in a matter worthy of imitation, both in the nomination and in the activity of the members of that body. Among the present members of the committee there is not a political party, nor a religious denomination that is not represented, and that has not also done good work for the cause of the institution.

3403. As regards the committee of management you have nothing to complain of?—Nothing whatever.

3404. And you find it works satisfactorily?—Perfectly.

3405. You have never any difficulty in getting a sufficient number of members for the transaction of the business of the institution?—Never. This present committee, which contains a large number, is divided into three sub-committees—one for art, one for science, and one for music, some two or three members like myself are on each of those sub-committees but as a whole I think they are extremely well attended and well managed.

3406. There is nothing you desire further in that respect?—No, I think nothing could be better than the arrangement.

3407. What are your resources?—We have got the rate of 1d. in the £1.

3408. How much does that give you in the year?—About £500 gross.

3409. Do you receive the entire produce of that rate?—Except £50 that was given originally to the Christian Brothers' Schools in Peacocke-lane, we get the balance, £500 or so; and that is the first item of our income.

3410. What other income have you?—None at all, except the fees.

3411. What do the fees come to?—The pupils' fees in the school of music for the year, to June 30th, 1887, amounted to £718 1s. 11d.

3412. What was the number of pupils?—160 to 174 is the annual average.

3413. How are the classes regulated?—There are two day classes and an evening class, and we have now a third class free. The pupils attending the day classes pay twice as much as the evening classes, and, in fact, the school is working on the means obtainable from the day pupils. We pay some of the teachers by the hour and some otherwise, and by that means we are able to supplement what the evening class pays.

3414. What are the fees for a day pupil?—They are rather heavy. I should observe, in regard to the music school, because we are not dealing with the art school at present—that the great effort is to keep up a continuous course of study. It is important also not to interfere with private teaching and class teaching. Any pupil who comes to learn, for instance, any instrument of music like the piano, must go through a course of solfeggio and harmony. We have two classes for solfeggio—one for juniors and one for seniors—and that is one of the ways in which we think we have been doing most good. The junior solfeggio class for the first year pay £2, and the night class £1; and the senior solfeggio class for thirty lessons is solfeggio and thirty lessons in harmony pay £2 10s. and £1 respectively.

3415. Notwithstanding that some of these fees appear rather heavy, do you find a number of pupils who take advantage of the instruction?—We do.

3416. Dr. TRAVIS.—Are those fees for the year or for the quarter?—For the session.

3417. Lord Justice NAULT.—What fees do you receive in the other departments?—In the science school we are given the small grant which works it from South Kensington, and only a little from fees. South Kensington practically supports the science department which is only in its infancy. We have been trying to keep it alive, but until now we have not had proper accommodation.

3418. What instruction is given at present?—Chiefly electricity, mechanics, and scientific subjects of that kind; but we hope to have a technical school. We have another fund to which I should call your attention. It is connected more with art than science, though it belongs to the latter. It is the balance coming from the Cork Exhibition of 1883. We were one of the few exhibitions that paid their expenses and had something over. Besides a sum of £200 given towards purchasing a collection of examples of old lace to which the Government added £200. We have a little over £1,000 laid out in stock of the Cork and Brandon Railway. We have two scholarships in the year, and I hope some day we shall be able to add to them. These scholarships enable us to send some tradesman away to learn the better work of his trade. We began by sending a wood carver—to learn wood carving in London, and we hope to send him to Belgium afterwards. We have him also as a teacher of a class of wood carving. We sent a man—Murphy—a stonemason, who is now in South Kensington, as a carver.

3419. Professor DOUGHERTY.—I saw some of his work in England, and it is very creditable?—Next week we shall send away a carpenter to see the style of work in other places.

3420. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Have you any hold on those men to bring them back again?—No, we must take our chance. If we put any condition of that kind, the result would be failure. I hope when they come back they will form classes in the science school. It is there I wish them to be connected with us. I hope when they come back they will take the superintendence of the laboratory which you run.

3431. Dr. TRAILL.—What does it cost to get those men trained on the other side of the water?—We give each of them half of whatever our little fund produces. No more than that.

3432. What would it cost to keep a man in London for a year?—We should be obliged to pay him £1 or 30s a week, but we do it in a lump sum.

3433. Professor DONNAN.—Does not Mr. Murphy hold a National Scholarship?—He does.

3434. You give those who hold scholarships aid from your Cork fund in addition?—Yes, he gets that in addition—that is 30s. a week.

3435. Lord Justice NAUM.—Now, as regards the Art Department, what are your receipts?—The students' fees in 1885, £283 7s. 6d.; the Borough rate that was given for that department was £183 10s.

3436. Dr. TRAILL.—That is out of the £550?—They get their share—£183 10s. for the Art Department. The payments by results for the year amounted to £180 10s. 5d. I shall hand you in some reports which will give details of all these.

3437. Have you any suggestions to offer as to how we can improve the efficiency of the school?—I think, as to art, I can scarcely offer anything; but with regard to music and science—and that is the reason we came before you—we draw up a statement for the Government (handed in), which sets forth our views. We want the Government to assist us on the ground that where the Science and Art Department give us result fees every year in science, they do not do so in music, and although music is not recognised by the Department of Science and Art in Great Britain, it is within the Act in Ireland. The Act of 1877, only extended to Ireland, I admit that that would open a very large door to the music schools in England. We started a dairy school, and there are now eight or nine in England.

3438. You consider that your funds are not sufficient?—Certainly. We cannot do anything with regard to a good technical school. To the men sent to England we cannot give a proper proportion of scientific teaching in the school itself to supplement what they have learnt abroad, and we are much worse off in music—because we had, in building the new school of art, to borrow £2,000 to buy the neighbouring space. The Government vested in the Corporation the old Custom House, which had been by a Treasury letter handed over to a body called the Royal Cork Institution, which at one time was a very great institution, but on the Government grant of £300 being withdrawn, and the removal of a great number of the higher families connected with the city away from it, it fell into neglect, and became desolate; eventually we got this building and a few of their collections that remained, and we had to buy the neighbouring property at an expense of £5,000. That is borrowed by the Corporation through the Corporation.

3439. From the Board of Works?—Yes, it is repayable by instalments, and it takes about £115 out of our penny rate.

3440. How many instalments are there to be?—I think twenty-five instalments in our case.

3441. How had you funds for building the very handsome structure we have seen to-day?—All the building fund from first to last, except about £1,500 subscribed originally for the school of science and for repairing the old building, and joining it with the school of art—for the whole school of art, and a great deal of the science school for the laboratory—all that has been done by Mr. Crawford who has spent nearly £20,000 already on the building.

3442. I am afraid we have no funds to allocate for the purposes of your school?—We first get into communication with your body owing to the Council Request, but I believe it is both smaller than we anticipated, and that it is confined to Dublin.

3433. Lord Justice FRUGGSON.—The Council Request is £17,000, and a scheme for its management has been settled by the Court of Chancery. The Governing Body of the Royal Irish Academy of Music, and the Corporation of Dublin have been before us two or three times on the question of financing a joint scheme, but we should be very slow to interfere with the action of the Court of Chancery, and it must now with the Dublin Corporation and Academy of Music to see whether they will proceed. I don't know that the Council Request is confined to Dublin?—In 1884, I published the "Journal of Science applied to Industry," in Dublin, and in that an article was written on music schools, by the late John Edward Pigott, and at the same time a similar article appeared, upon which the present National Gallery was based. He, in fact, drafted the bill, and we hoped at that time that we had done for Dublin—founded a good academy, having a connection with music schools in the provinces. We hoped to have had a portion of the Council Request granted for the purposes of a National Scholarship.

3434. Lord Justice NAUM.—You have sent in a statement in which you propose that the Cork school as well as the other schools in Ireland should be affiliated with the Dublin school, that students should be granted where possible to the provincial schools, and that scholarships and exhibitions should be provided in the central establishment for deserving pupils from the provinces, and also a travelling scholarship?—Yes.

3435. Is your proposal that these scholarships, to be held in Dublin for education, should be open to Cork pupils?—Yes, and we also think, as regards the whole kingdom, Great Britain included, that we should have results fees most music, as the Commissioners of National Education are now giving for teaching agriculture. They have never provided good music teachers, and a good many of these who are teaching music in National schools have come to us and are taught.

3436. You supply the education for the teachers?—Yes. I think that the Board of Education should assist the music schools as they assist other training schools, by giving some grant in aid of the pupils taught there.

3437. Does not the National Board pay results fees for music teaching?—Not to us.

3438. But they pay results fees to trained teachers who do teach music?—Yes, but where do they get the teachers? We want you to consider that we are a normal school whence they get teachers. We claim to be a little better than the Dublin school, because we lay so much stress on self-education and harmony teaching, which nobody can pass over except they show a competent knowledge. I think this document will give you further information on this subject. (Document handed in.)

3439. The Lord Bishop of Cork (Dr. Gregg).—Allow me to say, in confirmation of what Dr. Sullivan has stated, that I am allowed to present a proposition of twenty-seven pupils to the scholarships in the school of music in each year. The applications to me are frequently to help persons to prepare to be teachers of music, and to assist them in their education for that purpose.

3440. Dr. Sullivan.—In explanation of what the Bishop has just said I should say that the Corporation appointed a committee, two or three years ago, to look into the schools, because it was complained that our high fees kept out poorer people from the music school. The high fees depended on the fact that we could not work the schools unless they were charged, and we made an agreement with the Corporation in return for their grant, that we would give thirty-three free places to be distributed amongst the different religious bodies in Cork. One of our reports will enable you to see how they are distributed, and they include the twenty-seven that his lordship refers to.

3441. Lord Justice NASEL.—Am I to understand that the entire Committee of Management are appointed by the Corporation?—Yes, under the Act.

Oct. 17, 1887.
Dr. Wm. E. Soltau.

MUNSTER AGRICULTURAL AND DAIRY SCHOOL.

3442. Lord Justice NASEL.—Dr. Sullivan, would you now put before us the views you wish to state as regards the Dairy School?—With regard to the Dairy School, I think it might be very simply put—that we want the Board of Education to do for us exactly what they have done already.—

3443. Lord Justice FLEMING.—We want to know first, who are "we" in the Dairy School?—The Committee of the Dairy School.

3444. Lord Justice NASEL.—How are they appointed?—The original Dairy School Committee was appointed by the Agricultural Society and we consider ourselves a sub-committee of the Agricultural Committee.

3445. Is that the Royal Agricultural Society?—No, the Cork County Agricultural Society, which is one of the few provincial societies that has any backbone in it, and is working up to the present. It took up this matter of agricultural education on a report of nine some years ago. We wanted to form an agricultural institute here then, as the school was about to be given up and the place sold. The Commissioners of National Education then agreed to continue it with a local Committee.

3446. When did the Board of Education first take up the Agricultural School in Cork?—About 1854.

3447. I believe all their agricultural schools, except that at Glasnevin, failed?—Yes.

3448. They didn't pay their way?—Well, there are two sides to that. I was connected with Glasnevin for a long time. I taught there for several years, and I, at that time, was most anxious that instead of establishing agricultural schools at gentlemen's gates—I have before me Lord Enly's gate which had one as well as the one at Mungret—that they would take a piece of mountain, put a model school there, and add something for furnishing it. I was told that it was no use—that the thing would not pay, and so the idea was given up.

3449. As a matter of fact their agricultural schools were discontinued?—I was going to add that I wanted them, at that time, to keep their accounts for teaching separate from their farming accounts, and if they had kept and published their farming accounts distinct they would have shown that there was not always a loss. Now all the farming accounts are published separately, but then the result was that everybody in England fancied the schools were all failures, because they saw the master's salary put to the account of the farm.

3450. If they didn't put so much upon the agricultural school for teaching purposes would the farming pay?—Most likely.

3451. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Some of the agricultural schools paid pretty well?—Yes, it appeared so when the farming and educational expenses were kept separate; they kept their accounts separate.

3452. Lord Justice FLEMING.—It struck us that we could do something for your dairy school by giving a constitution to this local committee, and so making for a body that could deal with the Commissioners of National Education, and with Parliament and others?—Yes.

3453. In whom are the buildings and ground vested?—In the Commissioners of National Education.

3454. Do you occupy the place by their sufferance?—We now occupy it with their permission, and we work conjointly and assist them. We are recognized on that condition—we are tolerated, but I don't use that word in an offensive sense.

3455. You don't appear to have more than a transitory existence. You are merely a circle of gentlemen who help to work the place?—Nothing more, and that was one of the arguments I used before the Chancellor of the Exchequer when seeking for the grant of £2,000.

3456. Coming to the practical question, for we wish to do anything in our power to meet your views, it has occurred to us that we could make the Munster Dairy School a real model school, under local management, from which others might be formed?—I think you would be doing a real service.

3457. You understand we have power to do things never done before—to create incorporated bodies with whatever powers are best, and those powers having statutory effect. In other words, we can give you a constitution of a charter and an Act of Parliament, but we cannot create money?—That is, however, a point of vital importance.

3458. Lord Justice NASEL.—What do you get at present from the Board of National Education?—They pay all the expenses except what we supplement. The dairy gals are in the hands of the local committee.

3459. You get all the fees?—Practically, we pay them in.

3460. They pass through your hands?—Yes, and we supplement them. The fees don't quite cover the girls' expenses.

3461. Do you buy and sell the cows?—No, that is done by the Board. They appoint an agricultural superintendent.

3462. If the Board severed their connection with the school, and handed over the buildings and land to the local committee, and ceased giving any grant of money, would you be able to go on?—I don't think so. Not now especially.

3463. What are the expenses of working the school?—The actual expense of teaching and everything is about £700.

3464. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is your committee a committee of the Dairy School, or is it also a committee for the agricultural department of the school?—Over the whole thing.

3465. How many agricultural pupils have you?—This year only nine. I don't think we shall ever have an agricultural school with the amount of land in the present farm.

3466. Lord Justice FLEMING.—In the case of the Mungret Agricultural College, which was originally constituted as yours is, under the National Board, the Board surrendered the premises to a local committee, and it is now no longer an agricultural college. If we could induce the National Board not to surrender but to vest for agricultural purposes in a local committee this place as it stands, and if that committee was so constituted as to be a really agricultural committee, and was empowered to deal with the National Board for their grant, do you think the thing would be more successful than if left in the hands of the Commissioners alone?—I think it would be more successful. I believe we could work it upon such conditions. But they would spend nothing on additional land. If they had taken a farm we wanted, we would have bought the tenant-right out of the £2,000 given by the Treasury, and it could be made one of the finest dairy schools in Europe.

3467. If you had local management instead of the Board would there be any danger of its ending as Mungret has done, in being converted from an agricultural into a Jesuit college?—That would depend upon the members. I think there is a good deal in having some central control. I like local management very well, but I like to have people aware that there is an authority over them, to keep them in order.

Oct. 17, 1897.
Dr. Wm. K.
Sullivan

3438. Lord Justice NAPIER.—What is the £5,000 you were speaking of?—We applied to the Board of Education to take a farm of 300 acres additional, adjoining their present farm, and to work it upon the same terms as now. They didn't see their way, or rather they didn't see that the Treasury would see their way to do so. In London we came in contact with two or three members of the Government, that is to say I did, and one or two others, among them a member of the Agricultural Committee, Mr. Penrose Fitzgerald; and when £50,000 was allocated to Irish purposes we were offered a slice off it. I conducted the correspondence, and I asked for £5,000, as I thought that that amount would have done the thing rightly. However it ended by their giving £2,000.

3439. What would the remaining £3,000 have accomplished?—It would have given us a fund to commence with. At present we have from eighty to ninety girls in the year passing through the institution. In order to find milk to teach them their butter-making we have to buy cattle from day to day, and sell them again the moment they are done milking. We have to pay the highest price in buying, and we get the smallest price in selling them; and this is one of the chief sources of loss forming the £700 a year.

3470. Dr. TRAILL.—But the National Board buys that loss now?—They do, but if we had the £3,000 we would have stocked the new farms ourselves, and commenced making that which would be a great desideratum in the south of Ireland, a herd of proper milking cattle.

3471. Would not the sale of the milk in the interval realize more than the loss on the price of the cows?—No.

3472. You don't get it properly sold?—We don't get sufficient milk. We get everything properly sold, otherwise the loss would be enormous; but farming conducted on the principle of buying cows about to calve, and selling them three months afterwards won't pay. Besides, a school that only teaches how to make butter, and not the rearing of calves, and the treatment of cows out of milk, is most unsatisfactorily performing its mission. The whole thing is worthless—we are only doing half the work we ought to do.

3473. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—If you could give me a biographical sketch of your committee, showing who you are, what you are, how you came into existence, it would be quite within our powers to vest in you all the fixed property of the Ministerial Dairy School, and to give you power to occupy towards the Commissioners of National Education the same position that is occupied by the patron or manager of an ordinary National school, receiving their grants and the fees of the pupils. If that were done, it would give you a permanence that you have not at present!—That would be desirable.

3474. Lord Justice NAPIER.—Who are the members of the committee at present?—Captain Beamish, Mr. R. U. Penrose Fitzgerald, Mr. Ledlow Beamish, Mr. Alexander Ferguson, a large farmer in the neighbourhood, Col. E. A. Skelton, Mr. Mackenzie, a merchant in town, Sir Daniel O'Sullivan, Mr. W. B. Barry, a large farmer, and two or three others who are better mechanics. We have several men connected with the Better Market Trust.

3475. You can elect anybody you choose?—Hitherto we have allowed the Agricultural Society to do that, as it is made a condition that no man can be a member of the Dairy School Committee unless he is a member to the Agricultural Society's Dairy School Fund, because we provide £800 or £400 a year for our own work.

3476. If the Committee or Trustees of the Better Exchange had the privilege of electing two or three more members, would it be likely to excite more general interest and support?—I am quite sure it would. We are trying to get some practical working farmers in, but owing to the state of things the few that were there left us, or rather dropped off.

3477. What do you call "the state of things"?—Well, the present relations of landlord and tenant.

3478. Surely landlords and tenants have the same interest and ought to work harmoniously in a matter of this kind?—And so they did. The tenants certainly have sympathy with us, because we get their daughters sent to us, but we have never been in a position to push the thing.

3479. Where do these girls come from?—We have them from as far north as Stranaboe, but chiefly they come from Cork and Kerry. It is really a Cork institution. We have some from Wexford, and a few, I think, even from Austria.

3480. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I for one could never bring myself to believe that any attempt to educate the Irish in farming is hopeless, but that has been stated to us over and over again in Ulster, and everywhere else. If the gentlemen who have done so much for this institution will give us a plan for this Ministerial Dairy Farm, that would make it an efficient agricultural training establishment, we will gladly do all we can to place the governing body on a permanent basis?—I will undertake for my colleagues and myself that we will fully consider the matter, and give you that opportunity.

3481. Professor DODDART.—Then you are not one of those who think that it is an absolutely hopeless thing to attempt to conduct an agricultural school in an agricultural country?—We have done it.

3482. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It would be necessary to communicate with the Commissioners of National Education, but we can create a body to receive the State aid?—I should like not to weaken the position the Corporation of Cork occupy towards the Committee of the Municipal Schools, a corresponding position to that which the Board of Education occupies with respect to the daily school, and in everything that could possibly help in they take a part.

3483. Dr. TRAILL.—Is £700 the sum expended by the National Board, or is that their net loss?—That is their net loss. All the receipts go to the Board, and that is the net loss. It includes the salary of the superintendent, and all the expenses of the educational portion.

3484. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you think the loss would be less if the management of the place was in the hands of a local committee who had power to take additional land?—At present the Board grant us as much power as we want. They control us upon everything—they leave the whole matter to us.

3485. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the extra land sold in the market?—Yes.

3486. What would you get it for now?—It is rather dear. I think we would be able to buy the ten-acre right, and that that would be a very proper application of part of our £2,000.

3487. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What rent would you pay for it?—About 30s. an acre. We took two or three fields for a short time, and the Commissioners paid the rent of them as part of the expenses; but we could not take the land permanently. I could not undertake to be one of a committee that would take 300 acres of land, and pay for the ten-acre right of it. We see not a permanent body to undertake such a responsibility as that.

3488. We can make you a permanent body so that the members would not be personally answerable. That would enable you satisfactorily to deal with such questions as the taking of additional land?—At present we are entirely dependent upon the National Board.

3489. And this £2,000 from the Government?—That they gave us an out-and-out gift.

3490. Dr. TRAILL.—Where is it now?—They sent it down to me, and we have put it into New Three per Cent.

3491. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—That is unquestionably an amendment within the provisions of our Act, and can you not with that £2,000 form an incorporated body to manage this place?—I think you will find no difficulty about that.

3492. It looks as if that really was a practical thing!

THE ERASMUS SMITH ESTATES.

Thomas Sanders, LL.D., J.P., sworn.

3493. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—You are the agent for the Erasmus Smith western estates?—Yes; we consider them two estates. The western estate includes Galway and Sligo, and the southern estate includes Limerick, property immediately about the town of Tipperary, and property about two miles from it; property about six miles from Thurles; a small property near Mullingar, and also a mountain district in the King's County.

3494. In the report of 1880 the Tipperary estate was described, area 3,629A. 1R. 8C.; number of tenants 107; rental in 1870, £2,048 18s. 7½d. What is the present rental of your Tipperary estate?—£1,665, in 1886. The lands near Tipperary town are let at what would, apparently, be very high rents, but these are let as accommodation lots—as town parks.

3495. We find that, in 1880, £200 had been paid for the goodwill of a small lot there, the rent of which was about 63s. on Irish acre?—I am quite contented that—some of them are as high as £4 an Irish acre.

3496. The next is Soloheadbeg?—Soloheadbeg is about two miles from Limerick Junction.

3497. What is the rental of that?—£763.

3498. What class of land is Soloheadbeg?—Very good pasture and dairy land, but a portion of it is wet. The reduction from £814, the rental in the former Report, must have been before my time, because there was no important reduction since 1880.

3499. When did you become agent?—At the end of 1880.

3501. The statement in the former Report was that the lands were unevenly rented, that a new valuation should be made, and that a careful note should be taken of the tenants' improvements?—I may state that the tenants have evinced a good deal of dissatisfaction. The rents were raised in 1860 over all the southern estates by the Governors, and the tenants of Soloheadbeg said that the reason of the rents being raised was that some of the lands were drained under the Board of Works, and improved in that way, and that it was on the understanding that the increase in the rents should terminate after the twenty-two years—which has expired. I did all I could to enquire about it, and I enquired from Mr. Brennan, but he could get no trace of that being the case, and he entirely contradicted it. He has had to go before the courts once or twice—but that claim is made on behalf of the tenants.

3502. Mr. Murphy reports that very matter as a complaint in 1878?—Yes.

3503. The next townland is Drumbane. Where is it?—Six miles from Thurles—between Thurles and Neagh.

3504. What is the rental of it?—£813 9s.

3505. How have the rents on the Tipperary estates been paid?—There is a great deal of arrears on them at present.

3506. Dr. TRAILL.—To what date did these arrears accrue—were they the arrears on the 1st November last, 1886?—Yes. The last account was made up in January, 1887, and included the rents due on the 25th of September or the 1st of November, 1886, and at that time there was £255 5s. 6d. due on the Rathsmearagh and Abbey lands, plus near Tipperary, £70 under a year's rent; there was £203 5s. due on Solo-—Quite so. I think if we had the additional land, that we would be able to work without any loss at all.

3493. It would not only increase the efficiency of the school, but you could administer the school quite as economically as at present?—Quite so; and what is more important we could have both boys and girls simultaneously, if we had the additional land, and that would raise our receipts from fees.

Oct 17, 1887.

Dr. Wm. K. Sullivan.

headbeg, nearly £300 under a year's rent; £646 due on Drumbane, £160 under a year's rent, still that is a large sum; and there was £27 on Gortacoolish, about three-fourths of a year's rent too. Drumbane is, the greater part of it, poor uncultivated mountain land.

3497. Besides those arrears, were there any reductions or allowances?—Very trifling, on those lands. The Governors appointed Mr. Gray, who is, I believe, a very competent man, to value the lands with a view to making reductions and fixing fair rents, and in some cases he made reductions, but they were very trifling.

3498. What proportion of the rental is represented by judicial rents?—I should say about one-half. On these Tipperary lands there are no judicial rents.

3499. Did none of the tenants go into Court?—No, there were very few reductions. They didn't go into Court, nor did they accept the rents offered there upon Mr. Gray's valuation. The reductions were trifling.

3510. They simply didn't pay?—Yes. On Drumbane, I think, there are fourteen or fifteen, there were either six or eight fixed in Gortacoolish, and where there were reductions made, the others agreed to them; but there has been no reduction to any great extent on the Tipperary estates.

3511. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Now take the Limerick estate?—The rental of that is £4,085 2s. 6d.

3512. It has been reduced then from £4,470 1s. 7½d., the amount it stood at in 1875. What is the position of these estates?—The Limerick estates are all lying together near New Parks station on the Waterford and Limerick Railway—between Limerick Junction and Limerick. On those estates the Governors adopted the same plan. They appointed Mr. Hunt to value all the property with a view to fixing a fair rent, and wherever the tenants accepted his valuation the fair rents were fixed by agreement. There were some few—about a dozen—who were not satisfied, and they went into the Court. We offered them all the option if they didn't like the rents, that we would have the rents fixed by the Chief Commissioners' value. In some few instances they accepted that, but in very few instances they went into Court.

3513. How did the Commissioners' reduction fare relatively to the reduction made by your own valuer?—Very much greater indeed than our own valuer's, but the reductions were made on three or four of the farms within the last year, and Mr. Hunt himself has stated that since he made his valuation, he considers that prices have gone down very much.

3514. Dr. TRAILL.—In what year did he make his valuation?—In 1882—in 1881, 1882, and 1883 reductions are given.

3515. Have the Board given a corresponding reduction since 1882?—I think they have, very much below his. In the case in which he had given his valuation we called upon him to give evidence when they came into Court, but he recommended us not to call him as a witness, as he could not support the valuation then.

3516. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—In the report of 1880 I find in the case of one of the holdings on the townland of Gortacoolish the observation that it was held by the Rev. Alexander McLaughlin, at the yearly rent of £21 2s. which Mr. Murphy thought very small indeed, and in your rental it is returned as £44 12s. 6d.—was that a reletting—he is returned as owing you £80 5s. 1.—There was a reletting, and a lease was given to Mr. McLoughlin. It was a farm that was greatly improved by himself. A great part of it required a good deal of draining, and so forth. Bishop Daly got it redrained, and subsequently it came to Mr. McLoughlin as the clergyman of the parish, and there was some legal difficulty about it; but ultimately it was arranged that Mr. McLoughlin should get a lease.

3517. He does not seem to have paid his rent!—He is largely in arrear now. He complains very much of the rent of what is called an accommodation farm which adjoins, and is incorporated with his glebe, and that farm Mr. Hunt took, in fact, nothing at all, and he complains of that being greatly over-valued.

3518. There was another case on the townland of Gairna, held by the medical officer of the district—10s. 1s. 2s. The rental in 1878 of that holding was £14 5s. 6d., or 57s. 6d. the Irish acre. The report of Mr. Minchin states—"The rental appears to me to be very much below its value." He is now returned as owing £35 13s. 6d. in November, 1880.—We find it very hard to get him to pay.

3519. That is nearly three years' rent. How is it that the medical officer and the clergyman are so much in arrear?—Well, we have been threatening him with proceedings. He has paid up a considerable portion, and I am not sure of the present amount due.

3520. What is the present arrear on the Limerick estate?—On the Limerick estate up to November last and September last, there were arrears in January last amounting to £3,201 14s. 3½d. A good deal of that has been paid in since, but still rent has accrued since.

3521. Has the arrear increased or decreased since 1st January?—With the addition of a year's rent I should say it has increased.

3522. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Was there a hanging gale in these districts?—Yes, in all of them.

3523. Does that account for the difficulty of collecting the rents at present?—Yes.

3524. Do any of these arrears represent a hanging gale according to custom, not payable at the time that you mentioned, or when the arrears were due?—Yes, there is half a year's rent.

3525. Dr. TRAILL.—Should it have been collected before the 1st January?—It should not have been collected according to custom until about the middle of May.

3526. Do you apply a hanging gale to judicial rents?—Yes. There has been no distinction made between these.

3527. According to the act, judicial rents are payable to the day?—We could not get them to do it.

3528. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—In the south of Ireland you have not "whipped up" the hanging gale on judicial tenancies, as a rule?—I did so on one estate, but I was obliged to go back to the old plan afterwards. Under the present circumstances you could not do it.

3529. What is your course of dealing in collecting the rents—do you go once or twice a year?—Twice a year, and sometimes oftener.

3530. You have two fixed days?—Yes. We generally go on the 25th of November—that is one of our days—after the Fallow fair, and we go in May. The rents have been all necessarily much more irregularly paid all through the county of Limerick. If they don't pay then, they come in and pay me in my office, or remit.

3531. Dr. TRAILL.—You take it whenever you can get it?—Yes, and I am constantly obliged to take it upon account—we are obliged to relax the rules.

3532. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—To what extent do you regard the reduction in the amount of your receipts as attributable to the fall in the value of land this last year or two?—I consider it entirely attributable to that.

3533. Can you form any estimate from your experience and knowledge of the estate, as to what the future receipts are likely to be?—It depends entirely upon the prices. This year has been a most unfortunate year in some parts of the property. There is one portion of the estate—the part near New Palace, which has a high pointed hill, and everything was parcelled up there. There is nothing open which to seed the cattle—they are starving.

3534. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Most of the estates in Limerick, I suppose, are pasture lands?—Yes.

3535. Is it by fattening stock, or by dairying that the tenants make their money?—By dairying.

3536. Has it been a bad year for butter?—A very bad year for produce. I should say there is fully one-third deficiency in produce, but prices are, on an average, better than last year. Prices were very low during the early part of the year; but from the end of August prices have been very good; but produce has been from one-third to one-half down.

3537. Have you any notion of what chances there are of a sale of this estate to the tenants?—No, I have never been authorized to make any proposal to the tenants about it, or to send them on the subject; but from what I find from the conduct of other estates, I think there is not the slightest chance at the present time, and there won't be unless at a very reduced price—something very much below what I would regard as the value.

3539. We drove lately through part of it, and saw the grass there up to the knees of the cattle!—At the end of July and in August there was scarcely any grass.

3540. But wasn't there plenty of food for these now for the winter?—Certainly, they will have a great deal more than they would otherwise have, now that there is a growth of grass; but there is a great deficiency of hay. Hay is very scarce.

3541. Won't they be able to feed them the whole winter through if there is no further untoward weather or heavy snow?—But all dairy cattle require hay. There are very few places where they feed them without hay during the winter, but it will render the consumption of hay much less than it would otherwise be. The hay crop is certainly generally one-half short.

3542. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Then your estimate of the produce of the estate this year would be less than last year—apparently considerably so?—Certainly. I should find very great difficulty in getting in the rents.

3543. Now, the Galway estates, where are they?—About the town of Galway. A great portion within the county of the town of Galway, and some just outside.

3544. What is your total rental?—£3,254 18s. 5d.

3545. That is practically unchanged for the last ten years?—Yes. A great deal of that consists of rents from house property.

3546. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Are they ground rent?—Ground rents, generally—there are some, but they are very small, not ground rents.

3547. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How does that stand in regard to arrears?—There was £2,461 7s. 1d. due on the 31st of January, 1881.

3548. There seems to be nearly as much due on that property as on any other?—There are one or two large holdings that have got greatly in arrear. Those are outside the town of Galway.

3549. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you collect the rents half-yearly or yearly?—Half yearly, in November and May.

3550. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Has anything been done to get up that arrear you speak of?—Well, we have been threatening proceedings; we have been threatening the principal tenant in arrear with proceedings, but the Governor didn't like to be extremely harsh to him, and he is constantly making promises.

Oct. 12, 1887.
Thomas
Baker, L.L.D.,
J.C.

3551. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the tenant an ordinary farmer?—No.

3552. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Is he a middleman?—He is not a middleman, I think he is a retired police officer. He complains very much of the increase of rent put upon him some time ago on getting a lease, and he says that he was then entitled by the lease to the use of the seawood, which is worth £50 or £60 a year. But a question has arisen as to the right of the governors to the seawood, and the board of Galway go and take it away, and there has been a dispute about it, and he says his property is very much damaged by that. There is also a large tenant a great deal in arrears, Mr. Scorerille, and he became bankrupt the other day.

3553. Did you get up the lands when he became bankrupt?—No, we would have got up the lands, but I think he has offered a composition, and in that way the land is not given up to us.

3554. Mr. Murphy's report about Mr. Downport seems to describe the same position of affairs as now ten years ago, does it not?—He does not get so much from the land now; three or four years ago a very great storm swept away completely the road that he had cut down to the sea shore and a great part of his place. And the governors allowed him a large sum, a couple of hundred pounds.

3555. Is his lease out yet?—No.

3556. Is he now in a position to apply to fix a fair rent?—Yes.

3557. With regard to Mr. Scorerille, Mr. Murphy reports there is a splendid limestone quarry, from which he was allowed to carry away valuable stone, do you know anything about that quarry?—I know the quarry; it is a very large quarry, and I think a great portion of the buildings about Eyre-square were built out of it. Mr. Scorerille was a contractor and he was taking anything that was to be got out of it.

3558. How was that?—I cannot tell. It was before I was there.

3559. Dr. TRAILL.—Is he still quarrying out of it?—No, the last time I was there there was no quarry.

3560. Does anybody come in and quarry there now?—No.

3561. Have you any caretaker of the quarry?—No. We have a buller who lives down the railway and whose business it is to look after things there.

3562. How far is that off?—Between two or three miles, but I don't think there has been any quarrying there lately. I think Mr. Scorerille was about taking a contract for some quay to be built there, and probably it would be brought into use. There is a remarkably fine stone there.

3563. Is there any prospect of your getting an income from it?—I don't think so.

3564. Would it make two sets—is it limestone?—Yes, I think so; I think it would. It is a very fine stone, easily worked.

3565. Is it a very large quarry?—It is not a very large quarry, but I should say you could get any amount of stone out of it. The stone comes to the surface about a good deal.

3566. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—What is the prospect of the rental on those Galway estates—is it likely to rise or fall?—I think it is more likely to remain stationary than any other, but on those positions that are farm lands I don't think we can get the same rents. I think the season has been unfavourable there.

3567. Is it sheep land?—It would be suitable for sheep. The additional value put upon it on account of its being near the town of Galway. They say that has very much diminished, that the town is not flourishing—that things have gone down very much.

3568. Have your fee-farm rents from Major Lynch, Mr. Joyce, and Mr. Ryan been regularly paid?—Yes, but they are all very much dissatisfied with it. They think they ought to get some reduction. Major Lynch's lease expires in 1891; he holds a great deal under different tenures, and he has given notice to surrender a portion. He has a good deal of land under fee-farm grant, for which he pays £320 1s. 6d.

3569. Is that paid up?—Well, there was just half-a-year's rent due on January 1st, which he paid shortly afterwards. That was regularly paid. Then there is another large holding, which he holds for twenty-one years. The yearly rent of this is £436 10s. 8d. There was £406 due of that. That is practically half-a-year's rent also. There was some reduction which he was entitled to, no doubt.

3570. Who manages the houses property?—There are three houses in the main street of Galway that require looking after, and a good deal of repairs; we did expend a great deal upon them. They were yearly tenants, and we settled with respect to three of them to give them leases, and they undertook to repair them themselves. We made a reduction off the rent and gave them leases upon those terms. There is one large corner house on which there is a great deal of expense from time to time in repairing it. We expended half-a-year's rent on the repairs of that house.

3571. Mr. Murphy reported great difficulty in ascertaining the boundaries, as there were no maps or records. Have you had any survey of the estates since you became agent?—There were surveys made before I became agent, and we have got very fine maps. Some of the maps are the Ordnance Survey on a large scale of the town of Galway. We have got those and other maps.

3572. What is the condition of the Sligo estates?—The rental is £430 2s. 6d., and we get £1 10s. from very small sales of turf and bog.

3573. Is that paid up?—That is pretty well paid. There appears £360 odd due at this date. Near Sligo, Mr. Owen Wynne, of Hazelwood, is one of the tenants, and he and one or two other tenants there pay their rents perfectly well. Those are the principal ones. Then there is what they call the King's Mountain—that is some fifteen miles from Sligo, and that is a place that it is very hard to get rent from. It is an out of the way place, south-west from Sligo.

3574. The rental of Linnahilly was put down at £91 6s. 6d.—Portion of that was the shooting; Mr. Wynne paid £40 for the shooting, and we have had to reduce that to £25. Mr. Wynne would not continue the shooting unless we did that, so as we could not get anyone else to take it we had to make that reduction. The others are very small holders of a tract of mountain grazing, and we are obliged to take what we can get from them.

3575. The rental of the Westmash estate is stated at £443 7s. 6d. What is it now?—£425 7s. 6d.

3576. How much is due?—£412 10s. 6d., a hanging gale and nearly another half-year. They are pressed very much—they find a difficulty in selling their stock. They are graziers there. There is one lady who has a rather large farm.

3577. The last estate is Ballywilliam in the King's County, £13 1s. 6d., fee-farm rent?—Yes, we have some difficulty in getting the person to pay it, but he is obliged to pay in the end. We have had a great deal of trouble frequently with him.

3578. Do you see any immediate prospect of being able to sell any of those estates to the tenants?—As I have already mentioned, we have never broached it to the tenants, for we were never authorised, or it was never intimated to us that the Governors were desirous of selling. But from what I find about the tenants in the neighbourhood on other properties, I don't think there is the slightest chance of selling at present. The reason is that prices have been continually going down, and they say they doubt whether prices may not go down more.

3579. In other words they act upon the rule "don't buy in a falling market"?—Yes, and also they think they would be in a worse position. They say they

Oct 27, 1887,
Thomas
Sanders, LL.D.,
J.P.

could get time from a landlord, but that they could get no time from the Government.

3582. Dr. TRAILL.—They give the landlord, on the whole, a better character than they give the Government?—Yes.

3583. Lord Justice NAULT.—Comparing prices with what they are now, and with those at the time of the Commission in 1855, are they lower now?—Certainly, lower. I would not say they were lower in 1850—and not lower than 1848—but corn is very much lower. Oats is not so very low. It is lower, though; but of wheat the price has gone altogether. The wheat crop was very good this year. They only grow it in point of fact for straw and for thatching; they grow wheat at present. But I should say with regard to the price of meat—I don't think it is lower now than in 1882. The price of butter is pretty much the same as in 1849.

3584. Could you give us the actual revenues of the Government?—The deductions are very large. In the Limerick estate there is a very large amount of work in arterial drainings in connection with the Mulcair river. In 1885 we got in a very large amount—£1,090 over the year's rental. That arose from the arrears under the Arrears Act not being settled, and the arrears being got in then. Though the gross receipts were £7,651, the net amount which the Government got was only £6,543. In the following year they got only £4,574 &c. 4½d., in actual cash, out of £6,629 rent; and in the year ending the 31st of January, 1887, they got in cash £3,368 13s. 5½d., out of a rental of £6,519 &c. 10d. The sums I have given are the actual sums that I have paid over to the Government.

3585. Dr. TRAILL.—You don't mean after deducting agents' fees?—After deducting agents' fees and everything those are the actual sums they got.

3586. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Then the net revenue from these estates is over £5,000?—£5,200.

3587. The net revenue!

Mr. Sanders.—I am confused. I have given you the net cash received out of the property, but the net cash, after outgoings which the governors have to pay, in the year ending January, 1886, paid over to them was £4,377 7s. 8d.—that was a large sum. In 1885 it came down very much indeed—£3,150; and for 1886 it was £3,060. I can give you the current figures now. The net cash for 1884 was £5,377 7s. 8d. I said £5,000. In 1885, the net cash was £3,150; in 1886, £3,930; so that you can hardly look upon the income from these estates as being more on an average of three years than £4,000 a year, there was a large sum in that that is exceptional. I would not reckon it more at present than £3,500. From Galway and Sligo, all the rest are in the southern estate, the net cash in 1885, was £1,547 2s. 5d.; but that only commenced in May. For 1886, £2,085, and 1886, £2,597. That is, the average of the two is between £2,500 and £3,300, and the total average income is £5,800.

ENDOWED SCHOOL, CHARLEVILLE.

Thomas Sanders, LL.D., J.P., examined.

Thomas
Sanders, LL.D.,
J.P.

3588. Lord Justice FRYGIMORE.—In the report of 1858 and in the report of 1886 there appears to be an endowment of £40 Irish, payable by Lord Cork for the endowed school in Charleville. Do you know anything about that?—I know that there is a very old endowed school for which £40 Irish was paid; in fact I was at school there when a boy. At one time there was a good country school there of forty or fifty boys, and also boarders. There was a house attached, rented from the Earl of Cork at a rent of £15—greatly below its value—a good house and garden. There was a schoolhouse also—a school building. The boarding-school was done away with thirty years ago or more. After that Lord Cork appointed a Mr. Cronyn, and it promised to let £40 that he would restore the school. He was a good man in college, and a man of very considerable ability, but he proved to be very little fitted for a schoolmaster. That was twenty years ago, and he allowed the school to fall away altogether. He took pupils now and then, but he had no money for teaching through a good grinder, and at last no scholars went to it. He let the schoolhouse to a carpenter, and ultimately the building disappeared altogether. The carpenter didn't pay any rent, and then didn't find that he wanted it. The roof first disappeared, then the walls were knocked down. This Mr. Cronyn was a man of very little means, and no one liked to find fault with him for not keeping up the school.

3589. What has become of him?—He is dead.

3590. Since the last inquiry in 1879, in consultation by the Earl of Cork, what has been done?—Nothing.

3591. Who is the agent to Lord Cork?—Mr. O'Kearney, a solicitor in Cork.

3592. Does he pay this £40 a year to anybody?—I cannot say he does. For some time the prime got up a school principally for teaching clerics to farmers' sons who were looking forward to the priesthood. It was in the house adjoining the chapel, and I understood that the £40 was given to him at one time. I am not aware whether it has been continued since.

3593. Are you aware that this is one of the schools which the Commissioners of Education say is under their management and control?—I never heard of their interfering with it. We only knew that there was an endowment of £40 Irish a year.

Rev. John J. Sargent examined.

Rev. John J.
Sargent.

3594. Lord Justice FRYGIMORE.—You are Rector of Charleville?—Yes. At that time of Lord Rosse's Commission Mr. Cronyn was in Charleville. I differ from Mr. Sanders as to him, and I would say that Mr. Cronyn was a most useful teacher, but the pupils didn't go to him. I met a naval officer recently who spoke to me of the admirable education he and his brothers got from Mr. Cronyn. He was an entirely classical master and a most accomplished man, but the school dwindled down to nothing. I was very anxious that there should be a school there. There was always an undemoni-national school there. The celebrated Lord Avonmore received his education there, and other men of note.

3595. What step could we take to restore the endowment?—All the inhabitants of Charleville would be glad to have a school there, but I don't think there would be any use in trying to start a partly classical school. I did try for a time a classical school. I got a competent master, and tried it for six months, and I was only able to get three pupils during those six months. Mr. Lecky paid over his grant, and I handed it to the master. Mr. Lecky, as I understand, would be willing to pay this money to anyone who would carry on a school at Charleville. Mr. Crenya had nothing to support him but this £40 a year, and I hesitated to do anything to deprive him of his means of support.

3594. What year did he die?—He left Charleville altogether fully six years ago. He died since. The money was paid to him, as I understand, by Mr. Lecky. I have spoken to Mr. O'Keeney about a school, and have asked him to bring it under Lord Cork's notice. I wrote also myself, but nothing was done by anyone who has any authority.

3595. Who had authority to appoint the head master?—Lord Cork, and it was absolutely in Lord Cork's hands in every respect. Mr. O'Keeney is most ready and willing to do anything, of course.

3596. We should get a definite proposal as to what ought to be done; if you could get a communication from Lord Cork, it would be very desirable. Perhaps a school is going on still?—I understand the money is paid to the Rev. Dr. Rice for a school for educating young men for the priesthood of the Roman Catholic Church.

3597. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is that still in operation?—It is still in operation—close to the chapel, but this is an undenominational endowment.

3598. Do I understand that there is no demand for intermediate education among the Protestant population?—I think there is a demand for intermediate education, but it would be a mistake to think of starting a purely classical school.

3599. Dr. TRAILL.—The education might be intermediate without being classical?—Yes.

3600. Do you know if the £40 is being paid?—I think it is paid to the parish priest. I do not affirm it, but I think so.

3601. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Unless someone in the neighbourhood takes an interest and stirs up the matter, it will be very difficult for us to do it?—I have started up the matter in the way of communicating with Lord Cork and his agent, but I could not get the materials for a school, and a master won't come to us for £40.

3602. What do you say ought to be done with the money to make it useful?—Lord Cork is bound to pay it.—Yes, I believe Lord Cork would be quite willing to pay it. But I was anxious that it should come under your notice in order that you should consider what steps ought to be taken. I don't know really what to do. I have no authority whatever.

3603. What is the nearest intermediate school to Charleville?—I don't know whether you would call a Christian Brothers' school an intermediate school. There is a Christian Brothers' school in Charleville.

3604. Have they an intermediate class?—Yes. There are examinations held for intermediate examinations.

3605. Have you a parochial school?—Yes, but so small that I could not put it under the National Board.

3606. A purely elementary school?—Yes, purely elementary. I have only seven children.

3607. How do you maintain the school?—Mr. Sanders gives me a subscription, and some few others, and I subscribe myself.

3608. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is there any prospect of maintaining a superior school area with the aid of this endowment, for the Protestant population?—The only kind of school that would pay there would be one that the shopkeeping class would take advantage of. I don't think that any of the gentry would send their children there. Some general education that would be useful for business people and others is what is most required.

Mr. Sanders.—We could not get up an undenominational school without having a very good master—that would induce the Protestant part of the population to send their children. That would be a strong inducement.

3609. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—But you have no building?—Rev. Mr. Sargent.—We have no building and the parochial schoolhouse would not be suited for anything of that kind. It is a very small building.

3610. We must communicate with Lord Cork's agent on the subject, and find out what is being done with the money, and also ask him for any proposition as to how it could be utilized. The people of Charleville ought to give us their ideas. Here is an extract from Smith's History of Cork: "In this town the first Earl of Orrery endowed a celebrated free school, who though he had great offices and a plentiful estate, yet his soul seemed much larger than his fortune. The Master has a house and £40 per annum salary." The house was really held under a yearly tenancy, and the endowment is £50 a year Irish?—Yes, quite so, and it is quite inadequate in itself to support the school.

3611. But we ought not to let the £50 a year, small as it is, fall into abeyance?—That is my reason for appearing before you today.

3612. Would it be useful if given by way of results fees for boys from the town of Charleville under the Intermediate Education Act?—But there is no school in Charleville at present to which all denominations can go.

3613. But we could give it for boys from Charleville under the Intermediate Education Act?

Mr. Sanders.—I think that would be very desirable, and I don't see any other way to usefully apply it. It is altogether too small to induce a really good teacher to go there.

3614. Dr. TRAILL.—How are you to get results fees under the Intermediate Education Act, when you have no Intermediate schools?

3615. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Any boy who belonged to Charleville, and who was taught anywhere, might have a share of this £40 paid for his teaching, by way of result fees, or they could give it to the boy himself as an exhibition?—I shall write to Lord Cork on the subject.

3616. The powers of this Commission will only last another year, and any practical suggestion made by the people of Charleville we shall be happy to consider?—In a former common law proceedings were taken by Mr. Chaney, but I don't know whether it actually went into the courts; however, the endowment was paid.

3617. It is not disputed that the rentcharge is perpetual?

Mr. Sanders.—It never was disputed in my time. I heard there was a suit a long time ago, but I don't think that Lord Cork would ever dispute it.

3618. Surely among the Catholics and Protestants of Charleville there ought to be a practical suggestion as to how you think this money should be utilized?

Rev. Mr. Sargent.—There is another endowment on Captain Harrison's property near Charleville. The late Mr. Harrison gave me all the information he could concerning it. It was a charge on property in Dublin, but we could not discover where it was.

3619. How long has that lasted?—Fifty years.

3620. I am afraid we could not go into that. As to the £40, we could transfer the money to the Intermediate Education Board to apply it either as results fees, or by way of exhibitions for boys from the town of Charleville. If there is no other way of doing it, that might be a feasible way?—I don't see a better way of doing it.

3621. And filling those boys, boys from the barony, or boys from the county?—Yes.

3622. It would be a great assistance to four poor boys if they got £10 a piece?—Yes, indeed. Barry, the first Lord Avonmore, was educated at Charleville, and Dr. Anster, and several others who rose to eminence afterwards.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Bandon.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FRIGGESSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NALIN, Judicial Commissioners; and ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., was in attendance.

BANDON ENDOWED SCHOOL.

Mr. Robert Henry Power, sworn and examined.

Mr. Robert
Henry Power

3623. Lord Justice FRIGGESSON.—I believe you are the agent for the Duke of Devonshire?—Yes.

3624. The property was formerly Lord Cork's?—Yes.

3625. Have you got a copy of the will creating the Endowment for the Bandon School?—I have the only existing contemporaneous copy (produced). The original will never could be found. The part about the Bandon School is very vague—it is all rather vague.

3626. Are you the agent for all these estates on which these charges are still payable?—No, the Youghal property has been sold. The Duke only retains the schoolhouse and almshouses.

3627. How is the school maintained here now?—£30 is the amount of the endowment by the will of Lord Cork, but the Duke sometime ago raised it to £40, and about 100 years ago he built schools.

3628. What is the amount you pay?—£40 sterling.

3629. To whom do you pay it?—To the Head master.

3630. Do you know anything of the tenure of the ground upon which the buildings are erected?—No, the agent, Mr. Borwick, will be able to tell you that.

3631. Do you take any part, on the part of the Duke, in the management of the school?—No. At Lismore I do, but that is only with the consent of the head master for the time being. The Dean of Lismore and I are visitors to the school.

3632. What is the head out of which the rent-charges arise?—Out of the Duke's property generally, there is no particular land.

3633. Does the Duke still retain estates in this neighbourhood?—Yes.

3634. They are Grammar schools although they are called free schools?—They are called free schools, but as a matter of fact they are not free schools. There is a document of 1639 in which it mentions that at the Lismore School there were a certain number of boarders who paid £19 a year.

3635. Was Richard Boyle, the first Earl of Cork, the founder?—Yes. There is the letter to which I allude (letter handed in). Lord Cork's agent, Mr. Waller, is the writer of the letter, and though it is rather long it is interesting.

3636. To which of these schools does this letter relate?—To Lismore.

3637. As regards the maintenance of the school—have you any suggestion to make?—I do not propose to throw out any suggestions with regard to a school. I could not think of any scheme that would be of any benefit with the small endowment that is available.

3638. Lord Justice NALIN.—Was this £30 a year, the ancient endowment, paid continuously from the foundation of the school?—Continuously—I have traced it back to 1730, and some years ago it was raised to £40.

3639. Who appoints the master?—The Duke of Devonshire always, as far as I am aware.

3640. Lord Justice FRIGGESSON.—Is the house kept in repair?—It is in very fair repair now. The Duke keeps it in repair.

3641. In addition to giving the endowment?—Yes.

3642. Does he lay out any other money in support of the school?—Last year he gave a sum of £15 for providing some globe histories for the school, but otherwise I don't think he has ever done so.

3643. We have had several schools of this kind to deal with, and the suggestion has in some cases been made to create a local governing body to look after it with a representation of the funders. Do you think any arrangement of that sort would meet with the approval of the present patron?—I have not consulted the Duke on that point; he always has himself appointed to the school.

3644. He appoints or removes the head master?—Yes, and there is a regular written appointment.

3645. What is the tenure of office?—During the Duke's pleasure. I will give you a copy of the appointment.

3646. In point of fact, it has been managed as a private endowment in the hands of the Duke of Devonshire?—Yes.

Mr. Thomas Reginald Courtney sworn.

Mr. Thomas
Reginald
Courtney.

3647. Lord Justice FRIGGESSON.—When were you appointed head master of the Bandon Endowed School?—In November, 1880.

3648. You were appointed immediately after Dr. Brown, whose death was mentioned by Mr. Mahaffy in the former Report?—Yes.

3649. When you came what number of boys were attending the school?—One boarder and about eight day boys.

3650. Where had you been engaged previously?—At the Newport Incorporated Society's School, in the county Tipperary.

3651. You succeeded Mr. Lindsay there?—Yes.

3652. That school is now closed?—Yes. They never got a master after I left it. It is let as a farmhouse.

3653. What number of pupils have you got now?—About 21.

3654. Dr. TRAILL.—How many boarders?—Four.

3655. Lord Justice FRIGGESSON.—Where do the boarders come from?—One from Dublin; the other three from this county.

3656. What are the boarders' fees?—They range from £35 to £45.

3657. How many day pupils have you?—Seventeen—all from the town.

3658. What are the day pupils' fees?—They range from £8 to £10 a year.

3659. What religious denominations do the pupils belong to?—Principally to the Irish Church; some of them are Presbyterians, and some Methodists. I had one or two Roman Catholics since I came here. I have none at present.

3650. What is your course of education?—All the boys take the regular English subjects, and arithmetic. There are fourteen learning algebra, and the same number learning Euclid, and there are sixteen learning Latin. Greek is not a favourite subject—there are only two learning it. Since Greek has become optional it is given up by the schools. In French we have fifteen; there is one boy learning trigonometry and another geometrical drawing, and three learning mechanics, and then we have lectures on the natural sciences.

3651. Have you assistant teachers?—I have two resident masters—one, a German, takes French, German, and music. The other takes science, principally, and I take the higher English and Latin and Greek history, and everything of that kind.

3652. Is the school without assistance except the endowment from Lord Cork, and what he gives for the maintenance of the building?—No other assistance.

3653. Then in all other respects it is dependent upon the school fees?—Yes.

3654. Have you or your masters any other means of adding to your incomes, or are they entirely dependent on the school?—They are entirely dependent on the school and me.

3655. What are their salaries?—£40 a year each, and board and lodging.

3656. Dr. TRAILL.—You were a scholar and gold medalist of Trinity College yourself?—I was.

3657. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—Have you now as many boys on you ever had?—No; in 1883 I had up to thirty-eight.

3658. To what do you attribute the falling off since?—A good deal to the state of the country, and I think the failure of the Munster Bank had a good deal to do with it. Then a great many go to the National schools who would naturally otherwise come to this school.

3659. Is there a model school here?—Not a model school. They teach some of those subjects—Latin and French, I believe, in over houses.

3670. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you send pupils to the Intermediate Examinations?—When I came here first in 1883, eight I think went up.

3671. Have you ceased to send pupils?—I have, for some years.

3672. What is your reason for having withdrawn your pupils from these examinations?—I hadn't the number, and they were not fitted. I have a couple now going in. I intend to send them in next year.

3673. You have no objection to the Intermediate system or to the examinations?—Not the slightest, but in a small school it is difficult to carry out everything. Some of the boys will go up for the Royal University, and Queen's College, Cork, others for Trinity College, others propose perhaps other subjects, and in a small school you cannot carry out everything.

3674. Dr. TRAILL.—Had you a centre in Bandon?—We had not.

3675. How far had you to send them?—Only to Cork.

3676. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—Would not the Intermediate course be a good preparation for boys going to Trinity College and to the Queen's College?—I think not—certainly not for Trinity College.

3677. In what respect?—The courses are quite different.

3678. But are you aware that 90 per cent. of the boys who get entrance exhibitions at Trinity College have also got Intermediate prizes and exhibitions?—I have got one prizeman in the Intermediate myself who got 11th junior exhibition at the Intermediate. He has got a scholarship, and is one of the leading men at Trinity College.

3679. Then why do you think the Intermediate course a bad preparation for Trinity College?—I didn't say so; but in a small school if a boy is reading for Trinity College, you must confine him to that course, and cannot keep him to the Intermediate course.

3680. Dr. TRAILL.—You have not enough teachers to carry on so many subjects—you cannot firm through classes?—Of course not.

3681. As far as the education goes it would fit them for every situation and make scholars of them?—Yes.

3682. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—Have you any other school in Bandon besides the National School competing with you?—No.

3683. Lord Justice MARR.—Is there any other Intermediate school in Bandon?—Not that I am aware of.

3684. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do the people of the town take much interest in your school?—No, they don't. I don't think they support it sufficiently.

3685. Do you think they would take more interest if they had a voice in its management?—I cannot say; I suppose they would.

3686. Would a local committee for the management of the school be of any service to you?—I should say so. If they took an interest in the school I would be very glad.

3687. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—In a town not as well situated as this in many respects—Monaghan—they made a very successful school?—I think there ought to be a successful school, but the endowment is so small that the terms could not be less. I could reduce my terms if I was sent more boys, or if the endowment was enlarged.

3688. Are there any more children who, if you had proper support, would be likely to be attracted to the school?—I could not say at all. I got a good deal of support when I came here first, for the first two or three years.

3689. Professor DOUGHERTY.—In what way?—I think there was a good deal of interest taken, and a good deal of exertion made to get pupils. They were brought then from other places here.

3690. There was an attempt to supplement the endowment by local subscriptions?—There was not.

3691. Or to establish prizes or anything of that kind?—No—I think the provost and burgesses gave £20 a year, about the year 1776, on condition that four free pupils were to be educated in the school. I don't know what has become of that.

3692. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—I suppose the provost of Bandon no longer exists?—He does not.

3693. The Town Commissioners of Bandon do nothing for education?—No, they do not.

3694. In your opinion would a local committee be of advantage to your school?—That would depend upon its members.

3695. How would you suggest that we might find useful members?—I could not suggest any way.

3696. Dr. TRAILL.—In what way do you think that the local committee would be of any assistance?—Simply if they increased the endowment, and exerted themselves to get pupils.

3697. Does Lord Bandon take any interest in the school?—No, not in this school—we are not on his estate, or in his parish.

3698. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You have had a good deal of experience in teaching, I understand?—Yes, I have. Mr. Bernard, the Fellow of Trinity College was one of my pupils. I educated him from his youth; and Glanville, a scholar, is another—he is a very good man.

3699. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—Did they enter Trinity College direct from your school?—Direct. Bernard entered from Newport, and Glanville got an exhibition out of this school. I brought him with me from Newport. I brought seven teachers from Newport, and they have never increased since, in fact they have diminished—these are rather hard times for everyone.

3700. Dr. TRAILL.—What was the year in which you obtained your gold medal in Trinity College?—1860.

Oct. 18, 1887.
Mr. Thomas
Spiegel
Courtney.

ERASMUS SMITH'S SCHOOLS.

Oct. 21, 1887.

3701. Lord Justice FRYCROFT.—The next school that we are anxious to find out something about is the Erasmus Smith's school. Is the clergyman of the parish, or any other gentleman present, who can tell us about that?

Rev. Mr. Harper.—There is no Erasmus Smith's school at present.

3702. Lord Justice FRYCROFT.—Are you the rector of the parish?

Rev. Mr. Harper.—No, I am only the curate.

Rev. W. D. Harper sworn.

Rev. W. D. Harper.

3703. Lord Justice FRYCROFT.—You are curate of Kilbrogan parish?—Yes. Ballynaden is on the other side of the river, and this side of the river is Kilbrogan parish.

3704. Do you know the schools formerly supported by the Erasmus Smith Board?—Yes.

3705. Does the Board still give any assistance to them?—No, that has been withdrawn five or six years ago.

3706. Dr TRAILL.—The Board withdrew all those grants about the same time?—No; other little schools under the Erasmus Smith's Board are still being supported about the country, at Innesbannon, and other places.

3707. Lord Justice FRYCROFT.—At Innesbannon, they got £14 15s. 8d. formerly. That has not been withdrawn?—I believe not.

3708. I believe they withdrew the grant from all places where they thought the attendance would be sufficient to enable them to get State aid?—I cannot say.

3709. Do you know if these schools are in connection with the National Board?—No. The Erasmus Smith's School is now supported by the Church Education Society and by private donations.

3710. Who is the manager?—The Rev. R. Q. Fawcett, the rector of the parish.

3711. How many pupils are attending?—About fourteen children—it is just a little Church Education School.

3712. But in 1878 the master got £20, and the assistant £10, and it appeared to be a considerable school?—It was a very considerable school, but the National schools have drawn the children off.

3713. Why is this school not a National school?—The Church Education Managers must answer that question.

3714. Where are the schools situated?—In Kilbrogan-street, to the north of the town.

3715. Professor DONOVAN.—Are they in the globe?—No, not on the globe ground—in one of the public streets.

Rev. R. C. Fawcett sworn.

Rev. R. C. Fawcett.

3716. Lord Justice FRYCROFT.—When was the Erasmus Smith grant to the Kilbrogan schools withdrawn?—I think about 1881.

3717. Since that time how has the school been maintained?—The Duke of Devonshire subscribes to it—and in fact is the entire support of it.

3718. To what amount did you obtain voluntary subscriptions?—His subscription of £30 in fact pays the salary. Lately we have got a few subscriptions from the parishioners, but it is only lately.

3719. How is the building held?—The duke owns it.

3720. Was it surrendered to him by the Erasmus Smith Board?—They never had it at all.

3721. Is any rent paid for the building?—Not by us.

3722. Was that building formerly used as a training college?—It was formerly a training college of the Church Education Society for the province of Munster. The bishop of the diocese had it.

3723. How long has it ceased to be so used?—It ceased for some years before 1878, when I came here.

3724. You pay £30 a year salary to your teacher?—Yes.

3725. What are her qualifications?—I cannot tell you exactly. She has not any very high qualifications.

3726. Has she any other emoluments except the £30?—None except some small fees from the pupils.

3727. How many pupils are able to pay fees?—Very few, they are rather a poor class of children.

3728. Some of the children are supported by the Protestant Orphan Society?—Yes, those pay no fees. There are five of them.

3729. We find that during the year you have had only fifteen on the roll together?—That is at present. We have had more than that number from time to time. I think we have had nineteen on the roll at one time.

3730. We found no child in the school higher than the fourth class, and only a few of those. Is there any education given in the school better than a fourth class education?—I think the teacher is competent to take the children higher than that, but the children are not competent to receive the instruction.

3731. She told us that last year they had one pupil in the fifth and one in the sixth class, but that they have both left?—Yes.

3732. Where are the children of your congregation going?—We have not very many children that would avail themselves of such a school as that, and some of them go over to the other parish where there is a National school.

3733. But we found a number of Church children in the Presbyterian and Methodist schools who were, I understand, from your parish?—Some of them are in my parish, but not very many, I think.

3734. There were twenty-two in one and I think eighteen in another, all of your denomination?—Some of our children drop to the Presbyterian National school and some go to the Church National school at Ballynaden. They consider a National school standing better than that of the ordinary Parochial school.

3735. Then what prevents you from giving a better education in your school?—In the first place I don't fall in with the National Board view, and in the second place I don't think I have on the roll enough children, and consequently I would not get a grant from the Board, but I might get a capitation grant. The Select Vestry did ask the National Board at one time to take the school but they declined, thinking that they have enough Protestant schools in the town.

3736. Does it occur to you that the education of the poorer Protestants of the town would be better provided for if they had fewer and better schools?—Well, a clergyman does not like to give up his own parochial school if he can help it. Perhaps they might be better educated if a high class school was provided, but it injures a parish to have children scattered about and going to other schools. A clergyman likes to have his own school if he can.

3737. But your children seem to be scattered over three or four schools, and not even Church schools?—They are certainly, because they prefer the education they get elsewhere.

3738. As being better than what you offer them?—As being better, I suppose.

3739. Dr. TRAILL.—Don't you think it is a hardship on the poor class of Protestants that their children do not get the best education that can be obtained to put them fairly forward in the competition of life with other denominations?—Well, I don't like closing a school merely for the purpose of sending children away for a better education.

3740. Don't you think the Protestant children of the Church should have an opportunity of getting the very best education?—They get an opportunity sufficient to make them fit for their sphere of life, to make them fairly efficient.

3741. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—We found from the reports of the Inspector on secular knowledge in your school that reading, arithmetic, geography, and grammar were found "weak" in the various classes again and again?—I have not the reports so I cannot say. He has of course found weak points in the school.

3742. Dr. TRAILL.—Would not the inspection of a National Board Inspector be a very valuable stimulus to the teacher to enable her to get proper results from the children?—I suppose it would; I don't belong to the National Board.

3743. But it is the children I am talking of?—The children are willing to come to the school and I am willing to keep it open as long as they come.

3744. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is there any convention paid for the children sent by the Protestant Orphan Society?—They don't pay anything.

3745. Have you absolutely no property to maintain the school except the building?—The Duke allows the building to be used and pays the salary, but we have no property in the place whatever.

3746. Have you any annual sermon or collection for the school?—Not for that school specially. We have a sermon for the Church Education Society of the diocese.

3747. How much does the Society allow towards your teacher?—They don't give anything to that school, they give to another small school in the country.

3748. How much do you get from the sermon?—Three years running, £3.

3749. Would it not be better to spend that on your own school which is so badly off?—But I have another school in the country, and they won't give as a grant unless we give them a sermon.

3750. What is the name of the other school?—Carew, it is out in the country, three and a half miles. It is in this parish.

3751. What number of children are there on the rolls there?—At present there are hardly any because the teacher has just gone to America, and the school has become broken up.

3752. Is it likely to be re-opened?—I am afraid it will hardly be re-opened. It is at present open but I am afraid it will have to be closed.

3753. Are there National schools in its neighbourhood?—There are. There is another National school in the parish of Ballypallen, quite close.

3754. Under whose management is that?—Under Mr. Porter's management. He is the rector.

3755. Then the children have gone away from the Church Education school to the National school?—Yes, they have gone there.

3756. Is not that an indication, to put it generally, that the Church Education schools do not give them a proper education, such as they can get in some other place?—The Church Education Schools must be maintained on account of the difficulty that presented itself when we proposed to get up a National school. But we object to their going to National schools under Roman Catholic management or patronage.

3757. But Mr. Porter's school is under Protestant patronage?—If they go to schools under Protestant patronage I don't object to their going to them if they like.

3759. Could they not do that better if they got a better education in the neighbouring National schools?—Their families of course have the choice of that. If they like they can use it, but I don't wish to close my school.

3760. You said you had five Protestant orphans in your school?—Yes.

3761. Surely these children ought to be sent to the best school?—I am not going to decide that point.

3762. Dr. TRAILL.—Who decides that for them?—The Protestant Orphan Society has the management of those children.

3763. Do they never send children to National schools?—I should think they would prefer not to do so. To Roman Catholic schools they would not send them; but to Protestant National schools I dare say they would when they are available.

3764. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—But they are available here?—There are two Protestant National schools in the town.

3765. We have seen two very good National schools under managers of your own denomination, as well as one Presbyterian and one Methodist school besides?—I would not like to send children to any denomination but that of the Church of Ireland.

3766. As a matter of fact who sends these five orphan children to your school in preference to the National schools?—They are not sent in any way that I am aware of, except that they are allocated to the parish, and they attend school and the Society mentioned their being there—they have no objection to it.

3767. Dr. TRAILL.—Who do they stay with in the parish?—With the nurse.

3768. All in the one house?—Yes.

3769. Is she a member of your own congregation?—She is.

3770. And I suppose by your directions they come to your school?—They come to my school. The children come because they happen to be located in the parish, but there was no effort ever made to take them from it.

3771. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Who are the parents of the remaining ten children?—They are humble people—working people.

3772. Are any of them officials of the Church?—No, they are not.

3773. Are they all residing in the immediate neighbourhood?—All reside in the parish, about a mile from the school.

3774. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What was the number in Carew School before the teacher went to America, do you remember?—About eleven, I think.

3775. Would you be prepared to fall in with a proposal to form a Governing Body for the primary Church schools in Brandon in which all the parishes should be represented?—It is a plan I have not thought about. I could not say that I would be opposed to it.

3776. Are you aware that the clergy in Cork proposed to divide the city into districts in order to have better schools?—I heard some remark made this morning about it, but I didn't hear it before.

3777. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there not a great loss of power in Brandon at present amongst the Protestant denominations from having the children scattered about in so many different schools?—It would be a very good. And if there was a Church school for all the Church children, and not to have them wandering about all denominations.

3778. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You would not be in favour of having a united school for all the Protestants of Bandon?—Well, I prefer children being educated in their own church principles.

3779. Would you not, as a clergyman, have full access to the children to teach them their church principles?—It is very hard to get an opportunity of teaching the principles of the church among common school children; and needed in schools it is difficult to teach the children any religion.

3779a. Have you not right of access in order that they should be taught?—You have access by permission of the National Board, but you don't gain much advantage for the children, they are so absorbed with their other studies.

3780. Is there any change that could be made in the arrangements of the National Board that would enable you to join their system?—I object to education without religion. It is become completely secular that would be the only way you could get united education.

3781. We found to-day that you are teaching your children with National school books?—Yes, in secular subjects.

3782. In what respect does your secular teaching differ from that given in a National school except that it is not so good?—The secular education may be inferior.

3783. Dr. TRAILL.—But is not the religious education under the control of the clergy in a National school?—Yes, in a partial way. I dare say in a Protestant National school he can do a good deal, but not of course in a Roman Catholic school.

3784. Lord Justice FRYNGER.—What is the largest number of children that have been in this school in recent years?—We had over twenty—perhaps twenty-two or twenty-three.

3785. Do you know what the attendance was when the Erasmus Smith Board withdrew their grant?—Probably about twenty-three.

3786. Then at that time, as now, a considerable number of Church children were going to the Presbyterian and Methodist National schools?—They have been for many years going to the Presbyterian National school. It was looked upon after it came to be established as a sort of middle class school, non-parochial, and the people of the town availed themselves of it as a more respectable kind of institution for the education of their children, and as they had not a very good school in Ballymodan they were going to that school.

3787. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Has the efficiency of the education given in that school anything to do with the attendance of pupils of your own denomination?—I think a very good education is now given in Ballymodan, both for boys and girls, and they are going on still to the Presbyterian school.

3788. In the first instance they were attracted to the school apparently because it was giving an efficient education which they could not get in a school under the management of a clergyman of their own denomination?—Well, the parents may have preferred it perhaps for that reason.

3789. Dr. TRAILL.—If you had your children that are in the Presbyterian and Methodist schools you might make a good school of your own?—There is not that number of mine attending the Presbyterian school. They are not mine, I think.

3790. They are Church children, and they could go to your school as easily as they go to the other?—It is close to your church?—I beg your pardon, not close to my church.

3791. The Presbyterian National schoolhouse and the Methodist schoolhouse are both close to your church?—They are.

3792. In these schools there are twenty-two Church children in one, and fourteen in the other, who, with your own children, would give the elements of an excellent school if you gave as good an education as they get in these places?—These children do not belong to me exclusively. I think a large number of them come from Ballymodan—across the river.

3793. They have to come across the river to a school under the management of a person not of your denomination?—But there are two Church National schools, and they are going to them.

3794. Lord Justice RALPH.—I suppose they consider the teaching better?—I don't know.

3795. What is the average attendance in your school?—At present I cannot tell you the exact attendance.

3796. About what might it be?—I don't remember, in the middle of May last perhaps about eleven.

3797. Lord Justice FRYNGER.—Have you any visitor?—I visit it usually once a week for Scripture instruction.

3798. Does the curate visit it also?—He does not. He visits the other school.

3799. I suppose you are aware that in the National school you can give an hour's religious instruction daily?—You can if you please.

3800. Then in your Church Education school the religious instruction for which the children are obliged to receive an inferior secular education amounts to an hour once a week instead of once a day?—The schoolmaster instructs on hour every day.

3801. Is there any time fixed for religious instruction in your school?—The first hour of the day.

3802. Are you aware that this is the same time as in a National school?—That depends upon the patron.

3803. But you might be patron?—A patron can outbid a National school whenever he likes, either before or after secular instruction, but he cannot outbid in the secular hour.

3803a. Do you outbid your children now during secular instruction?—No.

WATERGATE-PLACE NATIONAL SCHOOLS.

Rev. Charles Henry Crookshank, M.A., vicar.

Rev. Charles
Henry Crookshank.

3804. Lord Justice FRYNGER.—Are you the manager of the Watergate-Place National School?—I am.

3805. Is it a Methodist school?—It is. I am a Methodist minister, and the superintendent of the church.

3806. Is it in connection with the National Board?—It is.

3807. We find it stated in a former report that it had some trust funds?—Yes. Originally there was £400, £200 of which was expended on the premises, and we have at present £200.

3808. How is the £200 invested?—Locally. That is, it is invested in the hands of certain trustees of our own property, and they pay five per cent on it.

3809. Do you mean that it is lent to them?—Yes.

3810. The plot of ground where the schools are situated is held under a lease in perpetuity, subject to a rent of 28 s. 3d. t.—I think so. It is held by the trustees. There were twelve trustees. I am not sure to whom the lease was made, but the lease had to do over to the twelve trustees.

3811. Have you got a report or any statement setting forth these details?—I have written out the names of the twelve original trustees, and have also a report of the attendance, and the way in which the school is supported—that is our own educational report for last year. (Handled in.)

3812. You have forty-nine on the roll, and an average attendance of thirty-one?—It is rather better this year—that is last year.

3813. Eighteen of those are Methodists—to what denominations do the rest belong?—They are members of the Episcopal Church, and the Presbyterian Church.

3814. Then, in point of fact, you, being a National school, have taken away the children of the Church Education school?—They have come to us.

3815. Do you give the full course of the National Board?—We do so far as the pupils are competent for it.

3816. You have one teacher and one pupil teacher?—Yes.

3817. Professor DOUGHERTY.—The Presbyterians have a school of their own in Bandon?—They have.

3818. Have you many Presbyterian pupils at your school?—Very few—they are principally Methodists.

Richard Clear, Esq., J.P., sworn.

3819. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are Treasurer of the Watergate-place National Schools?—Yes.

3820. Are you a member of the Methodist congregation?—Yes.

3821. Who are your trustees?—There are nine surviving of the twelve originally appointed. They are, the Superintendent Minister, William Robinson, John Hesse, George Gabriel, W. H. Hart, Richard Clear, Thomas Hunter, J. B. Scott, and J. S. Robinson.

3822. Are they appointed under any deed or writing?—A trust deed.

3823. Have you got the deed?—No, I have not; it is in Dublin.

3824. In whose charge?—In the charge of the Methodist Commissioned Registrar. There is a safe in Dublin in which all these documents are kept.

3825. How are new trustees appointed from time to time?—Well, I presume there will be a new deed—when the number of trustees is reduced to a certain number—a certain minimum.

3826. How is the £300 situated?—The money was expended on Methodist Church property in Bandon, the trustees agreeing to pay five per cent. upon the money.

3827. Is that a charge on the property?—It is.

3828. What is the property on which it is charged?—It is Methodist Church property. There are two dwelling-houses belonging to the Church. We pay a small rent to the Duke of Devonshire.

3829. According to this report, your school fees produced £10, and from local endowment your income was £25—what does that consist of?—Of the interest of the £300, and local subscriptions.

3830. Then there's £12 supplementary salary from the General Education Fund of the Methodist Society?—Yes.

3831. £24 10s. from the National Board and £9 2s. 6d. in results fees, making a total teacher's income of £39 12s. 6d.?—Yes.

3832. Last time in 1880 it was stated that there were eighty-six on the roll, of whom forty-four belonged to the Episcopal Church, two were Presbyterians, and forty Methodists, and an average attendance of fifty-two. To what do you attribute the falling off?—I could hardly answer that. I am here only two and a quarter years. There was a boys' as well as a girls' school, but the former was given up.

3833. You are the manager under the National Board?—Yes. I am.

3834. Have you evening classes in connection with the school?—No. The female teacher gives private tuition, but there are no classes.

3835. Professor DOUGHERTY.—And you employ the profit rent for church purposes?—Yes, quite so.

3836. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What is the margin you have for security for the £300?—There is ample security.

3837. Is the five per cent. regularly paid?—Yes.

3838. I presume it is paid in the settlement of your church accounts?—It is.

3839. Do you know who holds the lease?—That, I presume, is in Dublin also.

3840. Dr. TRAMER.—What was the origin of the £300?—It was a bequest left by the late Mr. Henry Cornwall to the trustees of the Methodist Society in Bandon for educational purposes in 1864.

3841. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How is the school-house held?—In perpetuity. We pay a landlord of £3 2s. 6d.

3842. Are all the trustees Methodists?—Yes.

3843. The school seems to be provided exclusively for the benefit of persons of that particular religious denomination and under the exclusive control of members of that body, therefore, though you have been doing good work in teaching children of other denominations, your endowment seems to be exempt unless with your own consent; if you wish we could save you further deeds by incorporating the governing body as we have done in the case of the Methodist College, Belfast, and the Methodist Orphan School, Dublin.

Mr. Clear.—I don't think we shall ask you.

3844. You seem to be doing very well as you are?—Quite so.

BALLYMODAN NATIONAL SCHOOLS, AND CURRAVARAHANE SCHOOL.

Rev. John E. Forte sworn.

3845. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are the Rector of Ballymodan parish?—Yes.

3846. In Ballymodan parish there was a school called the Curravarahane School, is that still in existence?—It is.

3847. It appears to be held under lease from Lord Bandon, and to have a site of an acre and a half—do you know in whom the property is vested?—In Lord Bandon.

3848. How is that school maintained?—By a National Board school salary supplemented by local subscriptions.

3849. How many children are attending?—About sixty.

3850. What distance is it from Bandon?—Four miles.

3851. Are the children all Protestants?—All Protestants.

3852. And it is a primary school?—Yes.

3853. Has it any other property?—None whatever except what Lord Bandon gives annually. He allows for it £45 a year at his own will.

3854. Is the schoolhouse a good one?—In perfect order.

3855. You are the manager under the National Board of the school in Bandon kept in the "Home of Industry"?—Yes, the Shannon street schoolhouse.

3856. How is that schoolhouse held?—Under a lease from Lord Shannon for a year.

3857. The building appears to be a substantial one?—Yes, very fine.

3858. It was originally built by voluntary subscriptions as it appears from the inscription?—Yes, in 1815.

Porte.

3859. When did it cease to be used as an Industrial School or House of Industry?—I believe in 1830.

3860. Has it since been a primary school?—No, it was first an Erasmus Smith's school until I became Rector of Ballynaden, and I placed it under the National Board in 1851, when I came here, as a girl's school.

3861. How many children had you before you placed it under the National Board?—Just before I prepared to place it under the National Board I had raised the average to nine; before that it was six.

3862. What did you find to be the effect of placing it under the National Board?—The average attendance now would be about thirty-seven.

3863. So that you are entitled to a class salary?—Yes, for years past.

3864. You have a classed teacher?—Yes, one classed teacher and an assistant not under the National Board, whom we pay ourselves.

3865. How do you raise funds to pay the assistant?—The Duke of Devonshire pays the assistant.

3866. How much does he contribute?—The Duke of Devonshire contributes to the two schools £50 a year.

3867. Is that sum placed at your disposal to divide as you think proper?—Completely.

3868. Your head mistress told me she had been trained in Marlborough-street, and is first division of second class?—Yes.

3869. You teach music?—Yes.

3870. Who teaches that?—Mr. Mills, the organist of my church.

3871. Have you any advanced pupils?—Up to the sixth. We don't go beyond the National Board programme.

3872. The building would accommodate a larger number of children—do you think it would be difficult to bring the schools more together in Bandon?—We could not join the present schools. With the number of pupils at 130 or 150 in all, I am had an idea of doing it, but on considering the matter, and consulting about it, we came to the conclusion that it would be far better to keep them apart, and the result has justified it because the school has gone up in the average attendance from six, and it is never less than thirty.

3873. What is the average attendance—we found forty-four in attendance to-day?—The attendance is 40-7 for the last month.

3874. Do you find any difficulty in giving religious instruction, being under the National Board?—None whatever, very much the reverse.

3875. Can you give us any idea of how many children you have drawn away from other schools by having yours a National Board school?—The difference in the girls' school is very marked. We draw from Bandon and from Deserthorps parish, and we have also children from Insishannon.

3876. We are told that some of the children come distances to the school?—Not so the girls' school. Some of the boys come seven miles. They have to drive every day to school.

3877. Now as to the boys' school, what qualifications has your master?—First of second class. He is likewise an A.B. of Trinity College—respondent at the degree examination.

3878. Then he is able to give advanced education?—Yes, and does.

3879. How is the building held?—It was bought some years ago from the Primitive Methodist Body.

It was formerly a Primitive Methodist Meetinghouse, and was bought entirely by local contributions.

3880. How are the trustees appointed?—The trustees were appointed at the time it was bought. I don't know who they are except that two of them were appointed by the Select Vestry.

3881. Dr. TRAILL.—Were the subscriptions entirely church subscriptions?—Purely.

3882. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—In cases such as yours where we have found schools well managed, we have incorporated a governing body to hold the property. Is there any objection to that being done in your case?—Of course exclusively a church body.

3883. Certainly?—I should think no objection whatsoever.

3884. Who are the trustees at present?—The Earl of Bandon, Mr. Moriarty, and, I presume, myself—the rector for the time being, Mr. Lushow Hewitt and Major Poole.

3885. Then you have four laymen and the clergyman of the parish as the trustees?—Yes.

3886. Some of your boys come from a distance?—Yes, some come from a long distance to reside in the town in order to attend school. Some come from villages nine miles away to live in the town for that purpose.

3887. What provision for education is there in the parish of Deserthorps?—In Deserthorps they have only Church Education Schools.

3888. And they come away from the Church Education Schools to go to yours?—Undoubtedly.

3889. Are there many Church Education Society Schools of that class in this neighbourhood?—Yes, there are a considerable number. They are dying away rapidly—very rapidly.

3890. Do you apprehend that if they were converted into National Schools they would take the children back again from you?—Of course I would not object. It would be quite right if they did and I am sure they would. I am sure that if there was a National School at Deserthorps, it would reduce my numbers at Carravinnane from sixty to thirty perhaps.

3891. Then half of your children are refugees from Church Education Schools?—Fully one-half.

3892. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Does the Diocesan inspector visit your schools?—Yes, all my schools.

3893. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How do your schools stand with regard to religious instruction?—The answer is a very simple one. At the late Diocesan examinations we took second place, and we got eight first prizes in religious instruction. There was only one school in the whole diocese that came up to us.

3894. Was it a National School?—Yes, two of the National Schools, because it was from the parish and not from the school that the children were counted.

3895. What salary do you pay your master?—Half of the teachers has the same, £15 a year, as a stipend to their National Board salary—they have got school fees and free residences besides.

3896. How are the residences held?—There is a free residence in Shannon-street, and a free residence in Carravinnane, and Lord Bandon has given us a house for school purposes which is a residence for the master on Cavendish-quay. I, as manager, pay one-half the rent, and the Board pay the other half.

3897. You are only tenants?—Yes, but we have an interest in the house. We borrowed the full price of the house—and it is on that we pay the rent. We have an interest in the house of the value of £300, and the remaining amount of money is contributed by the parish.

Paul S. Dodgins, B.A., sworn.

OCT. 16, 1887.

Paul S. Dodgins, B.A.

3892. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—How long have you been master of the Shannon-street school?—Since before the school was placed under the National Board on March 1, 1886.

3893. Where did you receive your training?—In Kildare-place under the Church Education Society.

3894. When you went under the National Board—were you obliged to qualify?—Yes.

3895. What class did you take?—I first got a supplementary class as second of third, then I stood an examination and was regularly classified and afterwards took each of the other classes by examination.

3896. What class have you now reached?—First of second. I have been recommended for first class by the Inspector for next year's examination.

3897. What course of education do you give in the school beyond the National School programme?—I teach elementary classics and French.

3898. You have taken a degree in Trinity College?—Yes.

3899. Did you take that since you came to London?—Yes, while I have been teaching here—by examination.

3900. Of course you had to go to Dublin for examination?—Yes.

3901. What amount of emolument are you able to derive from the school—you first got your class salary—how much is that?—£44.

3902. How much do the results fees come to?—£24 5s.

3903. That appears to be very large for your numbers?—Yes.

3904. You have a subvention of £15?—Yes.

3905. And do you get school fees also?—Yes.

3906. How much were your school fees last year?—For the last results period they amounted to £45.

3907. What is the results period?—Ending the 31st of March last year, they were £30 18s. 4d., and this year they are considerably larger.

3908. Are all your children paying fees?—Nearly all. There are a few of the poorer children to whom I don't charge fees.

3909. Is your school open to children who don't pay fees?—Certainly.

3910. When you give instruction in extra subjects beyond the National Board programme do you charge for these?—Certainly, 18s. a quarter for extra subjects Latin, French, and Greek.

3911. How many pupils have you learning Latin and Greek?—About sixteen. Some learn Latin, some Greek, and some French.

3912. Do you teach any of your pupils more advanced mathematics?—Yes, just to prepare for the Royal University course.

3913. Do you send boys up direct to the Royal University?—I had one at the last matriculation examination held a week ago.

3914. Dr. TRAILL.—By how much does the remuneration for the extra subjects increase your pay?—Very considerably, because the first year my school fees amounted to only £10 14s., then they went up to £17 in the next year, and then to £24.

3915. Take last year when the school fees amounted to £36, how much did you realize by the extra subjects?—I should say about £20.

3916. So that you have in all about £140 a year and your residence?—Yes, something like that.

3917. Professor DODGINS.—You seem to compete to some extent with the endowed school in the way of intermediate education?—Yes, there is slight competition between the schools.

3918. I suppose pupils are attracted to your classes because your fees are much lower than those charged in the Endowed School?—I dare say that has something to do with it.

3919. To what class do these children belong?—Some of them are of the more respectable farming class, and some of them are of the gentry, for instance, one of the bank manager's children attends my school.

3920. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—When are classes taught?—In the morning before the ordinary secular instruction commences. The pupils recite and form part of the ordinary day school, and then there are evening classes.

3921. How many hours a day does the extra instruction take?—From nine to ten each morning. In the evening I give a few hours extra instruction in physical geography, and higher mathematics.

3922. Have you sent pupils to the Intermediate Examinations?—Not yet. I have formed a class.

3923. To what are these pupils looking forward?—A good many intend to enter college or the professions. Some will enter business, and some might compete at the Civil Service Examinations for the Exchequer.

3924. Do you undertake to prepare for the entrance examination at Trinity College, and for the matriculation examination of the Royal University?—Yes, some of my boys have entered.

3925. Did any of them distinguish themselves?—Not particularly. They got fair places.

3926. How many did you send to Trinity College?—Two, one I did not send direct, the other entered directly from my school.

3927. Professor DODGINS.—Where did the other go to from your school?—To Mr. Courtenay's.

3928. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Then your school answers as a preparatory school for the other?—Yes.

3929. Do many boys go from your school to Mr. Courtenay?—Not many—perhaps three or four.

3930. Do you think the Endowed School could be advantageously worked with your school, and that the good primary schools could not as feeders for the Endowed School?—Yes, I dare say that would be a very good arrangement.

3931. I think you said some of your boys come from a distance?—Yes, some come twelve miles, from Ballinacree, Courtmasherry, and other outlying districts.

3932. How do they come?—Those who come from Ballinacree come by train, the Courtmasherry boys stay here and take lodgings in the town.

3933. Is there no school in Courtmasherry under Protestant management?—There is a very good Church Education school there.

3934. And in Ballinacree?—There is a National school there.

3935. Then your school occupies a higher position than those you mention?—Those boys who come that distance generally come to get higher education, to be taught elementary classics and so on.

3936. Professor DODGINS.—How far do you carry your boys in classics?—The highest course we have gone is the Royal University matriculation examination.

3937. Do you teach Latin composition?—Yes.

3938. Do you teach Greek composition?—Not Greek composition.

3939. Dr. TRAILL.—How many boys have you in the school learning Greek?—Four at present.

Miss Alice Bailey sworn.

Oct. 25, 1897.

Miss Alice
Bailey.

3940. Lord Justice FRYER.—How long have you been at the head of the Rathfriland Female School?—I came here in January, 1882. It was not under the National Board until August 1, 1883.

3941. When you joined the National Board did you classify?—I was a class teacher. I came direct from Marlborough-street.

3942. Were you trained for one or two years?—I came in the middle of the second year.

3943. You have £15 from Lord Randon?—Yes.

3944. How much is your class salary?—£34 10s.

3945. And the results fees?—£17 12s.

3946. And the school fees?—From £10 to £12 a year.

3947. What do your children pay?—They are paying now more than they did, for they are paying according to the class, 3s. up to 7s. 6d. per quarter, in the 6th class.

3948. How many free children have you?—Only three or four who are unable to pay.

3949. Are you required to take free children who are unable to pay?—I take them voluntarily.

3950. Are you prepared to take free any number who are really unable to pay?—Yes.

3951. How far do you go in the National Board programme?—To the sixth class.

3952. How many have you in the sixth class?—Five.

3953. In the fifth?—Thirteen.

3954. At what age do your children leave you?—From fifteen to seventeen.

3955. Do you give any tuition beyond the National Board programme?—Only in physical geography.

3956. Do you teach that yourself?—Yes.

3957. Is there any provision in Randon for teaching girls French?—Yes, there are several private ladies' schools in which French is taught.

3958. What is the number on your roll at present?—Sixty.

3959. And your average attendance?—For the last quarter 50.5, for the month 49.7.

3960. Since you came here you ever fallen below thirty-five, which is the number necessary for a class salary?—Never since I came.

3961. How many children were in the school when you came first?—There were twenty-two, I think, the week I came.

3962. That was before it was placed under the National Board?—Yes.

3963. What religious instruction is given in your school?—An hour every Monday morning, and half an hour every other morning in the week. Mr. Potts gives it on Monday mornings with me, and I give it myself on other mornings.

3964. Do all your children belong to your own denomination?—Yes, every one.

3965. From what distance do they come to you?—I have some from Rathfriland—that is about two or three miles. I have had them from Drogheda, they came and they got finished with me. I have none at present.

3966. Rev. Mr. Fawcett.—I wish not to assign any motive for the attendance of the children of the town at the Rathfriland Presbyterian National School. I did say that it was looked upon as a sort of upper class school, different from the parochial school, but as I am not sure of the motives of parents, I wish to withdraw that statement, and not to attribute any motive whatever for their sending them there—only that they did so from the outset. It was a favourite school from the time it was opened.

3967. Lord Justice FRYER (to Mr. Moriarty).—Would there be any difficulty in vesting the property of these schools in a representative local committee?—I am not prepared to say, because I think it is very well managed as it is.

3968. I was speaking only of the title to the property, because the management of these schools seems to be very good indeed.

Rev. Mr. Potts.—I may mention—on account of something you said about the amalgamation of the schools—the National Board Inspector said to me on more than one occasion—and, I believe, wrote to me—that the girls' school in our parish, of which Miss Boly is the mistress, was the very best in his district—that it is just as well if there is any idea of amalgamation that that should be considered.

INNOSHANNON PAROCHIAL SCHOOL (LATE ERASMUS SMITH'S).

Rev. William Haskins sworn.

Rev. William
Haskins.

3970. Lord Justice FRYER.—There seems to have been a grant to the school in your parish of Innoshannon from the Erasmus Smith Board at one time?—Yes; it was withdrawn three years ago.

3971. What is the present condition of the school?—It is under the National Board.

3972. What is the attendance?—The average attendance is thirty-five.

3973. You are able to get a class salary?—We are.

3974. Lord Justice NAULT.—What amount do you get from the Erasmus Smith Board?—£25 a year, and a gratuity of £5.

3975. At that time was the school under the National Board?—No.

3976. How much do you get from the National Board?—We get a class salary, £44, and result fees, £9 to £11.

3977. Then you are better off than when you got the Erasmus Smith grant?—Far better off.

3978. How is your schoolhouse held?—It stands on two separate plots of ground—one is assigned to me, and the other is leased to me.

3979. Formerly the schoolhouse and two outhouses was reported to be held at £5 a year. Is that rent still payable?—It is not; it is a new schoolhouse.

3980. What has become of the old one?—It has been altered to a coach-house to my globe house.

3981. That is the Erasmus Smith schoolhouse?—Yes.

3982. Was it surrendered when the Erasmus Smith grant was withdrawn?—It fell into disrepair.

3983. Dr. TRAILL.—Was it built upon church property?—No.

3984. How did it come to be made part of the globe?—There was an empty site which they didn't take for the globe until within the last few years.

3985. Lord Justice FRYER.—Is there anything further you wish to tell us?

ADDERLEY CHARTER SCHOOL, INNOSHANNON (INCORPORATED SOCIETY).

Oct. 18, 1887.

Rev. William Hudson.

Witness.—I find from heaveny, and also from Smith's History of Cork, that about 1779 a grant of two acres of land was made by the then landowner of the place, Mr. Adderley, for the purpose of partly endowing a Charter school on the site. The Charter school flourished for a very long time, but about forty years ago it disappeared. I cannot say why, and the Incorporated Society at that time held the two acres of land, and let the site for building a private residence thereon, and they received a rent of £11 14s. a year for that. My object in coming before you to-day was that I think this is in justice due to the parish of Innoshannon for educational purposes.

2911. Who is in possession of it now?—The Incorporated Society.

2912. Have they a school there?—No, none whatever; and they give no help, though they get the rent out of it—£11 14s.

2913. Dr. TRAILL.—How did they get hold of it?—I cannot say.

2914. Do they make any grant to your school?—No.

2915. Professor DOUGHERTY.—According to the report of 1838 they made originally a grant to the school at Innoshannon?—That may be, but that was before my time, and I cannot say.

2916. When the grant was made I suppose it was on the ground that the Society had this property belonging to the school?—I suppose it was. I wrote to the secretary, Mr. Hackett, some years ago, asking him to consider our case, and I got a polite but evasive reply.

2917. What has become of the remaining land?—I cannot say, but I have heard it was lost, that it has gone back to the landlord for a great many years.

2918. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Your claim is against the Incorporated Society in respect of those two acres of land?—Yes.

2919. What became of their £30 a year subscription?—That disappeared.

4000. Has Mr. Adderley any property near the neighbourhood still?—No. His successor is Mr. Frewen, and my parish being purely a rural parish, and everybody's income being derived out of land, we feel very severely the present depression, and any funds we can be shown to be justly entitled to of course we would be very glad to receive. I thought as I was in a measure interested in the parish, and very much interested in the education of the young, I would come and state this case.

4001. We have taken evidence in Dublin with regard to the general property of the Incorporated Society, and in localities we have gone to we have taken evidence as regards local claims. In settling a scheme for the management of this property we shall be obliged to look into the title?—I received a letter from Mr. Hackett in reply to one about buying the house, and converting it into a globe house, but the negotiations fell through.

4002. Did you apply for a grant or aid from the Society?—Yes, I did; but I received an evasive answer.

4003. Were you aware that they had formerly been in the habit of making grants?—I didn't know. I have only held the incumbency for about eight years.

4004. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—We have taken a good deal of evidence to-day, and learned a good deal, by inspection, of these endowments in London. With regard to the endowed school, which has a house and a rectory from the Duke of Devonshire, the Protestant denominations of this place should unite in taking an interest in that school, so has been done with great effect in other places; they should join together to form a local committee, who would by attracting pupils, as well as by contributing to the school, increase the numbers in attendance. We will endeavour to give effect to any suggestions in that direction from the inhabitants. A practical way to deal with the matter would be, as was done in Monaghan, for the clergy interested in Intermediate education to call a public meeting of their various congregations, and to appoint someone to represent them. As regards the primary schools, there are very many of them; the Methodist School, the Presbyterian School, two separate Church schools in the parish at one side of the river, and a small school at the other. The provision for education in these different schools is very various. As regards those in the parish of Ballymaclon it would certainly seem to be for the advantage of the people who are working them so well that their property should be put into a permanent and satisfactory condition by being vested in a parochial incorporated body for its government. We have done that in other cases, not only for Church congregations, but for Presbyterian and other congregations, and we will propose a draft scheme which will be sent down in due time to the people interested, and if they have any suggestions to make we will consider them before it is finally signed. Certainly, it would appear to us, from what we have seen and heard today, that the great number of these primary schools in London is an injury. We cannot deal with the Methodist School without consent, because it is a denominational endowment, and it seems to be well administered. We should desire to make the Ballymaclon schools and the Endowed School, representative schools, which would be supported by local people, who could make the latter a higher school, where children could be received from the other schools of the town. There does not appear to be any property in the Killybegs School which could be treated usefully as an endowment, and very probably its destiny has been described by the clergymen who spoke of such schools as dying out. If the Duke of Devonshire's £30 was given to one of the better schools that would probably put an end to the question.

The Inquiry terminated.

OCT. 12, 1887.

PUBLIC SITTING—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1887.

At the Town Hall, Kinsale.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIRN, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.S., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., M.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., was in attendance.

KINSALE ENDOWED SCHOOL.

Mr. Thomas Hogan, Chairman of Town Commissioners, sworn.

Mr. Thomas Hogan.

4005. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE.—You are Chairman of the Town Commissioners of Kinsale?—I am.

4006. Do you know where the property is that was originally assigned to the Corporation of Kinsale as a schoolhouse?—I do.

4007. How is it occupied now?—It is entirely in ruins—only the wall standing.

4008. What quantity of land is there?—About an acre.

4009. Is it of any value?—It is. The garden is let. 4010. Where is it situated?—In "the World's End" at the lower part of the town, in Lower Fishers-street.

4011. To whom is the garden let?—To a man named Savage.

4012. By whom?—By the Commissioners.

4013. Then the Commissioners own it?—Yes.

4014. There is also a money endowment?—£30 a year.

4015. Dr. TRAILL.—How much is the garden set for?

Mr. Eugene Murphy, r.o.—I think £5.

4016. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE.—Under what tenure?—By the mouth.

4017. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What has been done with the money?—It is given along with the endowment money.

4018. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE.—The money endowment is stated to be a rent-charge on some lands of Balmuccia?—Yes; Mr. Cramer pays the money regularly every year.

4019. What have you been doing with it?—It is lodged in bank on deposit since the last time the Commissioners were down. We were told by the Commissioners to lodge it in bank, and then as the school was falling down we had to lay out one year's salary on taking down the building. It was dangerous.

4020. What amount of money is in bank now?

Mr. Eugene Murphy, r.o.—£239 5s. 6d.

4021. Is that invested?

Mr. Hogan.—No, it is lodged in bank on deposit account of the Town Commissioners.

Mr. Eugene Murphy, r.o.—To a special account.

4022. Have you any suggestion to make as to how this endowment could be made useful?

Mr. Hogan.—Casson Cotton went to the Commissioners to get a lease of it for a National school, and the Commissioners are satisfied to give it. Here is the letter of Casson Cotton to the Commissioners, and the Commissioners reply.

4023. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE.—We have got a letter from him of 10th October, and also a memorial on behalf of the Protestant inhabitants of Kinsale, from the Rev. J. L. Durling.

4024. Have you among your Town Commissioners' papers any copy of the document under which the place was founded?—Search was made for it, but they could not find it. Mr. O'Neill can tell you about it better than I.

James O'Neill, r.o., sworn.

James O'Neill, r.o.

4025. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE.—Are you one of the Town Commissioners?—Yes.

4026. How are the premises let at present?—The premises were derelict for a very considerable time, and the Commissioners came to the conclusion that it would be better to accept whatever reasonable offer they could get. For a considerable period the place didn't let, but eventually it was occupied by a man who made a very good fruit and vegetable garden of it. The party who had it for that purpose gave it up and it is now let as a kind of accommodation ground for cattle.

4027. At what rent?—£7 a year.

4028. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—We heard before that it was let for £2 or £2 10s. a year?—£5 is the correct amount, and I don't think it was ever let for less. The whole of the premises are let to one person.

4029. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the name of the tenant?—John Savage.

4030. He is a tenant from month to month?—Yes. The building is in ruins. The walls are still standing but they are very dilapidated.

4031. What is the quantity of land?—Almost an acre.

4032. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—It is not so very bad to get £7 a year for one acre of land?—It is not, it is a convenience, it is in the town.

4033. Lord Justice FRYZINGHOE.—From its position would it be better to let it at £7 a year, or to try to make it a site for a school?—I would be in favour of making it a site for a school, if possible.

4034. Is it a suitable site?—Most suitable. Five healthy premises could be made there, with a fine healthy playground. This ground, which is now let, was formerly the playground of the school, and beautifully laid out.

4035. It was Lord De Clifford's mansion house, stable, coach-house, and garden, according to the deed of foundation 120 years ago?—I remember, myself, when the premises were in a very fine state of preservation; they were repaired ten or twelve years ago and a teacher put into them.

4036. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Who repaired them at that date?—The Town Commissioners got it repaired themselves.

4037. When did the Town Commissioners come to spend anything on repairs?—I should say, perhaps, about ten years ago.

4038. Dr. TRAILL.—When did the Town Commissioners first get hold of them?—When they succeeded the old Corporation in 1856.

* Appendix B, No. XVI. (6), p. 532.

† Appendix B, No. XVI. (3), p. 532.

‡ Appendix B, No. XVI. (5), p. 532.

4038a. When did they first exercise any jurisdiction?—I think about 1874.

4039. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Mr. Purdie died in 1873, and after that didn't the Town Commissioners appoint another schoolmaster?

Mr. Hogan.—Yes.

4040. He was a Roman Catholic?—Yes, he was.

4041. The report of 1880 states that the school had become very small when Mr. Hogan came?—I think so.

4042. When did he give it up?—Mr. Hogan remained here two years, and then he decided that the resources were not sufficient to maintain it, and he had to leave.

4043. The resources were the same then that they always were?—It seems to me that he thought only a high standard of education was necessary, and we hadn't sufficient pupils in our neighbourhood to maintain the school. He was a classical teacher—he didn't teach the lower grades.

4044. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Why did you cease to maintain the building in good repair?—The building was then very old, and it was very hard to maintain it. It was falling bit by bit, and the flooring inside was bad.

4045. You had an income of nearly £40 a year available for repairs when you had no schoolmaster to pay?—I think myself that what money we derive from the endowment would hardly keep the concern; whereas, what is there now would really make it a very house.

4046. Was it in Mr. Hogan's time the buildings were pulled down?—Immediately after his leaving they were pulled down by the Town Commissioners. When Mr. Purdie, who was a Protestant, was there, no Catholic went to the school, and when Mr. Hogan was got, Protestants would not go.

4047. How many pupils had Mr. Purdie?

Mr. F. H. BIRD.—I think he had fifty.

4048. Can you tell us whether the first three years of the annuity which before the last report were carried into your general fund have been since lodged in the bank?—Where?—I don't think so. The clerk informed me that the annuity of one year had been appropriated by the Town Commissioners for general purposes, and I think it is lying still in that way, or rather I should say they are indebted to this fund in that amount.

4049. The statement in the last Report was that "Mr. Hogan was paid up to September, 1873, and for three years the money had gone into the common fund, and was locked upon as part of the Corporate property." Have you got a Borough Fund sufficient to pay the three years' annuity that remained over?—The Town Commissioners in a perfectly healthy financial condition—they will be glad enough for that amount, never less.

4050. Is there a Borough Fund and a Corporate estate?—Yes.

4051. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Who appointed Mr. Hogan?—The Town Commissioners.

4052. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was that the first appointment the Town Commissioners made?—I believe it was.

4053. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How did they get the appointment?—I don't know; the premises were vested in the Town Commissioners as the successors of the old Corporation. They had power to appoint a teacher, and their successors presumed they had power to appoint a teacher too.

4054. Who appointed the previous master?—I should say the old Corporation; but that was before my recollection.

4055. Professor DOUGHERTY.—I see by the Report of 1837 that the right of appointment was vested by the grantor in the representatives of Edward Southwell. According to the deed you would not have the right of appointment?—I could not tell you.

4056. Are the Southwell family or Lord de Clifford's family still represented by any property in Kinsale?—I am not aware that they hold any property. I think it has passed all away into other hands.

Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—We have got two applications, one on each side; each asking for the whole of this endowment. Perhaps we had better take the evidence of each.

Very Rev. John James Cotter, P.P.

4057. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—We should like to learn from you what provision you have in Kinsale for teaching, and also how you would propose to utilize this endowment for anything like classical education. Evidently it was intended for something better than a primary school?—I would propose a school somewhat like the best National Schools in the country, where boys would be prepared for the competitive examinations which open up to young lads of talent, positions in the Customs, the Excise, and other departments of the Civil Service. This is done in the ordinary National Schools when conducted by skilled and trained teachers. I find the schools here at the lowest ebb. The teachers are only of third-class. I hope to be able to get a new school, which shall possess the best qualities of the first schools in the country with a first-class head teacher, and as near as possible as the attendance may require. In fact, I would have a school where classics would be taught, and boys prepared for the Intermediate and Civil Service Examinations—a school conducted under the rules of the National Board, and visited by their Inspectors, which would be a guarantee for the efficiency of the teaching, and that the school would be open to all classes of the community. I think such a school would meet the wants of the area, and a school of this kind I hope to have whether I get this ground and endowment or no. This little endowment of itself is not sufficient to secure the services of a first-class teacher, but it would be a great help. These are my views on the matter. As for special evidence I have none to offer, except that during the couple of months I have been connected with Kinsale, I have heard that the need of better education has been keenly and widely felt in Kinsale for a long time, and in consequence, parents have been obliged to send their children daily into Cork for education which ought to be available at home. Others have had to send their boys to boarding schools away from home at a cost, which they can ill afford in these depressed times. Conscious of the want of an efficient first-class school in the town, I am anxious to remove that want, and to do so in the most satisfactory manner.

4058. You don't think it possible to maintain an Intermediate school in Kinsale by the aid of this endowment?—I don't think it is possible, it is too small, and the very fact that hitherto all attempts to maintain that school even with its former prestige have failed, shows that it is hopeless to try it again.

4059. You are aware that this was an endowment, the object of which was to improve the existing education at the time?—Then the times were different to the present—it was a grammar school, but I am not proposing to revive exactly that class of institution.

4060. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—We wish to take evidence as to the existing state of education in Kinsale, and you would probably be the most fit person to give it?—As regards the title I know I shall be very happy.

Very Rev. John Cusack Cotter, P.P., sworn.

Very Rev.
John Cusack
Cotter, P.P.

4061. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—You are the parish priest of Kinsale?—Yes.

4062. How long have you held that appointment?—My appointment took place on the 7th of August, but I have been here only a month.

4063. What schools are there at present for Catholic education in the town?—For girls there are excellent National Schools conducted by nuns. The Carmelite Priests teach classics to some boys. I have two National Schools for the education of boys. It is one house with two separate rooms, which count as two separate schools.

4064. How many boys have you in these schools?—At present the attendance is not satisfactory, about 50 in the one and 70 or 80 in the other.

4065. Is there any money available for carrying on these schools except the grant from the National Board?—None, except the ordinary fees, and in one of the schools scarcely any fee are received, for the children are of the poorest class.

4066. How do you hold the school premises?—By lease, at a rent of £5 per annum.

4067. Is there any intermediate school in Kinsale?—The Carmelite Priests have a classical school, so has Mr. Deansly. They may, perhaps, be called intermediate.

4068. Which is the nearest?—I think Cork would be the nearest.

4069. You mentioned that some boys go from Kinsale into Cork for education?—I have heard that they go to Cork, Dublin, Tyrone, for such education as they would receive at home if there were schools in Kinsale of a sufficiently high character.

4070. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—Do they go to Cork as day boys?—Yes, they go by train every morning.

4071. What sort of accommodation have you got in your present school?—As regards the building, the schools are in the centre of the premises belonging to the convent, and it is a great disadvantage. As regards the size, each room is 47 by 2½ feet. Both would give accommodation to 300 children, but they are situated in a position which makes it most desirable for me to get other premises—to have a new school, and then to get a new staff of teachers, or to get a new staff of teachers, and commence without the disadvantage which attaches to schools that have not been of a sufficiently high character.

4072. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—If we came to the conclusion that this endowment was intended for higher education than that given in a National school, and if the premises were set apart for a National school, what rent would you consider it fair to put upon them. In other words what would you be prepared to pay for them for the purposes of your National school?—As the premises were given for the purposes of the community, and as it is for that object that I would require the ground, I don't think it would be at all in accordance with the spirit of the founder of this endowment to put a rent upon it.

4073. If a rent was put upon these premises, that rent would be part of an endowment for intermediate education. As part of that endowment how much do you think that plot of ground is worth?—As I don't contemplate having a separate school for intermediate education I have not considered the value of this ground, nor would I accept the ground on such a condition. My proposal is to have a first class National school, and not anything that would be called a separate intermediate school.

4074. Dr. TRAVERS.—Would it be worth the £7 a year that the tenant pays at present?—I ask for ground with a view to educating the youth of the town, and I don't think I should be taxed for the use of the ground, if I use it for the purpose for which it was granted.

4075. And the purpose for which this endowment was granted was?—A grammar school.

4076. Though you propose to use it for a National school, you also propose to separate the primary education from the higher education, and to make the latter suitable to the wants of the inhabitants of Kinsale?—Yes.

4077. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We found at Beaulieu a National school teacher, under a Protestant manager, who was teaching classics, and was qualified to supply a considerable want in that way—that is, as I understand, what you propose?—Exactly. And, moreover, I propose having navigation taught—a thing much required in every community situated as the people of Kinsale are. That is a subject that could be taught in a National school, and would come within the scope of a grammar school, and, I think, the programme in my school would comprise all that could be contemplated by the founder of this grant.

4078. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—Is it part of your plan to close one of your existing schools if you get the means of establishing the school you have described?—My plan would be, if I got a site, to build large premises quite sufficient for all the wants of the Catholic population, or any others who might wish to come to the school, and then to hand over to the mass of courses for a consideration, the premises which I hold at present, so the schools are little less than a nuisance to the community within whose grounds they stand; and, moreover, on account of their position they are not so desirable for the purpose of a one school. I wish to get rid of them for a consideration, and build new schools.

4079. What is the number of the Roman Catholic population in Kinsale?—About five-sixths of the whole population—say about 4,000.

4080. Why do you want to take the school premises away from the convent?—The schools are surrounded by the convent premises—you may see them by and by, and I believe you will find that they are a nuisance to the religious community—moreover, being within their premises, they are not so approachable, nor so desirable as schools for boys as I would wish. The nuns would give me a consideration for giving up these schools, and if I can provide, as I hope, a suitable site, I will erect large schools in which I shall have a first-class education for the people of the town.

4081. The nuns have a girls' school?—A very large school.

4082. How would they use those rooms which you say will accommodate 300 children?—They would use them for some of the purposes for which their institute is intended. A house of refuge is as important one of those. They had to build last year an additional story to their schools, so large the attendance of pupils.

4083. In whom are your schools vested?—In trustees. I have their names.

4084. Are they the same trustees as the trustees of the convent?—No, they are separate trustees.

4085. Then the building is not on the property of the convent?—It is not on convent property. They have no control over it, but it is within their premises.

4086. It is in fact surrounded by the property of the nuns, but is not on their premises?—Not on their premises—within their premises—being bounded on three sides by convent ground, and on the fourth by the street.

4087. Lord Justice NASH.—There is no Christian Brothers' school in Kinsale?—No.

4088. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—You are the incumbent of Kinsale?—I am.

4089. How long have you held that position?—Since July, 1881.

4090. What is the Protestant population of Kinsale?—I can only speak for my own parish. I have about 500, and I suppose there are 50 Wesleyans at least. That is only one part of the town. I have nothing to do with the parish of Rincurran which embraces a small portion of the town along the quay, the barracks, and all in that neighbourhood, and Spinnacree—all form part of the parish of Rincurran.

4091. Who is the incumbent of Rincurran?—The Rev. Robert H. Meade.

4092. What school have you under Protestant management in the town?—I speak again for my own part—there is an infant school, and I have a parochial school. It is held in a parochial hall called the Fisherman's Hall. I have no school building, but I have a mistress, and all I am able to raise to pay this mistress is about £45, and I raise that with great difficulty.

4093. Is your school attended by the children, and assisted by the members of your own church?—Yes, it has been always.

4094. Is there any other school under Protestant management in Kinsale?—No other school in the town of Kinsale than those I mention.

4095. Is your infant school in connection with the National Board?—No, it is a private school practically under a committee of ladies.

4096. Is the school held in the Fisherman's Hall in connection with the National Board?—It is not. In fact the lease under which we hold the premises forbids our having a National school on the premises.

4097. Do you hold the premises on lease?—Yes.

4098. From whom?—Mr. Durman.

4099. How long is the lease made?—I cannot say. There is one of the trustees present, and perhaps he can answer that question.

4100. What is your attendance in those two schools taken together?—The average attendance is at present about sixty or seventy.

4101. Why are not these schools in connection with the National Board?—Because neither of them can be placed in connection with the National Board as long as they are held in the present buildings. The trustees of the infant school would not approve of placing it in connection with the Board, and my present school is under the charge of the vestry of Kinsale Church, and they are quite willing to get it under the Board if the building was suitable.

4102. Is the building suitable?—It is a parochial hall meant for religious meetings. It is not a school-house at all, and it is not suitable for a school-house; and there is a clause in the lease which forbids our holding any National school in it. The consequence is I cannot have a National school unless I can get a building or a site on which to build.

4103. I thought I saw a statement to the effect that you rented a house for a school?—That was before my time. The Rev. Mr. Deunt, my predecessor, can give you information about that.

4104. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Was that closed before you arrived?—Yes.

4105. Why was it closed?—I do not know all the circumstances. I have nothing but hearsay, but Mr. Deunt is present, who will be able to give you accurate information.

4106. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—Did you think of looking for a building grant from the National Board?—We did, but for some reason or other I have not been able to find a site that would be suitable. They have been inquiring long before my time, and Mr. Deunt was beating about Kinsale for long enough everywhere to find a suitable site and he did not succeed.

4107. Is there any spare church ground?—There is not. I have had five vestry meetings to try and find a suitable site to erect a building for school purposes. When I failed I tried to get a grant from the Roman Catholic Board, but they declined to give me one. I have been, I may say, struggling under great disadvantages to keep the school going. Some of my young people are going to Cork for their education.

4108. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How many are going to Cork?—I know five at least.

4109. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Are they going to a National school in Cork?—I don't know where they are going.

4110. But they go in and out every day?—Yes, by train.

4111. Lord Justice FRINGEMAN.—What provision is there for obtaining anything better than a National Board education in Kinsale?—There is only a private school that any of my boys would go to.

4112. Are those boys who are going to Cork of the Intermediate age—are they over fourteen?—Yes, they are about that age or older. Most of them are older. There is a private school kept by Mr. Donnelly, who teaches classics, he has been successful with some of his pupils, but parents will not be always satisfied with the teaching of a master, and the consequence is that some parents don't send their pupils there.

4113. Professor DOUGHERTY.—I suppose those boys going into Cork would go to an Intermediate school in Kinsale if there was one?—I feel perfectly certain of it.

4114. Is Mr. Donnelly's a private school?—Yes. He is a Protestant, but there is no religious element of any kind about the school.

4115. The boys are supposed to be provided at home with spiritual instruction?—The school is for any one of any religious denomination who will send children to it. It is a private school for which he charges certain fees on his own responsibility, and there are children of both denominations who go there, and their parents think they get a proper education.

4116. Do you think that there is any substantial demand for Intermediate education in Kinsale?—I don't think there is a sufficient number of young people here to swell themselves of a purely Intermediate school. I don't think that any Intermediate school, pure and simple, is required in Kinsale. I agree with what O'Shea Cotton said and with him I believe, that what would be best for Kinsale would be a superior National school such as he has described.

4117. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You both agree perfectly as to that, but the difficulty is that you would each like to get the whole of this endowment?—Yes.

4118. Dr. TARRANT.—Supposing the ground was given to you to build a place for Intermediate education what would you consider the letting worth for a school?—I am paying for the building in which I hold the school £5 a year ground rent.

4119. Would you consider this worth £7?—I think we would have much difficulty in maintaining the school if we were taxed to the extent of £7, it would lead probably to the failure of the school.

Rev. J. L.
Durling, M.A.

Oct 22, 1887.

Rev. J. L.
Darling, M.A.

4130. That is what Canon Cotter said!—In fact I substantially agree with him in everything he said. I have the whole responsibility of carrying on the school at present, and I know how difficult it is to get subscriptions.

4131. You could not pay more than £31.—We pay 23 rent for the hall, and we use it for other purposes, and so the expense does not fall on the school fees at all.

4132. Would it be desirable to utilise this endowment in providing exhibitions in Intermediate education for promising boys of Kinsale wherever educated?—I scarcely think that that would meet the wants of the town, and it certainly would not help me in carrying out the very difficult task which devolves upon me as incumbent of this place. The Wesleyan body is a very small body here, and they have not thought it desirable to set up a separate school. Their children came to my school, and I therefore practically feel myself responsible for them also.

4133. I suppose to give you any substantial help you would require the whole of this endowment!—It was for that reason we applied for the whole—because we didn't think it worth dividing. If I was to have a good National school at all I must build one, and I must obtain many local contributions in order to obtain the grant from the Board of Works, and what is accumulated from this endowment I am sure would not be more than enough to build a proper schoolhouse, including, perhaps, rooms for the master.

4134. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—Then in fact it would not be worth your while to go in for this endowment at all unless you get the whole of it!—I think not, and that is the opinion of the members of my congregation.

4135. Considering the small amount of the endowment, and that it is proposed to expend it on a National school, do you think classical languages are the kind of education that is most wanted?—There are some who might require elementary classics—those who intend to read for a profession—but as a rule I think not; for the children whom we would have going there would be poor young fishermen's children, and the children of shopkeepers for whom a commercial education would be more wanted.

4136. Do you think that by giving them a superior primary education you would fit them for their career in life better?—That is my idea. I was for four years in Ballymodan, and I established a boys' National school there, and I know the advantage of that class of instruction very well. The vestry there purchased the house and set up a school similar to that which I would like to see established here.

4137. The bulk of your population is chiefly of the fishing class?—I have only a few fishermen's families. The bulk of the fishermen are Canon Cotter's people.

4138. Then your people are of the shopkeeping class?—I have a good many of that class and merchants. There are gentlemen in high positions as merchants—Mr. Arton and others whose children are educated with me. I may mention that Canon Hunt, my predecessor, was a pupil of the endowed school himself.

4139. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think this endowment has been diverted from its original purpose?—I think what I propose is no doubt diverting it from its original purpose. It was intended to be a grammar school formerly, but I don't think there is room for an intermediate school here now.

4140. Professor INCHURRY.—There is some evidence that there is a demand for intermediate education in the town of Kinsale?—There is a limited demand for it, there is no doubt.

4141. But this is a very limited endowment!—Yes.

Mr. W. H. Bird, J.P.—This endowment was alright until it fell into the hands of the Town Commissioners. The school was carried on very well, and it gave a very good education. The late Dean Daunt was educated in that school, and Professor Yvonne, of Galway College.

Rev. J. L. Darling.—I have stated that I believe that this was the original intention.

Rev. Canon
Daunt, M.A.

4152. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—You are Rector of Queenstown?—Yes.

4153. You were Incumbent of Kinsale before going to Queenstown?—Yes, from 1871 to 1881.

4154. Was the old school in operation while you were incumbent?—It was in existence for two years after I came here. My old master, Mr. Purdie, was in charge, and when he died the Town Commissioners appointed a gentleman in his place, and he continued in office for a year.

4155. What was the condition of the school during the two years?—Mr. Purdie was sixty-five years old, and he was quite beyond his work, and the school was in a very low state.

4156. Had he any boarders?—He had no boarders. He was a bachelor.

4157. How many day boys had he?—When I was in the school he had an immense number—when he died he had only about eight.

4158. Dr. TRAILL.—You were educated there?—Yes, I was, and my brother.

4159. Was Mr. Purdie at that time the master?—Yes, he was.

4160. Do you remember any time when it was under any other master than Mr. Purdie?—No, I do not.

4161. How many day boys were there when you were receiving your own education there?—About twenty-five when I first went there.

4162. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—When was that?—About 1850 or 1854.

4163. Lord Justice NADEL.—Were all these day boys from Kinsale?—Yes.

4164. What religious denomination did they belong to?—They belonged to every denomination. Some of the gentlemen who were there are now priests.

4165. What was the course of education?—A classical and general education.

4166. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—When you came here as incumbent, there were about eight day boys?—Yes.

4167. Were they of all denominations?—They were.

4168. What number of Catholics?—I think about three or four when I was there. When I left and when the master died there were, I think, two or three. I remember a large number of the gentlemen of the town who were Roman Catholics and whose children attended there.

4169. When did the Roman Catholics cease to come in such numbers?—The school fell away, I think, from the feebleness of poor old Mr. Purdie.

4170. When there were twenty-five day boys, in your time, how many were Catholics?—I should think about eight or ten. When I came to the parish it was felt at once that there was great need for a school.

4171. At that time was the school under the control of the Corporation?—Yes, the master was presented by the Corporation. Mr. Purdie was named and appointed by the old Corporation, not by the Town Commissioners.

4172. Then the falling off in the number of pupils occurred in the time of the teacher who was appointed before the nomination came into the hands of the Town Commissioners?—Precisely, and never seemed to rise.

4173. The falling away, therefore, of the school from its flourishing condition took place before the present Town Commissioners got the nomination of the school master?—Yes.

4174. And it was not due to the action of the pre-out Town Commissioners?—No; it was due to the age of the poor old man, Mr. Purdie, who was entirely beyond his work.

4153. Do you consider that a man is beyond his work at the age of sixty-five?—I do not; but Mr. Purdie got into a rather lower way of doing his work. When I came to the parish a committee was appointed to get up a higher class National school, and we did get, and paid a very considerable amount.

4154. Lord Justice XAVER.—Was it after Mr. Purdie's death that the attempt was made to establish that school?—It was.

4155. What was done?—A committee was appointed of members of all Protestant denominations in the town, and we got a first of first class master who could teach classics, and he set up his school. The gentry all round the country sent their children to it, and it flourished from that time.

4156. In what buildings?—We had to rent a house, we could not get any place to build a National school. I tried all over the town, and I could not get a site that the National Board would pass.

4157. How many children came to this school?—I think there were seventy on the roll.

4158. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was it a classical school?—The master taught classics, but it was a higher National school.

4159. Dr. TRAILL.—Had you a salary from the National Board for him?—Yes.

4160. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—How did that experiment fail?—We had to pay a very heavy rent for the premises, the expenses were always far in excess of the receipts. In consequence of that we got into debt.

4161. Dr. TRAILL.—Did those some of the gentry pay anything for their education?—Yes, they all paid. Some £1 a quarter. No one paid more.

4162. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—A school of 70 pupils in connection with the National Board, one would have thought, could hold its ground even with those fees?—But there was a number of very poor children, fishermen's children who paid nothing.

4163. In London, with an attendance of less than 70, the master has an income which reaches £140 a year?—That may be quite possible.

4164. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Your school was under the National Board?—Yes.

4165. And the gentry sent children who paid small fees?—Yes, some farmer's sons came, and the children of the towns used to come, and others we let in without paying—the poorer children of the town.

4166. But there are many schools in the country which are able to maintain themselves under those conditions?—The experiment failed here.

4168. About what time was that?—About 1876.

4169. It was closed about 1880?—I think so.

4170. Did the numbers fall off gradually from 1876 to 1880?—They used to oscillate. Sometimes we would have a very considerable number, and then most of those would go out to situations.

4171. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Were you incumbent at the time that the premises, held under lease prohibiting a National school, were got possession of?—I was, when the Fisherman's Hall was got, the name called the Fisherman's Hall.

4172. Who are the lessors?—Dr. Dorman owns the land.

4173. Did he put in the condition that the house was not to be used for any school in connection with the National Board?—Yes, there is a fine of £50 to be paid to the landlord if a National school is started there.

4174. Dr. TRAILL.—Who are the representatives of the landlord?—He is alive.

4175. Do you think he would relent?—He would not, under any terms whatever.

4176. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—We had in London most striking evidence about this. The school was kept under such restrictions as you speak of. There were 13 or 14 very poor children—some sent by the Protestant Cyprian Society—getting a very inferior education; and all the children from that parish, and from all the parishes around, who could possibly be drawn away were going to the nearest National schools, including Presbyterian and Methodist schools. Notwithstanding that experience, the miserable place to which I have referred was kept up.

4177. Lord Justice XAVER.—Do you recollect what fees were paid by the day pupils who got a classical education at your schools?—£4.

4178. In the most flourishing times how many might have been paying these fees?—I suppose not more than 3 or 4 paid £4.

4179. Was there a graduated scale?—Yes. The farmers paid very much less in the way of fees, while some paid very much less still, and some paid no fees at all.

4180. What was the rent of the house?—I think it was £15 or £20.

4181. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you know what the attendance was the year before the school was closed?—In 1874 there were 60 boys and 18 girls, in 1875, 72 boys and 50 girls; in 1876, 50 boys and 25 girls; and in 1879 there were 43 boys and 24 girls.

4182. Was this gradual decrease in numbers due to a gradual decrease in the Protestant population?—I don't know. I think it was. I remember some of those boys who came subsequently went out to situations, and that, just at that time, there were no boys to come in and take their places.

4183. Has the Protestant population of Kinsale been diminishing?—Not much—I don't think so.

4184. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—I observe from the figures which you have given us that it is not the condition of the times that affect this matter, because your best time was in 1875, and you went down up to 1879, when we found in other places the real effects of the depression began to tell upon the schools. The real difficulty we were always in, was that we had to pay such an amount in rent, repairs, and expenses connected with the school from the want of suitable premises, that we were not able to keep it up. My uncle, Captain Board, used to let us draw upon him very kindly for money—but the school was largely in debt.

4185. What were the oppressive charges that you had to meet?—Rent, repairs, and a great many other charges, clearing the school and so on.

4186. But you would have to bear the charges for repairing and clearing the school, even if you were to establish a new school?—Yes, of course.

4187. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Did you supplement the income of the school by voluntary subscriptions?—The master was guaranteed a certain amount by the committee, and they then looked to the fees to meet this guarantee.

4188. Had the members of the committee ever to pay the guarantee?—Yes, they had. The difficulty experienced in getting the fees was very considerable.

4189. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—What would it cost to build a school to give accommodation for the Protestant children?—I don't know. The Fisherman's Hall cost £400. I think from £300 to £400 would be about the cost of building a National school.

4190. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose you are aware the National Board grant £215 for every £350, and £350 would build a sufficient school for the numbers under the National Board.

4191. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—If we were to enable the Protestants to build a proper schoolhouse here with the assistance of the State—do you think you could maintain it?—I don't know, really.

4192. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—It is a curious fact that the Protestants of Kinsale have had at two different periods a flourishing school in this town; the first was this endowed school under Mr. Purdon, and the second was established by themselves. Both schools reached a certain degree of prosperity, both gradually declined, and both were eventually closed while under Protestant management.—Yes. Mr. Purdon's was closed because there was not the material to keep up a school of that class.

 Rev. Canon
 Daunt, &c.

4194. Dr. TRAILL.—But it didn't close during his life?—No.

4195. It was not closed under Protestant management except by his death?—Yes.

4196. It was closed during Mr. Hagan's time?—The people scattered about and went away, and there really were not boys of the class he wished to teach, in the town to come to his school within ten years of his death.

4197. There was not the same demand for classical education?—There was not the same demand for a higher class school, and the school simply died out because we could not get the fees and get into debt.

4198. You didn't succeed in obtaining the necessary amount?—We didn't try that.

4199. But that is what everybody is trying everywhere. There must be local efforts?—Yes, we do it at Queenstown. It was managed here, no doubt, but the material in 1879 had greatly diminished.

4200. Do you know what has become of the boys who would have been educated in this school if it had continued to exist, do they get any education now elsewhere?—The boys were drawn very much from the country. I don't know enough of the local circumstances of this district for the last ten years to be able to answer your question. I am out of it at least seven years.

4201. Lord Justice Fitzgerald (to Rev. Mr. Darling).—Can you tell us what has become of the boys who used to go to the school?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—I don't know. I could not tell you.

4202. Are there any number of Protestants in the National schools about Kinsale?—Not that I know of—not within any reasonable distance of Kinsale.

4203. Do Protestant boys go to National schools under Catholic management?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—Some boys go in, as I mentioned, to Cork by train—some gentlemen's sons, such as Mr. Acton here. But there are not many boys who need primary education.

4204. Rev. Dr. Motzner.—We find that ten years ago there was a school in which seventy Protestant pupils were being educated. That school is closed. Where are the Protestant pupils now educated?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—I have about sixty pupils. A large number attend what is called the infant school. It was meant for an infant school, but, owing to the confidence that the parents have in the mistress, I see children up to twelve years of age still attending it. I have in the Fishermen's Hall, as it is called, a daily school which I established since I came here. There were thirty-six girls, but lately the number has decreased because the education is not of the class I would like to give, and some of them have gone to Canon Cotter.

4205. What you really want is a site for a school which you could place under the National Board, and get the benefit of their grant?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—Yes, exactly. I cannot get their grant at all at present. I am obliged to raise voluntary subscriptions, and my belief is that I could obtain much larger voluntary subscriptions towards a National school.

4206. I suppose you recognise the fact that we cannot give the whole of this endowment to both parties?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—Of course.

4207. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Nor can we divide this little endowment without making it worth nothing to either. But you have got sixty children, and that number is capable of increase. Therefore you have a number that places you beyond risk of losing the National Board grant. The National Board would pay the salaries, and by inspection see that the school is maintained up to the required standard of National Board efficiency, and if we gave you the means of building a schoolhouse—if it is possible to get rid of the restrictions which are at present hampering the cause of education—it would enable you to set up a school under the management of a parochial body of your own.

Rev. Mr. Darling.—I am quite certain of that. I set up the Ballymedian Boys' National school, and I have some experience in these matters, and some gentlemen of liberal means would perhaps join us and subscribe to the school. I would gather subscriptions and get in fees, and I hope and trust no such collapse would occur again, or, at least, such need never occur, under improved management.

4208. We are surprised to find that it is impossible to get a vacant site?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—The town is very narrow, and space is exceedingly valuable.

4209. But the buildings do not appear to be of a very unpropitious character?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—I have never been able to obtain a site. Mr. Daunt tried for years, and he never could find a site in a suitable position that would give us room for a playground—one such as would be required by the National Board.

W. H. Bird, J.P., sworn.

W. H. Bird,
 J.P.

4210. Lord Justice MAULE.—You are anxious to put before us any views in reference to the Kinsale School?—I merely wish to state that I have had a good deal of knowledge of the school in former days when Mr. Purdon was the master.

4211. Do you reside near Kinsale?—I have resided on and off in Kinsale for forty-eight years. I was myself educated entirely at this school in Mr. Purdon's time. I entered Trinity College from that school, and at the same time the late Dean Daunt, Professor Townsend, of Galway College, and in fact all the gentlemen in and about this town were educated there, and all the respectable merchants of the town—at least a great many of them.

4212. Was it a classical education that was given?—A classical and general education.

4213. In your time what was the attendance at the school?—The average was about thirty-two—ranging from thirty to thirty-six.

4214. Were all day boys?—All in my time, except one, and he was some connection of the master.

4215. We have heard that during Mr. Purdon's lifetime as he grew old the school fell away?—So I believe, but not during the time I was there. It didn't, in my memory, go below thirty.

4216. Are you of opinion that there is any real want in Kinsale at present of a classical school?—There is a great want.

4217. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are the most class of pupils to be found now in Kinsale as when you went to the school?—Yes, in somewhat lesser numbers.

4218. Since the establishment of railway communication don't the boys of the class you speak of go to larger centres than this?—A few are obliged to go into Cork at great expense and risk. I myself have two boys being educated at present by a master attending at my house. Next year I intend, if I cannot get better attention, to leave the place altogether, and go to some place where we can have it.

4318. What number would be likely to attend a school of the same class that you attended long ago, if established now?—I think they would have fully thirty.

4319. How many of the thirty-two in your time were Roman Catholics?—I can only remember three. There may have been one or two more; but all I can call to my recollection are a Roman Catholic deacon in Cork at present, another gentleman, and a respectable merchant here in Kinsale who afterwards went to London.

4320. Lord Justice NAHEU.—Do you think if a classical school was started in Kinsale you could count on an attendance of thirty boys?—Certainly, if it was the class of education required.

4321. Rev. Dr. MOSEY.—Would those thirty boys be learning Greek and Latin?—Greek and Latin—not in all its branches. They were formerly prepared generally for Trinity College in Dublin.

4322. Do you think there are thirty boys in and about Kinsale who want to go to Trinity College?—No, I don't know whether there would be, but there are many who would be prepared for banking institutions and general commercial pursuits of one kind and another.

4323. Lord Justice NAHEU.—Are you the trustee of the Fishermen's Hall?—I am one of the trustees.

4324. We have heard that there is a condition in the lease that the building cannot be used for any school in connection with the National Board—is that so?—Yes. Allow me to state the reason. This hall was built purposely for the accommodation of fishermen, who come here in great numbers in the spring.

4325. Do you mean not for education but for religious services?—Yes, for the fishermen of other places who come here in great numbers. The Rev. Dr. O'Leary thought there was a want for such a place here, and he got subscriptions, from other places principally, for the building of such a place, more as a place of worship and for religious meetings than for anything else, and it was thought inadvisable that it should be ever put under the control of the National Board, knowing that there were rules published by the National Board preventing any religious motions or such things being put upon the walls.

4326. Lord Justice PRINGHAM.—Is it at present used as a place of worship?—There are meetings very often held in it.

4327. Then the main purpose of this building was not that of a school?—That is so.

4328. Do you know the Infant School?—Is it under similar restrictions?—I know the Infant School, but don't know whether there was such a restriction put upon them or not. I have not anything to say to the Infant School.

4329. How does the restriction arise there, Mr. Darling?

Rev. Mr. Darling.—I have nothing to do with the Infant School. I do not control that school at all. It is in the hands of some ladies, but I know those ladies, especially the ladies most closely interested in it, are opposed to the National System of Education, and that is the way the restriction has occurred.

4330. Professor DOUGHERTY.—But a great many people who were so opposed have changed their minds?—But they have not changed their minds.

4331. I believe opposition to the National Board System is now mainly confined to ladies?—Yes, and mainly on account of one rule—about their not being allowed to take out the Scriptures during school hours.

4332. If you established a new school would you draw the pupils from those ladies?—I think so, those who are not infants. I would speak to the parents and would say they ought to come, and I think they would come. I would not take away the infants. I should like to leave that as an infant's school.

4333. Dr. TRAILL.—You would make a distinction between the infants and the grown children?—I don't know any place where the infants could be more thoroughly grounded. This is an infant's school, and it was never meant to be anything else. If I had a better school there is no doubt that a large number of pupils who go there would at once come to me.

4334. Is the teacher well qualified?—Miss McCarthy is a capital teacher as an infant teacher.

4335. Is she a classified teacher?—No, but she is a capital teacher of infants, and I am quite satisfied that my children should attend that as an infant's school.

4336. (To Mr. Bird).—Have you had anything to do with looking for a site for a National school?—I have not.

4337. You know the town well?—Yes, and I agree with Mr. Darling that it is very difficult to get a site here.

4338. Do you think the site of the old endowed school would be a good site?—I think quite suitable.

4339. What would you value it at?—It ought to be worth £5 or £10 a year, the whole thing. I understand that they have let portion of this ground for £7 a year.

4340. Lord Justice NAHEU.—Do I understand your view of what is best to be done if you had a good site and this £30 a year to be that you would re-establish the classical grammar school?—Yes, I think so, such is required very much in this town. I think it is a want that drives a great many out of the town.

4341. Are you in favour of Mr. Darling's proposal, to get the site for a National school with a master who could teach elementary classics?—It depends upon whom the funds would be vested in.

4342. Dr. TRAILL.—In whose hands do you think they should be vested?—We have put in our claim for this as being a purely Protestant endowment, and thus therefore we ought not to be deprived of this endowment which came by an oversight into the hands of the Town Commissioners of Kinsale; and it was certainly never by the original donor intended that it should be so.

4343. Rev. Dr. MOSEY.—With regard to the intention of the original donor what evidence have you to offer to us—have you the deed of trust?—Mr. Darling recited some of the deed of trust to me.

4344. What evidence have you that according to his intention it was to be an exclusively Protestant endowment?—The original donor was a Protestant—it was always vested in the hands of Protestants and under Protestant management.

4345. The schoolmaster was a Protestant clergyman?—Yes, always.

4346. And I suppose you are aware that at the date this endowment was founded no one but a Protestant could have anything to do with schools?—Yes.

4347. Lord Justice NAHEU.—The real consideration with Mr. Southwell at the time appears to have been the getting of so much of the very property held by the Kinsale Corporation on behalf of the public?—It was open to all classes, and they all attended.

4348. Did you know any master before Mr. Purdus?—I think the Rev. Mr. Damm in speaking of his age was rather under the mark.

4349. Unless you had two schoolmasters how could you have had a more open school?—The only difference was that the Roman Catholics left the school on Saturday at twelve o'clock, and the Protestants looked upon them as fortunate, and an hour was given for Scriptural education, from twelve to one.

4350. Rev. Dr. MOSEY.—As far as I can see the only evidence of its being an exclusively Protestant endowment is that the Protestants had exclusive possession of it for a great many years?—There was no class or sect excluded from it.

4351. The management was exclusively Protestant?—Yes.

4352. Don't you think it is nearly time for the Catholics to have the management now?—Well, yes; it seems to me that everything is turned upside down.

4254. Lord Justice STANFORD.—What is the oversight you refer to when you say it passed to the Town Commissioners?—The old Corporation of Kinsale were always exclusively Protestant, and their right became vested in the Town Commissioners, at least so the Town Commissioners claim. Of course, that is a point I have never gone into, so far as the law is concerned, and I never was a Town Commissioner of Kinsale, and I am sure I never will be.
4255. From 1829 to 1842 they were a mixed body, and from 1842 until the Town Commissioners were appointed I suppose you had no town body at all?—My father was a Town Commissioner at one time, I believe; but I never belonged to them, and therefore I cannot tell you anything about their secrets, if there are any.

4256. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—The only thing we have in the report as to the original deed is the statement—“The grantor was informed that a grammar school was much wanted for the superior education of the youth in the town of Kinsale.” That is quite general!—Yes, that is what Mr. Darling read out to me.

CARMELEITE COLLEGE, KINSALE.

Rev. Patrick Murphy sworn.

Rev. Patrick Murphy.

4257. Lord Justice NAHE.—You belong to the Carmelite order?—Yes.

4258. You carry on a school in Kinsale at present?—Yes; an Intermediate school.

4259. How long has that school been established?—About eight years.

4260. What led to your setting up a school in Kinsale?—We were established there before the school, and had a church.

4261. What led to the Carmelites establishing a school?—I think it was on account of the Protestant school falling through, and the want of a classical school in the town.

4262. How many boys are in the school at present?—Fourteen.

4263. Do all learn classics?—Yes.

4264. What is the course of education?—The Intermediate course.

4265. Do you send boys up to the Intermediate Examinations?—Yes.

4266. Have you had any successful pupils?—Not many.

4267. Where do you carry on the school?—In the Convent house.

4268. How many of your Order are engaged in teaching?—Three.

4269. Dr. TRAILL.—What do you mean by the Convent house?—The house we live in.

4270. That is not the same Convent house that was spoken of before?—No.

4271. I thought convents were for ladies, and that monasteries were for gentlemen?—No, not at all.

4272. Lord Justice NAHE.—Do the fourteen boys in the school represent the demand for classical education in Kinsale?—I think so. It is open, of course, for Protestants too, but they don't come.

4273. Do you think there are any more Catholic boys that would come if there were greater facilities afforded?—I think not, because 30s. a quarter is the fee, and very few pay that.

4274. If a first-class National school were established, capable of giving intermediate education, do you think that would draw away your boys?—I am sure it would—all; because I suppose a first-class master in a National school would charge a mere nominal fee, and of course they would not come to us then.

4275. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you opposed to the establishment of a National school, with a first-class teacher?—Yes.

4276. You would wish to have the teacher restricted to primary education?—Of course I look upon it in rather a selfish light. I know very well if there was a first-class teacher who opened a National school, it would interfere with our school.

4277. Both in the intermediate department and in the primary department?—Yes.

4278. Have you a primary department also?—Yes.

4279. Professor DEANWORTH.—From an educational point of view, do you think it satisfactory to give an elementary teacher the opportunity of conducting intermediate education in his elementary school?—I do not. I suppose the National Board never intended that classics should be taught.

4280. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—I understand that your main objection is that there should be a first-class National teacher who would establish a classical school close to yours?—Yes.

4281. Have you any objection to the establishment of a National school with a first-class teacher to give primary education suitable to the general population?—Well, it would interfere with our school.

4282. Professor DEANWORTH.—Do you think it possible to utilise this endowment in connection with intermediate education?—Yes.

4283. How would you propose to do so?—I suppose our school would be for all classes.

4284. Would you have the endowment given as a grant to your teachers or as additions to your boys?—If they were going up for the Intermediate there would be no necessity to give them exhibitions.

4285. Would you prefer then that it should go as results fees to the teachers?—Yes, and take in pupils that could not pay.

4286. You think it would do something to promote the efficiency and success of your school if the endowment were disposed of in that way?—Yes.

4287. Lord Justice NAHE.—Do all the fourteen boys in your school learn classics?—Some of them are too young.

4288. How many actually learn classics?—I suppose about ten.

4289. Are they all day boys?—Yes.

KINSALE ENDOWED SCHOOL—(continued).

Rev. Canon Cotter further examined.

Rev. Canon Cotter.

4290. Lord Justice FREDERICKS (to Rev. Canon Cotter).—I see from the evidence of Father Boardman in the report of 1850 that one of your two existing schools was built by the parishioners, with the aid of the National Board, and that it is vested in trustees?—I believe that is true.

4291. Is that school not suitable?—I have the whole building, in which there are two schools conducted in one building two storeys high, and as appears from the report both of the school it was built by money partly given by the National Board, and partly by the people. That is the school which is nearly surrounded by the Convent premises. The Commissioners of Education have informed us that the schools we are speaking of near the Convent are vested in trustees whose names I will give you, and accordingly I am only managing the schools, appointed by the trustees. I apprehend Canon Boardman may have been speaking of another school, for there are two other schools vested in trustees, built in a similar way, partly by money from the National Board and partly by subscription.

4292. Where are these schools?—One is three miles or more away from the town, and there is another school not vested in trustees at a place called Cove, half a mile away.

4293. There might be a difficulty in dealing with the National Board for the purpose of discontinuing a school that they had already contributed to build?—I presume that when I get a more suitable site the Commissioners will be reasonable, and that we will easily come to terms, it is a difficulty that I don't think would be insuperable.

4294. Dr. TRAILL.—I understood you to say that you would be able to dispose of these premises to the mass?—The mass would give me a consideration for them.

4295. What would you propose to do with the share of that money belonging to the National Board?—I should come to terms about that, but if they required it back I should give it back to them, I suppose.

4296. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is it repayable by instalments?—I suppose the amount that would be repayable to them would be small, because the schools are very old, and therefore there would be very little between us I should think.

4297. Dr. TRAILL.—Was it a loan from the National Board?—It is a gift.

4298. When it is a vested school, they make the gift—they give you two-thirds of the cost?—Yes.

4299. Then you have had a very fair share of public money already?—But it has been in use for forty years, so that they have got good value for it.

4300. If the schools are sold their money is there still?—Yes, of course.

4301. And, therefore, if you get the value of that from the National Board, you will be still getting a very fair share?—I will turn that to good account for some purpose if we erect a new school. I don't anticipate much difficulty in dealing with the Commissioners on that score, because I don't want to divert the money at all.

4302. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—It appears that your proposal has been before the Town Commissioners and has been considered by them?—Yes.

4303. And I understood they have approved of it?—Yes, they have approved of it, as I have here the papers, and as the papers show.

4304. I suppose they are chiefly Roman Catholics?—Yes, I believe they are.

4305. Then I may take it that they represent the wishes and the feelings of the Catholic population of Kinsale?—Yes, certainly.

4306. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Can you tell us how many of the Commissioners attended the special meeting at which the resolution was passed?—I should say that those who were not present, and those who have been elected since that date, have signed a document expressing their approval of the resolution passed.

Mr. R. A. WILLIAMS.—I happened to be one of the Commissioners absent, and I would have opposed it if I had been there.

4307. (To Mr. Williams).—Were you a Commissioner at the time the resolution was passed?—Yes.

4308. Were you notified that the subject was coming on?—Yes, I was. There would have been six opposed to it out of the fifteen.

4309. Rev. Canon COTTER.—Since the resolution was adopted there has been an election of five Commissioners, and the five Commissioners since elected have given in their adhesion in writing to that resolution—in fact fourteen out of the fifteen have given their approval of that resolution.

4310. Was this made a test question at the election?—No, it was not.

4311. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Of the fifteen Town Commissioners now existing, fourteen have agreed to this proposal?—Yes, and I have heard that the other has declared that he would not oppose it. That foundation was given for the good of the people at large, and don't you think it due to the people whom I represent—the Catholic poor who want education, and who constitute the very bulk of the people and the very poorest.

4312. Dr. TRAILL.—Don't you think that the original founder intended it, not for the poor or such, but for those clever enough to take a classical education?—But the bulk of the people are Catholic.

4313. What proportion of them do you think would be likely to take intermediate education?—Intermediate education—that is an education that would fit them for clerkships and positions in the Customs. I think there is a very large proportion who would take that education.

4314. But the evidence of the Rev. Mr. Murphy is that there are only fourteen, and that that represents the whole demand?—Not at all. Those persons may intend to become professional men and they want a classical education, whereas in the school I propose they would be prepared for a competitive examination which would give them positions in the Customs and in various other branches of the Civil Service, and I think that is far more important.

4315. But that is a departure from the original founder's intention?—I think not.

4316. A grammar school education is what he intended should be given?—That is a dream you must interpret.

4317. It is a very well-known dream, because it must include classics?—But I propose to include that branch of education for those who seek it.

4318. What share of this endowment do you think the Protestants might fairly expect, considering that the donor was a Protestant?—As regards that, the Corporation at the time represented the people.

4319. But the donor was Mr. Sutherland?—But it appears it was in consideration of the advances which the Corporation made over to the founder, that he granted this foundation. Therefore, it should rather be looked upon as the foundation of the Corporation than of an individual. The Corporation at that time, it so happened, were Protestants, and it was supposed that the right to give the anomaly was theirs, and whatever rights they had were the rights of the community. I will be quite satisfied if this amount will be so utilized as that it shall be for the good of the community at large, and the school I propose shall be open to every member of the community.

4320. What proportion ought the Protestants to get?—I would not divide it at all, but I would have the school open to all. It was not divided in the beginning.

4321. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But your school though open to all in one sense would be so only subject to the same conscientious objection which you would have to a school under Protestant management?—I consider that the majority of the people have a stronger right than the minority, for two reasons, firstly, because they are the majority, and secondly, because they stand more in need of assistance such as this, because they are the poorer class. At first the Corporation had the disposition of it, and as the Corporation has ceased to exist, it should be given according to my proposal for the benefit of the community at large and in making that proposal I feel that I have reason and right on my side.

4322. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you mean that the majority in such cases are always to possess themselves of whatever share would otherwise go to the minority?—No, but the thing is to be open for the good of all, as it was at first, and it would be for the advantage of all in the way I propose.

4323. If it was under Protestant management you would not consider it open to all?—Certainly not.

4324. How can the Protestants consider it open to all if it is under your management?—I take it that if the Corporation gave it to you—if they were a Protestant Corporation—or if the Town Commissioners gave it to me on the other hand being a Roman

Rev. Canon
Cotton.

Catholic body, the conditions would be the same in either case.

4325. If there was a Protestant Corporation would you not claim your share?—I don't think I would bother myself, it is too insignificant.

4326a. How would it do to utilise this money, not for an intermediate school, but to be competed for by all the boys of the Kinsale schools at Intermediate examinations, or to pay for boys going to the Intermediate examinations?—I don't think it would do much good. It might be good for one or two.

4326. Would not that be in accordance with the intention of the founder?—I don't think it would. It would be in accordance with the founder's intention to give it for the maintenance of a school and not for the reward of individual talent.

4327. It was one of the intentions that the benefit should be general?—The school I suggest would be open to all.

4328. But not availed of by all?—I don't know. The National Board say that their schools shall be open for the benefit of all, without prejudice to any community in the community.

4329. But everyone knows that they are drifting into denominational schools rapidly?—So much the better.

4330. Therefore they will not be open to all in a short time?—They will.

4331. Theoretically but not practically?—If the rules of the Commissioners are so limited that any portion of the community would be excluded from the benefit I would be very willing to forego any exclusive advantage.

4332. I ask you what, if any, share would the Protestant members of the community derive from such a school as you suggest?—That is so prospective and problematical a thing that I could not say.

4333. Is not that what you yourself demand—that they should be excluded?—No; what I ask is to have the school open to all.

4334. Is it not your common demand that these schools shall become denominational?—Well, I am not the mouthpiece of my community. In the meantime my view is that it would be for the benefit of the people at large if the managers of schools were not hampered, as they are to a certain extent, by the rules of the Board as at present drawn up.

4335. Is it your view that they should become denominational schools?—It would be very much for the good of the community if it were so.

4336. In that case the Protestants could not avail themselves of your school?—I am speaking of what is best, I am not speaking of what is likely to happen. We are here to consider what it is now, and not as it might be.

4337. Supposing it would be best to have denominational schools, if Protestants could not avail themselves of this endowment, what share should they get as inhabitants of the town?—I would rather leave that to the decision of the Town Commissioners, who have the disposal of the endowment.

4338. Rev. Dr. MORLEY.—I suppose they would get a share in proportion to their numbers?—Yes; of course they would.

Mr. O'Sullivan, J.C.—When the school was under the management of Protestants it was frequented by Catholic children, and I cannot see, if it is placed under Catholic management, why Protestant children should not frequent the school.

4339. Were those Catholics seeking intermediate or elementary education?—I don't know.

4340. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—If it was placed under Protestant management as a National school do you think the Catholics would go to it?

Canon Cotton.—They certainly will not. There is no hesitation in answering that.

4341. Rev. Dr. MORLEY.—Should you be willing to divide the endowment between the Catholics and Protestants of Kinsale in proportion to their numbers respectively?—If the Commissioners see fit to do that of course I leave all that matter to you. I only put my application before you, and I leave it to your discretion as to how you will deal with it, but the thing is so paltry that it is scarcely worth dividing.

Rev. Mr. DOWLING.—You asked why it was stated in the petition that we didn't consider that the Town Commissioners were the lawful Governors of that institution. I was informed that the question was put as a matter of law to Mr. Joliffe, Q.C., and that he stated he believed the powers of the Town Commissioners were so limited that they have not lawfully succeeded to such trusts. I have not seen the Municipal Reform Act under which they succeeded, but I believe it is a matter for legal consideration.

4342. Rev. Dr. MORLEY.—We have had that point raised before?—I need only add that if they established a good National school there it would be open to all Protestants, and if I established a good National school there it would be open to all Roman Catholics.

4343. And each would like to have the school under his own management?—I certainly do not contemplate taking Canon Cotton's flock, but I admit to the Commissioners that the Roman Catholics themselves, as Canon Cotton justly remarks, are by far the largest and the poorest portion of the community in Kinsale, but they are getting an enormous amount of Government aid, and they have had grants innumerable, whereas we are getting nothing of the kind.

4344. They are getting that aid because they qualified for it by building their schools; you could do the same?—I have been unable to get a site. We have been trying for years to get a site, but through not having the influence of the majority of the inhabitants, or for some other reason, we have not been able to get a suitable site, and if I don't succeed now I must continue to beat about the bush.

4345. The Catholics could not get a suitable site, but they built on the best they could get?—I could get no site, suitable or unsuitable, and I can get no site. If anyone could show me a site he would relieve me of much anxiety.

Mr. O'Sullivan, J.C.—I am astonished to hear Mr. Dowling speak of the difficulty in procuring a site. I know myself that there is a splendid plot of ground immediately opposite the church door, and for a considerable time it was for sale. I bought it myself and I would sell it to him cheap. It is on the road just opposite the church.

Rev. Mr. DOWLING.—I had five vestry meetings on the subject, and I understood it was not to be sold.

4346. Dr. TRAILL.—Was it advertised for sale?

Mr. O'Sullivan.—Yes.

Mr. DOWLING.—I don't think it is suitable.

Mr. O'Sullivan.—Nothing could be more suitable. Surely when it is adjoining the Protestant church it should be suitable.

Rev. Mr. DOWLING.—Had I been in the parish at the time it would have gone much higher than it did.

Mr. O'Sullivan.—It is a lovely spot. It is a most attractive place.

Rev. Mr. Murphy.—Last winter I communicated with some of the Town Commissioners about the endowment, and they wrote to your office in Dublin, and they all approved of the endowment that it should go to our place.

4347. When was that?—About Christmas.

4348. Dr. TRAILL.—Did they do that by resolution?—I just simply communicated with them—not by resolution.

4349. Would £30 a year assist your school materially?—Very much.

4350. What is the principal want you feel at present?—Want of money.

4351. For what purpose?—Some of them are not paying their fees. Some of those fees are very hard to get.

4352. Is it in payment for teachers?—No; our school is too small to get in other people.

4333. What would you use the money for?—For prizes for boys and school requisites.

Rev. Mr. Darling.—It was mentioned by Mr. O'Neill that he had a desirable plot of ground that he was willing to sell. I find that it has a ground rent of £15 a year upon it. That is why we didn't consider it desirable.

4334. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The existing endowment that is forthcoming is, first, the redemption of the mortgage of £30 Irish, which I calculate may amount to over £300. The Town Commissioners may be entitled to some credits, but the maximum amount for your year up to 1887, amounted to £322 odd. The next item is this acre of ground, which appears to be held in fee-simple; it is in the middle of the town, and we are told it is a site suitable for the erection of at least one school, and its value may be put down, for the present at least, at about £6 a year, which, with the security of £30 Irish, shows about £36 a year, and a capital sum of about £300 to be the whole of endowment. We are satisfied on the evidence—barring to be corrected if the deeds were forthcoming—that this was originally a grant to which all the youth in the town of Kinsale were entitled to look for benefit, but only in respect of a grammar school education. It was not intended for a primary school; it was given for the benefit of the whole town, to give a class of education that could not be got in our ordinary schools. The members of various religious denominations—not perhaps liking it, but having no other way of dealing with the question—for a long time accepted education given by a number of one denomination; because unless you have separate schoolmasters you cannot give each a teacher of his own denomination. That is no longer the case, and we have been impressed with the impossibility of forcing on people what they do not like. Therefore a mixed school would end in failure. It failed in Mr. Parnell's time. The school in his hands died out. Then the Town Commissioners made an attempt to establish a mixed school from the other side, and appointed a Roman Catholic head master, and the result of that transaction was that in two years the whole place went to ruin. The premises have not been used as a school since, and the land has been accumulating. We must recognise the claims of the various denominations to the money and the land, and the question is now how they can be most usefully employed. With the grant assistance that is available from public funds for building schools—greater than in any other part of the United Kingdom—there ought to be no difficulty in providing a suitable school for each of the denominations. Canon Cotter says his present school is not satisfactory, and the Protestants tell us that they are obliged to hold their principal school in a place of worship; and the other is an infant school under private management. If they can provide themselves with a suitable site the accumulated money might be applied in whole or in part to enable them to obtain a building grant, and to provide what is needed in their case. If a balance is given to one side more than another out of the fund, that can be taken into account when the account is divided. We are, I think I may say, satisfied that the class of education most nearly corresponding with what the original founder intended, but at the same time suitable to the present demands, is not Latin and Greek, which education very few Kinsale boys want, but a good practical education with something better for the clever boys than merely National school teaching, such, for example as the Christian Brothers give to their boys in Cork. I hope the people here will understand the endowment to belong to all and that as one denomination can expect to obtain the whole. How to satisfy the claims for just participation in the benefit of the endowment is a difficult problem, but we will do the best we can to solve it, and to do justice to each denomination, the parish priest on the one side and the incumbent on the other. Each with some key members of his own flock can form an incorporated body to hold and administer property for educational purposes. If such bodies were formed they could work out and obtain property upon which to build. If we found that this acre would hold both schools we could give each at once a suitable site. If it won't do for both, then one or other ought to have it. We cannot make a Solomon's judgment and divide the child, but one or other ought to have that site and build a school upon it, giving credit for the value of the site towards their share of the endowment. The other would then have to get a more suitable site elsewhere. In the first scheme that was settled under this Commission, the principle of division between the denominations in proportionate numbers has been recognised with a limitation that the smaller number wants a little more in proportion, because the expense of keeping a school by so means increases as rapidly as the numbers increase. Our next step will be to prepare a draft scheme which each party will see. In the meantime it would facilitate matters if the question of the site could be disposed of by the acquisition of some place on which a Protestant school could be established in the town.

Mr. O'Neill, r.c.—You said that there was £322 now available?

4335. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Subject, I think, to some extent.

Mr. O'Neill, r.c.—As far as the information I received guides me, I think their money had been loaned separately under the head of "Endowment School Fund," except one year's endowment which had been appropriated with the funds of the Town Board. The balance between that one year's endowment and the £322 has been expended in connection with these premises.

4336. Lord Justice NABH.—You can furnish us with the account.

Mr. O'Neill.—The liability of the Town Commissioners is simply one year's endowment.

4337. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—The former report stated that for the first three years they hadn't paid; but we can look into the account, and of course I don't bind you to the £322.

ST. JOSEPH'S CONVENT SCHOOL (MRS. BURKE'S ENDOWMENT).

4338. Mr. J. C. Blake (Solicitor) for the Convent. I have got the last assignment of the trust by the Bishop. Mrs. Burke originally founded the convent, and brought a good deal of money into it, now there remains only a balance of £5,000, which by the trust deed originally made, should be vested in the Roman Catholic Bishop of Cork, and the parish priests of Bandon and of Kinsale for the time being. The difficulty they have to contend with is that every time there is a renewal by death we have to prepare a deed.

The deed of March 19, 1827, is an assignment by the late parish priest, Canon Reardon, to the present Bishop of Cork, the late Bishop having died, and to Father McGivney, the parish priest of Bandon; and since Canon Reardon executed that conveyance he has been removed to Cork. He is now the Vicar-General, and Canon Cotter has been brought here in his place; consequently that entails the necessity of having a new deed.

4339. Lord Justice NABH.—How is the money circumstanced?

Oct 12, 1888.
Rev. Canon

Mr. J. C. Blake

Oct. 24, 1907.

Mr. J. C.
Blake.

Mr. Blake.—It is an old judgment against Cuthbert Kearney. It has to be revived every five years.

4360. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the estate in Cork?—No, it is in the neighbourhood of Galvestown.

Mr. Blake.—The general fund was considerably more than £3,000 which now remains. That has been spent by the community in enlarging the schools of the convent, and for other educational purposes, which they thought proper to benefit the community.

4361. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—What is the expense of each transaction?

Mr. Blake.—I don't think it costs the convent very much.

4362. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—To an ordinary client what would be the cost of each transfer of property of this kind?

Mr. Blake.—About £8.

4363. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—One of the great objects of our Act, and one of the great advantages we are able to give, is to put an end to all this payment.

Mr. Blake.—It is also expensive to register this in the Judgment Office and in the Registry of Deeds.

4364. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—What does the registration of each judgment cost?

Mr. Blake.—I suppose it costs £2.

4365. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—The original trusts were for the benefit of the community?

Mr. Blake.—Altogether. It was not confined exclusively to educational purposes.

4366. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Nor are educational purposes mentioned?

Mr. Blake.—No, it was for the foundation of the community.

4367. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—It is an exclusively Catholic endowment?

Mr. Blake.—Altogether.

4368. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—They appear to use it entirely for educational purposes?—Not altogether. The money received now goes into the general fund of the convent. The ladies themselves take in a great deal of money when going into the convent, and that money is invested for the purpose of supporting them, and goes into a general fund that is applied as they think proper for the benefit of the community.

4369. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Has the interest been regularly paid?

Mr. Blake.—Most regularly.

4370. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—And is the money well secured?

Mr. Blake.—It could not be better secured.

4371. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—What does it yield?

Mr. Blake.—Five per cent.—£150 a year.

4372. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—The school is in connection with the National Board?

Mr. Blake.—Yes.

4373. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—And they have also a certified industrial school?—They have.

Rev. Canon O'NEIL.—We have 500 or 600 children.

Mr. Blake.—We would be very anxious if these frequent formalities in the way of deeds would not be imposed upon us.

4374. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—The conditions which the Act imposes are that any school receiving benefit from the endowment shall be liable to inspection to see that the scheme is carried out, and that once a year the accounts must be audited by a competent authority.

Mr. Blake.—That is the account respecting that endowment and no more!

Lord Justice FERGUSON.—No more.

4375. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—But it would involve their keeping separate accounts. At present, as I understand the income of this endowment goes to the general fund of the convent, and is used for the general purposes of the convent, one of which is the maintenance of this school?

Mr. Blake.—They do not apply it for any specific purpose—they apply it to the common necessity.

4376. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—Therefore it would be necessary for them to understand that under a scheme prepared by us they would have to keep a separate account for the expenditure of this endowment?

Mr. Blake.—According to that view they would be compelled to apply it for educational purposes.

4377. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—That would not be necessarily so, because the Act applies to any property held for charitable purposes of which half is for any educational purpose.

4378. Dr. TRAILL.—Is not the community an educational community?

Mr. Blake.—Yes, but it has no means of support.

4379. Lord Justice NAIRN.—They might apply it to build a convent.

Mr. Blake.—They might apply it in any way they thought proper. If they wished to realize the principal sum—they could do what they like in the matter—there is no one to control them.

4380. Lord Justice NAIRN.—We should have to create an educational trust.

Mr. Blake.—I am afraid, on their behalf, I could never consent to that.

4381. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—We don't want you to do it.

Mr. Blake.—I know that.

4382. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Your object is to have some machinery provided by which you could avoid executing these deeds.

Mr. Blake.—Yes. Every day, almost; I could not tell you the number of deeds that have been prepared.

4383. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—The endowment is for a particular religious denomination, and is under the exclusive control of that denomination. It is not under our control unless the governing body intimates in writing their consent. You have not done that, nor do we want you to do anything of the kind.

Mr. Blake.—I am afraid we must stop as we are. I have spoken to the Rev. Mother and the nuns on the subject, and they seem to think, owing to the question of account and putting it into a particular channel that they would rather remain as they are.

4384. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—The imposition of the school, I apprehend, would not involve any practical inconvenience?

Mr. Blake.—No, because they have one already.

4385. Dr. TRAILL.—Who inspects them?

Mr. Blake.—The Inspector of the National Board.

4386. How are their funds invested?

Mr. Blake.—All their securities are invested in the names of the twelve youngest sisters, and we consider that being the twelve youngest they will remain a long time and survive the old. All the property has latterly been so invested in the names of the twelve youngest members of the community, but in this particular instance of Mrs. Burke's £3,000, she thought that by inserting the names of the bishop and the parish priest, the very fact of there being such persons would have saved further trouble, but unfortunately, in the preparation of the deed, it was made to provide that a new trustee must be appointed on the death or removal of one of the trustees in office.

4387. In the case of the buildings have you to execute other deeds?

Mr. Blake.—I think not, because the buildings themselves have been vested separately in some of the sisters.

4387A. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—These buildings appear to be appropriated for school purposes. If you choose—it is only a suggestion, and you can set upon it or not as you think best—you might trust the buildings as an educational endowment, and the same body that held them could hold this trust fund also!

Mr. Blake.—That would be a great advantage. The governing body that I would suggest would be always the Bishop and the two parish priests, and that would be the form of the governing body for ever.

4389. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Look carefully at the Act of Parliament, and, bear in mind, that we are in many cases incorporating bodies to hold property for dioceses, congregations, and communities of all denominations. And if you can show us any educational endowment, either in the way of buildings or money, we could vest that property in a corporate body, and once you have that body it will be capable of holding any amount of property either conveyed to it from trustees or by private donors.

Mr. Blake.—That would be a great advantage.

PUBLIC SITTINGS—THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1887.

Oct. 20, 1887.

At the Schools, Skibbereen.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAESH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.C., ANTHONY TRILLI, Esq., LL.B., M.P., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

UNIVERSITY AND INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL, SKIBBEREEN; and NATIONAL SCHOOL, SKIBBEREEN.

Most Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald, Lord Bishop of Ross.

4392. With the permission of the members of the Commission, I would say a few words concerning the establishment, the actual condition, and the results of the Intermediate and University School, of which I am the patron, and Mr. E. L. Hagen, M.A., the principal, and Mr. D. McCarthy, assistant of St. Patrick's Training School, assistant master. The present memorial is intended to set forth the claims of the Skibbereen University and Intermediate School to receive a share of the public money granted for higher education in Ireland. The school has been in full working order for the last nine years, and has been established to provide literary and scientific instruction fully up to the standard required at present. The character of the work done will be seen from the abstract given afterwards, which summarises what has been done in preparing pupils for the higher public examinations of the Royal University, the Board of Intermediate Education, and the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. The school is the only one of the kind to be found in the large district extending practically from the city of Cork to the extreme south and south-west of the county. There is an exception, however, in the Diocesan Protestant Free School, Rossmorebury—some facts connected with which are to be found in the report of the Endowed Schools Commission, 1835, at pages 44 and 45. That district is by nature a poor one, and in general only thinly populated. This state of things greatly narrows the field open to the school, which is furthermore to a certain degree handicapped, by the existence of schools more or less (fully) endowed in the towns of Bandon, Donmurry, and the Rossmorebury school. Again the school has up to the present been obliged to work without an efficient staff of teachers, and without the provision of suitable apparatus for higher scientific instruction, but the figures afterwards given will, it is believed, show that it has done more for high class teaching than all the other schools in the west of the county taken together. The school is without endowment of any kind, its revenues being derived solely from the fees paid by the pupils and the "results" earned from the Board of Intermediate Education and the Science and Art Department. It is purely a day school, and the number of pupils averages over thirty, and it has therefore had exceptional difficulties to encounter. It is hereto maintained that the school, under any fair scheme for distributing the educational endowments, would be entitled to a grant of at least £200 per year. This amount, if given, it is proposed to apportion as follows:—£200 to the head-master, £120 to the first assistant, and £80 to the second assistant. The remaining portion of the money, £100, will go to the maintenance, &c., of the school buildings, and the supply of school requisites and apparatus; and it is proposed to vest the appointment of the masters and the general control of the school in a board of management, consisting of the following for the time being:—The Roman Catholic Bishop of the diocese of Ross, the Roman Catholic Administrator of the parish of Skibbereen, the Roman Catholic Pastor of the parish of Clonsilla, and the Chairman of the Town Commissioners of Skibbereen—those at present, with power to add to their number. As a proof of the character borne by the school, it may be mentioned that, although under purely Catholic management, it has from the beginning received a large measure of support from those of other denominations. These are the facts which the Educational Endowment Commissioners are respectfully asked to take into account. It may be truly asserted, judging from the results already obtained, that the school, if suitably endowed, would take a high place among the southern educational institutions. The following then is the abstract of the results already mentioned:—Royal University—matriculation, 23; first examination in arts, 14. Intermediate Examinations—exhibitions, 5; prizes, 5; passes, 61.

Most Rev. Dr. Fitzgerald.

4393. Lord Justice NAESH.—For what period does that run over?—For the last eight or nine years.

Mr. Hagen.—The first year there were none—seven years.

The Bishop of Ross.—Science and Art Department—scholarships, 1; prizes and prize certificates, 36; passes, 265. Then the others are the Queen's College matriculation, 6; Royal College of Surgeons, 3; and School of Apprentices, 2. The attention of the Commissioners is specially directed to this statement of results, on which the school bases its claim to receive an endowment. Mr. Hagen will be prepared to give you any additional details for the purposes of the inquiry.

Edmund L.
Rogge, M.A.

Edmund L. Hogan, M.A., sworn.

4351. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—When were you appointed head master of this school?—In February, 1879.

4352. Was that the commencement of the school?—Practically. Yes, I think as an intermediate school it was.

4353. What are your qualifications to give intermediate instruction?—I am a graduate in honours, M.A. of the Royal University. I have been head master of the endowed schools of New Ross and Kinsale, besides which I have had experience in the South of Ireland.

4354. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—You were head-master of Kinsale?—I was, and I was a master in various colleges before I went there.

4355. You got your M.A. degree with honours in the Royal University?—Yes.

4356. What subjects did you take honours in?—Classics. It was first class in the M.A.; and I was always among the first on the list.

4357. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What is the present number of pupils?—Twenty-nine.

4358. Has the number fluctuated much since you came?—I may say that it has not fluctuated at all seriously until the last year, but the circumstances of the country have made a great difference.

4359. What was the number in the last twelve months?—I should say taking in the round of the twelve months the average has been over thirty-five.

4400. The fluctuation amounts to from eight to ten?—Nearly ten, I should say—eight or ten on the average.

4401. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—The fall during the last year was owing to the depression of the times?—Yes, in 90 per cent. of the cases.

4402. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What fee do the boys pay?—The juniors pay four guineas and the seniors six guineas a year.

4403. By juniors do you mean boys going in for the intermediate examinations?—I understand the term to mean those who don't learn classics.

4404. What teaching assistance have you got?—I teach everything except mathematics, and for mathematics I have a gentleman qualified in the highest way from the South Kensington department, who is resident in Skibbereen and devotes his whole time.

4405. Have you any resident assistant master?—No.

4406. It is purely a day school?—Yes.

4407. Where do the boys come from?—From the entire district, within a twenty mile radius—from Bantry, Bandon, some come from Clonakilly.

4408. When you speak of boys coming twenty miles—do they live in the town?—As a rule they must live in the town.

4409. For the purpose of getting education?—For that purpose solely.

4410. What is the nearest school competing with you?—Indeed there is no school to compete with me on this side of Cork. There is no school that attempts to do the work we do.

4411. What courses of studies do you teach?—Well, I think, as stated in the memorial, we prepare thoroughly for the Matriculation and for the First University Examination, for the three grades of the intermediate, in all subjects—classics, modern languages, natural science, drawing, and the science and art course, in mathematics, navigation, mechanics, photography, and sound, light, and heat; and for those examinations we present pupils every year.

4412. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—Those subjects you teach in connection with South Kensington?—Yes, Dr. Molloy.

4413. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you receive the fees from the pupils direct, or are they administered through the managers?—Nominally, I do; but practically I am the Bishop's servant.

4414. Are you paid a fixed amount, or does your income depend upon the amount of the fees?—When I came here his lordship the Bishop guaranteed me a certain sum, and up to the present the fees have amounted to that, so that the question has not arisen.

4415. How is your assistant paid?—I guarantee him a portion of the sum which his lordship guarantees to me, and he receives also the residue fees in the subjects he teaches.

4416. What amount have you drawn from the Intermediate Education Board by way of results' fees?—Unless I am bound to answer that question I don't think it comes in.

4417. We wanted to see the means there were of maintaining you in your position of head master. Strictly speaking, you are not bound to answer any thing, because the school is exempt from our control; but, if you wish to place on record what has been done by your school, this matter of intermediate results is important—I really would prefer not to speak of them.

4418. Dr. Traill.—Do you find that the results fees from the Intermediate Education Board fluctuate much?—Yes; but still I would not say the fluctuation is more than 10 per cent.

4419. What number of boys do you send up in the year for the Intermediate Examinations?—The number that passed this year was 17. One was in the senior and one in the middle grade, and the remainder were in the junior. It happened that among the junior grade boys there was a very young child that was three times put forward. Last year there were two senior and the remainder were juniors who were presented.

4420. Have you got a centre in Skibbereen?—Yes and therefore we are obliged to make up a sufficient number of pupils.

4421. Are you obliged to send in boys who are really not yet fully prepared in order to make up the number necessary to secure you a centre here?—Yes, I would say so.

4422. Is there any other educational institution in the neighbourhood which sends boys to this centre?—There is a school in the town—the Academy is the name of it—kept by Mr. Baker.

4423. Is that a private school?—It is a private Protestant school. There was one boy came from Ross this year, and I think that on all the occasions there have been perhaps one or two from the west and west. Practically the whole ground to draw from has been from the town and neighbourhood.

4424. Lord Justice NAVE.—Do you find that the boys who come to you, come with the intention of preparing for some particular profession or calling?—It is hard in general terms to answer that question. There are a certain number of them who are undoubtedly intended for the Church, there are a certain number of them who are certainly going to medicine and other professions; for instance, last year two passed the solicitors' apprentices examination, and there are a couple more who intend to do so.

4425. Supposing the school was established as a boarding-school, with facilities for boys to come to it, would it draw many more boys from the district around Skibbereen?—It ought to draw, undoubtedly, a good many more boys. Of course, I know several boys who have gone from the east into Cork, instead of coming to school here, and I have no doubt that if there were boarding accommodation their parents would prefer to send them here. I have been asked myself several times to take boarders, but I have not thought of doing so unless the number would be large.

4426. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—What portion of the county do you include when you speak of the east?—From Glencilly and neighbourhood.

4437. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—Practically from within the harem of East Corkery?—Yes, I presume so.

4438. You mentioned that your assistant master is connected with the Science and Art Department?—Yes; he has been there.

4439. How many boys did you send in for Science and Art subject?—The list shows the number that passed this year: 2 Queen's prizes, 15 prize certificates, 18 passed in mathematics, 6 in sound and heat, 13 in navigation, 4 in physiography; and 10 in mechanics for 7 years.

4440. What appliances have you for giving instruction in these subjects?—We accomplished what very few country schools have done. We made up a certain sum of money that entitled us to a grant from the Department for the purpose of buying the apparatus.

4441. What was the amount?—The total cost was £25, and the Department paid half, and we collected the rest, very fortunately.

4442. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—The Department pays one-half the cost within certain limits?—Yes.

4443. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—Have you ever thought of making arrangements by which the pupils could board with yourself?—As I mentioned a moment ago, I have been asked to take three—that has occurred in the case of several of the boys, but unless the numbers were pretty large the expense would be so great that I would not be justified in doing so.

4444. It does not contain accommodation for boarders?—No, nor to live in. We are at the mercy of his lordship for a place to shelter us.

4445. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—You have no endowment?—None whatever.

4446. Are there any endowments existing in the neighbourhood?—There is an endowment attached to the Roscrea School; and I know with regard to the school at Brandon, but you yourselves had a sitting there the other day, and you know all about it.

4447. What is the endowment in the case of the Roscrea School?—I could not tell.

The Bishop of Ross.—They have £397, a house, I think, and some land.

4448. How many boys are attending the school?—Mr. Hagan.—I think I ought to form a pretty good idea. I think there are not more than seven or eight at present boys full pupils.

4449. How far is that from this?—Between twelve and thirteen miles. I know as one of the passes at the Intermediate—that it is represented by the Cork Roscrea School for the last nine years.

4450. You don't know what the endowment is?—It appears from this—

4451. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—It is a diocesan endowment established by Queen Elizabeth, by way of a tax on clerical incomes, and it is very singularly dealt with by the Church Act, because it was thrown into the Church Surplus, and thereby diverted from education, and subject only to a life interest in each case.

4452. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there a diocesan schoolmaster there still?—Yes.

4453. And is it carried on under the old system?—I could not answer that.

4454. Was he there in 1869?—I have not the right idea. I am only here since 1878.

Rev. Mr. O'Leary.—He was not.

4455. He has no anomaly as a diocesan schoolmaster?—It appears not.

4456. (To Mr. Hagan).—Is it in Protestant hands or in Roman Catholic hands?—He is, I think, the Protestant curate, I am not quite sure.

4457. He is a clergyman?—I know he is a clergyman, I have had letters from him.

4458. What is his name?—Broughton.

4459. Does he draw the endowment now?—Of course it would be impossible for us to answer those questions.

4460. Lord Justice NAISH.—Where is your school?—It is within a stone's throw of his lordship's house, and held in one of the rooms of the National school at present.

4461. And in whom is the property vested?—In his lordship. He has the title and possession.

4462. It is not vested in the National Board?—No.

4463. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—You propose that we should incorporate a governing body for the management of this school, in case we could give you an endowment of £200 a year. Of course we should be delighted to give it, if we had it; but supposing we had nothing at present to give, it would be possible for us, nevertheless, to incorporate a body and to vest in that body your building or whatever you have in the way of premises or property; and then that body would be capable afterwards of receiving any endowment from us or any other body, or private benefactions for the purposes of the school?

The Bishop of Ross.—I could not do that. It is already vested, and I don't think I could transfer it.

4464. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it vested in trustees?

The Bishop of Ross.—Yes.

4465. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—How is it vested in trustees?

The Bishop of Ross.—It is under deed.

4466. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—Then a matter I was trying to make clear before again arises, and it is this, wherever you have trustees under deed, and a vacancy occurs amongst the trustees, it is necessary, of course, to appoint new trustees and to do so by deed. Now a scheme as settled under our Act has all the efficiency of a deed and of a charter besides, and by the scheme we can create a trust body or corporation for the diocese or parish, or for any institution that will hold the present or future property of an institution for all time without the necessity of any conveyancing.

The Bishop of Ross.—The conveyancing, as far as I can learn, is done by the National Board free.

4467. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—Is the school here held on premises that are already let on lease?

Rev. Mr. O'Leary.—For the National Board—certainly.

Mr. Hagan.—There is one point that I wish should not be misunderstood. There are four rooms altogether, and there is one of these in which the Intermediate school is held, and to which the Commissioners have assigned all claims whatever.

4468. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—Trustees cannot hold that property who are merely trustees for the National Board. They could not take, for example, property that would be given to them in trust for the endowment of a school, because they are not a corporate body, and would be obliged to transfer that from time to time. And therefore you understand we could incorporate these trustees for you, not transferring the property in one sense, but in another doing so to that body, and then you would have no more conveyancing.

The Bishop of Ross.—That is a matter that will get our consideration later on, and we shall send any resolution we come to upon the matter up to you in Dublin.

Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—It is only through you we could do that, because this institution is clearly exempt from our compulsory jurisdiction.

4469. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—The National Board would recognise a corporate body constituted by us, as a fit body to act as trustees for the school. That case exists in Swords.

The Bishop of Ross.—Is that so? Then at this moment there is nothing to prevent us from forming ourselves into a corporate body?

4470. Lord Justice FRINGHAM.—There is this also to be borne in mind, in reference to your consideration of the matter, that our powers which are very exceptional, expire at the end of next year. We can send you some of the schemes we have settled, and I have reason to believe that your bishops have been considering the matter with a view to forming a body in each diocese that may hold property for educational trusts, and thereby relieve them from any trouble.

4461. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Who are your trustees at present?

The Bishop of Ross.—The trustees are the Right Rev. Wm. Fitzgerald, the Very Rev. John Fitzpatrick, and the Rev. Peter Hill. The deed was signed May 26th, 1875.

4462. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—It might be well for you to remember that if such a body were incorporated here for these schools it would be possible for you to use that corporate body for the purpose of vesting in them other schools and other endowments for education in other parts of the diocese, and therefore it would be a source of great convenience to you henceforward.

The Bishop of Ross.—It would be a matter of very great convenience.

4463. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—And it would save you a great deal of trouble, and not a little risk, with regard to the educational endowments in other parts of the diocese?

The Bishop of Ross.—As a matter of fact the trustees at any rate in schools would appreciate the convenience arising from a general trusteeship embracing all.

4464. Dr. TRAILL.—You would not object to an audit of the accounts of the institution as required by the Act?

The Bishop of Ross.—No.

4465. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—In each case we must provide in our scheme that the school shall be subject to inspection, and shall have its accounts audited.

The Bishop of Ross.—What do you mean by an inspection?

4466. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Such an inspection as required by the National school.

The Bishop of Ross.—Oh, that is practically the same inspection as is carried out at present. There would be no objection to that.

At the School, Baltimore.

BALTIMORE FISHERY SCHOOL.

Lord Justice FERGUSON made an introductory statement.

4467. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—You are Parish Priest of Baltimore?—Yes, for seven or eight years.

4468. How long is it since the project was formed of starting this fishing school?—The project was started in October, 1885.

4469. How did it originate?—It originated in an application to the then Chief Secretary, Sir William Hart-Dyke, to give a certificate for an Industrial School, the principal object of which was to be the teaching of youth in fishing pursuits and the attendant industries.

4470. What steps did you take to conform to the requirements of the Act?—We were promised certificates for seventy-five boys when we had the necessary buildings completed. We then proceeded to collect subscriptions to build the schools, for we could not receive anything from the Industrial Schools Act, as you are aware, until all the buildings and the furniture were complete for the reception of the boys. The application grant would only come into existence after our schools had been visited by the Inspector, and pronounced to be fit and suitable in all their arrangements for the boys; and then, as the guardians of the boys, we would receive £13 a year for each of the boys as a capitation grant. We then commenced to solicit subscriptions.

4471. Who first associated themselves in the effort to obtain subscriptions?—The deputation that waited upon the Chief Secretary, and who were the original promoters of the institution, were—Dr. Fitzgerald, the Bishop of the Diocese, myself, and Sir Thomas Brady, Inspector of Fisheries. Sir John Lubbock accompanied us, and spoke very warmly of the institution, and said that there was no industrial school that he ever visited that would produce such important industrial results.

4472. So far as you know, is this idea of having a school for the cultivation of fishing pursuits and industries entirely a novel one?—Yes, it is perfectly singular in the United Kingdom.

4473. As being an industrial school of a special character?—Yes, for fishing; and the secretary of the Fish Culture Association of London wrote lately in The Times stating that we had really started a project which should command universal admiration and imitation all over the United Kingdom; and that we were commencing to do that which would be of infinite service to the fishery boys all round the United Kingdom—to give them a technical education in their youth in the industry of fishing.

4474. What funds were you able to collect and obtain?—The Grand Jury of the County at their meeting, in March next, after we had started the project, unanimously and cheerfully gave £1,000 as a free grant, and without any obligation of repayment.

4475. That was £1,000 to be levied by Grand Jury rate, I suppose?—Yes. We received a bequest of over £500 left some years ago by a merchant in Dublin, called McGee. It was left by him and remained with the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. It was left in their hands because there was no representative body in Ireland of a charitable nature who would carry out the provisions of the bequest—namely, to give technical education in fishing.

4476. Then it was a special bequest for a fishing education?—For the promotion of the fisheries simply. We applied for it to the Commissioners, and the Commissioners unanimously decided that we were the real representative body of the fisheries of Ireland, and headed over the money.

4477. Then I think you also got a grant recently from some other public source?—Yes; we got a remnant of a loan fund which is imperative at present, called the Aghada Loan Fund, and I think the expenses of management of the small sum they had would exceed any interest they might receive. But from whatever reason it arose, the Loan Fund committee have granted us that fund.

4478. Is that the committee of which Mr. Nicolls is the secretary?—Precisely.

4479. What was the amount of the Aghada Loan Fund?—About £300. Mr. Fearce Fitzgerald, who made the application, was very much interested in this loan, and he thought it could not be devoted to a better purpose than in instructing boys in a fishing education.

4480. Have you received that money yet?—No.

4481. How much of the money you have received has been expended on the building?—We received £800 from the Duke of Norfolk.

4452. And, I think, £300 from the Baroness Burdett-Coutts?—Yes; and £300 from the proprietors of the Carbery Estates. And we have received 100 guineas from the Fishmongers' Company of London; 250 10s. from the Corporation of London. We got £100 from Sir Edward Cecil Guinness. In fact, from private subscriptions we have got £5,500.

4453. Was there not also a fund from the Government?—The Government have made a grant of £5,000.

4454. Have you received that?—We have.

4455. Has that been touched yet?—No.

4456. What has been the cost of your building?—The cost of the building amounts in every way to about £4,000—for furniture, clothes and all.

4457. And you have it now ready to receive seventy-five boys?—Yes.

4458. How have the governors been constituted, or have they been constituted at all?—We have commenced with, as every other government does in the beginning, a very few in number. The Bishop, who is present, myself, and Sir Thomas Baily, were the three first trustees. Then we added the proprietor and the principal trustees of the Carbery Estate—he is the brother of Lord Carbery, the Hon. William Ffells, that is four. Then we co-opted Mr. Carbery, who is a County Magistrate, residing in Queenstown, who has been very actively engaged about the coast in many ways. Then Mr. Burdett-Coutts himself requested to become one of the trustees—that is the husband of Lady Burdett-Coutts—and finally we have made a proposal to co-opt another gentleman, who would be the seventh, and he will most probably be co-opted on Saturday next, when we hope to hold a general meeting of the trustees—that is Mr. Vincent Baily who is a director of the Munster and Leinster Bank.

4459. Then the matter originated in the voluntary efforts of three gentlemen, who have added four more to themselves when they co-opted with them as the work went on?—Yes.

4460. Would you now tell us how the lands are held on which the house is built?—The whole extent of the land is about eight acres, and on it was a residential house out of repair. You passed it on your way down. We have the use of that for the superintendent—at least we have him living there now. We hold the whole site of this, with the other house that had been built before, for 255 a year, under a lease for ninety-nine years, from May, 1838, for the purposes of the school. The lease is made to the Bishop, myself, and Sir Thomas Baily.

4461. How do you propose to dispose of the portion of the money that has not been spent on the building?—Of course the appliances necessary to teach the fishing industry to the boys are expensive. It is on the line the teaching of ordinary trades that are as a rule taught in industrial schools, because it requires plant of a peculiar kind. There is no such thing in Ireland, for instance, as a net factory. It will cost us, for the proper machines, about £1,500.

4462. That includes both building and machinery?—There is not a machine in Ireland at present, and all the nets we use are made by machinery. There was a Scotch gentleman came here last year, and he sold £3,000 worth of netting to the people about here. Of course we could not make these nets if we had no machinery.

4463. We based of one in Kinsale?—There is one there—there is one solitary machine in Kinsale for the last twelve months.

4464. Rev. Dr. Mooney.—Worked by a woman from the Isle of Man?—Yes.

4465. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Besides not making what other industry do you propose to carry out here?—Fish curing. There is no fish curing establishment worthy of the name. We are importing all our cured fish, except the little that is cured in the country. We have to import a quarter of a million's worth of cured fish.

4466. Into the whole of Ireland?—Into the whole of Ireland.

4467. What kind of fish, caught off the coast here, can be cured?—Herrings, mackerel, hake, ling, and cod.

4468. What is the fishing season?—There is a fishing season at this moment. They are taking large quantities of fine mackerel.

4469. What outlet is there at present for the fish?—Very little, because there is only one person who has storage sufficient to enable him to buy them here, but there would be a very important outlet if our school was working.

4470. There is no curing at present?—It is cured by the people themselves for the local market.

4471. In their own houses?—For their own consumption, and for the local markets. The only curing that has been done in Ireland with any system has been done in herrings off the coast of Waterford this season by one Englishman, who was buying herrings fresh. He found it would be worth while to cure them, he brought over a dozen Scotch women, and he is sending them to Scotland and England, whence they are coming back again to be cured. They are taken off the coast, cured by Scotch women, sent to Scotland, and brought back from Scotland to us to buy—our own fish.

4472. You have not yet built the portion of your premises in which you are to carry on your curing operations?—We are just about to build that part. We have obtained estimates and plans and specifications for the building, and it only requires a fresh meeting of the trustees to commence. This part of our buildings we hope to have ready for the next spring's fishing.

4473. When do you expect your pupils to arrive?—Next week a detachment of them will come.

4474. What system has been followed in selecting the boys that are to be sent here?—We will not receive all boys. We will not receive any boys, except those connected with the coast.

4475. Are you getting boys from all parts of Ireland?—Yes. We prefer to get them from all parts, rather than to confine them to any one particular locality, because we don't intend to make anything by the concern—only to extend all over Ireland the knowledge of fishing—that every place might become just as favorably situated as the rest would be to get the benefits of this philanthropic work.

4476. What arrangement do you intend to make with regard to the selection of teachers?—We have got one from Arona.

4477. Is he a National Board teacher?—He is a certified National Board teacher of the second class, and he has a certificate in navigation, drawing, and music.

4478. You got him from Arona?—He is employed in Arona at present, but he prefers to come here to us, and he is coming on Monday.

4479. What arrangements have you made with regard to technical teaching?—With regard to that, in addition to fish curing and the making of nets, there are other attendant industries that would follow—carpentry, the making of coaks for holding the fish, coopers, making boxes, and so forth. An English gentleman told me that, if we could proceed to make 5,000 boxes for him, he would take them, that he would prefer to take them from us than pay the carriage from Liverpool. Some of them are made in Cork, and a great quantity are sent from England made. He told us to make 5,000 and he would be happy to pay for them, but of course we were not in a position to do it.

4480. Where do you propose to bring the teachers from?—Wherever we can get them best; from Scotland or the Isle of Man. We must go out of this country for them. In the first instance; the industries are simple in themselves, but to persons who don't know them they are—for the first moment they appear to be most difficult. They are easily acquired. We won't want those teachers long.

Oct. 18, 1887.

Rev. Charles

4510. You are not advanced enough to get those teachers yet?—No; we can get them at a week's notice.

4511. How soon do you expect to get the industrial and technical training into operation?—Not making will commence before the 1st of January.

4512. Where do you intend to put the not making machine?—We intend to make a building to form a quadrangle with the original building.

4513. Do you expect the work will be done so soon?—Oh, yes. The foundation stone of this school was laid in September, 1886, and it was opened in May, 1887, as you see it—at the end of May, 1887. The contractor did his business very quickly.

4514. Dr. TRAILL.—What class of boys are you to get?—The boys must be committed to any industrial school, and as we proceed to establish our industries we will take boys that won't be committed; for this reason, that when our industries are established, their labour will pay for their maintenance.

4515. You will charge them fees?—Well, we would prefer, naturally enough, to get a fee, or a little towards their education or maintenance, but I think myself that the time will come very shortly when the boy's labour—as in the case of the servant of a farmer—will pay for his maintenance and clothing.

4516. How long do you propose to keep the boys?—Industrial boys will be kept until they are sixteen years of age.

4517. From what age?—From any age—nine or ten.

4518. Will you have more beds occupied in the house than the seventy-five that are certified for?—We could have 130 at present.

4519. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—In the existing building you have accommodation for 130, and the building is so planned that you can extend it at any time?—Yes.

4520. What domestic staff do you intend to have?—First we have a superintendent, who is on the premises at present. We have a superintendent, and his wife acts as matron, and they live in the institution.

4521. What expense will they be?—Their salary will be £80 a year for the two, with rations, residence, fuel, and everything.

4522. And will the matron superintend and have charge of the domestic arrangements of the house?—Yes.

4523. What servants have you got?—She will have two servants to attend her. In a short time we expect the boys will do all this. They will cook, bake, and attend table, and they will make their own clothes. We propose to send them out of school just fit to take their places anywhere.

4524. Do you intend to teach such trades as tailoring and shoemaking?—We really, as far as we are concerned ourselves, that is our intention in some degree. We will teach a few boys—we intend to do that.

4525. But at present your desire is to give the boys an attraction towards the sea?—We won't touch those trades, for the purpose of increasing our funds—or teach them at all, except for our own immediate wants.

4526. Will you take in Protestant boys as well as boys from Catholic schools?—Yes, we will, and we are obliged to by the terms of our lease. They will come into the school at early morning. If they lodge outside they will be kept under the care of their own clergyman at night and morning, for prayer, for instance. They will sleep outside under the charge of the Protestant matron, but after they come into the institution, in the morning we treat them as the other boys are treated, of course, during the day.

4527. As far as your training, teaching, and educating is concerned, it will be an open National school during the day, and a boarding establishment during the hours of rest?—Yes. It would be most in conformity with our intentions. It would be cruel to keep Protestant boys in the establishment. Under the circumstances we could not keep them as industrial boys—not properly as industrial boys at all—I mean to say under the Industrial Schools Act.

4528. You would not be certified under the Industrial Schools Act for them?—Quite so.

4529. What allowance are you entitled to under the Act?—£13 for each boy under the Government, and 1s. 6d. a week to ordinary industrial schools the Grand Jurors give, but it is probable that they will give us for some time more than that.

4530. I believe the amount varies according to the various counties?—Some of them don't give anything, and some give half-a-crown.

4531. Is 1s. 6d. the amount given up to the present?—Yes, by the County Cork Grand Jury.

4532. But you will try and make a case for a special grant?—I am sure that the Grand Jury are very well inclined to do anything they can for us. If they can possibly raise the allowance for us, I am sure they will, especially as the coast of the County Cork is the principal part of the coast that is teeming with fish.

4533. Have you any invested money now?—We have £5,500 from the Government. We have not invested it, it is in bank.

4534. Do you propose to lay out the whole of that as capital?—Well we don't—at least as far as I can ascertain the mind of the trustees. We will keep something back—say £2,000 of it, if we can possibly keep it back, to sustain us—as a back to sustain us in case we meet with any disappointment for some time. I think with £3,500 we shall be able to start the industries at present.

4535. Dr. TRAILL.—How do you propose to invest the £2,000?—We have come to no arrangement at present.

4536. Rev. Dr. MCELROY.—Do you propose to have anything in the way of boat building?—Yes.

4537. You will have a ship carpenter to teach the boys?—Yes, and also we will have three large fishing boats attached to the institution.

4538. Will they be the property of the Institution, and manned by the boys?—Yes, they will be the property of the Institution, and manned by boys as far as possible. We will have half the crew, of course, men. We would not put boys into a large boat of this kind. We will have three boats from time to time at work. We will have four men in each boat, and five or six boys in addition. We can draft them out, and we can now and again send them out to sea in fine weather.

4539. And teach the boys practical fishing?—Yes, of all kinds, trawling, and fishing for mackerel and herrings. We intend to have a steam launch also to bring the fish from the boats speedily ashore.

4540. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What use would you make of that?—We could put it to a great many uses. We could use it to tow our boats in calm weather, and also, as I have already said, to go out and get fish from the boats.

4541. To collect the fish from the other boats?—Yes. It would be very useful to collect the fish for us, and we could save money in the way of carriage by sending up the steam launch to Skibbereen with fish by water, and it would be generally useful to all the fishermen who frequent the port.

4542. To tow them out by your steamboat?—Yes.

4543. What is the first open fishing season?—About the 10th of March, when mackerel come in a great shoal from the west.

4544. How long does the spring mackerel fishing last?—Until the middle of June.

4545. And by that time the herrings have arrived?—Yes. They continue here, and our people have not gone away from their own homes until within the last few years. They stop fishing here, and they have been induced to go away seeking herrings, and they have gone.

4546. Their fishing fleet follows the herrings?—Yes, they are just about returning.

4547. How long does the herring fishing last?—It begins at the close of the mackerel season—about the middle of June, and lasts about six weeks. I think it would last longer if they remained fishing, but if a fisherman knows that there is any other fish elsewhere, that one goes off, and the others follow suit.

4548. As a matter of fact, don't they fish their own waters sufficiently?—I think not. They sometimes follow other boats very injudiciously, because they will follow one boat even that will start the trail, and I have known them to leave the herrings after them. As for the mackerel, we had no idea that there would be such large quantities to be taken at this time of year.

4549. Are they catching mackerel now?—They are taking 4,000 and 7,000 a boat.

4550. When does the winter fishing begin?—We have very little winter fishing.

4551. Have you any winter herring fishing?—Very little of it. The herrings are not very numerous on this coast in winter. Sometimes a good many come in frosty weather—about Christmas, but this is not a winter herring fishing place.

4552. Rev. Dr. Moulton.—What about hake?—We have hake at all times when there is weather. There is hake at present, and will be until Christmas if the weather is fine.

4553. Are ling plenty?—They are very plenty about the beginning of the year—from the 1st of February, as long as they can get bait to 350 them. Even now ling are very numerous, and at the beginning of the year, right on the coast.

4554. We saw great quantities of hake in Kinade yesterday—how long do they remain?—Hake come about August, and they remain, if the weather be fine, until Christmas.

4555. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Hake fishing would fill up a good portion of the remainder of the year after the herring fishing was over?—Yes.

4556. Can you cure mackerel and herrings?—Yes, they have been doing so since the 1st of August—the Scotchwomen have been curing them in Dungeness. We got a letter from Macdonald, who is the principal salesman in Liverpool, and who stated that if we had 5,000 barrels of mackerel we could get a good market for them at once in the United States. As it is, they are sent to the West Indian Islands and other places. In Paris they call them Mégarmont de Mer—it is susceptible of such variety of cooking.

4557. Is it easy to cure that fish?—It is very easy to cure it for the home market. It is a fine course fish. I have not seen the particular instructions as to how to cure it for the foreign market.

4558. Is it a good fish?—It is, for common people.

4559. And there is always a market for it?—Yes, there's a market for 60,000 barrels of it.

4560. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Ling comes from the north of Scotland?—I don't know where it comes from. The Irish fishermen procure under a great disadvantage in winter all along the coast for want of bait. In other countries they cultivate bait fields, mussel beds, and whelks.

4561. There is, I believe, a great quantity of mussels imported from Scotland?—Yes, they cultivate mussels for bait.

4562. Rev. Dr. Moulton.—Is not ling imported into Ireland from Shetland?—Yes, the Scotchmen generally bring it from Shetland; but the principal cure, the leading cure that can be got, comes from Newfoundland. I may speak of ling as one of our rosters. There is no end to the quantity of ling that I see small yachts bringing into our harbour at the beginning of the year, but farther on the ling begin to go away.

Ling is abundant upon our southern coast line, but not infrequently boats have to wait for the mackerel to be taken in order that they can get bait to take the ling with. If they could have bait they could take any quantity of ling.

4563. Do you propose to establish the cultivation of bait?—Yes, we have it in our ideas at all events to learn how it is cultivated.

4564. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—How do they get bait at present?—They have mackerel salted for the last month trying to induce the hake to take it. Sometimes they get sprats, but yellow salt mackerel that you would not look at—a hake when he is hungry will go at—and that is what they usually give him.

4565. Is there any lobster fishing?—There is one of the greatest lobster fisheries in Ireland here.

4566. I presume you will teach the boys how to make lobster pots and crab pots?—Certainly—we will not omit a single industry connected with fishing—not a single industry. Of course the boys must receive a literary education, but while getting that literary education, and while it will receive a modern application, it will also, if I may use the expression, have a smack of the sea.

4567. You must first begin by teaching them reading and writing?—But if we could get educational books in fishing—to make them spell "net" instead of "o-e-t," that sort of thing is very much wanted in a country like ours, so as to give their minds a tendency towards sea pursuits and fishing pursuits.

4568. How do you intend the place to be governed?—We wish to incorporate ourselves in the manner in which your Act enables us to provide for the incorporation of those seven trustees—to incorporate us as a body.

4569. You appear to have two of your trustees ex-officio. Do you desire to continue that, or to have the whole body a co-opted body?—The present trustees are all acting men. There is no distinction between them. We have no honorary trustee at present. Each man bears his own share of the responsibility he is supposed to bear. We have no honorary trustee among the seven.

4570. You are the corresponding manager under the Industrial Schools Act?—Yes.

4571. Rev. Dr. Moulton.—The bishop and the parish priest might be made ex-officio members?—If a vacancy occurred, I think we should have the power of co-opting the surviving members.

4572. You propose that the bishop of the diocese should be at all times a trustee?—Yes, and the parish priest.

4573. Should you not think it desirable that the Reverend Bartlett-Gentle should have the right to nominate one member while she lives?—Her husband is one at present, and he is acting at present.

4574. But she may survive him?—Precisely, but it is not likely.

4575. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Their estate is represented always?—Yes.

4576. We simply want to get from you what your views are as to the governing body, because we can incorporate what you want as a permanent body?—There is a provision in the lease that one should be the governor of the school and he, of course, goes down as one of the trustees.

4577. There is another source of representation that we are trying to encourage, and that is in the case of subscribers or contributors to the funds of an institution such as this. Do you think anything of that kind could be introduced with advantage?—Our subscribers are so far apart that it would be difficult to do that. We have no local subscribers, and I think it would be impossible to get information from them they are so far apart. It was in England that we received most of our subscriptions.

4578. There is another provision sometimes made that people subscribing considerable sums of money

Oct. 12, 1888

Rev. Charles Davis, &c.

Rev. Charles

might nominate a pupil subject to the consent of the incorporated body. Do you think that would help you to get subscriptions?—To show you that we have no objection to do that, in the case of the Aghada Loan Fund, I forgot to mention that a condition on receiving the money was that we were to receive two boys from Aghada into our school—from Aghada or Whitegate in Cork, to which this loan fund was originally devoted. They said they would give that to us on that condition, and we said we would receive the two boys.

4579. Who were the persons who were to have the nomination of those boys?—I think Mr. Fearon Fitzgerald.

Mr. J. Corbery, &c.—Mr. Fearon Fitzgerald and the Rector of the Parish.

4580. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are those gentlemen the loan fund trustees of that place?

Mr. Corbery.—Yes.

4581. Lord Justice Fitzgerald (to Rev. Mr. Davis).

—Were the boys to be nominated committed boys?—No. We are not confined to committed boys under the Industrial Schools Act.

4582. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you apprehend any difficulty about boys that have not been committed under the Industrial Schools Act having any objection to go into a building with boys who have been so committed?—I should think there may be such objection. We have only to ensure that.

4583. Do you propose to separate them in the dormitories?—No, not at present.

4584. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We saw one institution in which it was impossible to discriminate?—Yes, because they will be clad and fed well, and they cannot expect anything more. The poor industrial boys will receive the same kindness and attention as if they were being paid for at the rate of £100 a year. That sort of thing might arise if they were aware of the surroundings of one another or that we had a bad class of town boys. But this is a case of boys being brought together from the corners of Ireland all round, and it is only when you bring boys of low origin into contact with other boys from the same district that such an objection as has been referred to by Dr. Traill can arise.

4585. It will also make a very great difference, because what a boy is committed for under the Industrial Schools Act is not a crime, otherwise he would go to a reformatory at once?—No, it is not a crime at all.

4586. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Are we right in understanding that your present trustees would desire to get themselves incorporated under the powers of our Act?—Yes, I think I speak the opinion of all the trustees.

4587. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I may tell you we cannot deal with any institution that is exempt without the written consent of the governing body?—You may take it as our wish that you would prepare a draft scheme if you wish to incorporate us, and then, of course, after we see that, it will be competent for us to decline or accept.

4588. Dr. TRAILL.—Are the Grand Jury represented on your board?—No.

4589. Would you wish them to be so?—I don't see any necessity for it. It would be a source of trouble to say men they would appoint to be coming to our meetings.

4590. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I presume it would be advantageous to put a power into your scheme to put a representative thereupon—in other words, to create a money franchise?—Yes.

4591. Have you any grand juror living in this part of the country who takes an interest in the fishing industry—a man like Mr. Fearon Fitzgerald?—Mr. Fearon Fitzgerald is very far away. The O'Donnovan, of Lisard, takes a great interest in the fishing, and he subscribed £350.

4592. Professor DOCUMENTY.—They gave you this contribution as for an ordinary industrial school?—They never gave it before to an industrial school.

4593. They have power to do so?—Yes.

4594. And the Grand Jury gave this grant because you were an industrial school for the promotion of the fishing industry?—It was because we were a fishing school.

4595. Dr. TRAILL.—Would there be any objection to adding the name of The O'Donnovan in the first instance?—I am not in a position to say—we thought that seven would be an excellent number.

4596. If you are taking representatives of the different donations of money that have been given, I don't know why you should omit the Grand Jury. It seems a large sum to get?—From the Grand Jury?—

4597. Yes. You have the Bessons Barlett-Scotts and the Corbery Estate—you pay them a large sum of money, and they only gave you £200?—But they made it a condition of the lease that it should be so.

4598. Lord Justice NABH.—As I understand it, the gift from the Grand Jury was free?—Absolutely free, and they required no account as to how it was spent. Mr. Frodo is the principal resident gentleman here, and he has a large manor in which he and his family reside, called Castle Frodo.

4599. There should be a provision that some one of the trustees should be resident in the neighbourhood, so as to be able to go and inspect and visit the school from time to time?—I am in that position, and the inspector from the Government comes down periodically to see into the inspection, and to ascertain that the boys are well treated. He comes down periodically, and we must be prepared for his visit at all times.

4600. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Mr. Frodo represents the estate?—As a present he does.

4601. Is he the owner of the estate?—He is the trustee.

4602. The owner of the estate may at some future time live here?—I have no doubt he will.

4603. Would you have any objection to our taking this course—that the owner of the estate should have power to nominate a representative, either himself or somebody else, as he pleases?—He is one at present.

4604. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But remember, we are only speaking about succession?—Yes. Then in the lease I told you of that is provided for.

4605. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What is provided for in the lease?—It is provided that the trustees may appoint a person in their own place, or one of the trustees may take the place himself—that is one of the trustees of the estate.

4606. That is that the proprietor of the estate may nominate a representative, or he may be his own representative?—We would only have one; we would not give him the power of nominating a second. That is, he may himself act, or a person nominated by him. We may prefer that person not to be appointed—we would prefer him to be one of the family. We would have a decided objection to have anyone outside of the family.

4607. Where is the lease?—I have the lease.

4608. We should want to get a copy of it?—Yes.

4609. That and a list of the funds would be practically all that we should want?—You shall have that information with pleasure.

4610. And the names and descriptions of the trustees?—We can give you that also.

Joseph E. L. Carbery, J.P., sworn.

Oct. 26, 1887.

Joseph E. L. Carbery, J.P.

4611. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We should like to get some information with regard to this institution and its prospects from you?—I think the information you get from Father Davis exhausts the subject.

4612. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What is the connection you hope to establish in business for this place—in the way of trade?—I think we will establish trade, not only for the promotion of the fishing industries, but for the benefit of the country in general, if we succeed, as we have every hope to do, in establishing a curing depot in this school. We shall establish a trade in the country which, in itself, will be of very great advantage to the interior, apart altogether from the seaboard.

Rev. Mr. Davis.—There is no reason why we should not compete with other persons engaged in fish-curing, net-making, and all those fishing industries. There is no reason why we should not successfully compete with them—for this reason, that we have the labour for nothing.

4613. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you any business manager in connection with the establishment?

Rev. Mr. Davis.—We cannot have that until we start the industries. The person in connection with the superintendent will be led into it by the instructions. Such an industry as this, of course, may be, as industrial schools are, supervised by individuals.

4614. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What we desire to do is to give you an outlet for what you make. How do you propose to get an outlet?

Rev. Father Davis.—I told you in my examination that there was a quarter of a million's worth of fish imported into Ireland.

4615. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is that the value in pounds sterling?

Rev. Father Davis.—That is the value in pounds sterling. Why should we not organise markets in Ireland where we can supply fish to them?

4616. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—That would be the duty of your local manager.

Rev. Father Davis.—Exceedingly. We will send a traveller round to each market in the interior. They have only to telegraph to us and we can send them any quantity of fish they require as soon as we learn from them.

4617. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—The provisions we should have then to make for you would be to enable you to appoint business people to conduct those things for you?

Rev. Father Davis.—We can do that. They are complaining very much that they can get no fish.

4618. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—I understand you propose to carry on here not merely a fishery school, but a great industrial establishment?

Rev. Father Davis.—Precisely so, as far as fish is concerned.

4619. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—On commercial principles?

Rev. Father Davis.—Fish curing on commercial principles and net making.

4620. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—The best way we can do that is to give you the power and to leave the particular means by which you will carry it on to the discretion of the trustees.

Rev. Father Davis.—Yes, because the carrying out of that may vary from time to time. We could not make any hard-and-fast lines.

4621. Mr. Carbery (to Dr. Traill).—You made a remark that you considered the grant from the Grand Jury rather large.

Dr. Traill.—Not at all. I would be very glad to see it twice as large. I was only comparing it with similar grants from others.

Mr. Carbery.—But you must consider that a considerable portion of the country Cork is on the seaboard.

4622. Dr. Traill.—It is not at all too large a grant. With reference to the Grand Jury—in the way of representation—if they asked for representation, having given £1,000, they would be fairly entitled to it. The Barrowen Burdett-Coutts got representation, having given only £200. Of course she is a special case.

Rev. Father Davis.—Yes.

Mr. Carbery.—I must say we were very badly supported in the way of private subscriptions.

Rev. Father Davis.—We didn't make any great effort to collect subscriptions.

4623. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—I was not quite clear as to whether the £3,800 you received from subscribers included the £1,000 from the Grand Jury.

Rev. Father Davis.—It does.

4624. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—And all the other sums you mentioned?

Rev. Father Davis.—It includes all sums, independent of the £3,000 we received from the Government.

Rev. James Jones.—Father Davis has stated very clearly and fully all that is to be said on the subject.

TULLAGH PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

Rev. James Jones sworn.

4625. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—You are Rector of Tullagh?—Yes.

4626. How long have you held that parish?—Twenty-eight years last July. I was ordained for the parish, and I am here still.

4627. What is the extent of the parish?—From this to Lough Hine, I suppose about four square miles on the mainland. It takes in Cape Clear and Island Sherkin.

4628. What is the number of the Protestant population of the parish?—153.

4629. Where is the church?—The church is in the village of Baltimore.

4630. The endowment that we have in the report is an endowment of two ponds of land, and some trust fund under the will of the late Lord Carbery?—Yes. The amount is £242 5s. 3d., and the yearly interest is 27 4s. 4d. It is invested in the funds in the names of the Bishop of Cork and the Archbishop of Ross for the time being.

4631. Is the rector of the parish not one of the trustees?—No.

4632. Who pays the money to you?—I get the money from the Bank of Ireland.

4633. How is the school conducted? Is it in connection with the National Board?—No; it is in connection with the Erasmus Smith Board, and the Church Education Society.

4634. Do they give you any grants at all?—They do. The Erasmus Smith Board give me £25, and the Church Education Society £5, and I get more from other sources.

4635. What is the number of children attending at present?—The number of children on the roll at present is twenty-four, but that can be hardly a criterion as to the general number, because if children are absent for a month we take them off, and if they come again we put them on. That is in accordance with the rules of the Board. The numbers also change monthly. The number on the roll, in accordance with the rules of the Board, or the wishes of the Inspector—the number on the roll is taken from the attendance on the first day of the month.

4636. What Board do you speak of?—The Erasmus Smith Board; they have given me a sort of premium more than once for the teacher. I have got it three times, I think.

4637. How much would you be able to get for your school if you were in connection with the National Board?—I think I would be able to get very little. I am getting far more than if I was in connection with the National Board. The other grants might be withdrawn if I joined the National Board. The £5 from the Church Education Society, £4 from the Irish Reform Society, £3 from Lord Carbery, a private subscription, and £1 from The O'Donovan.

4638. Have you one teacher?—Yes; a female teacher.

4639. Where was she trained?—She was trained in Banlon.

4640. She is not classified under any system?—No; she is not.

4641. How long has she been here?—Eleven years last month.

4642. How is the land held on which the school stands?—With regard to that the school was built in the year 1833, by the late Lord Carbery, and it consisted of a centre, as a residence for the teacher, and two wings. One wing was intended as the female school, and the other for the male, but one was always found sufficient, and the other was never used, and that wing was generally let by the teacher, but about four years ago we were deprived of it by the trustees.

4643. If it was given to you how were they able to deprive you of it?—I do not understand that, but Mr. Stewart, the agent, informs me that there was a lease but that he cannot find it. The land, as well as I understand it, was let to the clergyman at 1s. a year, on condition that if it ceased to be used for the present purpose it should revert to the owner. But the lease is not forthcoming. We never paid any rent for the school at all from 1833, and how the land came into our possession I cannot exactly tell you.

4644. It is also stated in a former report that there was an original bequest of £600 of which only £217 10s. had been received?—So I understand.

4645. How does it come that you have not got the remainder of the £600?—I don't know. The money was not forthcoming. (Document handed in). That was a document sent to me by the Manager of the Bank of Ireland in Skibbereen sometime since.

4646. You have not got a copy of Lady Carbery's will?—No, I have not seen it.

4647. Who is the agent of the estate here?—Mr. Stewart, son of Mr. Stewart, of the firm of Stewart and Kinzail.

4648. The agents are in Dublin then?—Yes.

4649. Have they not the Carbery documents there?—But Mr. Stewart says that all deeds in connection with the school are lost.

4650. In cases of this kind we have endeavored to form a parochial body to see that the endowment is not alienated from the original purpose?—That is what I want to ask you about. How can I consider it our house or land if the trustees of the Carbery estate claim it? but still as long as it is used for the purpose for which it is intended they will leave it with us.

4651. The utmost we can do is to vest whatever property actually belongs to the school in a corporate body to hold it. We cannot give you any property that does not previously belong to you. In the report for 1856 it is stated that Lord Carbery had made a presumed grant of a house and half an acre of land.

In the report for 1880 it is stated that Lord Carbery made a grant of a house and land, so that there does not appear to be any actual document in existence?—Then how am I to consider the house or land as an endowment or not?

4652. How long has the mistress been in possession—Does she live in the house?—No.

4653. Dr. TRAILL.—I thought you said she lived in the schoolhouse?—No, it is let to a family.

4654. What sort of a family?—A policeman's family—a policeman and his wife.

4655. Has he signed any document?—I don't think so.

4656. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—How far is it from where we are?—It is close to you. I will have pleasure in taking you down.

4657. Dr. TRAILL.—How long has he been there?—I don't know.

4658. Is he on duty, or is he a retired policeman?—He is on duty.

4659. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What salary does the teacher receive?—From all sources, £55 18s.

4660. Dr. TRAILL.—Is she a good teacher?—Indeed she is.

4661. How long have you been in possession of the school?—I have been twenty-eight years in possession of it, and I understand no rent has been paid for it, and it has been built since 1833.

4662. Have you had it the whole time you have been here?—Yes, I was curate part of the time.

4663. Professor DONOVAN.—Who built the house?—It was built by the late Lord Carbery.

4664. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Do you know if there ever was a lease?—Mr. Stewart told me there was a lease, and that it was let to the clergyman at 1s. a year and that the lease is not forthcoming.

4665. Did he tell you for what length of time it was?—He didn't tell me, but I imagine that as long as it was used for the purpose for which it was built it would not be taken from me.

4666. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—If you have been living there for over twenty years and no rent paid, it appears to me to be a case in which you could hold possession?—I considered it an endowment.

4667. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Did the trustees claim it as part of the estate?—Yes, and they required the house from time to time, but not often.

4668. Dr. TRAILL.—When you wanted it repaired did you ask them to repair it?—I asked them to repair it once.

4669. When did they repair it last?—They put up a gable in the schoolroom, but I cannot exactly say when, but I suppose about two or three years ago.

4670. Did they ever touch the roof?—They did about twenty-seven years ago—they put up a new chimney.

4671. If the owner of the estate was a member of the Church, would you not have him to represent the estate?—The owner of the estate regards it as his property.

4672. If this was settled either way and we were making a governing body, would it not be a reasonable thing that the owner of the estate should have one representative?—Yes.

4673. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you know how the trustees held the estate?—I do not know, but with regard to the wing that they took away they promised that, in case we ever wanted it, they would restore it.

4674. When did they take that wing away?—In 1831-4.

4675. How many trustees to the estate are there?—There are two—the Hon. Mr. Freke and Captain Peery Bernard.

PUBLIC SITTINGS—FRIDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1887.

At Middleton College

Oct. 21, 1887

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAISH, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.S.O., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., M.D., M.B., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, junr., was in attendance.

*MIDDLETON COLLEGE.

Albert A. Burd, M.A., sworn.

4674. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—When were you appointed to the head mastership of this school?—In 1882.

4677. Where did you come from?—From Ennis. I was assistant master at Ennis, and previously at Dundalk under Dr. Flynn.

4678. How long had you been at Dundalk?—I was two years at Dundalk, but I then went away from Ireland for sometime. A couple of years I was in England and abroad in Germany, and I was four years after that in Ennis.

4679. Were you engaged in teaching in Germany?—No, I was doing nothing. I was teaching in England, and in Germany I was studying the language.

4680. Where were you educated yourself?—I was educated in the Wesley College, Dublin.

4681. And did you go to any University?—Yes, to Trinity College, and graduated there, obtaining Scholarship and senior Moderation at Degree.

4682. How many pupils have you at present here? I have seventeen boarders and thirteen day boys—thirty altogether.

4683. Have the numbers fluctuated since you came?—When I came I began school with two boarders, and at the end of the first year I had six, and since then they have gone on slowly increasing. I had eleven the next year, and I had the same number for about a couple of years and last year. I have the numbers here for the last three years—on the roll October, that is this date, 1885, the entire number is 19—4 boarders and 15 day pupils; October, 1886, 13 boarders and 11 day pupils; and at the present date, October, 1887, 17 boarders and 13 day boys—six being free. I have the largest number of boarders I ever had.

4684. How are the free boys admitted?—By the nomination of the trustees and visitors.

4685. Who are the trustees?—Each in his turn nominates. The trustees are the Protestant Bishop of Cork, Lord Middleton, Lord Shannon, of Castlemary, Captain Baily, of Killesno, the Rector of the Parish, the Rev. Dr. Moore, and Mr. Fitzgerald, of Corking.

4686. Do you know how the trustees are appointed?—I do not. I think they are co-opted, but I am not sure.

4687. What are the fees paid by the day boys?—Ten guineas.

4688. The free boys are all day boys, I presume?—Yes, all day boys. Ten guineas is the nominal fee. These brothers are taken for eight guineas, and sometimes, under special circumstances, I make a considerable reduction even on those terms.

4689. What are the fees for the boarders?—The fees for boarders are £40 a year, with extras, and they bring it up to about £44; and then brothers are taken for £27 a year, and under special circumstances I make further reductions.

4690. What do you mean by special circumstances?—When parents are not able to pay.

4691. Where do your boarders come from?—Chiefly from Cork, but not altogether. There are some from the Queen's County, and other parts of the country, I have two boarders from the Queen's County, but they are chiefly from Cork, and the neighbourhood of this county. The majority are from this county.

4692. What assistance do you get from the endowment?—Well, I get from the endowment a salary for myself of £95—£100 Irish—and two allowances of £50 each for masters—that is £195 in all.

4693. There is also an allowance for the repair of the school-house?—Yes, a considerable sum of money.

4694. Is that paid to you?—There is no allowance to me. The governors undertake to keep the school-house in repair; there is no allowance made to me for that purpose.

4695. How are the repairs usually done?—If the premises have been injured in any way—for example, by a storm or anything of that kind, they repair them. And also, if they are wearing I have them done myself. I take upon myself to have them done, and I tell the secretary, and they generally allow that. But, as a rule, the repairs are generally done in this way—the architect comes round every year, and goes over the school and examines the state of the building, and authorizes any repairs he considers necessary, and these are carried out.

4696. Have you anything to do with the carrying out of these repairs?—Nothing, except this, that I make arrangements with the contractor, a man called Coffey; he generally does them, and I see that they are done properly, so far as I am—that is all.

4697. There was also formerly an allowance for exhibitions?—There is still an allowance for exhibitions. There is an allowance of £50 a year—that is to say, for boys who distinguish themselves in their entrance examination at Trinity College—who get the junior exhibition for getting a high place at the entrance examination.

4698. What other allowances of the same kind have been hitherto granted?—No other allowances. The £50 is the only allowance. There is one exhibition, or it is properly called a prize of £30, and another of £20. They are given in one payment. They don't go beyond a year. The prizes are not of very much benefit. I don't think they are large enough to induce boys to enter Trinity.

4699. Have you always had boys qualified to enter for them?—Some years we have not had a boy going on. In those cases they are not paid.

4700. What becomes of the money?—The money is saved and it is kept to the account of the school, and added to the funds that the Clero-street Commissioners have; I can give you the Report of this year.

4701. What source of education have you?—We prepare boys for the Universities as a rule.

4702. What proportion of your boys go to Trinity College?—Well, I have not made it up, but I should say the best boys in the senior class generally go. Some of them go to the Royal University. I could not say exactly what proportion of the whole number of pupils but I should say not half, because of course a large number of the boys I have, leave before being qualified to enter the senior class.

Oct. 21, 1887.
Albert A.
Hart, M.A.

4703. What do they usually go to?—They go to banks, and some go to business.

4704. What is your teaching staff?—I have three masters, three resident masters. One is a graduate of Oxford, an exhibitioner and obtained honours, at degree examination, and the two others are undergraduates of Trinity College—one is an honor man and junior exhibitioner, and the other is also an undergraduate.

4705. What are their salaries?—The senior mathematical master has £80 a year, and board and residence, the next has £50 and board and residence, and the next has £35 and board and residence.

4706. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Are the undergraduates keeping their courses in Trinity College at the same time?—One is, and the other has dropped his course for the present.

4707. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I see that Mr. Mahaffy reported in 1880, that some prizes were given by Lord Middleton and others?—By no others. Lord Middleton is the only one. He gives a prize of three guineas a year for proficiency in classics. That is the only prize given except by the Head Master.

4708. Has there been any large expenditure on the premises since you came?—Yes. Considerable—an average of £50 or £60 a year. The buildings are very large and old, and they require a good deal of outlay to keep them up. Even at present they would require a large outlay to put them in perfect order.

4709. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the nearest school that competes with you?—The day schools in Cork. Those are the only schools. There are two or three good day schools in Cork.

4710. Which are they?—Mr. Fawcett's, the Cork Grammar school, and two or three other small schools.

4711. What is the greatest distance from which your day boys come?—Well some come from Carrigrohilly—five miles away.

4712. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—When Mr. Mahaffy was here he reported that some of the boys came from Youghal. Have you any from Youghal now?—None from Youghal. I think at one time we had some boarders from Youghal, but we have no day boys from Youghal now nor boarders.

4713. Where do your boarders come from?—They come chiefly from Cork—chiefly from this county.

4714. Is there any inspection of the school by any authority?—Yes, there is an inspection by the visitors, generally once a year.

4715. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there any educational inspection?—None.

4716. No examination by an Inspector?—There is none. There is no formal one, but Dr. Moore generally helps me in my annual examination. But there is no formal inspection.

4717. Who are the inspecting visitors?—The Bishop and Lord Middleton.

4718. As trustees in fact?—Yes, and the Rector of the parish.

4719. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you think there are materials to be found in Middleton for a local body that would take an interest in the school, and in the management of it?—Oh, I think so. I should think so; but I don't think we would ever have many day boys in Middleton—the Protestant population is not large enough. We have as many day boys, I think, as we could possibly expect to have—from thirteen to fifteen—we could not possibly have more.

4720. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Are all the pupils Protestants?—Not all the day boys. There are two day boys Catholics. When I first came here I had a large number of Catholic day boys—in fact when I was here the first year I had far more day boys than ever I had since—twenty-five day boys and half of them Catholics, but they have dropped off coming for some time.

4721. Where do they go now?—A great many go to the Christian Brothers' School. They have begun teaching classics at the Christian Brothers' School, but a good many remained with me to the end of their course.

4722. You have a few still?—Two Catholics day boys at present.

4723. Lord Justice NAHEM.—Are there any printed rules and regulations with respect to carrying on the school?—None; simply my time table. The management of the school is left to me altogether.

4724. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you know how the original endowment, which was 2,000 acres of land, became diverted from the school?—Well, I suppose, the old trustees could have told that. It was 100 years ago. The 2,000 acres are there still, I suppose. But there is nothing to get except the rest of it is an acre. Some of the land attached to the school does not belong to the trustees at all.

4725. Where are the 2,000 acres?—I don't even know where it is.

4726. How are the school premises held?—The trustees are the legal owners. I suppose they are held under deed.

4727. Do you pay any rent?—None whatever for the school premises, nor for any land belonging to the endowment. There are two or three acres of land taken in with the endowment for which we pay no rent. There is a small farm called the school land of fifteen acres, which is let at £50 a year by Lord Middleton.

4728. Do you know how it is held?—I don't know. It does not belong to the endowment, but it has always gone with the school.

4729. How many boys have you accommodation for here?—Fully 70 boarders, I should think.

4730. Dr. TRAILL.—How many day boys can you put with those as far as class rooms go?—100 altogether as far as class rooms go. I have accommodation for fully 100.

4731. Lord Justice NAHEM.—Are there not some exhibitions connected with the college?—There are prizes, my lord, not exhibitions. There are prizes of £50 and £30, and they are given to boys going to Trinity College—that is to say—who distinguish themselves in the entrance examination—the examination for entrance in Trinity.

4732. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Since the establishment of junior exhibitions for Trinity College, which are very much in the nature of first year exhibitions, do you think that the money is as usefully applied as it could be?—I don't think it is. I think these prizes are of very little use indeed. They are nice prizes to get; but I don't think they are of much assistance to a boy who is going in for a university course. There is one payment of £30 and one of £50, and they don't continue beyond one year, and I don't think they are of much use.

4733. Do these exhibitions attract boys to the school?—They do not; they have not had any effect in attracting boys to the school with the view to enter the university, because they are not valuable enough for that. There are just two prizes of £30 and £50 at entrance, and then they drop.

4734. Lord Justice NAHEM.—Who appointed you?—I was appointed by the trustees.

4735. Did you sign any undertaking when you were appointed?—No, I signed no undertaking.

4736. Did you receive a letter of appointment?—Well, I don't know that there was any formal letter. I don't think there was much formality about it. I was informed I was appointed—that is all, I think.

4737. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you present an annual report to the visitors?—Yes, I present an annual report to the visitors.

4738. Why do you call them visitors—are they not the same as trustees?—Yes.

4739. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Did you receive any communication from the trustees as to what your duties were to be?—No, I received no formal communication.

4740. Dr. TRAILL.—Who told you you were appointed master?—Really, I forget now. I think I was informed in an informal way by letter.

4741. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is there any suggestion you could make as to any means of stirring up more interest in the school and increasing the number of boys?—Well, there was a scheme proposed by the Commissioners for amalgamating the funds of four grammar schools, and to have the four grammar schools united under the Commissioners. Those schools were Middleton, Clonsilla, Navan, and Ballyman. They are called private grammar schools, grammar schools of private foundation, worked under the same plan by the Commissioners—they proposed to amalgamate the endowments and to distribute them more equally.

4742. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Are all your day boys from Middleton?—Yes, from Middleton and neighbourhood.

4743. And I suppose I may take it that thirteen represents the number of boys in Middleton and about it who require a classical education?—I think so—of Protestants.

4744. Dr. TRAILL.—How many Protestants are there in Middleton?—There are, I think, about 300 in Middleton and neighbourhood. Dr. Moore can tell you that better than I can.

4745. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—Has the Protestant population of Middleton fallen off?—Fallen off? Well, I could not tell you that. Dr. Moore will be able to tell you.

4746. The number of Protestant pupils has been pretty stationary since you came?—The day boys are about the same. There has been no change worth speaking of.

4747. Some of the day boys come from a distance of three or four miles?—Some come five miles.

4748. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Do you know Youghal at all?—Yes.

4749. Is there any population there that would be likely to supply you with boys?—Yes, but they have a small endowed school of their own.

4750. And Mr. Mahaffy made a proposal to apply the endowment to bringing the boys here from Youghal?—Yes, because the school was not in operation, I think, when Mr. Mahaffy made his report. For two or three years it had ceased.

4751. How far is Youghal from this?—Fourteen miles—about the same distance as from this to Cork.

4752. Bishop Crowe's endowment still exists in Clonsilla?—Yes, but that does not compete with us in any way.

4753. How is that?—There are very few day boys, and their education is quite different from ours. It is an English education almost exclusively, at least I believe so.

4754. Would it be possible for you to give a good English education that would be likely to attract a greater number of boys?—We bestow a good deal of attention on English, but being obliged to prepare boys for the University and Intermediate we cannot give undue attention to any special branches. I think you can hardly make a school a distinctly classical school and a distinctly English school.

4755. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you any boys preparing for commercial life in your school?—Well, I have a fair number. They are taught the usual English education. We prepare boys for the Intermediate examinations and we were very successful last year.

4756. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—How many have you sent up this year?—We didn't do as well as last year. We sent up ten, and seven passed and one obtained an exhibition—one of the seven. Last year I sent up ten. There was one exhibition gained, one retained, and six prizes out of the ten. They all passed.

4757. Professor DOUGHERTY.—In what grade?—In different grades—some in the senior, some in the middle, and some in the junior grade.

4758. Does the fluctuation arise from the class itself being a little different in one year as compared with another, in the college?—Our class is very small—two or three boys being withheld would make a great difference.

4759. To what centre did you send them?—To Middleton.

4760. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What other schools sent boys?—The Christian Brothers sent them.

4761. Where is the examination held?—In the Christian Brothers' School.

4762. Where are the Protestant boys, who are being prepared for business, taught in Middleton?—There is a very good National School.

4763. Do any of the Protestant boys go into Cork? I think no Protestant boys, as far as I am aware, go into Cork.

4764. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—Is it a rule here that every boy must learn classics?—It is not an absolute rule, but they do, as a matter of course, unless the parents expressly wish them not to.

4765. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Is it a classical school?—Well, it is. It is a classical school.

4766. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you teach classics or mathematics yourself?—I teach the greater part of the classics, all the French, and the higher English.

Rev. Thomas Moore, LL.D., SWTC.

4767. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I believe you were appointed Headmaster of Middleton in 1863?—Yes, in March.

4768. What were the numbers when you came?—On boarders and three on the foundation, some of the dispensary doctor.

4769. What was the course of the numbers after you came?—In 1864 the first record is in the books—there were 40 boarders, 16 day scholars, and 6 on the foundation, or 62 altogether.

4770. How long did the numbers continue to increase?—Well, they continued to increase up to 1873. I had 60 boarders in 1874 and I had in 1869, 69 boarders; but between the year 1869 and the year 1873, there was a fluctuation. The lowest number was 54, and then it got up to 61, 63, 65, and finally 69, in 1872.

4771. Dr. TRAILL.—How many day boys had you at the same time?—In 1873, 35 day boys, and 6 on the foundation—101 altogether.

4772. Did that include some Roman Catholic day boys?—Yes, a good many—the Christian Brothers then hadn't any school here.

4773. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Was that the year in which you had the greatest number?—No, I had 110 altogether in the year 1863, 39 day boys and 6 free.

4774. For ten years it seems to have been actively flourishing, as far as boys were concerned?—From 1864 to 1878—fourteen years.

4775. What occurred after that with regard to the numbers?—Well, in 1878 the boarders fell to 52.

4776. Dr. TRAILL.—I thought you had 60 in that year?—Yes, you are right—in 1879 they fell to 56—56 altogether—34 day pupils, and 6 on the foundation—56 in all. Then, in 1880, 45—that is 13 of a disjunction—27, and 6, or 76 altogether. Then the last record I have is in 1881. My report seems to have dipped out of the book. In 1881 I had 58 boarders, 25 day pupils, and 6 on the foundation, or 87 altogether.

4777. To what do you attribute the falling off in the numbers during those four years?—Oh, I attribute it to the state of the country beginning to affect us.

Oct. 24, 1891.
Rev. Thomas
Moore, M.A.

I think for two or three years the land agitation, in point of fact, was the cause of it. Then a great many were removed because they could not pay—because they could not be paid for—because the parents could not pay.

4777. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—That is, owing to the depression of the times?—Yes.

4778. Because the boys were not concerned in the agitation?—They were, when their parents suffered from the depression.

4779. Dr. TRAILL.—Now was it from depression of the times or from their not receiving the rents. There are two kinds of depression—one caused by agitation and the other caused by bad crops. I understand you to lay it down to agitation?—That is my impression. At all events they were removed because they could not be paid for.

4780. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You are now one of the Governors, I think?—Well, I am not, but the Rector of Middleton really is a Governor. It is a mere accident that I am not, because it is inconvenient to have a governor on the spot to keep the books. Every rector has been, but since I resigned it has been impossible to get a sufficient number of governors to co-opt me.

4781. Who are the present governors?—They have been mentioned. The Bishop of Cork is ex-officio, and the others are co-opted: Viscount Middleton, Captain Bally, the Earl of Shannon, and R. U. Perceux Fitzgerald.

4782. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How many altogether?—Six, when they are filled.

4783. How many constitute a quorum?—Well, three.

4784. And since your resignation there never have been three governors meeting together?—No, only two.

4785. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—We find the last annual visitation took place in 1885, so that in consequence of the inability to get three together there has not been a visitation since then?—Yes.

4786. And I see that on that occasion the Lord Bishop of Cork was in the chair, and that Lord Middleton, and the Rev. Thomas Moore, Rector of Middleton, were also present?—Yes.

4787. Then they counted you to make up the quorum?—I was present as their secretary.

4788. There would not have been a quorum if you had not been there?—There would not.

4789. Was it not always understood that the Rector of Middleton was one of the trustees?—No, but the "Sovereign" of Middleton was formerly ex-officio.

4790. Who is he?—He was the Rector always in these days, but when that was altered, and when there was no such thing as a "Sovereign"—

4791. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—It appears pretty obvious that the Board of Visitors cannot be relied upon to attend and give any active personal interest in the place?—None, except the Bishop and Viscount Middleton. Viscount Middleton lives in England, at Piper Harrow, Godalming, Surrey.

4792. He comes over specially?—Yes, he does. He takes the greatest interest in everything. Lord Shannon never attended.

4793. Now we have got the power, it is our duty to try and create a proper governing body that will take an interest in this endowment. How would you suggest that that could be done. The Bishop appears to be ex-officio, and I presume from what you say that the rector of the parish would be an ex-officio member also?—Well, he always has been by custom.

4794. Is there any objection you know of to making the custom a lawful custom?—No. I think it is very desirable that the rector should be, as being on the spot.

4795. Where would you look for the other members?—Well, Lord Middleton has always taken a deep interest in the school, and he ought always to be a member.

4796. He represents the founder?—Yes, he represents the founder, and the school lands have always gone with the school, simply by Lord Middleton's own private wish. It is important that the owner of the land should take an interest in the school.

4797. Do you know how these school lands are held for school purposes?—Is there any lease?—None whatever.

4798. He is only a tenant from year to year?—Yes.

4799. The school lands and the portion about the house—these are held with the school?—They are freehold.

4800. In whom is the freehold vested?—Is it in the trustees?—I could not say.

4801. Dr. TRAILL.—Are the lands ever broken up, or are they kept for grazing?—They have been broken up.

4802. There is no restriction?—None whatever.

4803. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—What portion of the lands belong to the school?—Simply what you see in front and the yard.

4804. From the front to the road?—Yes. The garden does not.

4805. Is that held under Lord Middleton?—Yes, and three fields around the garden.

4806. In addition to the freehold land, have what other property belongs to the College?—None, except 2,000 acres at Kinsale.

4807. Out of what is the head master paid?—He is paid from resources and from accumulations. For example, that £50 a year often for a dozen years in succession never was claimed. Well, the wall round the garden was built partly out of that, and they themselves added from their other resources what was required.

4808. Dr. TRAILL.—That is the £50 paid for exhibitions?—Yes.

4809. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Would you regard that £50 a year that they are now spending on these two prizes as usefully spent?—Yes, I found them very useful.

4810. In what way?—As a nice present to smart boys entering college.

4811. Would not a smart boy get any junior exhibition?—Yes, but he would get that in addition.

4812. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you think that the best application of an endowment for education is to pay boys to go to Trinity College?—My experience was that to a boy who was entering, it was very nice for him to be sure of £30 if he answered sufficiently well to gain the first prize, or £20 if he was the second boy.

4813. And the £30 would be still better?—That £50 only commenced in the year 1871.

4814. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Would not that money be more usefully applied in teaching several boys than in giving a nice thing to one?—How teaching several boys?

4815. By increasing the salaries of the masters for example, who are extremely small?—Well, I think so. I think the great weakness of the school has been the very small allowances given to the masters.

4816. Do you think, then, this £50 a year would be more usefully applied by increasing the salaries of the masters or that things should go on as they are, and that it should be made a present to whatever clever boy can manage to get it?—I think it would be far more useful to give it to the master, because a clever boy is sure of £50 at Trinity College.

4817. He is sure of taking an exhibition?—Yes, at the Intermediate, for example, when at school.

4818. It will give any clever boy who gets an exhibition at Trinity College the means of getting on?—Oh yes. I hold it to be a great boon, the establishment of the junior exhibitions, for all my best men got them year after year—that is the top boy or so.

4819. He had the junior exhibition and this additional thing besides?—Yes, the £30.

4820. We may take you as agreeing with Mr. Burd that it would be more useful to apply that money in paying the masters?—Much more useful.

4321. What is Lord Shannon's connection with the matter?—He was co-opted as they did anybody else and as he was of a certain rank; but Lord Shannon never attended, and it was well known he never would.

4322. Does he live within reach?—He lives six miles off—at Castlemary.

4323.—Who else attended?—Well the only ones that have attended were—the Bishop of Cork—always, and Vincent Middleton, and Captain Bally—Captain Bally was the agent to Lord Middleton at the time and lived in the town. Then he became Lord Donoughmore's agent, and went to Clonmel. He didn't attend then so regularly as he had no wants to receive.

4324. He didn't remain agent for Lord Middleton at the same time?—Oh, no.

4325. Once they are put on do they remain on as long as they like?—For life.

4326. Do you think that a good plan?—No, I do not. No, it has worked very badly.

4327. Can you give us a suggestion as to what would work better?—Well, you see you have three whom you always can rely upon, for Lord Middleton would come over specially if he was wanted at any time.

4328. Well, we should not like to have a less number than seven or nine?—I don't know how they could always co-opt them; but, I think, we have magistrates always resident about here. There is Mr. Gault, of Ballinacorney, he would have been a most useful man to have appointed.

4329. What body would be most likely to select the best men. Is there any body whom we might expect to nominate a couple of these Governors?—Well, I suspect the Clare-street Board would do that better than anyone else.

4330. We find the Clare-street Board never do anything?—They have done all the important matters here up to the present.

4331. Dr. TRAILL.—Could the Select Vestry name any?—Oh, they could.

4332. Lord Justice FRYNGER.—Do you think they would take an interest in it?—Yes. The Select Vestry in a parish like this is just a little bit strong for the South of Ireland.

4333. It includes all the likely persons who would be available?—Yes.

4334. Do you think that the Select Vestry of Middleton and the Commissioners of Clare-street would both take an interest in the formation of such a body?—The Select Vestry would take a very active part in it.

4335. Is there a Diocesan Council that would take an interest in matters of this sort?—The Diocesan Board of Education—they have the education of the whole of the county under them; but then this would be out of their province.

4336. Dr. TRAILL.—They are concerned with religious education only?—Yes; but they would be a very intelligent body, or if they would appoint a fair number to act with these three—the Bishop of Cork, Lord Middleton, and, for the time being, the Rector of Middleton. Or if you had our Select Vestry; the Select Vestry includes the most intelligent in the town and neighbourhood.

4337. Ballinacorney and around there?—Yes, you could get within range of the parish of Middleton, which extends several miles around the town—three or four.

4338. Lord Justice FRYNGER.—Suppose we had, ex-officio, the Bishop, the Rector of the Parish, and the owner of the estate, Lord Middleton, and allow him, if he chose, to nominate one for himself, or instead of himself?—He would nominate his agent.

4339. That would make four, and if you allowed the Select Vestry to put on two, and the Diocesan Council a couple, we might give you leave to co-opt the rest?—A diversified plan of that kind would work remarkably well, because it would secure the variety we want.

4340. That is what we are offering you, in the hope that we could make a good corporate body. You have more experience of this school probably than any other person living, and now we wish you to tell us this—what number would you consider the best number for the local governing body that we have been mentioning?—Seven or nine. Your lordship has mentioned nine. Seven or nine, for you would have to appoint a quorum—that would be desirable.

4341. Where it is seven the quorum is generally three?—It ought to be four. With nine it would be five.

4342. Five is a very large quorum?—It is that that would be for your experience to decide.

4343. We would give you power to appoint a couple to visit the place. Do you know anything of the condition of the estates—how they are held, whether there is any chance of receiving those rents; are they perpetual, or whether it was all let away?—Let away in the old times, before the Clare-street Board got hold of it all. The leases were tried to be broken in 1837, but failed. I think it was in 1837.

4344. Rev. Dr. MOTTOR.—Where is the property situated?—Near Kinsale. Of course I have never been there. The Clare-street Board collect the funds, and they would give the information.

4345. Is that the trustees have no interest in this property at present, except receiving this charge upon it?—Quite so.

4346. Lord Justice FRYNGER.—You have all through had six free boys here?—Yes.

4347. How were they selected?—The trustees took upon themselves the liberty or authority of nominating one each. They appoint the master on that condition, that they could exercise that authority; but there is nothing in the deeds about that; it is merely custom.

4348. Do you think it would be better to keep that power of nominating free boys, or would you let the boys compete for admission, as they do in some of the Erasmus Smith Schools?—I think it would be much better to let them compete. John Scott, who was the agent when I came here first—there is a paper of his in that minute book—there is a paper of his on that very subject, proposing that very thing. It is a detached paper.

4349. Lord Justice FRYNGER. (Reads paper). The idea of competition does not appear to have come into his mind?

Rev. Dr. MOTTOR.—No, I thought it did. It is qualification.

4350. What qualification do you think that day boys ought to have?—They ought to be able to read and write and to do arithmetic very well.

4351. That is a perfectly literary qualification, but surely they ought to have some connection with the locality?—Oh, yes.

4352. As it is a local endowment?—Within a range of four or five miles if they could walk in or get in in some way.

4353. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it known in the school among the boys themselves who the free boys are?

Mr. BIRD.—Oh, not at all, unless they may guess.

4354. Rev. Dr. MOTTOR.—Supposing a boy who gained a free place by competition entered as a boarder, would you make any allowance to him?—He would get an allowance.

4355. He would get an allowance by a remission of fees?—Yes, that case actually occurred with me. There was a boy nominated, and somehow he got people to pay for his board, and I allowed him fully on the fees; but he was supposed when he became a boarder, that he ceased to be on the foundation.

4356. But he didn't?—No, he didn't.

4357. Would it not be desirable to admit free boys from a larger area than you mention; say from the whole of the county Cork?—Yes, but the difficulty is how they are to attend the school, unless they get lodgings in the town.

Oct 21, 1887.
Rev. Thomas
Moore, M.A.

Oct. 21, 1887.

Rev. Thomas
Moore, LL.D.

4858. They might enter as boarders!—But there are very few that would.

4859. You would exclude the city of Cork if you limited the area to a five mile radius!—Certainly. That has never occurred to me—that they would compete from the whole country, because they are naturally, as they are supposed to be, day boys.

4860. But they are not necessarily so, as you have just told me!—There is one instance to the contrary. They are supposed to be day boys as a rule, but there was one instance to the contrary.

4861. Dr. TRAILL.—How far did that boy reside away!—He came as a boarder.

4862. Did his parents move away from the place!—No, they did not.

4863. He wanted to get away from home!—Circumstances altered to enable him to pay, and I was asked if I would allow it, and I said "yes, certainly," but as a matter of fact I put on a free boy myself in his place.

4864. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Practically a free place might be regarded as an exhibition equivalent to the amount of the fees!—Yes.

4865. And then they might be gained either by those who come as boarders, or by those who come as day boys!—That would be for the Commission. I think it would be a very good thing.

4866. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you not apply the test of poverty or want of means!—Well, of course, there would be that consideration about it. When we have, for instance, a dispensary doctor here with a very large family, if there are no others wanting the free place, and if he has children that do, he might send one, and then on a subsequent occasion if there is nobody wanting a free place we could then take another on.

4867. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Do you think that if you had a board of trustees they might be allowed to nominate boys to compete for those places—that is to say, to require some qualification besides want of means!—The head master for the time being would see that that was done.

4868. You are aware that the Keshmoo Smith Board have introduced the system into their High School in Dublin with great success!—I was not aware of that.

4869. Have you had boys coming from Youghal!—Oh, yes, I had.

4870. Lord Justice NASSER.—When you were appointed here, it was made one of the conditions of the appointment that you were to take six boys!—Yes.

4871. Was that under any minute!—I fancy there is a minute. No, I think it was in a letter there that Mr. Quarry wrote to me as secretary. I don't know that it is in a minute.

4872. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What was Dr. Quarry's connection with the Charity!—He was rector of Middleton—rector and trustee.

4873. Were you supposed to get any remuneration for those six boys!—None whatever. It was included in the endowment.

4874. In what respect were you supposed to be paid for them!—The foundation was very small, and the view I took was that it was placed here to be of use to the neighbourhood; and, therefore, as some set off for the endowment, it was desirable that a number of boys should be educated there.

4875. If the endowment was left for the establishment of a free school, do you think such a school would have been of advantage here!—Yes, but a free school without means, we are perfectly sure, would have taken from the good that was intended, and probably the effort would have ended in failure—must have ended in failure.

4876. Professor DEVEREAUX.—I believe there has been some controversy as to the meaning of the term "free school"!—Yes.

4877. Dr. TRAILL.—I understood that those six boys were not named in the deed as a compulsory condition in the endowment, but that it was left to the discretion of the committee!—Yes.

4878. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN (reads extract from Countess of Orkney's deed).—That is the original deed of the school!

Mr. BIRD.—There is a lane passing the school still called Free School-lane. With reference to the free school, would you allow me to make an observation. If there was an arrangement about deducting from the fees in case of free day boys as boarders, that would be hardly fair to me, because my fees are much lower. £40 is what I charge for boarders, whereas they were 50 guineas previously, and if you deduct 10 guineas from that which is the proper fee for day education it would only leave £30, which would hardly pay for a boy's support and tuition.

4879. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Should you be wome off by the loss of the £10 each in the case of six boarders, than by the loss of £10 each in the case of six day boys!—Perhaps not, but not one of those boys would come to the school if I didn't let them in free, whereas the boarders would come, of course.

Rev. Dr. MOORE.—What it really wants is an increased amount to the master to carry it on efficiently. Whether the Clare-street Commissioners would give anything from Ballyroan or not I don't know.

4880. At about the time Dr. Turgin was there it was a flourishing school!—It was.

4881. Dr. TRAILL.—What does the total endowment come to besides the buildings, in the way of money!

Mr. BIRD.—About £250 a year.

4882. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—I see that Mr. Mahaffy recommended that the endowment of the school at Clonoe should be given to this school. Should you think that a satisfactory arrangement!

Rev. Dr. MOORE.—Well it would be very satisfactory for Middleton to see that arrangement carried out.

4883. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—But Clonoe might have something to say to it!—Yes.

4884. Dr. TRAILL.—That is Bishop Crowe's endowment!—Yes.

4885. You would not like to get your neighbor's goods!—No; quite so.

4886. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is there anything else you would suggest that you think would be of use in helping us to draw up a scheme!—No. The difficulty I always felt—or at least every master would feel is—well the difficulty he has always had to contend against was, that this £30 and £30 a year was that boys were removed too soon, and sent to Enniskillen and other places to get the exhibition. Louis Claude Parsar was educated here, and he went in that way. Another boy called Nason was removed, but his father regretted it very much, because my son beat him completely afterwards.

4887. Where was he removed to!—To Forres.

At the Schoolhouse, Clonra.

*BISHOP CROWE'S ENDOWED SCHOOL.

John Evans Morehead sworn.

Oct. 21, 1867.

4885. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—When were you appointed to be head master of this school?—On the 5th of April, 1873.

4886. What number of boys was in the school when you came in here first?—There were 16 on the roll, of whom 7 were boarders on the charity of the school—that is, 7 boarders paid for by the trustees in aid, one private boarder, and 10 day scholars.

4887. What are your numbers now?—My numbers now are 24 on the roll.

4888. How are they divided?—14 boarders, consisting of 4 on the charity of the school, and 10 private boarders of my own, and 10 day boys.

4889. What religious denomination do the boys belong to?—They are all of the Protestant religion.

4890. Are they all members of the Church of Ireland, or have you other denominations?—They are all members of the Church.

4891. Are the free boys boarded, lodged, and taught free?—They are boarded, lodged, and taught without expense to the parents.

4892. What arrangement is there between the charity and you as regards paying for these boys?—They pay me £30 per annum for each boy.

4893. How are they supplied with clothes?—I procure the clothing, and send the bill to the trustees, and they pay it.

4894. What other fees do the boarders pay?—The boarders pay me 25 guineas per annum, 25s. a year.

4895. Does that include everything?—Yes, that includes everything.

4896. What course of education do you give them?—My course of education is chiefly English; of late years, altogether English—a commercial education—in accordance with the applications made to me. I receive few applications requiring boys to learn Latin.

4897. Are you qualified to teach Latin?—Yes. Dr. Moore, who was the Head Master of Middleton School, has more than once examined classes of mine in Caesar and Virgil.

4898. Have you sent up boys to the Intermediate Examinations?—None at any time.

4899. Why have you not sent boys up?—Well, the boys I have had, both on the charity of the school and the boys that come to me, I don't think I could in any time almost prepare them from the low standard at which they were when they came to my school. Besides, in preparing a few smart boys for the Intermediate Examinations, I should neglect the rest, as I have no assistants.

4900. From what class of society do they come to you—are they poor boys?—Not very. The whole class may be considered of the middle class.

4901. What is the difficulty of preparing them for the Intermediate Examinations?—When I took the school up in 1873, the school was under the programme of and subject to the inspection of the Church Education Society. At that time I was forbidden to teach the Latin Grammar in the school, and the school, has been mainly an English commercial school since.

4902. Where were you educated yourself?—I was a teacher under the Church Education Society myself.

4903. Of a primary school?—Yes, having a few class certificates.

4904. Dr. TRAILL.—Trained at the Old Kildare Place Training College?—No, in London.

4905. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Has there been much fluctuation in the numbers of the pupils during the time that you have been here?—I could give you the averages for many years past. The average in 1850, 12 was the average for the whole year. In 1851, 12; in 1852, 13; for the year 1853, 16½; 1854, 16; 1855, 23; 1856, 23½; and 1857, 26½.

4906. Then there has been more than a doubling of the school for the last four years?—Yes.

4907. How did that increase arise?—Chiefly from Dr. Moore giving me a free hand in the working of the school. I may tell you I was never allowed, in fact, to be forbidden to teach the Latin grammar at all when I came to the school, and also I was pinned down to the programme of the Church Education Society; after some years I saw that there was a good chance of working it then as a purely English school; by working it in that way and advertising for boarders, and I have given such satisfaction that my circle has increased.

4908. Where do the boarders come from?—From Dublin, and I have had some from the Queen's County, and from Valencia, from portions of the provinces of Munster and Leinster generally.

4909. What part is taken by the trustees in the management of the school and in its supervision?—This book will show you that Dr. Moore has visited constantly, and the book contains reports from the time of taking up the school to the present.

4910. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—Do you state in your advertisement the character of the education given?—In my prospectus I do.

4911. Perhaps you could give us a copy of your prospectus?—Yes, to be sure.

4912. Lord Justice FRYGIESSON.—Has the Diocesan Inspector any fixed time for inspecting the school?—The Bishop and the trustees arranged in the year 1879 that the secular instruction was to be tested by a very rigid inspection in the month of December. The Inspector received special instructions from the Bishop, and took as his minimum the programme for the National Board and for the Church Education Society. I myself looked into the English Standard Code, and worked the school with special view to the status of the boys at entrance. I afterwards examined at periods of three or six months to test improvements.

4913. It was stated by the secretary to the Commissioners of Education in Clare-street in 1880, that the school was under their management. Have they anything at all to do with it?—Yes; I have had reports always—at least papers from them always.

4914. And did you fill them up?—Yes.

4915. And send them back to them?—Yes.

4916. Do they take any other part in the management of the school at all?—No.

4917. As far as you know they have had nothing to do with it since?—Yes.

4918. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—What is the nature of the papers they sent you down?—They sent me down queries as to the books I used in the school, the nature of the instruction given, and the number of hours I spend in the school—that is to say, the time I teach in the school, and the state of the premises.

4919. Dr. TRAILL.—Do they send an architect to inspect the premises?—No one has ever been here. The front of the house is a striking proof of the necessity for his intervention.

4920. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—These papers are printed forms?—Yes, printed forms.

Oct. 21, 1887.

John Temple
Morehead.

4924. Professor DECONERTY.—Do you give any apprenticeship fee with your boys when they leave school?—No; I have nothing to do with anything of the kind.

4925. You are aware that the endowment was intended originally to provide apprenticeship fees along with education for poor boys of this diocese?—I have heard so, but it has not come within my province—at least I have not received grants that could be applied in that way. I have been paid only my salary as master.

4926. Has the apprenticeship fund been discontinued?—I think the trustees will answer that question better than I can. I have not known of any apprenticeship fees being given as far as I can tell.

4927. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Have you ever deciphered the inscription over the door—does it state the year when the school was built?

Rev. Dr. MOORE.—Well, I wrote it out once for the late Dr. Curfield. In 1808 I think the house was built.

4928. Lord Justice NANK.—You state that all the boys in the school are Protestants?—Yes.

4929. And is there any rule of the establishment which requires them to be of the Protestant religion?—All the pupils on the charity of the school are boarders, and I don't know that there is any rule for day scholars; I have not kept myself bound by any rules with regard to day scholars. I have not asked the trustees. I have taken a French boy, who was a Roman Catholic.

4930. As a day boy?—As a day scholar—certainly. The place is altogether a Protestant place—they are all Episcopal boys on the charity of the school.

4931. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose when the Bishop left his money to two clergymen of the diocese he intended them to be fit judges as to who was to get the benefit of it?—Yes.

4932. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Do you take any part in keeping the accounts of the trustees?—No; I merely send my bill every quarter to the trustees for the expenses of the place, and Mr. Green, the agent, sends me a cheque for my salary. I should mention about the Intermediate Education—when I was appointed the trustees told me that the school was a purely elementary one—to give an elementary education to fit a class of boys who would go to trades or business. The parents did not seem to take to putting them to trades. As a matter of fact parents think they are degrading their sons if they put them to trades.

I may mention two very interesting cases that have come under my own observation. One was that of a boy who was on the foundation of the school, the son of a house painter at Rathcorran. After being here for four years with me—he was very young, and I asked his father what he would do with the boy because, had he spoken about a trade—I think it was about the time I heard most about the apprenticeship fees, and I would have put the case before the trustees. He said he would not put him to a trade, but that he would put him to a shop. I said "What shop," and he said he would get him into a draper's place in Cork. I disliked the idea of the boy going in as a draper's assistant, and I asked him to leave him for six months longer. At about that time I heard of another school in Kilkenny that took up boys at the age of sixteen. I asked Dr. Moore's permission to leave him six months longer in the school, and I wrote to a Dr. Hackett, in Dublin, for a programme as to what the boys would be examined in.

4933. That is the Incorporated Society's school?—Yes. I sent up this boy to Cork, in July, 1883, and there was a disputation from Trinity College who conducted the examination, and at it he got first among fifteen, and after being with me for four years, he was taken there for three years more, and died and fed in Kilkenny.

4934. Is that the Poole's Institution?—Yes. Another poor man, who is caretaker of the Courthouse in Cork, then got Canon Nicholson to appoint his son, when he heard of this, and this boy, whose father wished in the usual way to be sent to business, in twelve months I prepared him, and he got first place. Those are two poor men's sons who are now getting educated in Kilkenny.

4935. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—Do you find, generally, that the children of artisans do not desire to be artisans themselves, but prefer to be educated for clerkships, and other positions of that kind?—I don't think I have now any artisan's child. I have not had many, and so far as their wishes are concerned I cannot speak as to what they would wish to be. I believe the most generally expressed desire I have heard was to go to sea.

4936. Where do the children of the Protestant artisans usually go to. Is there another school to which they go?—All the children of the place come here, all the boys of the place come here. There are no Protestant artisans in the town of Clonoy.

4937. There is no Protestant artisan in this town—no Protestant artisan with children?—No.

Michael Greene sworn.

Michael
Greene.

4938. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Are you the agent for the Crowe Charity Estate?—I have been agent for fifteen or sixteen years.

4939. What does the property consist of?—Omland and houses.

4940. Where are they?—The land is at the back of this place here, and it Mr. Litton has in his own hands, and the houses are in the town here.

4941. Have you got the rental?—I have. Those are the particulars (rental produced).

4942. Does Mr. Litton live here?—Yes.

4943. And are those lands set to himself?—Yes.

4944. The first entry in the books of Bebermore, let to Mr. R. F. Litton, 61 acres, 2 woods, and 5 perches, and so on; rent, £65 10s. 1.—That lease is out.

4945. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—It was given in evidence on the last Commission that on the expiration of that lease there would be a considerable increase of the rental. Do you expect to get an increase of the rental?—Well, I'm afraid not.

4946. Does he still pay £15 10s. 1.—Yes.

4947. Professor DECONERTY.—Has the Land Commission fixed a fair rent?—Not yet.

4948. Does the farm adjoin someone land?—It is adjoining his own land—his own demesne.

4949. But he does not work it as an agricultural holding?—Yes, he does—a few acres—the chief part in grass.

4950. Has he a residence on it?—No, but he has labourers' cottages on it, I think, but that is all. He has a new house quite close.

4951. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Does it adjoin the land on which he has this house?—Yes.

4952. That is the large farm which we saw to-day?—That farm as you came along; it is just at the back of this house.

4953. The next on the list is a rent of £10 a year. Is that house property?—Yes.

4954. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it worth more than £10; is it a good house?—It is a rather old house. The lease will be out in a couple of years, and they don't appear to have added—

4953. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—It won't be out until 1850 if this list is right!—Yes, quite so.

4954. The next one is—That is at the end of the town.

4955. Are the buildings on that value for the rent?—Yes, they are.

4956. The next one is £5, held by the representatives of Connor!—That is still in being.

4957. That is nearly out!—Yes.

4958. What will that be worth when it falls in?—Indeed I think it would be very difficult to tell. I am afraid this town is falling away very much.

4959. You don't expect to get more than the present rent!—I don't expect if we expend a few hundreds upon it, it would be worth that in future.

4960. The next is £3, held by the representatives of Upton!—They are houses.

4961. They are held for sixty-four years from 1839, so that this will be out next year!—Yes. He wants to get a renewal of that lease at the same rent.

4962. Do you think it will be possible to get more?—We don't know how the state of the country may be then.

4963. You don't like to prophesy much of an increase!—Indeed I don't.

4964. Then £9—representatives of Murphy—that will be out in 1850!—Those are large stores; they are worth the money. They will be worth more at the end of the term.

4965. How much ought you to get!—We ought to get £5 or £6 at least of a rise.

4966. Then we have representatives of Keen—50 years' lease, dwelling-house, yard, and offices, are those all in the town?—Oh, quite close to this place.

4967. Here is a large one, £15, 25th of July, 1871, Timothy Lane, house, garden, and corn store in Clonoe for 60 years!—There will be an increase in that.

4968. That will not be out until 1931, so that we had better not prophesy about that!—It is so far off that we had better not.

4969. Dr. TRAILL.—What about the lease made to James Morrison who occupies it now!—That is useless, it is only a few old ruins.

4970. Why were the houses left to go into ruins!—They were always in ruins as long as I know them.

4971. Who is in possession of them now!—The party that held them is dead—James Morrison.

4972. Spillane's head, Clonoe—how much did you get for that!—Nothing.

4973. Why didn't you get the £1 10s. 1—Because there is no one to represent them. They are not sections to come forward.

4974. Is there nobody in occupation of those premises now!—There is not; they are in ruins.

4975. Is there a man named Hink in occupation!—Yes, Hink has a rood of ground in his place belonging to them.

4976. How much does he pay for that!—He does not pay anything, because there was a new lease.

4977. Do you think that is a good thing to allow property to get into the hands of a man who does not pay!—The reason is, I put it before the trustees very often, but it would not be worth going to law about.

4978. How long has Hink held this land!—Two or three years.

4979. The cost of going to law would not be much. You ought to get a civil bill and recover the rent or clear the premises!—I think it would be no use to the gentlemen.

4980. Is it a valuable building site!—It is not.

4981. It might be something if this became a great place!—If this was a city it would.

4982. Is it worth 30s. 1—I don't think it is.

4983. Sure there is the lease of 1874!—I don't think it is worth anything—that is my idea.

4984. It must have been worth something ten years ago!—I will recover it if you wish.

4985. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—The next one we find is this £35 from weekly tenants—how many houses have you for that!—Nine.

4986. Who collects those rents!—I do.

4987. Do you live in Clonoe!—No. I live in Middleton. I have a bailiff here collecting for me. Some of the tenants are defaulters.

4988. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you allow those people to remain in possession!—The party who is a summons-server—a process-server—

4989. Of course he won't summons himself!—But I have summonsed him for the next Middleton Session.

4990. Who served the summons on him!—The Middleton summons-server.

4991. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Your total rental is £137 17s. 6d., and then you have got first to pay an annual rentcharge of £5 15s. 6d.—is that the rentcharge!—Yes.

4992. And then the annuity payable by the trustees to the widows is £7 7s. 6d., is that £23 Irish under the will!—Yes.

4994. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Taking one year with another, what is the average income you get from the rents for the support of the school!—£170 or £180.

4995. Dr. TRAILL.—How many of those weekly tenants' houses have you that are not occupied at present!—They are all occupied.

4996. Are any of them in possession without paying rent!—No.

4997. Is there a man named Curtin in possession of one of them!—Not that I am aware of.

4998. David Curtin!—He must lately have got possession, or my man has not given me his name.

4999. You have not got him on your register!—No.

5000. Have you a man named Swamy on your register!—No.

5001. Is there a man named Swamy in possession of one of those houses!—Not that I am aware of, except the man let it the other day to him.

5002. Who lets those houses!—A man named Burke, the sexton of the church.

5003. Do you know a man named Hennigan in a house!—Hennigan—no.

5004. Does this man, Burke, set houses to different individuals without consulting you!—Oh, no, he consults me.

5005. Does he give you their names!—He does.

5006. Is he available here!—He is laid up with rheumatism.

5007. Does he give you a return whenever there is a charge of tenancy!—He does [look pronounced].

5008. Is this his pass book!—No, that is my book.

5009. Have you got a written return from the man who collects the rents!—I collect them myself, and when he does, he gives me a list of the money.

5010. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—How often does he account!—Sometimes every three weeks.

5011. Dr. TRAILL.—Where are the lists of the tenants of your houses!—They are in that book.

5012. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—There is one Thomas O'Keefe. The last rent he paid was on the 16th of July!—Show me that book, please [look handed to witness]. Yes, that was the last. I didn't get all his rent. He has been a defaulter—O'Keefe.

5013. Professor DOUGHERTY.—If this man is laid up with rheumatism how can he collect your rents!—It is not often he is that way.

5014. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—It is a very dangerous thing to have defaulters who are weekly tenants to a man like that, this is a case in point.

Oct. 24, 1887.
Michael
Greene.

On the next page there is Thomas Shea's—That is the man we are going to summon.

5017. He didn't pay you any rent at all this year?—No.

5018. Dr. TRAILL.—And he is nominally a weekly tenant?—Yes.

5019. At how much?—Is. 8d. a week.

5020. The next case is that of William Donovan. His last rent was paid on the 26th of July?—Yes, he has paid money since but it has not been put down.

5021. The next tenant is Wm. Donovan. He paid one week on the 1st of January, he next paid on the 22nd of January, and then on the 29th of January, and then on the 12th of February, and then he stopped?—I have got money from him since, but it is not entered in that.

5022. Surely you ought to enter the money?—But this is only a book which I bring in my pocket now and then.

5023. Patrick Toomey—the 20th of August is his last rent?—Yes.

5024. Where is the book in which you have the final entry—is it in your nursery?—I have it at home.

5025. Why didn't you bring it?—Because I didn't think it would be required.

5026. How many of these weekly tenants are in arrears?—There are very many of them in arrears.

5027. Professor DOUGHERTY.—How many weekly tenants have you altogether?—Nine.

5028. When did your agent have account to you last?—I think about one month ago.

5029. Dr. TRAILL.—How many did he return in arrears then—were there any in that list in the neighbourhood of the Church—that had paid up fully then?—Yes.

5030. The whole of them?—Almost all—all except one or two.

5031. Except the occupants of those couple of nuclei of ground?—Yes.

5032. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—How much do you pay the sub-agent for letting them?—I pay him £1 a year, and he looks after them for me.

5033. Dr. TRAILL.—And what payment do you receive?—I receive no payment except receiver's fees.

5034. What fees do you get?—One shilling in the pound. That is all I get.

5035. Thomas Fitzgerald's last payment is on the 3rd of September; Margaret Butler's last payment was on the 1st of January, and she does not appear to have paid anything since?—She did.

5036. She is not enrolled with it?—Well I am accountable for it.

5037. Has she paid up to the present?—No. Her husband is a sailor, and he does not come here for more than two or three months, and she has not the money until he comes.

5038. David Whelan, his last payment was the 3rd of September? He is a good tenant and he pays punctually.

5039. Mary Fitzgerald?—She pays whenever she gets it from her husband.

5040. How much does she owe?—Two month's rent, I suppose.

5041. Thomas O'Keefe?—That tenant has gone and another has come in his place, and that money is paid up.

5042. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What is the total amount of the rents you collect?—This is the last year's rental (grossed).

5043. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Have you a fixed time for settling the account with the trustees?—Not particularly.

5044. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Did you receive £170 16s. 8d.?—Decidedly. If it is down there I received it.

5045. And the amount with arrears that you should have received was £187?—The arrears—they are all down.

5046. Dr. TRAILL.—How long has Shea been flourishing there without paying anything?—There are 45 of arrears due by him.

5047. Margaret Sullivan only paid thirty-one weeks of the year?—That is last year, and she paid up a good deal this year.

5048. I see many other names—among them £145 received from Mr. Nicholson—are they arrears?—That was on account of money advanced.

5049. What is the meaning of that?—We were in arrears at the time, and I advanced that money and they paid me.

5050. Are you in arrears now?—No.

5051. Was this all paid up—part of the money went in rentcharge, cheque to Mr. Moorhead, quarter's salary, boarding of boys, water supply, Rev. T. Moore, inspecting Bishop Crowe's school—do you pay a fee to the inspector?—That requires explanation.

5052. Dr. TRAILL.—Who audits these accounts?—The trustees.

5053. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—As a matter of book-keeping I don't quite understand this account ending the 31st of March, 1885. There was a balance due to you of £25 5s. 8d., and that is carried forward, but in the rental of the 31st of March, 1885, you debit yourself with £145 cash from the Rev. Mr. Nicholson and the Rev. T. Moore, on account of money advanced, and yet you closed the year with a balance in favour of the estate of £31 5s. 6d. Why does that £145, if it was due to you, not appear before?—At the time I may tell you there were law costs, but I could not answer that until I looked over my papers, but that is correct, those moneys I received, and I paid them out.

5054. Dr. TRAILL.—Perhaps, Dr. Moore, you can explain that; you are unwell here as auditing these accounts. Here is this item of cash received from the Rev. Mr. Nicholson, and the Rev. Mr. Moore, £145 in addition to the rental of £170 for the year.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—There is a sum of money in bank upon which we had to draw, and the expenses of six years of the property and the law costs were very heavy. The repairs to the property cost £247, the repairs to the school £40, and those payments coming in, Mr. Greene made them—

5055. Dr. TRAILL.—But they don't appear in the account?—Oh, yes; they are all there; they are all in the last five or six years, every one of them.

5056. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—If this year's account was taken by itself, Mr. Greene's charge would be in a bad way.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—We paid £145 over our receipts. We are drawing on our capital. We have money in bank, and the expenditure has been greater than the receipts.

5057. How much capital have you in bank?—£450.

5058. And you are drawing on it?—It is merely what is saved from a few years.

5059. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The net result of this entry is that you are £115 to the bad, at the year ending the 31st of March, 1885?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Yes. How does it begin that year?

5060. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—There is £25 due to Mr. Greene—that would make it that you are £138 to the bad?

Mr. Greene.—I generally advanced the money required, and if the rentals did not make it up, I got money from the trustees.

5061. Have you anything to do with the management of the money—of the funds?—No, I have nothing to do with that.

Rev. Dr. Moore sworn and examined.

Oct. 21, 1887.

Rev. Dr.
Moore.

5062. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What money in the funds have you?—When I became a trustee there was some money in the funds which we could not get at, and it cost us a great deal of money to get these funds.

5063. How did it cost you much money?—Because when I came in, and the person who was before me, our names were not known to the bank at all, and the money was in London. The previous trustees long ago had got the money there, and our names were not known, and we had no power of attorney or anything in the way of authority, and we had to go to the Court of Chancery to be constituted at a cost of £20.

5064. How much was the money in the funds?—£1,200 4s. 6d. stock.

5065. What has become of that?—How much did it cost you to recover that?—£20.

5066. What has become of that?—We had to pay the Church Temporalities Commissioners £50 18s. 9d.

5067. That was to buy out the rent?—Yes. The low rents on the property were £29 6s. 6d. Repairs of property includes requiring a large tenant here at the corner, which was left in a miserable condition, and the repairs of that property, which brings in now these weekly rents, cost £247 6s. 1d.

5068. What repairs were done?—All the particulars are given—boarding the floors, repainting the front, staircases, &c. The roofs were all in disorder. We had to repair them thoroughly, and they were very expensive; then the repairs to the school, repairs to the various parts of the building here, £29 18s. 4d. Well, then we had a few more on the foundation.

5069. What did all that expenditure tot to?—£297 6s. 6d.

5070. Did you sell out the stock to pay that?—Yes.

5071. What has become of the rest of the stock?—The rest of the stock is now in the National Bank, ready to be invested.

5072. Did you sell out the whole of the stock?—The whole of the stock had to be transferred to our names, and we got a certain sum of money for it. It was lodged in bank in 1881.

5073. And how it been lying in bank on deposit ready only producing the interest which the bank gives—one per cent, I suppose?—Yes.

5074. Rev. Dr. Moore.—Why didn't you leave it in the Funds?—It was to be transferred to us as money.

5075. It ought to have been transferred to you in the Funds by order of the Court of Chancery?—It should have been done, but it was not.

5076. What amount of balance in bank have you now?—£495 9s. 4d.

5077. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But you know the expenditure you have given us will only amount to £400?—Yes, but we had eight boys on the foundation, and this number of boys, and many repairs, improvements, and sanitary arrangements spent some more of the capital. The increased number of boys for a few years made the school a success. This money had been got by having no boys in the school at all. For instance, there was not a single boy in the school for four or five years, and it was accumulated in that way. In 1854, 1855, 1856, and 1857 there was not a single boy in the school, and this was money that was merely got by having no boys in the place. Then when we had boys to educate, we used to educate them out of the capital of this accumulated fund.

5078. What have been the drafts on that capital during the last four or five years that have brought it down?—You see the master's bill for eight boys.

5079. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—At that rate this accumulation would only last a very short time longer?—But then we are drawing in our horns, do you see; and we have only four boys now on the foundation, but we do not intend to reduce it any more if possible.

5080. Dr. TRAILL.—The spending of that sum, £535, being spent is a serious drain?—Yes.

5081. In how many years has it taken place?—That is in six years; but, besides, there are a great many other expenses. The lack was in a frightful condition. We had an immensity of trouble with that; but the whole place, when I came in, was in a most miserable condition and nothing to spend. And we should have shut up the place for several years. If we intended to keep all that money intact, we must have suspended operations entirely.

5082. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In 1880 the place was stated to be in good order, and owing its position to your having the care of it altogether?—That is in the educational department.

5083. The whole matter is in the hands of two trustees, the proctor, and the treasurer?—Yes.

5084. Is the post of proctor attached to any particular parish?—No, it is not. Bishop Fitzgerald knuckled that on the head long ago. When George Cotter had Templeman as his was also treasurer. By the Church Act the bishop may make any clergyman of the diocese of Cloyne he likes a Cathedral dignitary.

5085. Why was the clergyman of Cloyne not appointed proctor?—

Rev. Canon Nicholas.—Because the bishop can do as he likes in the matter. For instance, I have the parish of Doneraile, and I am the treasurer. I don't think the bishops are tied in any way in making these appointments. The treasurers have belonged to Mallow and other parishes.

5086. Lord Justice Fitzgerald (to Rev. Dr. Moore).—Is the dignity of treasurer still kept up?—Yes.

5087. Is it attached to any parish?—Not at all. I was appointed proctor when I was simply a curate, properly speaking. I was constituted an incumbent by the Church Act.

5088. What is the present position of the cathedral of Cloyne; is it an ordinary parish church?—It is a cathedral still; but it is also a parochial church.

5089. Surely the clergyman attached to the place ought to be a governor of this church, rather than the holder of a dignity, who may be anywhere else?—The bishop takes a great interest in the charity, and appointed me because I was near. The difficulty about it was that the bishop had no power. The will states distinctly the "proctor and treasurer." You can perhaps alter that.

5090. That is just what we want to see, how it could be altered. It appears also that there is a quantity of very troublesome property to be managed. Ought you not to have some layman to help you in this?—Well, Mr. Green was appointed before my time. He used to come to Cloyne once a week or a fortnight regularly; but he has not for the last year or two been able to look after these things personally.

5091. Dr. TRAILL.—But Mr. Green is a paid agent. We are talking about having a layman on the board of management?—That would be very desirable, and I think, too, where we are applied to for a loan—I don't know whether we have leasing powers or not. This Commission will probably settle anything of that kind. A man named Upton wanted a renewal, but when he went to Mr. Gregg, the Solicitor, of Cork, he would not draw one for him, so he said there would be a Commission coming. We have never exercised those powers, though exercised by all our predecessors. Mr. Greene wants to see a man, but I don't know whether we have any power to see.

5092. I think there can be very little doubt that the proctor and the treasurer of Cloyne have the power to see?—With regard to the leasing I don't care to have the responsibility. I would rather have a layman or laymen. We are not fitted for that, and I don't know that the lauses in the past have been very wise, some of them.

Oct. 21, 1887.

Moore.

5003. Where would you think it advisable to look for a layman who would take part in the management of this property?—I would look for him in Cloyne—on the spot.

5004. The Dean is present?—He is the rector of the parish.

5005. Professor DOUGHERTY.—A portion of this endowment was originally intended to provide apprenticeship fees?—Yes.

5006. Have any apprenticeship fees been given in your time?—No.

5007. When was the giving of apprenticeship fees discontinued?—1869 is the date of the last entry I see for apprenticeship fees.

5008. Can you tell me why they were discontinued?—No, I cannot tell you that; it has been mentioned already, and my own idea is that it is the change in the country. I know my mind was greatly exercised by this—was greatly exercised on the subject of carrying out the charity about these very apprenticeship fees, but we never had an application and they lapsed.

5009. What was the amount of the fee formerly paid?—£4 was paid in any case in the town—£5 to a coach builder in Fermoy, but the whole of the money payments are altered now.

5100. You could not get boys apprenticed now for £4 or £5?—No, you could not, and they don't look for it. I was greatly concerned for a considerable time, but I was very much relieved by your remarks on Monday in Cork—that the Commissioners did not very much approve of giving these £4 fees—of giving them to people who employed these boys. I have been very anxious on the subject personally, and I have searched through the whole of the book, and in that old book you see apprentice fees regularly mentioned every one or two years, but the last entry of all is in 1869, and there has been none since then, simply because they were not wanted.

5101. Do you think that any part of the endowment could now be made available for industrial education?—Well, it is a very great difficulty to know the funds are small—you see there has grown up around the endowment, the education of the Protestant boys of Cloyne Diocese for generations, and then long ago the Cathedral Chapter had choir boys, and they sent them to it and had them boarded and educated here and paid for; and boarders not on the foundation are even now the principal party of the school which Mr. Morehead has been very energetic and successful.

5102. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there any endowment connected with the choir of the Cathedral?—Not now.

5103. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you know whether your master teaches drawing?—He does not, except geometric drawing.

5104. Could you therefore usefully allot some part of your endowment for the teaching of drawing in this school?—Yes, that can be managed. It is rather small.

5105. In your opinion would the association of some laymen with you in the management of the property be an improvement?—Well, it might if the clergyman lived at a distance—it so happens you may see in that book my name very frequently, but it does not indicate one-sixth part of the time I have been at the school. My duties at the Cathedral often bring me here, and it is very seldom I put down my name pro forma.

5106. It might not always happen that the clerical trustee living at a distance would possess all your experience in education?—No, it might not happen that he would take as much interest in the place. George Cotter, so far as he was concerned, attended very frequently when he lived in Middleton. He was practically sole trustee.

5107. As far as the two trustees named—the preacher and treasurer—were the places to which their offices were attached now Cloyne?—Yes, Lignold was connected with the prebendary for a very considerable time.

5108. How far was that from Cloyne?—Six miles.

5109. And where did the treasurer live?—The treasurer lived in Middleton.

5110. That is also within reach?—Yes.

5111. Therefore both clergymen were within easy reach of the town?—Yes.

5112. And now they might be at opposite ends of the diocese?—Yes, but the Bishop would take care to have one of the trustees living near Cloyne.

5113. Lord Justice FRYGIER.—The preacher would be bound to attend at the Cathedral, unless he had a sonnet or some one else to do his business for him?—Quite so.

5114. Dr. TRAILL.—What year did you begin to act as trustee?—The first year was March, 1873.

Rev. Alexander Jackson Nicholson sworn.

Rev.
Alexander
Jackson
Nicholson.

5115. Lord Justice FRYGIER.—You are incumbent of Donemile?—I am, and also treasurer of Cloyne.

5116. How long have you been treasurer of Cloyne?—I was instituted on the 28th of July, 1883.

5117. To whom did you succeed?—Treasurer Chester, incumbent of Middleton.

5118. You were the first Incumbent of Donemile who was treasurer of Cloyne?—Yes.

5119. What distance is Donemile from Cloyne?—Forty-one miles.

5120. What part have you taken in the management of the Crowe Charity?—Well, I have visited the school from time to time; the accounts are all submitted to me, and I make what suggestions I think advisable, and share in the general management. I sign cheques.

5121. In the appointing of free boys I suppose you take a part?—Alternately with the preacher.

5122. Dr. TRAILL.—You nominate two about?—Yes.

5123. Where are the boys nominated from?—I don't remember at the present moment from what parishes, but all from the diocese of Cloyne. One boy was appointed from Newmarket, but he has just been elected into the Roscrea School.

5124. Lord Justice FRYGIER.—We would like to see the register?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—There was no book, but I kept a book, which I can give you since 1873, of boys on the foundation of the school.

5125. As regard the management of the property what means have the two trustees of looking after it beyond the appointment of an agent?—The agent of course cannot act without them, and it is our business to see that the money is paid, and to hold the agent responsible if he does not pay it.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—For example, in the case of that Upson House Canon Nicholson and I investigated everything about it, and went over every inch of the ground, so that if any question arose we would be informed on the subject.

5126. Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I think myself having done that, I am also quite prepared if Mr. Linton asks me to discuss the question of a lease with him. The old rent was £100. He pays a rent of £45 10s., and when it was let in 1847 it was £105.

5127. Dr. TRAILL.—Within the terms of his present lease?—No.

5128. Before the present lease?—Yes.

5129. It was let to him in the bad times?—Yes; but John Linton bought the interest in the lease.

5130. Lord Justice NAVE.—At £105 rent?—At £65 10s.

5131. Dr. TRAILL.—How many acres are there?

Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—It is 61 acres, 2 roads, and 5 perches.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—With regard to Mr. Upton and the lease in that case we see in the same position. It puts the matter in quite a new light to me after what the proctor said. We heard nothing before about any difficulty. I would not have any objection to give a lease if I thought the lease was good. I don't at all agree that our position as trustees is shaky. I think we have unlimited powers to give leases.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—The thing did not regularly come before us, except merely an offer, and then on that offer the solicitor in Cork would not draw up a fresh lease.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—There is one reason why the offer would not be received, Mr. Upton owes a year and a half's rent.

5132. Dr. TRAILL.—The lease does not expire until 1881, so that you have time in the Upton case?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Quite so.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I should like very much to know from the Commissioners, on account of your Commission sitting here, what powers we have in the way of leasing?

5133. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—It appears perfectly clear to us that we must give you a power of leasing, so as to put your powers beyond doubt. A governing body consisting of the proctor and treasurer formerly connected with the neighbourhood, but not now necessarily so, seems to be different from the intentions of the testator.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I think the Government may well be left in the hands of the proctor and treasurer, because the Bishop as a wise ruler will appoint clergymen to these dignities who are suited to manage the property. The fact of living at a distance is no great objection. If the Bishop thought it desirable that clergymen living close to Clonay should be appointed he would so appoint. If you made a change and substituted the rectors of two adjoining parishes to Clonay, it might happen that those men would not be suitable for managing the property.

5134. If the Bishop was appointing a proctor and a treasurer, he would appoint those proctor and treasurer on account of their qualifications as clergymen, and the management of this charity would be only a secondary consideration?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—I don't think so. It is primary in the Bishop's mind.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I know that when the Bishop offered me the trusteeship, he wrote to me in regard to the property of this charity and as regards my duties in looking after it, which of course I have tried to fulfil. We had a commission of inquiry held here some years ago. They appointed the Bishop to hold that inquiry, and the Bishop held it, and the result of that commission was satisfactory to the school.

5135. Was it the Clonay-street Commissioners who ordered that inquiry?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—We trustees sent a report to the Bishop (as Visitor) and the Bishop sent the report up to Clonay-street.

5136. Professor DOUGHERTY.—The Clonay-street Commissioners sent the commission of inquiry?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—They said a sworn investigation should be held; and asked the Bishop to hold it.

5137. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—When was that held?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—In 1884.

5138. And were the witnesses sworn here?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—Yes; and the result was satisfactory to the school. It was in 1884.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—The Clonay-street Commissioners never did anything but send a form twice a year, in the same way that they sent to Mr. Morehead to ask the number of pupils and the number of hours he spends in the school.

5139. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—It is very different in Middleton, because we were informed there to-day that their architect visits the school, and they pay for the repair of the building?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—That is a very recent thing.

5140. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—And they have got £1,100 of money belonging to Middleton, but they don't appear to have any money belonging to Clonay?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—None whatever; they never had. It is really strange that they should have any control over this charity.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I don't understand how they have anything to do with it. They hold no money. The money rests with us. We spend it as we think best, and we never consult them; good, bad, or indifferent.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—We never consult them in any way.

5141. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—(To Canon Nicholson).—What would you suggest in the way of a governing body?—I would say that in addition to the proctor and treasurer, the rector of Clonay should be appointed. I have always thought it a very anomalous thing that the rector of the parish should have nothing to do with this charity. I would say that the rector of the parish should have something to do with it. The rector will probably be always dead, but you could not be sure about that. I think that would be an improvement decidedly. I am not at all clear whether it would be a good thing to make a layman a member of the managing body under the circumstances, because you might appoint for instance Mr. Litton a trustee, and he might have to give himself a lease—that kind of thing might crop up. But I am sure we should all be very glad to hear from the Commissioners any suggestions they might have to offer as to how we could improve the working of the school in any way. Perhaps you would allow me to say that my idea is that, if possible, the school should be brought into closer connection with the cathedral. It seems to me that the Bishop, having appointed the proctor and treasurer trustees, intended that. Certainly in past times the boys were apprenticed to the curate of the cathedral to be educated for the choir.

5142. There are now no choir boys?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—Some of the boys now on the foundation sing in the cathedral choir.

Mr. Morehead.—The boys of the choir are all persons connected with this house. The cathedral has six surprised chorists from this house.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I think if any attention could be made it should be in the way of connecting this school directly with the cathedral.

5143. Lord Justice FRYGROVER.—We had a similar case to this connected with St. Patrick's Cathedral, and where all the schools were amalgamated and placed under the control of a general body representing the cathedral, with power to give education of various sorts. Would you propose that?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—If possible, I would.

5144. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you any way of teaching the boys music in the cathedral?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I would say the organist could do that.

5145. Does the organist assist you, Mr. Morehead?

Mr. Morehead.—I may as well state that I am the teacher. I am a teacher and a credited examiner connected with the Royal College of London, and I have power to examine and grant certificates for proficiency in vocal music.

5146. Do you teach singing?

Mr. Morehead.—I teach the pianoforte, at present, and singing; and any persons that wish to have their children taught music can do so, but not in the ordinary school time. The boys are so backward that it takes me all my time to devote the school time to the ordinary studies.

Oct. 22, 1887.

Rev.
Alexander
Jackson
Nicholson.

Oct. 12, 1887.

Rev.
Alexander
Nicholson.

5147. Have you any assistant?—None whatever; I do all my business myself. And I wish to say that the Dean and I have frequently spoken on the matter. If the Commissioners could see that the school could be utilised for the cathedral, I should be very glad, myself being a teacher of vocal and instrumental music too, to take it up; and to adopt any suggestions that the Commissioners may make in that way.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—It seems to me that as Bishop Crowe appointed the treasurer and proctor who are cathedral officers to manage the school, he intended that there should be some connection between it and the cathedral.

5148. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You have been going very much into capital for the last three or four years—do you think that the school, as at present established, is paying its way?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I do not. I think that the expenditure requires very serious revision—in fact, I was not aware until the recent notice in the Times that there was to this £145—I didn't know that there was this money in the bank at all; and I would have entirely protested against encroaching on the capital. I think it is a decidedly unwholesome thing to encroach upon capital, and I think the school will become bankrupt if it goes on. I think there should be a great alteration made.

5149. If you reduce the £1,500 to £500, and then go on still further reducing it, it will be a serious matter!

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—We are in another difficulty here. It is quite possible that Mr. Litton may not renew his lease when it is up, and it is the best holding we have. We don't know what might happen. I could not say whether we will get over the £35 a year.

5150. I thought you said you believed the land would be worth much more than £105!

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—It does not follow that we shall get it.

5151. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—I have been told that there are no children of artisans in the school at present!

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Yes.

5152. In the early records I find a large number of the children of artisans and tradesmen mentioned as being in the school. On looking down the page before me I find that one boy was the son of a painter and glazier, another was the son of a cooper, another the son of a ship carpenter, another was the son of a seaman in the Royal Navy, and several were the sons of weavers!

Rev. Dr. Moore.—The explanation is very simple. In those days there were a great number of our folk living in Clonra. The trades have died out, and there is no working going on now cooping now.

5153. I find that a considerable proportion of the children were the children of mixed marriages, the father being generally a Protestant and the mother a Catholic!

Rev. Dr. Moore.—What is the date of that?

5154. It is an old record—down to 1851!

Rev. Dr. Moore.—It was a hobby of Cotton's to do a thing of that kind.

5155. Is that the same Mr. Cotton that was at Rohen Is?

5156. Were those children of mixed marriages always brought up here as Protestants?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Yes, and you will see that one was educated as a teacher, and went out as a Protestant teacher.

5157. One of the parents being a Catholic!

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Yes.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—The children of the institution were always connected with our Church.

5158. But I find that several were the children of mixed marriages!

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—At one particular time; but at other periods it is not so at all.

5159. Can you tell us, in point of fact, whether since 1870, there has been any considerable number of the children of mixed marriages received into the school?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Since I came here, in 1873, there have been none.

5160. I suppose if there were children of mixed marriages at the school, they would have to be brought up as Protestants!

Rev. Dr. Moore.—The whole training would be so that they would have to attend the cathedral.

Very Rev. Horace Townsend Fleming, Dean of Clonra, sworn.

Very Rev.
Horace Town-
send Fleming.

5161. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long have you been Rector of Clonra?—Since early in 1878—I forget the date.

5162. How long have you been Dean of Clonra?—About four years, I think.

5163. You were not Dean of Clonra when you were first appointed Rector of Clonra?—No.

5164. I believe you have not got, officially or otherwise, any direct connection with this charity?—None whatever.

5165. What is the number of the Protestant congregation attending the Cathedral of Clonra?—Over 100.

5166. Dr. Traill.—What is the number of Protestants in Clonra?—In the Clonra parish—that is the Union of Ballycotton and Clonra—I don't know how many there are in Ballycotton, but there are about 200 in Clonra.

5167. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do those include people of the class who are likely to take advantage of this charity?—All classes. I don't mean the poor class of people alone—I mean all classes.

5168. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—Does that include tradesmen and artisans?—It does.

5169. But we have been just told that there are no Protestant tradesmen or artisans?—There are really very few trades of any religion—I don't think there is a Protestant artisan that I know of.

5170. Dr. Traill.—Are the painters and coopers and the people of all those different trades—the names that we found before still to be found in the town?—There is no cooper. I don't think there is a painter. There is a man who lived at Ballycotton, who used to do that class of work, but I don't think there is any regular painter.

5171. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In point of fact the artisan trades and handicrafts have left Clonra?—I think so.

5172. And have left the town without distinction of religious denomination?—There are some smiths and carpenters.

5173. Rev. Dr. Molloy.—Are there any shoemakers in Clonra?—Yes.

5174. Are they all Catholics?—I think so. There is only one Protestant family of shoemakers.

5175. Any painters and glaziers?—There is not a regular glazier—really I don't know of one here.

5176. Dr. Traill.—There are handy men who do the business—who do all these things?—Yes, handy men.

5177. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In what way do you think that this fund could be best administered for the benefit of the people it was intended for?—Well, I have just drawn up a little sketch of the history of the school, that I have extracted from the old chapter minutes [document handed in and read].

5178. Who would you propose or suggest should represent the Cathedral in the government of this charity?—I should say that the rector of the parish. I should think the rector of the parish—he would be always here.

5179. And he is likely to be always Dean?—Not necessarily.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—He must be a Canon of

Oct. 22, 1887.
Very Rev.
Bishop Town-
send Fleming.

the Cathedral, so that he is connected with the Cathedral.

Dean Fleming.—You might say both Rector and Canon.

5180. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Have you a Cathedral Board, or is it a select vestry?—It is a Cathedral select vestry.

5181. How are they appointed?—They consist of Canon of the Cathedral and the Select Vestry of the parish.

5182. How many Canons are there?—There are fifteen Canons, and they are all full except two or three.

5183. How many lay members of the Vestry are there?—There are fourteen, I think, members of the Select Vestry.

5184. They are about equal to the clergy?—Yes, they are about equal.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—That sounds very good, but of course you will remember that a good number of the Canons never attend the Cathedral vestry, and if you looked upon the Cathedral clergy as being half clergy you would be very wrong. It is not like Cork, or any big place.

5185. DR. TRAILL.—I suppose out of your Select Vestry you could find a couple of laymen who would take an interest in this matter?—Certainly.

5186. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—What body would be best fitted to select two or three laymen resident in the neighbourhood who would be likely to take an interest in this charity?—The Diocesan Council.

5187. They don't know the locality?—Yes, they do.

5188. When do your Diocesan Council meet?—They meet four times a year in Cork.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—They undoubtedly know the locality.

Dean Fleming.—It would be better than having it to any other unofficial body.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I think there would be a very great objection to having the selection to any body in a small place.

5189. DR. TRAILL.—What do you think of the project of applying the Endowment to the school at Midleton?

Dean Fleming.—I think very badly of it. I don't think it is fair to take away their neighbour's goods.

5190. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—How many children in the school come from Clonyc?—You may say that ten out of the twenty-four do. There are fourteen boarders and ten day scholars.

5191. None of the boarders are from Clonyc?—Not at all. There never have been any from the town of Clonyc.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—Supposing it was my turn to nominate from the parish of Clonyc, and I considered that I had a poor boy, it would be my duty to nominate him.

5192. I think the intention originally was that the charity was for the benefit of the entire diocese of Clonyc?—Yes, but Clonyc is part of his diocese.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I venture to say that if it was found impossible to carry on satisfactorily the school here, and to do something like what I am glad to see the Dean agrees with me about—with regard to the Cathedral; if that failed then I would be in favour of what is suggested with regard to the Midleton school. But I think it would be going directly contrary to the wish—I won't say that, but I don't think it would be following him up, if the effort was not made in this place.

5193. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—And as long as it could be efficiently maintained here you think it ought?—Yes.

5194. And if it could not be efficiently maintained here it ought to go to Midleton?—Yes, I think so, but for poor boys only.

5195. Rev. Dr. Moir.—Should you think it desirable to establish one governing body for the two endowments giving power to deal with them, from time to time, as the Governing Body should think best, either to apply the two endowments to one institution or to keep them separate?

Dean Fleming.—I would keep them separate.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I don't think there would be any object in that. I think the tendency is for small things to be swallowed up by great things, and if you did that we might be swallowed up by Midleton.

5196. Rev. Dr. Moir.—(to Dean Fleming).—What provision have you for primary education in the parish?—I have a girls' and infant school, and this takes the place of the boys' school.

5197. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Is the infant school under the National Board?—Yes.

5198. What number have you on the roll?—We have thirty-seven on the roll, and an average attendance of over thirty.

5199. You are able to get a class salary?—We are, so far.

5200. But you are very near the margin?—Very near the margin.

5201. What teacher have you got?—A certificated teacher under the National Board.

5202. What class does she hold?—First of second.

5203. Have you got a good school building?—A very good school building—quite new.

5204. Rev. Dr. Moir.—Do you consider that this school is doing work of a much higher standard than an ordinary National school?—Well, I think it is capable of doing it if the teacher was allowed to teach music, which he could, and Latin, which he could, and I believe he could teach a little French.

5205. But that is work which is done in a National Board school?—Well, I don't know; he is teaching music.

5206. National Board teachers very often teach music. How many day boys are there here from Clonyc and the neighbourhood?—Ten.

5207. Then really the benefit which Clonyc gets from this very considerable endowment is that ten boys get about the same education as they would get in a National Board school?—The town of Clonyc, yes; it is a school that certainly does that, and I want to have the benefit increased.

5208. This endowment is intended for the diocese of Clonyc?—Yes.

5209. The question is whether for the benefit of the diocese of Clonyc, it could not be better applied by confining it with the Midleton endowment?—I think it could not, because the boys there must be the upper class as boarders, and not poor boys.

5210. But two endowments of £200 a year, separated by a distance of five miles, will not be so efficient for educational purposes as if they were combined in one of the two institutions?—That depends.

5211. Another consideration is that there you have in Midleton a fine school building, which is only half occupied, while here you have a tumble-down sort of building without much accommodation?—The school here is fully well known as a school connected with Clonyc and connected with the cathedral, which gave the house with the object specified in the will. I think it would be very hard to take the endowment from the place.

5212. But all that would be taken away from Clonyc would be the National School education of ten boys. That is all that Clonyc would lose according to your own evidence?—I didn't say that.

5213. Rev. Canon Nicholson.—According to my theory, and according to the theory generally avowed, under the original constitution it was intended that the school should be a benefit also to the cathedral, and in that view the benefit to Clonyc is not the benefit of the education of ten day boys up to the National Board standard; it is the benefit to the cathedral.

5214. Has the cathedral got the benefit of it in the past?—Yes. You have the account that there are at present in the cathedral six boys in the supplied choir.

Oct. 31, 1907.
 Very Rev.
 Haines Town
 and Fleming

5215. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is that the distinctive character of a cathedral—the possession of a surpliced choir?—Well, it is one of the distinctions.

5216. Would you, Mr. Dean, prefer to have the endowment expended in the town of Clonra?

Dean Fleming.—I think so.
 5217. And you agree with Canon Nicholson?—I think so.

5218. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—I think you are agreed that if it cannot be efficiently maintained here Midleton is the proper place for it—that it should be associated with Midleton, from that out?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—I agree to that thoroughly.
 Rev. Dr. Moore.—In that case there could be a junior department in Midleton.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—If it should be applied to Midleton it should be devoted to exhibitions for boys as it is in Clonra. They should not appoint boys from the diocese of Cork, they must live in Clonra and be appointed from the diocese of Clonra.

Dean Fleming.—Taking away the benefit of this school to Midleton would take away the benefit to our school boys here. They could not go to Midleton.

5219. You could supplement the endowment from the National Board Grant?

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—That would be the very thing.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Would not the difficulty then be the religious difficulty?

Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—They have got over it excellently at Bandon.

5220. Professor DOUGHERTY.—To what religious difficulty do you refer?

Rev. Dr. Moore.—I hesitated by the discussion that your Commission had with Dr. Webster, that the National Board would not assist any school that is of any exclusive denomination.

5221. Dr. TRAILL.—It must be open; all the schools under the National Board are open to all denominations.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—Quite so.

Rev. Canon Nicholson.—Is it not a fact that the National Board would not give us a grant on account of the contribution of our school. I understand that that is a fact.

5222. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—I don't see how that could be the fact provided you complied with their rules. You would have to arrange your education according to their rules. You would have to give your secular instruction separate.

Rev. Dr. Moore.—There would be no difficulty in relation to that matter.

AGHADA NATIONAL SCHOOL (ROCHE'S ENDOWMENT).

Mr. John McEvoy sworn.

Mr. John
 McEvoy.

5223. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—You are the principal teacher of Aghada National School?—I am the principal teacher of Aghada National School which was endowed and built by the late John Roche, junior, in 1819. An annual endowment of £30, late Irish currency, was left by the will of the late John Roche in support of the school. This endowment is paid regularly since.

5224. How much is the endowment?—£30, late Irish currency.

5225. Lord Justice NATHAN.—Have you got a copy of the late Mr. Roche's will?—I have not it with me.

5226. You had better send it to us?—Certainly. The school was placed under the National Board of Education in 1833.

5227. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—It has been under them from the beginning?—Yes. The teaching staff at present consists of a principal, an assistant, and a paid monitor. The average number on the rolls in the last quarter was 130, and the average present ninety-one. The course of instruction embraces the programme of the National Board of Education, together with extra branches of physical geography, geometry, and mensuration; algebra and mechanics. The use of the sewing machine is also taught to the female children.

5228. Is it in connection with South Kensington?—No.

5229. Who is the manager?—The Rev. Canon Ryan, parish priest.

5230. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you teach drawing?—No, except as far as geometry is concerned.

5231. How is the school kept up—what means has it besides this small endowment?—The grant of the National Board. The grant from the National Board during the past year amounted to £133 14s. 6d. At the last results examination 103 pupils were presented for examination, and a sum of over £45 results fees was awarded for their answering, and had the Midleton Union remained contributory under the National School Teachers Act the results fees would have been about £70.

5232. The £40 is included in the £133?—Yes.

5233. Do you know how the schoolhouse is held under Mr. Roche's will?—I can get a copy of the will from the manager. I think he has one.

5234. Who pays this rentcharge?—It is got from Captain Warren, the agent of the Roche Estate.

5235. To whom does he pay it?—To the principal teacher—myself, direct.

5236. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—What denominations have you attending the school?—They are all Roman Catholics, if you except five Protestants.

5237. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Your school seems to be a very level school. Ten years ago the attendance was three Protestants and 134 Roman Catholics, and you say that now you have 130?—Yes.

5238. What is your average attendance now?—Sixty-one for the last quarter.

5239. That is a little improvement from ten years ago when the number was eighty-five. How many are your girls?—Thirty-eight.

5240. Does the school building include a schoolmaster's apartments?—No. The school was enlarged since by Canon Ryan.

5241. Is it kept in repair by the National Board?—No, only by the manager.

Mr. John LANE.—This school belonged and still belongs to the property, and it was reconstructed two years ago with parochial money.

Witness.—This school is not vested in trustees. Canon Ryan got the word "National" added on the stone when he improved it.

5242. Is Canon Ryan here?—No, he is not.

5243. You don't know what the title is to your rentcharge, or how you could recover it?—I only know I am paid it by the agent, Captain Warren; he lives on the South Mall, Cork. The endowment is paid in accordance with John Roche's will.

PUBLIC SITTING—SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1887.

Oct. 22, 1887.

At the Mall House, Youghal.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERBON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIRN, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.C., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, junr., was in attendance.

*YOUGHAL ENDOWED SCHOOL.

Matthew John Porteus sworn.

5244. Lord Justice NAIRN.—How long have you been head master of the Endowed School in Youghal?—Since about the middle of 1884.

5245. By whom were you appointed?—By the Duke of Devonshire.

5246. On what conditions were you appointed?—Simply to teach in the best manner and the most approved manner possible the youth entrusted to my charge in the Endowed School of Youghal.

5247. Did you receive any letter of appointment?—Yes, I received a letter of appointment [later produced and read].

5248. And you have acted as schoolmaster since your appointment?—Yes.

5249. Where is the school carried on?—In Church-street—at the upper end of the town.

5250. How many boys have you attending the school?—There are fifteen day boys at present attending the school.

5251. Have you any boarders?—I have no boarders. The house is rather unsuited for boarders—it is a small house.

5252. Had you been engaged in teaching before you came to Youghal?—Well, I have not been paid for teaching, but I have had a little experience in teaching at St. Luke's School in Cork. I was not a paid teacher there, but I have taught frequently the senior boys.

5253. Where were you educated yourself?—At St. Luke's School, principally, I also attended Trinity College. I am a senior sophister and mathematical honorem, and obtained first class at the Little-go. I am a candidate bachelor going on to my degree in January.

5254. What is the course of instruction you give at the school?—Most of the pupils at present are learning Latin and some Greek; and all of course take up English, Arithmetic, and all those branches. At present we have several of them learning Drawing, Chemistry, and Natural Philosophy.

5255. What Latin do they learn?—The Intermediate course of Latin is the present course I teach most of the boys in; and I might mention that last year one of my boys passed the matriculation examination of the Royal University, and this year another passed the First Examination in Arts, and the same pupil, I believe, intends to go up for the Second Examination in Arts. I have sent many boys in for the Intermediate examinations, and at the last two of them passed and obtained seven honors.

5256. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Honor marks in seven subjects?—Yes—honor marks in seven subjects, between them—one obtained four and the other three honor marks.

5257. Lord Justice NAIRN.—What salary have you got?—The amount of the endowment is £40 paid by the Duke of Devonshire, through his agent, Mr. Power.

5258. In addition to the salary you get from the Duke of Devonshire you have got school fees—I have school fees and also a school house.

5259. Is there any rent paid for the school-house?—No rent is paid for the school-house or for the plot of ground attached, but I am liable for the rates and taxes, the rates amounting to £5 this year.

5260. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the size of the ground you have?—About a quarter of an acre, I think.

5261. Lord Justice NAIRN.—What fees do you get from the boys?—All the boys attending do not pay the same fees. The fees at present this year amount to £50 in all.

5262. What is the highest fee which you receive?—£2 a quarter—£8 a year, according to the subjects taken. Those who do not learn classics do not pay as much as those who do learn classics.

5263. What is the religion of the boys attending the school?—There are eleven of the Irish Church, two of the Methodist Church, and two more of them belong to the Roman Catholic Church.

5264. Where do the boys come from that attend the school—do they all come from Youghal?—They all belong to the town of Youghal, all the boys do. The reason I have not taken boarders is that the house is not quite suited for boarders.

5265. Besides your school, is there any other school in Youghal at which a classical education is given?—I don't know that the Christian Brothers' teach classics, I don't know whether they do or not, Mr. Harold can tell you that, my lord.

Rev. Brother Harold.—Not at present, but I hope they will.

5266. Dr. TRAILL.—Besides the Christian Brothers' schools are there any other schools in the town at which they teach classics?—There is a National School and I believe they teach classics there, but I cannot tell.

5267. What classics are taught there?—I could not tell.

5268. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Have you an assistant master?—I have no assistant master, I do all the work myself.

5269. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you evening classes?—I have no evening classes, but I take tuition in the evening.

5270. You have not thought of starting classes in connection with the Science and Art Department?—I have thought of that. I have thought of starting classes in connection with that department, but I don't think any other institution in the town has anything of that kind.

5271. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you qualified in any way to teach in connection with the South Kensington Department?—I am not qualified for the senior stage. I have got a first-class in mathematics. I think there would be far better results in the school, but for the age of the boys. At present they are very young. I have four or five boys reading for the Junior Intermediate Examination next year.

5272. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Did you know anything of the school before you were appointed master yourself?—No, I had no connection with it previously.

5273. To whom did you succeed?—Mr. Westwood.

* Appendix E, Hs. XV. (a) and XV. (a) p. 301.

Oct. 22, 1897.

Matthew
John Portman.

5274. Dr. TRAILL.—What rules were left for your guidance in the conduct of the school?—were there any?—There were no rules left for me to bind me down in any way. The boys were there, and I was left to my own discretion.

5275. Lord Justice NAIRN.—How many boys were in the school when you took it up?—Five boys came when I had the appointment first, and then in the first six months eleven boys came. After six months eleven boys came and attended the school.

5276. Professor DOWDNEY.—How long had your predecessor held the office?—I should think about three years.

5277. At the date of the last Commission the school was not in operation—was Mr. Westwood appointed after that?

Rev. Mr. Jones.—The school has never been interrupted, except for a very short time, when the master was sick. He was a very nice young man, but he got into consumption, and had to leave. I think for a short time the school was in abeyance then, and I think that on either one or two other occasions—but in no previous times, as far as my memory goes.

5278. Dr. TRAILL (to Mr. Portman).—The endowment was not originally £40—prior to the succession of the Duke of Devonshire the endowment appears to have been £30?—£30—yes.

5279. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—£30 Irish?—Yes.

5280. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you any free pupils at the school?—There are no free pupils.

5281. How is the balance of the £40 made up—is it by subscriptions?—No, it is paid by the Duke of Devonshire, through Mr. Power, his agent in Limerick.

5282. He only pays £27 13s. 10d.?—The whole of the money he pays, £40, at present—he has increased the grant to that.

5283. Originally the £30 was to be devoted in this way—£20 to the master, and £10 to an usher. You have not an usher?—I never heard of that.

5284. Don't you find it difficult teaching so many boys of all ages so many different subjects? How are you able to divide them into classes?—I take a few boys from nine to ten, and take chemistry from half past nine to ten. I take the senior Latin class after three, when the junior boys have gone home, so that in that way I manage.

5285. So it takes a great deal of extra time then?—It takes from nine until four nearly every day—half past nine until four.

5286. Lord Justice NAIRN.—What is the classical course?—The course we are reading at present is the Junior Intermediate course for next year; but of course I have one man after reading for the first in Arts, and in the next year he will go in for the second in Arts.

5287. Dr. TRAILL.—Where did you learn classics yourself?—I learned classics at St. Luke's. There was a classical teacher there, and I was going to a private tutor for some time.

5288. Was that under Archbishop Archdall?—Yes.

Of course, in Trinity, I got further training in classics. 5289. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Are the premises in which the school is carried on the property of the endowment or of the Duke?—I think the premises are the property of the Duke.

5290. I see you have entered into an agreement to give them up to the Duke at any time on giving six months' notice?—Yes.

5291. Does anyone in this place take any interest in the government or management of the school?—Mr. Jones takes an interest in the conduct of the school.

5292. Has he any authority there?—Nobody in the town has any authority in the management of the school.

5293. Do you think you could get a larger number of boys if the people of the locality had any interest in its management?—I do not think you could get a larger number of the Protestant denomination. I don't think you could. If there was a better house I could establish a boarding connection. The house is not at all suited for boarders, as you can see.

5294. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—It is an interesting house?—It is interesting, but that is all about it.

5295. Still you have space for a dormitory?—It is a very poor place to put boys in there.

5296. I have seen much worse?—We hesitate to put boys there for fear the ceiling would come on their heads.

5297. Do you think the pupils now coming to the school really represent all the Protestant boys who want that kind of education?—I don't know.

5298. Professor DOWDNEY.—I think you told us that classics were taught in the National School. Does not the National School, therefore, to some extent, compete with your school?—I don't know about that—I don't know how much classics is taught.

Rev. R. Jones.—I think the two boys—for various reasons it is desirable that they should remain with us—who could not go to the one, and who actually could not go to the other.

Rev. Richard Jones sworn.

Rev. Richard
Jones.

5299. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Are you the Rector of Youghal?—Yes.

5300. How long have you been such?—I have been nearly 23 years altogether rector.

5301. You have got a National School in Youghal?—Yes, and a very good one—the National School is a good one.

5302. I presume the majority of the boys, if not all, attending that are your parishioners?—Everyone of them are members of the Church of Ireland. I think there may be perhaps one or two Baptists, and one or two Catholics at present attending the school.

5303. What number have you got on the rolls?—Ninety-three.

5304. What is your average attendance?—Our average, as well as I remember, is about 65.

5305. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Is that boys and girls?—Yes.

5306. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Are any of the boys attending the school instructed in Latin?—Yes, two.

5307. And with the exception of those two boys is the instruction given to all the other children of a primary character?—Yes, of a primary character, but the very best we can give of that kind.

5308. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Of what class is your master?—He is first of the second.

5309. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Do you know how the Endowed School has been carried on since you came to Youghal?—Yes, for the time I am here; for the 23 years I am here.

5310. Who was the master when you first came here?—I have a bad memory for names, but he was a gentleman who was afterwards ordained. I forget his name.

5311. What was the state of the school when you first came here?—It was very fairly efficient.

5312. What number of boys was in attendance?—Merely from recollection I am speaking. I saw my, perhaps, I think as well as I remember, the number at that time was probably 25 or 26.

5313. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Did any number of Catholic pupils attend it at any time since you remember?—There always have been two or three.

5314. Dr. TRAILL.—Were those day boys?—It has been entirely and exclusively day boys who have been

Oct. 27, 1887.

Rev. Richard Jones.

attending except during Mr. Westwood's tenure, and he found the school buildings quite unsuitable for boarders on account of their bad situation and the narrow little lane in which they are. He took a private residence in the town, where he boarded and lodged the boys and they attended the school, where they have a fine schoolroom.

5315. How many boys had he in that way?—I am simply speaking from recollection. He had probably six or seven boarders and may be thirteen day boys.

5316. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Could this endowment be made more useful than it is at present by making it available for a higher class of education in your National school—by supplementing the teaching of classical?—I think so, but I suppose we would have to move up to the other building.

5317. Have you got a suitable building?—A very fine one, the finest probably you have seen.

5318. Where is it?—In South Abbey. It was a small church or chapel of ease connected with the parish church which was converted into a schoolhouse.

5319. Is that the building we saw on the left hand side that is like a church?—Yes.

5320. Is that since the disestablishment?—Within the last year. It was a chapel of ease. It was not necessary so we converted it into a parochial hall and schoolhouse.

5321. What is the Protestant population of Youghal?—For the last five years we have been oscillating a little—a little above or a little below 600. We have never raised ten above 600 or fallen ten below 600 for the last five years.

5322. Your school population may be taken at something about 100?—Yes, the numbers at our school on the roll are ninety-three.

5323. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Do any of the boys go from Youghal to Middleton, or Cork for the purpose of education?—There were boys going, when the Endowed School was not as efficient as it is now.

5324. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—There was a proposal of Mr. Mahaffy's to assign the endowment of Youghal and Middleton—what would you say to that?—I think it would be most undeniably an extraordinary proposition.

5325. You don't approve of it?—Most certainly not. As well as I understand it was this—that the £30—because £30 is the regular endowment, and I say that I represented to Mr. Curry and through him to the Duke, eight or ten years ago, that I thought it was capable of being made a very much more efficient grant if he would increase it, and he did increase it accordingly by £10.

5326. Has the Duke of Devonshire retained his property in Youghal?—Oh, no, except the schoolhouse and five or six old almshouses, which were built by the Great Earl of Cork who built the Endowed School and also endowed these almshouses. That is the only property he has in Youghal.

5327. Haven't he the right to the fishery in the river?—Yes.

5328. What is the endowment of the almshouse?—As well as I remember it is £5 a year and a little odd, for each widow.

5329. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—And the house rent free?—Yes, and it is a very curious house.

5330. Dr. TRAILL.—How many widows are there there?—There are six.

5331. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—You do not approve of Mr. Mahaffy's proposal?—Certainly not.

5332. It was a sort of educational migration scheme?—Quite so, and I think it would be doing a great injury to the town—quite so.

5333. Dr. TRAILL.—It is too far to go to Middleton?—It would entail a journey to the extent of thirty miles a day.

5334. How many boys would the £30 Irish carry to school?—I don't know. On what scale?

5335. Supposing they went third class?—I suppose five or six.

5336. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—They would not get a return ticket between this and Middleton much under 1s. a day?—They would not get it except at special terms; I think for other reasons it would be most objectionable. I think the school is doing fair work in teaching.

5337. You think there is sufficient demand for a school of this character?—I do, and I think only for the exceedingly efficient nature of the Christian Brothers' school and our National school, I am sure there would be a great many more who would come to us, and that our number in the Endowed School would be increased.

5338. Do you think the position of the school would be improved if there was a local governing body for its management, consisting of certain members of your congregation and yourself?—I do not. I think it is as well managed as it is.

5339. Who manages it at present?—Well, I may say, I think the last two appointments were made very much at my suggestion, but beyond that I occasionally visit.

5340. So that there is no manager, but there is a head master appointed?—Yes, and I exercise a sort of supervision in a friendly way.

5341. But you have no right whatever?—None whatever. I communicated with the Duke when the school was in a bad state. I wrote to him, and to Mr. Curry, his agent in Lismore.

5342. Rev. Dr. MOORE.—What do you think of the proposal to apply the endowment to the improvement of the National school, and thereby to provide a higher class of education in addition to National School education?—I think it would be a very good plan.

5343. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are the manager of your own National school?—I am.

5344. Are the premises vested in the Representative Church Body?—They are.

5345. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I presume you would have to consult the Duke of Devonshire or his agent as to any new application of the endowment?—Well, except this, that some years ago the school, owing to a variety of causes, the repeated change of masters, and of one of the masters especially who took not the slightest interest in the school, the school had fallen into a very low state, and the Duke was half disposed—was very much disheartened about it, and I thought he was doubtful as to whether the endowment might not be better spent, and I wrote to him saying that it would be a great pity to take away the endowment.

5346. Did you enter into correspondence with him?—Yes, through Mr. Curry.

5347. What was the result?—The result was that the endowment was increased to £40 a year, and having been then placed in the charge of a good master like Mr. Westwood, the school improved at once, and has been in a most flourishing state for some years.

5348. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think it is a good thing for education to have a small endowment of £40 expended on a school with a single master teaching that school, whose whole number of pupils is fifteen. Do you think it is an efficient school, without throwing any reflection on the master who, I have no doubt, is doing his best?—I think the school is doing good work, and I think if the school was abolished a great want would be felt.

5349. Would there be no possibility of its doing work of a larger and more practical character, if you could get an assistant master, say from the National school, acting as a feeder to these fifteen boys?—It would enable him to get an assistant master—so as to divide the small boys from the elder boys?—I think it would be very advisable if it could be done.

5350. If a local government were attached to the school?—What local government?

Oct. 22, 1942.
Rev. Richard Jones.

5351. Some such board as you might like to form to help in the management, and then you would feel bound to send boys to it from the National school, instead of competing with this school?—That is not what Lord Justice Fitzgerald suggested. He recommends that the National Board endowment should be given to our school.

5352. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What I was suggesting was that this Grammar School education might be a department in the National school?—I think it would be a very good plan.

5353. You might have more boys than fifteen being educated at the same expense?—I think it would be a good plan.

5354. Dr. TRAILL.—How many boys do you think you could add from your school—you say your school is junior to that school—how many boys have you beyond the sixth class. Have you any boys in the sixth class?—We have.

5355. How many could you send. Do you send up boys to learn classics?—One of those boys could not afford to go.

5356. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We found in the case of a corresponding endowment to this that there were a certain number of free boys?—Then have never been free boys in the endowed school here.

Mr. Porteus.—I may mention that we have got several boys from the National school, five boys at least. They come to me from the National school.

5357. What do they pay?—Some 30s. per quarter.

5358. Professor DEVEREAUX (to Rev. Mr. Jones).—With reference to the proposal to apply this endowment to your National school, do you see any objection, from an educational point of view, in combining primary and intermediate education in an elementary school?—Not if we have a sufficient number of teachers.

5359. But if you are provided with a sufficient number?—I think that would be a good plan.

5360. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—As far as we can see, there are three of these endowments in the hands of the Duke of Devonshire. Two of them we have seen and one we have not seen. They appear to have been founded by one of his predecessors, and were maintained by him and kept under his own management, and therefore any suggestions we throw out can only be the foundation for subsequent correspondence, and we would wish them to be so considered. The only burden on the Duke is £30 a year Irish.

5361. Dr. TRAILL.—Does the Duke spend any money on the repair of the house?—Yes.

5362. Is it kept in repair?—Yes. They are called "free schools" by the will of Lord Cork, but we could never trace any free scholars there.

5363. Lord Justice NADEL (to Rev. Mr. Jones).—Your view, then, are that this endowment should be kept in Youghal?—Yes, decidedly.

5364. And you don't appear to think that the present management of the school could be very much improved?—I think not; I think that the school has been doing very fairly well.

5365. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Surely it would be an improvement in the management of it if the people managing in your position had some locus standi. Now, you have no right to interfere?—No.

5366. The present manager—the head master—is appointed by the Duke?—Yes.

5367. Under that system one of the previous masters and his position, so that the school got into bad repute?—Yes.

5368. There was no manager to pull him up?—No, none with any authority to do it. But it was represented to the Duke by me, and to Mr. Curry, the estate that the school was in, and he immediately corrected it by calling upon the teacher to resign.

5369. You are dependent upon three individuals, because the Duke himself takes a very active interest in these matters, and as it happens you, the incumbent, takes an active interest, and the head master, as it happens, is efficient?—Most efficient.

5370. But you are working on a treble chance of inefficiency to act. As I understand the Duke of Devonshire has no longer got any property in the neighbourhood, and we all know that he owned property here formerly?

Mr. Power.—He has no property now, except the almshouse, the school, and the bakery.

5371. Dr. TRAILL (to Mr. Power).—Was the property sold?—The property was sold about twenty-five years ago.

5372. Dr. TRAILL (to Mr. Porteus).—Are there any materials for giving girls an education in your school?—No—none, supposing I don't go in for extending the school.

5373. Could you supplement your classes by girls?—I think I could.

5374. How many girls do you think you could get—about an equal number with the boys?—I have been applied to by two ladies already since I came here.

5375. Is there anything to prevent your making the experiment on a day school?—There would be nothing in a day school, I suppose, nothing.

Rev. Mr. Jones.—I think it would be a terrible injustice to Youghal to remove the endowment from Youghal as Mr. Mahaffy proposed, and I am sure it would be a great injury to the town, and many people would feel the loss very much.

5376. Dr. TRAILL.—Fifteen is the number of pupils, and that is a small number?

Mr. Porteus.—I might mention that several pupils have told me that if the endowment was taken away—if the endowed school was closed, they would send their sons to the Wesley College, and more; and too, I think, at least, would send them elsewhere than in the town.

5377. Send them away as boarders?—Yes.

5378. I thought the difficulty was paying £8 a year? That is not the difficulty.

5379. It would be more costly to send them to Wesley College and have them educated there?—I think they would not get so good an education here for the money if there did not happen to be an endowed school.

5380. Lord Justice NADEL.—This school is the property of and retains the endowment given by the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke being the patron and the master being appointed by him, and under the circumstances we do not think we can deal with it without the consent of the Duke. We would be very glad if some scheme were prepared by or under which the advantages of this school may be extended. If the persons interested in the matter brought any plan before us we would endeavour to arrange with the Duke of Devonshire for the purpose of framing some such scheme.

Mr. Power.—I have no doubt that if some scheme were formulated by you, the Duke would favourably consider it.

5381. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It would be desirable to form a local committee for the class for which this school is provided by the Duke, who would themselves have an interest in it, and who would be bound, more or less, to supplement the small endowment of the Duke.

Mr. Power.—At Lismore, the Dean of Lismore and myself are visitors to the school.

5382. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But here we have no visitors?

Mr. Power.—Practically, the rector, Dr. Jones, always has visited, but he has no locus standi.

5383. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—If the head master did not wish he need not admit him?

Mr. Power.—Not without the consent of the Duke of Devonshire.

5384. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Can you tell us how the schoolhouse is held—whose property is it?

Mr. Power.—It is the Duke of Devonshire's.

5385. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Does it belong to the endowment, or is it his own?

Mr. PATER.—It belongs to the endowment. It is the only schoolhouse that was built in Lord Cork's time. It is very old.

5386. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Then we may take it that the building belongs to the endowment?

Mr. PATER.—In Youghal I think it does, but in Lismore or Bandon there are no traces of the old schoolhouses at all.

5387. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Were they rebuilt in those cases by the Duke?

Mr. PATER.—They were re-built.

5388. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—And this is not re-built?

Mr. PATER.—No, this is the original schoolhouse as far as we can trace. In the old cash books as far as 1660 to 1700, I have traced payments to the schoolmasters of Youghal and Lismore.

5389. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Yes, but the school premises do not appear to be of much value—there is no land with it?

Mr. FORTESCUE.—The playground is the only land, and that does not belong to the school.

5390. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—All that belongs to the school is the building itself.

Mr. FORTESCUE.—And the little yard behind.

5391. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Would the buildings sell for anything if they were devoted to any other purpose?

Mr. PATER.—House property is not very valuable in Youghal. It would realise something, but it is not a home suitable for boarders.

5392. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—It seems to have been one great hall originally?

Mr. FORTESCUE.—The whole place was one schoolroom, all the bedrooms were part of the schoolroom as it appears to me.

5393. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—We shall be happy to take further evidence if any one is willing to give it to us?

Very Rev. Canon KELLER, F.R.S.—If you have no objection I should like to make a remark or two in addition to what has been said already in regard to this particular endowed school.

Very Rev. Daniel Canon Keller, F.R.S. sworn.

5394. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—You are parish priest of Youghal?—Yes.

5395. You wish to make a statement with regard to the Youghal Endowed School?—I should like to make some remarks in reference to it, because as far as I can understand there seems to be a pretty general feeling of dissatisfaction amongst the Catholics of the town—whether the dissatisfaction is well founded or not of course I cannot say—that this school was really—that this endowment was really an endowment for the whole population of Youghal as far as it could be reached by them, and that practically, as you are aware, of course, at present it is entirely confined to one denomination of the people here. Of course I understand from what has been said here that the endowment is altogether a private one, but whether besides being a private one it was originally to be strictly a denominational endowment, I should rather presume not, because I know in other parts of the county of Cork, as far as I can learn, the endowments given originally by the Earl of Cork were intended, or at all events were utilized to a large extent by the general population. I may mention for instance, one case in Chichester where an endowed school existed, had a flourishing existence and then disappeared altogether; and then the Earl of Cork after consultation with the parish priest made an arrangement by which the school was revived and it is in existence still and availed of to a considerable extent by the Catholic population of the place. This endowment was founded in 1643, by the Earl of Cork, and the present Duke of Devonshire is his representative.

5396. The denominational character of the endowment arises in this manner: The £30 was given to the free school that the Earl of Cork had himself founded and endowed with a schoolhouse, keeping the appointment of the master to himself and his successors. Therefore, the difficulty is to see how an endowment can be administered where the individual who has the appointment of the master may not select a person otherwise than in accordance with his particular views which may not be acceptable to Catholics?—Yes, but the only thing would be if the original deed of endowment could be traced in any way, to know how far the present representative of the original Earl of Cork is bound to pay for endowments with a denominational intention.

5397. This trust unquestionably intended that the benefit of the school should be extended to all classes who were willing to come to it?—Well, that is my precise point. It so happens that the endowment may not be availed of by the Catholics of the town to any appreciable extent on account of its being of a purely denominational character.

5398. Unless the Duke of Devonshire were to appoint a master acceptable to Catholics, or unless they accepted the master that he chose to appoint, I don't see how your view could be realized?—If a scheme was formulated by the Commission that would be acceptable to Catholics—if any scheme could be adopted by which all parties could avail of an endowment such as this, and if the Duke of Devonshire were to agree to that scheme, it is quite possible that it might be so shaped.

5399. What suggestion would you make as to how that could be done?—Well, I have been turning over the matter in my mind; first, I am thoroughly convinced that the present school, both with regard to endowment itself and with regard to the school itself as it stands, can never be availed of to a degree that would result in any practical use to the people here. The endowment is too small, and the school is too small; and, consequently, if with the endowment the house were sold and the money capitalised was added to the income—why something decent could be provided—not sufficient, I believe, to pay a teacher, but still it could be used as a subsidy. Now, for instance, without referring to this particular subject, if I had the control of an endowment amounting to even that which I should, by means of that, establish an excellent intermediate school here.

5400. Is there any intermediate school for Catholics in Youghal?—There is an intermediate school in connection with the Christian Brothers, but we don't teach classics at present, and it would be very desirable that classics were taught there. If I had that endowment and it was at my disposal I should establish intermediate classes at the Christian Brothers' School, have a special master to teach classics and have by that arrangement both an intermediate and university course which I could never do by means of that endowment alone.

5401. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—You think the endowment would be more useful if applied to supplement the resources of an existing school?—Yes, applied to supplement an existing school.

5402. Then it would if applied to maintain an independent school?—Yes, that is so. Such a scheme would place this endowment more at the disposal of the general public.

5403. Dr. TRAVERS.—Don't you think if a change of that sort were made it should be put in connexion with the Protestant school rather than yours?—I would not naturally suppose that, because when this endowment was originally made I should say that one of the reasons of its being made was, that the Earl of Cork was receiving rents from people who were nineteenth Catholics, and presumably it went to benefit his own tenants.

5404. His intention has been evidenced by the fact that he always appointed a Protestant master, and it was open to the Roman Catholics if they chose to come!—Yes, I know, for Catholic masters were forbidden to teach.

5405. Supposing a Roman Catholic gave the money, and it was open to Protestants to attend, and supposing the Protestant denomination would not come, do you think it would be reasonable to take his money and apply it to a Protestant school?—The point is that we have no information whatever as to his intention, as it is not stated.

5406. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—I don't think there is any difficulty about the facts of this case, because the provisions of the will were substantially these—that the Duke gave a rent-charge of £300 Irish for the support of a school which he himself founded in Youghal and directed £30 to be paid to the master and £10 to the assistant. It was an endowment to a school that was then existing, which is here still, of which he had the sole patronage and the appointment of a master. No one could interfere with him if he appointed a Christian Brother to be head-master!—I don't say that anyone could interfere, but I say that if a scheme were submitted and his consent asked to approve of such a scheme as would place this endowment at the service of the general public—if any such scheme could be formulated all would be well.

5407. It is too small for that!—The sum of the present endowment is too small to support an independent school.

5408. Would you propose that the school to be established should be undenominational?—Well, it would be very hard to do that. We have no Catholic National school here except the Convent school. The Christian Brothers' is the only school for boys in Youghal.

5409. Do you think that the Protestants would have any objection to avail themselves of your school?—I dare say they would object to avail of it, and that is the reason that I, in the event of our not agreeing in the scheme that I would suggest a secondary scheme such as disposing altogether of the property, and adding the income to the present revenue, and placing it at the disposal of a master in Youghal who would prepare boys for Intermediate education, and distribute this income pro rata for their passes at the Intermediate examinations.

5410. Don't you think it is too small for that?—I don't think it is.

5411. Do you mean to give it in results first?—Yes, I think it would be something, giving to the masters of the school, let them be Protestant or Catholic.

5412. It would not become smaller using it in that way, and you think it would go farther in assisting education?—Yes.

5413. Have the Catholics of Youghal been in communication with the Duke in reference to this matter?—Not recently, that I am aware of. Of course I am here only a couple of years. Originally the Duke of Devonshire gave a grant of £50 a year to the Catholic National school that existed here, but for some reason that I have not been able to trace, the Duke of Devonshire ceased to pay that the assistant the National school ceased and the Christian Brothers' school was introduced. We are at considerable difficulty at present in the town to—5414. Why was the National School discontinued—was it under Roman Catholic management?—Yes, the people preferred to have the Christian Brothers.

Mr. Power.—The Duke of Devonshire subscribes to all the National Schools on his property, and I have no doubt that when he sold his property here his subscription was discontinued.

Rev. Canon Keller.—But still he has very considerable property in the river. It is nothing but profit, and the fishermen pay him a considerable amount of rent. We have quite 120 men engaged in fishing. Their boys come to the Christian Brothers' school. It would be very advisable if he would renew his subscription to the Christian Brothers' school.

Mr. Power.—He sold all his property, and the fishery brings in a very small rent in consequence of the very great expense incurred in watching it, and preserving his rights.

Rev. Mr. Jones.—There is one objection that would militate against us—in reference to Canon Keller's devoting the endowment pro rata with regard to the passes in Intermediate Education. It would be ruinous to us, for this reason, that our school is in connection with the National Board, and we could not prepare boys for the Intermediate Examinations at all suitably in accordance with their rules.

5415. You could not get results first!—In accordance with the rules of the National Board the subject matter which they would have to prepare is matter not necessary for the inspection of the Government inspectors, and in that way we could not comply with the National Board regulations. And furthermore, that matter, as regards learning poetry by heart, would not tell with us at all, you know.

5416. Preface DOCUMENT.—Is that your idea of the Intermediate Examinations—that they are merely to teach people to get poetry off by heart?—I prepared boys considerably for them—and other things would not tell with the Inspector of National Schools.

5417. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Would not that difficulty be got over if the endowment were divided between the two schools in proportion to the number of pupils attending—each would get the benefit of the endowment in that way?—That would be a more feasible plan.

5418. Dr. TRAILL.—That would leave you a very small quantity?—Yes.

Very Rev. Canon Keller.—It would establish a just proportion.

5419. Lord Justice FRYGROVE (to Canon Keller).—What are the numbers attending the Christian Brothers' School?—The numbers on the roll—Mr. Harold, who is the Inspector, will give you details with regard to that school. I think there are 400.

5420. What is the population of Youghal?—In 1881, in the township the population was 5,396.

Rev. Mr. Jones.—About 600 Protestants and the rest Roman Catholics?—Yes.

Rev. Mr. Jones.—Of the 600 Church people, there are about 45 Presbyterians.

5421. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY (to Canon Keller).—One great difficulty is the appointment of the head master—in fact that involves the question of the whole endowment; because the head master, under the original deed of trust, is entitled to a salary, and the assistant to so much, and the Duke of Devonshire has the right to appoint the head master!—Unless he was willing to surrender that right.

5422. If the Catholics of Youghal met together and submitted to the Duke their claims to this endowment, and represented that they are practically excluded from it at present, you might get us authority to deal with the endowment as we might think best?—Yes.

5423. Or perhaps the Duke of Devonshire might be induced to increase the endowment?—Of course, I understand it could be only done with his consent.

5424. Dr. TRAILL.—If you can devise a plan by which you could pay a head master of both denominations out of the £40 a year, it would solve the problem beautifully?—Yes.

5425. But it is not for us to press you to solve the difficultly.—Yes. I may illustrate that by stating that while we are at present without any classical teaching—that I could if I had sole control—though I know it would not be enough—I could nevertheless subsidise the school in such a way as would pay for a classical teacher.

5435. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The only advantage of these endowments is where they are made the nucleus for enabling a master to be permanently established. Here it is keeping a master in the place who is teaching fifteen boys—I have no doubt whatever that the gentleman who at present teaches the school is a very efficient and successful teacher, but I think it has been remarked here during the course of the examination, a school contributed no that is, is very liable to vicissitudes—liable to have teachers coming and teachers going. For instance, no teacher would desire to remain there—he takes that as a stepping stone—and a want of permanency will ultimately tell against a school. And of course a limited number of pupils does not afford any stimulus to a man, and it would have no attraction for his ambition, a school like that. Therefore, from many points of view the school, looking all round is unsatisfactory—at least if you take it in connection with the educational interests of the mass of the people.

5437. If you got State aid, and it was given to the Christian Brothers' school, you would not mind this endowment?—As long as it is at the disposal of the Duke of Devonshire, I would not trouble about it.

5438. The Protestant members are so much smaller than yours are, that if you were able to avail yourself of State aid it would be more satisfactory to you?—It would be very desirable if State aid could be afforded to the Christian Brothers without requiring them to accept it at the expense of any humiliation.

5439. If Dr. Trull got you £100 a year you would give up your claim to the £40?—Indeed we would. If we were subsidised by the National Board, I would not be content with even £100.

5440. You would get more?—With capitulation and results as I would get, I am sure, £400 a year. The Catholics have done a great deal for the Christian Brothers' school here, besides the people support the Brothers by a weekly collection.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' SCHOOL, YOUGHAL.

5431. Have the Christian Brothers in Youghal got any endowment?—

Rev. Canon Keller.—Yes. Perhaps I should mention that the first and chief means of support of the Brothers are the voluntary collections of the people, and in addition to that there is an endowment that I may calculate at £30 a year—in house property—they get that out of house property. I do not count anything for support of the Brothers, inasmuch as it is provided for by the collections. This is a mortgage tax; we give free residence to the Brothers, and I don't calculate any profit out of the house property.

5432. How was the house property derived?—It was purchased in the Incumbered Estates Court, when the Lord's property was sold. It was purchased by the late bishop and parish priest for school purposes.

5433. How much money did they pay?—They bought the property, but borrowed money on mortgage for the purpose of helping them to buy it. The interest on the mortgage amounts to a sum of £38 or £39 a year.

5434. How much is the produce out of the property?—Practically nothing for the support of the Brothers, we have to depend upon collections for their support, but the teachers have a free residence on the property. One of the houses is a splendid house on the property. That splendid house is a free residence for the teachers. It brings no income for the support of the teachers—the house property is a perfect blank in that respect, but there are twelve and a half acres of land—first class land, in the immediate neighbourhood of the town—called "the Town fields," that used to bring £40 or £45 a year, but we released the rent for the tenant and now it is producing not, £80.

5435. Who has the management of that property?—It is vested in trustees. I receive the rent, though I do not happen to be one of the trustees just now. Two of the trustees died.

5436. Who are the trustees?—I believe the Superior General of the Christian Brothers is the surviving trustee. The bishop, the parish priest, and the Superior General of the Christian Brothers are the three trustees, but there has been no renewal of the trust since the bishop died and Canon Murphy who was my predecessor.

Rev. Brother Harold sworn.

5437. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are head of the Christian Brothers, who are managing the school here?—Yes, in Youghal.

5438. How long have you been here?—For fifteen years.

5439. How many Brothers are engaged in teaching here?—There are five engaged in teaching.

5440. You have five schools?—No, four schools and I superintend the whole.

5441. What is the number of pupils attending at present?—There are 450 on the roll.

5442. What is your average attendance?—403.

5443. Is that the year's attendance or the quarter's?—Well we have just made it up now, the present average is 403.

5444. How are your departments divided?—Into four departments—four distinct rooms.

5445. Have you got an Intermediate department?—We have.

5446. How many boys have you in that?—We passed 181 for the Intermediate Examinations since 1851.

5447. Dr. TRULL.—Was that the first year you sent them up. Could you not give us the number in the class at any one time?—We passed thirty-two this time.

5448. Are there more in the class than were passed?—Yes.

5449. How many were there in the class?—We sent in forty-seven.

5450. Did you send in the whole class?—Yes.

5451. Rev. Dr. MALLON.—Have you a centre in Youghal?—Yes; in our schools.

5452. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In what grades did the thirty-two pass?—In the three grades.

5453. Do you remember how many you passed in the senior grade?—We had two in, and one passed and retained an exhibition in the senior grade.

5454. How many in the middle?—I think six or seven, but I am not perfectly sure, all passed.

5455. So that you had twenty-four who passed in the junior grade?—Yes.

5456. What other exhibitions have you in the school besides the one retained?—We got six exhibitions in the three I speak of.

5457. Rev. Dr. MALLON.—An average of one each year?—Yes, and we retained seven exhibitions in the different grades—in the middle and senior grade. A boy getting a junior exhibition retains that in the senior grade.

Oct. 26, 1887.

Keller, R.P.

Rev. Brother

Oct. 22, 1907.

Rev. Brother
Harold.

5453. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Thirteen different boys got exhibitions!—Yes, in that way, we got six distinct exhibitions—six new exhibitions, and twenty-two prizes.

5459. Rev. Dr. MORROW.—And these were retained seven times!—Yes. It is equal to a new exhibition, because the boys must pass in the new grade.

5460. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Do your boys pay anything!—Out of the £93, 183 pay.

5461. The remainder pay nothing!—220 pay nothing.

5462. I suppose the ground is that they cannot pay!—Yes.

5463. Rev. Dr. MORROW.—You take all that offer themselves—and those who are able to pay pay 1d. a week!—Yes. Some pay a little more, because we have seven paid pupil teachers in addition to ourselves.

5464. How much do the school fees amount to!—The school fees last year amounted to £53 6s. 2d.

5465. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Have you the amount of the results fees at the Intermediate examinations!—I have not that.

5466. What means have you for sustaining the school!—Canon Keller sends me a cheque every quarter.

5467. That is a cheque for the support of the Brothers!—Yes.

5468. Is that at the rate of £40 a year each, as at other places!—Yes.

5469. Who administers the money you get in the way of school fees!—I do.

5470. That goes to provide school requisites!—It goes to pay monitors and pupil teachers' fees, for poor boys, for free school requisites, and sundry repairs.

5471. Canon Keller keeps the building in repair out of the endowment!—That is the residence.

5472. Only the residence!—He does also for the school any important repairs.

5473. Small repairs you do yourself!—Yes. We add out £27 4s. 2d., and get only £53 6s. 2d., so that we laid out on the school very much more than we got.

5474. Have you made any calculation as to what your school would get from the State if you were in connection with the National Board!—I have not.

Very Rev. Canon Keller.—I calculate very close on 21 a boy. For instance our nuns have 600 girls attending and they get very close on £500 a year.

5475. Then the rules are the same for boys and girls, they being under a community!

Rev. Brother Harold.—Yes.

5476. You suffer by not having the advantages offered by the National Board!—In a pecuniary way we do.

5477. Dr. TRAILL.—Are the Convent Schools under the National Board!—Yes.

5478. All the difficulties are got over in their case!—I don't understand how they get over the difficulties, I know I could not get over the difficulties myself.

5479. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—What is the difficulty!—I would not give up any religious emblems for all the money that the National Board could offer me. I would put off my coat in the morning rather than I would submit to remove the statue and other things out of my school. I joined the brotherhood forty years ago with that view.

5480. And I think the use of the books is also a difficulty!—Yes, that is a difficulty.

5481. Dr. TRAILL.—Are not the books very expensive to buy!—No.

5482. Do you use the National School books!—No. We sell our books much cheaper than the books we use for the Intermediate.

5483. Your books are twice the price of the National school books!—The country must pay the difference.

5484. We find the National school books in use in similar schools to yours!—Not in our schools, not in the Christian Brothers' Schools.

Very Rev. Canon Keller.—I should say it would be only fair for the Christian Brothers, and their establishment, if a public grant in some form in which they could freely accept it, were given them. Some portion of it could go to subsidise the publication of their books as in the case with the Commissioners of National Education, so as to render their books cheaper.

5485. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON (to Witness).—Would you be satisfied that the books used, if put on the National Board, were subject to inspection beforehand!—That is a question I would not like to answer inasmuch as I don't know what charges there may be.

5486. Don't you think the State has a right to inspection!—I think the State ought to be perfectly satisfied to have children thoroughly made up in their education, and to see that they are taught nothing vicious or bad.

5487. In other words that they have a right to inspect the books!—Yes.

5488. I don't understand you to say that you would ask to have your books put upon the list except as books approved by the Board!—Well, I think if a scheme could be got up on the same lines as the Intermediate education, and a capitation grant could be paid in that way, if they simply paid us for pupils, I think that would be a better scheme, something on the lines of the Intermediate education system.

5489. That would still leave you without the provision of books at a cheap rate for the use of the scholars!—Well, it would.

5490. Then in fact you are excluded from the benefit of this public endowment simply because you have religious emblems in your school!—Precisely; almost so I say.

5491. Dr. TRAILL.—You would not ask for salaries for the teachers from the State!—Indeed I would not, but I am only an individual.

5492. I think it would not be in accordance with the rules of your Order that your teachers should not get salaries!—I don't know what it should be, but I don't think it is.

5493. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—We always understood that the maintenance fee of £40 was, and was, an official item!—Quite so.

5494. Dr. TRAILL.—You do not propose that the Brothers should qualify as State teachers!—I am not prepared to say. I am only an individual.

5495. I am most anxious that you should get a grant!—I think in the way I have indicated it would be of benefit to us.

5496. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—I suppose you would not be afraid to submit yourself to examination as a competent teacher!—Well, I think not. I think forty years' experience ought to qualify.

5497. Nor submit your schools to inspection to see that they are competent schools!—Certainly not. I think our schools if examined in the morning would pass an examination without any previous testing.

5498. Do you subscribe to the conscience clause of the Intermediate Examinations!—No.

5499. Don't you put your schools under the Intermediate Board at present!—We do.

5500. Didn't you agree to the conscience clause under that system!—I am not aware of any conscience clause, except simply that they send round their superintendent and he examines the children, and those who pass, their results are paid for.

5501. Do you know that the paper relating to the results fees contains a statement as to a conscience clause. You sign a paper that no child is excluded from any teaching on account of his religious belief!—I don't look upon that as important, because they are all Catholics.

5502. Would your schools be open to Protestants!—Certainly, and I have had them from time to time elsewhere.

5503. And any child may go in for the Intermediate results!—Decidedly.

5554. Lord Justice Fitzgerald (to Canon Kellier).—Do you know the number of girls in the Presentation Convent?—We calculate the average at 500.

5555. How is that school maintained?—By being in connection with the National Board. They get the agitation grant—they always get the highest figure of 3s. a quarter. The Commissioners are empowered to give them 12s. or 10s. according to the progress of the children. The girls have always passed very satisfactorily, and the nuns have always been entitled to 12s. a year ever since the increase in the agitation grant. In addition to that they get results fees. Between the results fees and the agitation grant the amount of money paid for this convent school is close upon £500 a year. In addition to that, as you are aware, there may be special subjects for which special results fees are granted. For instance we are teaching Irish there at present, and for the children that pass in Irish the teachers are paid 10s. per pass for that child. Well, over and above that, the mistresses are also entitled; a certain number of mistresses are paid from 25 to £10 a year, and I calculate that that is all money coming in for the benefit of the education of the girls of the town, and it is considerably over £800 a year.

5556. How much over £500 a year does that money come to?—I could not say exactly, but we often have about twelve mistresses there and get paid for that; it is over £505 a year—perhaps another £100.

5557. Is this an Irish speaking district?—Very much so.

5558. Do the children taught in the school use the vernacular?—Yes, but the children are very much from the town. The children inhabiting the country places might find it of more use.

5559. What then do you teach them Irish for?—We learn it for the love of the old tongue.

5560. And not for any particular use?—For no particular purpose.

5561. (To Rev. Brother Harold).—How many paid mistresses have you in the Christian Brothers' school?

Witness.—Seven.

5562. How do you pay them?—We paid some, heretofore, 5s.—at present not so much.

5563. Are they former pupils?—Yes, all.

5564. Still confirming their own education—more like monitors?—More like monitors.

5565. If you had any additional money, such as the National Board would give you, what is the matter for which you want the money most?—We would find various uses for it. For instance, our income is a very limited one. We have to work exceedingly hard—every Brother—seeing, as you see by the number that we have on our roll and in attendance, every Brother has to do double work. We could increase our staff considerably, and by that means we would be able to do work with more ease to ourselves. The monitors would be paid also, and then of course the scale of remuneration would be more lucrative, and the boys would remain a longer time in school, and consequently could become more efficient and be made more useful.

5566. Have you put your school in connection with the Science and Art Department for any of the subjects for which they give help?—Not here.

5567. But you have in other places?—Yes.

5568. Why have you not tried it here?—It is not long since we have tried it at all. Our schools are not in connection at present, but they will in a short time.

5569. With the Intermediate Examinations and the South Kensington one, you would then require a larger staff?—I think we would. The examinations are nearly the same, but it would require a greater preparation for both examinations, Intermediate and South Kensington.

5570. It would appear that there is a great deal of money to be got from that Department if you only work?—If they worked for the Intermediate education, they would find it hard to do so much for South Kensington. If they confined themselves to Intermediate education, they would have still a great deal to do, and it would give them ample occupation.

5571. Professor Donnelly.—Do you teach drawing in your school?—Yes. We took the medal two years in succession from all Ireland.

5572. How many boys learn drawing?—In some cases we have the whole room learning.

5573. Do you make any attempt to give any industrial education?—No.

5574. You don't think it is desirable to combine industrial education with elementary instruction?—I don't see how you could combine it in a school where the children leave at the age of sixteen or seventeen, and many at fourteen. I don't see how you could under these circumstances combine them. If you do you will destroy their education.

5575. Dr. TRAILL.—What age do they leave at?—Some remain up to sixteen and seventeen, but most of them leave at fourteen—the greater number—some even younger.

5576. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN (to Rev. Canon Kellier).—With regard to the Convent School, the nuns there take the grant of the National Board and comply with the rules of the Board?—Yes.

5577. I believe they find themselves practically compelled to do so. They do not regard the system as perfectly satisfactory?—Certainly not.

5578. They have in fact the same kind of objection to the rules of the National Board as the Christian Brothers have?—Yes, for the same reason. Of course they had to take it originally because they were driven to do so, and we tolerate the present system, not because we approve of it, but because we have to submit to it, and I can quite understand the feelings of Mr. Harold that as the schools were established to give—on quite denominational principles—to give a purely Catholic education, it would be an extreme grievance to do away with the religious emblems. It would be an act, as has been stated to your Commission elsewhere, almost amounting to apostasy.

5579. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it not a conscientious objection or the nuns would not accept it?—It is quite a different thing to accept a system and to merely tolerate it.

5580. But you cannot bridge over the consequences?—Quite so. But I say the serious inconvenience resulting from a total change in the aspect of a school that has been established for forty or fifty years, would be a serious matter for want of a stronger expression. And that opinion I hold very strongly—that I would be very sorry to ask the Christian Brothers who have held out so long against the system of the National Board, to surrender in any way that would be an humiliation to them.

5581. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—I believe if you did ask them they would not do it for you?—I believe they would not, and I think they would be perfectly right.

Mr. Power.—With regard to the denominational character of the endowed school, the first appointment we can trace is in 1639, and that was a Protestant clergyman.

5582. Are you aware whether it was possible to appoint anyone else at that date?—I could not say.

5583. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—In those good old times no Roman Catholic schoolmaster was allowed to exist in the country?—Yes.

5584. They had to hide!

Rev. Canon Kellier.—Besides you will find that the present endowment dates from 1642.

Mr. Power.—The will does, but the school was founded before that. The will of Lord Cork was dated 1643.

5585. Rev. Dr. MONAGHAN.—I think we may take it that in the early period of the endowment all the masters appointed were Protestants?

Mr. Power.—And so they have been since—and the majority of them clergymen.

Oct. 28, 1867.

Rev. Brother Harold.

Oct. 22, 1845.
Rev. Father
Harold.

5536. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Has anyone ever been appointed except a Protestant?

Mr. Power.—No, not that I am aware of, but I could not swear to that; but I don't think there was. A Presbyterian has been appointed.

5537. Rev. Presbyterian.—Does it belong to Protestants?

—Yes.

5538. Professor DOUGHERTY.—When you said just now that a Presbyterian had been appointed you meant at Lismore, I think?—Yes. If any scheme could be formulated for an efficient inspection of the school by which such could take place, I am sure the Duke of Devonshire would regard it very favourably.

5539. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—When we draw up a scheme we are bound by the Act of Parliament to provide for inspection?—Yes.

5540. But without the consent of the Duke of Devonshire we cannot interfere with the appointment of the local master.

5541. Rev. Canon KELLER (to Mr. Power).—Do you think that the Duke would have any objection to reconsider the whole matter with a view to throwing open this endowment, as far as it may be available, for the whole population?—It is so very small—it is too small.

5542. But if the ingenuity of the Royal Commissioners could suggest a scheme something bordering upon what we were throwing out suggestions of—by which this endowment could be made available for the Catholic population, do you think he would have any objection to carry out their views?—I cannot say, but if the endowment was divided as you say it would be so very small that I don't think it would be of any practical good.

5543. Or to divide it proportionately between the schools without reference to results examinations?—As a matter of fact £30 was the original endowment, and the Duke increased it to £40.

5544. If the property was sold something could be added to the endowment?—It would realize very little in the present state of affairs. The house is a very old one.

5545. Except as a curiosity I don't think anyone would give very much for it—I don't think so.

5546. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What land is this endowment charged upon?

Mr. Power.—It is not charged upon any particular land.

5547. It is charged on the whole estate of the Earl of Cork?—Yes.

5548. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—You speak of the endowment as being too small to give Catholics a share of it; but at present you give them nothing which is much smaller?—Quite so. Of course £30 in these times would be £150 now.

5549. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—I believe the Duke, as a matter of fact, does give a subscription to every National School on his property?—Yes.

5550. And it is in consequence of the Yeoghil property being no longer his that he has withdrawn this grant to the National school here?—Yes.

5551. How many fishing licenses for boats are there on the river of Yeoghil—how far does the fishery extend?—It goes up about ten miles above Yeoghil. There are about fifty draft men.

5552. And what is the amount of the license?—£10 below the bridge, and £8 above. The expenses of watching the river are enormous, and the returns from the fishery are by no means very large.

YEOGHIL ENDOWED SCHOOL.—(continued).

Dr. Charles Kenney, J.P. (statement).

Dr. Charles
Kenney, J.P.

5553. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Can you give me any suggestion as regards the £30—how that may be utilized better than it is?—As to the utilisation of £30 for the purposes of classical teaching and higher education, any suggestion would be futile, it could do no good. But I would have some hopes that if your honorable Commission represented to the Duke of Devonshire the original intentions of this grant by the Earl of Cork, and the increased value of the property out of which the grant was originally made, the increased revenue the present Duke derived out of it—for he sold it for £75,000.

5554. What property do you speak of?—The more town property of Yeoghil. I am sure he would take your views into his consideration, and perhaps increase the grant to such an extent that it would enable us to have an equal participation in its benefits.

5555. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Who bought the property?—David Leopold Lewis.

5556. And are his representatives the owners now?—He became bankrupt and his representatives and the people purchased their own parts of the property, the townspeople purchased their own houses, and Canon Keller's predecessors purchased a portion of the property.

5557. Why could they not subscribe if they are freshblood?—I am sure they would if the Duke didn't increase his grant, it is miserable. At the time it was made money was three or four times less valuable than now.

Rev. Canon KELLER.—Perhaps I might remind you of how much the Catholics do subscribe.

5558. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—I understand they pay over £200 a year by subscription?

Canon KELLER.—Yes, collections on Sunday at church for the schools.

Dr. Kenney.—I have myself a very great interest in the promotion of classical education here, and having little boys to be reared, I do not like to be sending them to distant colleges. I am sending them at present to the Endowed School, where I was educated. I may tell you that I was educated at this Endowed School, myself, and I am very sorry to have to remark the utter decay of classical education in Yeoghil since my time. When I was being educated there was another large classical school in Yeoghil, and there were several classical scholars, fifty-four at the endowed school where I was educated. There are now only fifteen scholars, I believe, in it, and there are at present many more wanting classical teaching. There are four Protestant boys and three or four Catholic boys are in college away from home for the want of a proper classical school in Yeoghil. These boys would be at home in Yeoghil if there was a proper classical school there.

5559. What was that classical school to which you have referred?—Mr. Parry's. He has since become a clergyman in London. I don't know whether it is the city or not—the Rev. Mr. Parry. There are at least I could count at least six or eight other boys within the immediate neighbourhood of Yeoghil who would be going to a classical school if there was such one, but who are obliged to be sent in all directions about the country to colleges at a distance. You would therefore have fifteen or sixteen boys at present living here who are away from their parents at inconvenient and expense in consequence of the want of a proper classical school in the town of Yeoghil.

5560. Why don't they go to this school?—They don't consider it in a position at present to give sound and thorough classical teaching. There are at present fifteen or sixteen boys, half of them in the town, and I could name the other half in the immediate neighbourhood, being educated away from home for the reason I have described.

5561. If there were fifteen or sixteen boys more added to the school, worked by the present master, it would be an admirable school. He is a distinguished scholar himself?—Yes, I have no fault to find with Mr. Porteus.

5532. The difficulty that Mr. Porteus has to contend with is that he has no assistance?—If I had any fault to find with Mr. Porteus I would not have sent my own boys to him; but I do find fault, as an old Youghal man, and having been trained there and educated there, and one who is sending his own boys to be trained at it still, what I do find fault with is the utter decay that has been allowed to go on. I attribute that decay to the want of providing a proper master from time to time, a first class master such as Mr. Paisley, who was my master, and who was a scholar and a double gold medalist of Trinity College. He had an usher under him, as I believe by the Earl of Cork's will he should have. In his will it is provided that the master should receive £30 and the usher £10. Since Mr. Paisley's appointment there has been no interest taken to provide a proper master.

5533. On the principle that there is no one to do man's business so well as himself—do you think we could form in Youghal any local committee who would look after the matter, and, subject to the approval of the Duke of Devonshire, have the selection of the master?—Yes. I may say that was very nearly now the view I formed of suggesting to you a scheme. A scheme would of course go before you, and I would wish to slide by Canon Keller's scheme, because anything he would do is best. I have my own views of classical education, and perhaps they occur with Canon Keller's. I don't think the Christian Brothers are in a position to take up classical education, and I think your suggestion is what I was going to urge—that a committee, consisting of the Parish Priest, the Rector, and the Chairman of the Town Commissioners, the Chairman of the Poor Law Guardians, and one or two gentlemen selected by them—that that committee would have the management of this school. That is the scheme I would suggest—it is that that committee should have the management of this school, and also the selection of such a master as would meet with the approval of the Duke.

5534. But would the Roman Catholic Priest and the Roman Catholic people join with their Protestant brethren in such an attempt?

Rev. Canon Keller.—I must say cordially here, I am quite sure they would not. Although in other respects our relations are most amicable, so far as mixed education goes we could not unite on such a subject.

Rev. Dr. Jones.—I don't think the thing would work at all.

5535. Rev. Dr. Mollor (to Dr. Remyne).—Do you contemplate that one master should teach everything to all the boys in that school?—No.

5536. The existing endowment even if increased by the Duke would not pay more than one master?—If it was increased to a fairly respectable sum, to a sum commensurate with the increasing revenue he desired—as compared with the revenue of the Earl of Cork in his day—if it was raised to £120 a year, and that there were forty boys attending at £8 or £10 a year, that would give a very respectable income for a head master, and one or two ushers.

5537. How do you make out £120?—When I was with Mr. Paisley there were fifty-four. There are fifteen at present only attending, and I think that in addition to that fifteen there are fifteen away that I am sure would go there if a proper classical education was given.

5538. Rev. Canon Keller.—What was the population in these days?—Perhaps about 6,500. It is 6,000 now.

5539. Rev. Dr. Mollor (to Dr. Remyne).—If, Dr. Remyne, the endowment is not increased how would you meet the difficulty. Your plan can only be carried out on the supposition that the grant is £120 a year?

—If the grant is to remain as it is the school will have to remain as it is—a decayed, impoverished school.

5540. Supposing a committee was appointed, what would you think of the committee being empowered to expend this endowment between two of the existing schools—the Christian Brothers and Mr. Jones's National school?—I would agree with that if they provided classical education.

5541. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think the endowment is large enough to be able to do that with any benefit?—Hardly.

5542. If the difficulty of State aid were got over with regard to the Christian Brothers would not their school get £400 or £500 a year, and would not that be an accomplishment toward the requirements of the Roman Catholic population, and as far as that is concerned could not it be increased from Intermediate classes?—Well, I consider there are Catholics in Youghal who like myself, would like to have their children get a good sound classical education. It may be a foolish prejudice, but I would not care to have them mixing with the boys of the lanes and the byways and the alleys of Youghal.

5543. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You want to have a superior school?—Yes, what I saw here.

5544. You want to have a select school?—Yes.

5545. And you are of opinion that such a select school could be formed in which all the denominations would agree as to the management; unfortunately both the gentlemen who represent them, say they could not?—I wish to have some such school.

5546. Dr. TRAILL.—You never found any difficulty with regard to your religious faith when you were at the school yourself?—Oh, no. When I was going to school there, there was no religious teaching of any kind. It was simply a secular school with a very high-class education.

5547. I suppose you got your religious education at home?—On Saturday I went to church for catechism teaching, and I was taught in other respects at home. I looked upon it then as I now would wish to see the same, as a first class Intermediate classical school for boys, up to fifteen or sixteen—that age when you would send them to college.

5548. No one understands better than you do, Dr. Remyne, a highly intelligent educated gentleman, that the whole cry at present amongst all denominations is that in all departments of education religion should never be divorced from it?—And I think that that is our national cry.

Rev. Canon Keller.—We do not consider that religion is divorced from education in our National schools, because we have done our best to make those schools denominational. Against the letter of the law the spirit of the management has converted them into practically denominational schools.

5549. Rev. Dr. Mollor.—You mean like the convent school—practically a Catholic denominational school?

Rev. Canon Keller.—Yes, and Dr. Jones's is practically a denominational Protestant school; and we are satisfied to have them so.

5550. Rev. Dr. Mollor (to Rev. Dr. Jones).—And the people would be satisfied if your school was recognized as a Protestant and Father Keller's as a Catholic school?

Rev. Dr. Jones.—Certainly.

5551. Dr. TRAILL (to Dr. Remyne).—And for Intermediate education if the numbers are not sufficiently good it makes the thing impracticable?—Yes, in a small town like Youghal there would not be enough boys to learn classical, for the mercantile and professional classes, and the middle class of Youghal have not between them more than forty boys; Catholics and Protestant middle class have not between them more than forty boys, that would wish for a superior and classical education.

Rev. Dr. Jones.—Might I mention that at the period Dr. Remyne refers to, when there were very

Oct. 25, 1882.
Dr. Charles
Newman, &c.

large and flourishing schools were in Youghal one of which he attended, the Protestant population which alone largely contributed to those schools was over 1,800.

5582. And they are reduced now to 600!—At that time 1,800 included all denominations of Protestants. All denominations of Protestants now comprise about 650 odd—we were then over 1,800.

Dr. Newman.—There was a large Protestant population of respectable Protestant gentry who have since disappeared from the neighbourhood altogether.

5583. Dr. TRAILL.—During what period did that take place?—From 1855 to 1861.

5584. Where have they all gone to?

Rev. Dr. Jones.—They have all left the town.

5585. By emigration?

Rev. Dr. Jones.—They have died out a great many of them.

Dr. Newman.—I came here strongly impressed with the hope that some agitation from the Commission with the Duke would have great weight. And if you will allow me I would read from the records of the town the reasons why I would ask you to impress upon the Duke, or, at all events, I would ask you in the report of your Commission to make some such allusion to the Devonshire school here or to the Duke, in order to induce him to grant an increased amount, and let it be divided in any way that the rev. gentleman opposite me and the agent agree, equally between the Catholic and the Protestant interests, or let it be under a joint committee of Catholic and Protestant gentlemen, and the parish priest and the rector of the town. I am sure if the Duke did consider the circumstance of this grant he would increase it.

5586. Rev. Dr. McILROY.—Would it not be the business of the people of the town to address themselves to the Duke, and bring before him the wants of the town. We are not constituted for the purpose of getting new endowments, but of drawing up schemes for those that exist!—The endowment is here for you if we could have it increased.

5587. Then why not ask the Duke to increase it?

5588. Dr. TRAILL (to Dr. Newman).—You said you had some entry from the town books!—I was going to read one or two little extracts.

5589. If there is anything connected with the school in them we shall be glad to hear them!—Yes, they are connected with the school, and I would wish you to understand that, before this endowed school we are talking of, there was a school there for the higher education of the people of Youghal—what was called the College. The College of Youghal was there on that very ground; the very schoolhouse is built on portion of it, and Sir Walter Raleigh's house is built on portion of it, and the present Mrs. Allen's house was portion of the old College of Youghal.

5590. What became of that?—It was transferred to the Earl of Cork. That college was founded by what was called the good Earl of Desmond, in 1464, and that college was for the purpose of educating the people of Youghal in higher education. That had a very large establishment—eight fellows, a warden, professors, and very large classes—a class of at least 400 or 500. Well, now, that establishment fell into the hands of the Earl of Cork, with its belongings and the surroundings attached to it. Various parishes in the neighbourhood of Youghal, and various glebe-lands were attached to the college for the purposes of its support. The Earl of Cork got all that for £28. And I think it would be no harm, if this was understood, because I am afraid people generally think that the Earl of Cork has been very liberal, and that the Duke of Devonshire has been very liberal in granting to the people here—especially by granting an increase of £10 a year to the present stipend, and raising it from £50 to £60. The Rev. Dr. Jones got the £10 additional. There is an idea that the Earl of Cork has been very liberal, and the Duke of Devonshire in granting this increase; but if you remember that the Earl of Cork by this procedure for £28 got up something like £600 or £500 Irish a year, the liberality will not be so apparent. I shall read from the records—the annals of the town—from, I believe, the only copy in existence, on this point. It is, I believe, the only perfect copy in existence. In 1464, date 27th of December—I just nearly went to draw your attention to the foundation and the existence of the college on the very ground we are talking of.

5591. It is called "The College" still!—Yes, the college is a house in itself—distinct. Sir Walter Raleigh's was the warden's house of that college, and the very ground upon which the present school is built was the very ground where the school of the college existed; so that this very school was built by the Earl of Cork on that ground. And I shall show you that an order that he should build that, made by the Lord Lieutenant, was dated the 27th December, 1464. It was the foundation of the College of Youghal by this nobleman—the 8th Earl of Desmond—and, as I have said, the community consisted of a warden, eight fellows, and with a donation of £500 a year at that date, a very considerable sum in those days. The house or college was endowed with certain manse and vicarages for the purposes of its support. It had eight fellows, a warden, twelve professors, and a large number of pupils. You will hardly believe it, that for £28 this clever gentleman that came over here with his silver hose and slashed doublet—as he calls himself, arriving in Dublin with a few pounds in his pocket—for £28 managed to acquire this college.

5592. To whom did he pay this £28!—He paid the £28 to a Mr. Jones, who derived it from his own uncle—from the Earl of Cork's own uncle—Dr. Boyle, the Bishop of Cork. He was made Bishop by the Earl of Cork. Well, he was warden of the college, and as warden sold it—

5593. How much was the income!—About £600 a year at that date.

5594. Why didn't Mr. Jones keep that!—Mr. Jones was one of the personal entourage of the Earl. All I can tell you is that Dr. Boyle, the Bishop of Cork, as warden, transferred the college to Mr. Jones, and Mr. Jones sold it to the Earl of Cork for £28.

5595. At what date!—The date of that transfer was, I think, 1613. Sir Walter Raleigh transferred it to the Earl of Cork for £1,500. Sir Walter Raleigh, on the establishment of the last Earl of Desmond, acquired half of the great man's estate, nearly the whole of the County of Cork, the County of Waterford, and the County of Kerry, and he transferred all this for £1,500.

5596. Which entire sum Sir Walter never got!—He only got £500. The very year he left Youghal his last West Indian expedition he sailed out of Youghal. We have a strong suspicion that the Earl of Cork supplied him with the last peck which was part payment of the £1,500. Now, what I would draw your attention to is this—this is very remarkable—I wish to draw your attention to the fact that the Earl of Cork, who so generously, so generously, and so liberally, according to existing estimates, founded this endowed school, and who out of his own private purse gave a £50 a year to the master and usher to educate the poor of Youghal—I want to show you under what circumstances he had to pay that. After the Earl of Cork was in possession of these vast estates of Sir Walter Raleigh, and the college that belonged to the people of Youghal, that was founded by the 8th Earl of Desmond for the education of the people of Youghal. There were some grants, and various endowments for the benefit and education of the people of Youghal. Well, after the Earl of Cork had acquired this college for £28, and had secured the estates of Sir Walter Raleigh for £1,500, there was a strong suspicion that the Earl of Cork was not duly carrying out the various bequests that were for the people of the town—the poor people of the town. A complaint was lodged before the Lord

Deputy that the Earl of Cork had failed to properly provide for the education of the people of Youghal, and to provide for the support of the poor of Youghal as he was bound to, under the estates he had acquired, by the attainted Earl of Desmond.

5597. Dr. TAYLOR.—To whom was the complaint made?—Lord Wentworth, the Lord Lieutenant of the day. On that complaint this followed, and I quote from the municipal records of Youghal, in 1434:—

"Lord Wentworth, the Lord Deputy of Ireland, hath named the Earl of Cork, Governor of Youghal, to appear in the High Court of Castle Chamber, Dublin, where Sir William Norreys, Attorney-General, exhibited a very ancient Bill against him and the Bishops of Cork and Waterford, who were charged with assisting Lord Cork to gain and keep illegal possession of the College of Youghal and its revenues, the said Bill stated that the Earl had by misrepresentation, for £200, got possession of the college from one Jones, who held it from Sir Walter Raleigh, but the said Earl procured on his relation, the Bishop of Cork, to deliver up the Seal Charter and the other records of said college to him, which he still detains, and procured a third of the revenues from him of the said college and his large revenues, that not yet willing to directly take possession of three, he moved the said bishops to continue as vicars, and two or three persons as fellows, allowing them for some time a small salary to support them, but did not allow them to live in the college as entitled to, but used it himself as a dwelling house, the said Earl was also charged with preventing any new election when a vacancy occurred, so that by time he became invested with the patronage, revenues, wisdom, and sole right of the Fellows, that he discharged the ancient collector of the College rents, and obtained an assignment from Sir James Ffolliott of the premises for a small consideration, but who had only Letters Patent granted him to pasture common lands. That Michael, Lord Bishop of Lismore, although he undertook to make no compromise with the said Earl in this matter, yet, in a meeting with the Bishop of Cork concerted to make up the matter with said Earl about said College, on consideration of said Earl paying forty marks to the warden and £200 annually to the Fellows, and that soon after the Earl procured a grant of the College by Patent, by all of which methods he still continues in possession of its revenues to the value of £200 a year, besides the stipends and salaries of the churches. The Attorney-General prayed that the Earl's Patent may be annulled by the King's prerogative, and that certain persons must be indicted upon the Earl and the said Bishops of Cork and Waterford. The Earl pleaded that he had a fair answer to the Attorney-General's Bill, he denied turning out the Fellows, he acknowledged having lived in the College, he denied having refused to restore the seal and deeds, except once, he admitted having come to an agreement with the warden and Fellows about said College, that he had divided their stipends and procured a grant by Letters Patent of possession of said College from the King in his and his heirs for ever, that he had repaid the church. The Lord Deputy, Lord Wentworth, then bid it conveyed to the Earl of Cork, that he had better leave the settlement of the matter to his own judgment, or that he would fine him £20,000, have his Palace confiscated, and deprive him of his office of Lord High Treasurer of Ireland. My Lord Cork submitted to abide by the Lord Deputy's arbitration, who awarded him to pay a fine of £25,000 to the King, for the losses and profits which he had enjoyed quietly for over thirty years. He also sold the stipends and patronage of the churches into the hands of the Crown, leaving the Earl only the college residence with the desamsoned lands at Youghal. The Earl undertook to found a school at Youghal, to settle £20 a year on its master and £10 a year for usher, also to found an almshouse, and to give £5 a year to every scholar, these to be annual charges."

It is a very strong thing the case against him. It was heard in the Chamber at Dublin Castle, and Lord Wentworth was satisfied of the charges against the Earl of Cork that they were proved, and that he hadn't provided for the education of the people of Youghal, nor for the poor of Youghal, according to the wishes of the Earls of Desmond, whose lands he held. Lord Wentworth suggested a compromise to provide in some way for the defaults he had made, and to provide for "defaults to the honor of his lordship the King," and the sagacious Earl of Cork, who thought it well to accept the suggestion of My Lord Deputy Wentworth, made the following arrangement for the education of the people of Youghal, and for the maintenance of the poor of Youghal and to satisfy the honor of his lordship the King, he sent to the King £30,000, and he settled £20 a year to provide for the education of the people of Youghal—he settled £50 on the master and £10 on the usher—and he also established almshouses—according to the Deputy's suggestion, and gave £5 to every almsman, and £5 for the repairs of the Manor house for their recreation—these being annual charges which he promised to make by his last will—charged by him on his heirs for ever. I think I have satisfied you that in the payment of £30,000 to his honor the King, and £5 a year to half a dozen poor men—£10 a year to the usher, and £20 to the master—I don't think the Earl of Cork discharged his liabilities to the poor and the youth of Youghal.

5598. Have you the date of the origin of the college of Youghal?—1464, by Thomas, 8th Earl of Desmond.

5599. I suppose Roman Catholics attended it?—At that time the only people known in Youghal were Catholics. In 1464 there was no Reformation. The college was founded by Thomas, 8th Earl of Desmond, and continued by a Bull of the Pope.

5600. According to this history the present endowment really represents the original endowment?—Yes. The present endowment represents, handed down unbrokenly, the £2000 a year made by Thomas, 8th Earl of Desmond, for the higher education. It was higher education, because there was also lower education provided for the people of Youghal by the Franciscan Order, and it was also at that time concurrently going on provided by the same Desmonds in the Franciscan Priory or South Aisle, as it was called in 1330. Monks of the Franciscan Order founded the Franciscan Abbey and applied their means to the teaching of the poor of Youghal.

5601. What has become of that?—That abbey was swallowed up.

5602. Professor DOUGHERTY.—When you spoke of the intentions of the founder, were you referring to Thomas, 8th Earl of Desmond, as the founder?—Yes.

5603. You don't regard him as the founder of the endowment with which we are dealing?—I do, because I say that suggestion given by Lord Wentworth, the Lord Lieutenant, to the Earl of Cork, to provide for, as he was bound to provide for, according to the Desmond grant, to provide for the education of the poor of Youghal; I say he did so by founding it on that college, and that instead of the £500 a year he only gave up £30, in other words. I would have the greatest hopes, if the Duke of Devonshire had this matter laid before him, if he knew the liabilities that rested on his vast possessions to provide for—I don't say for the poor, for we do that ourselves. We Catholics provide for our poor, but for education, if he granted some increase of the original grant—if his Grace would graciously grant as that—then we would have a good classical school in Youghal for all denominations, and that the Protestants and Catholics would join, as I would hope they would, in a united committee.

PUBLIC SITTING—MONDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1897.

At the Courthouse, Fermoy.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIRN, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.Sc., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DODGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, junr., was in attendance.

ST. COLMAN'S COLLEGE, FERMOY.

The Rev. William Hutch, M.A., sworn, was examined.

Rev. William
Hutch, M.A.

5004. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—When was St. Colman's College founded?—It was founded in 1858. The buildings were then commenced by the Rev. Dr. Murphy, the bishop; they were completed about two years ago, in 1865.

5005. What amount of land is attached to the college?—About 2½ acres.

5006. I see you are subject to a rent of £551.—Yes, that is the ground-rent for the college, that is for the entire portion within the boundary wall. There were at one time a number of houses and small tenements on the ground, and these were purchased up.

5007. Have you a lease of the ground?—I believe we have no lease for the entire ground within the boundary walls. There are seven or eight leases for the small portion of land included within the boundary walls. That I mention in order to give the Commission an idea of how the premises were originally purchased. The houses that were on the plot were bought up and demolished.

5008. How much money was expended in purchasing up the site and in building?—I have no data to give for the exact sum, but I should put the cost at £20,000 or thereabouts.

5009. I believe the money for the building was partly collected throughout the diocese and partly drawn from funds at the Bishop's disposal?—There were collections, and also a tax upon the priests.

5010. Was all the money available expended on the building?—I could not say of my own knowledge, but I am perfectly sure it was.

5011. You have no invested funds then?—We have nothing invested except a sum of £1,050 invested in Great Southern and Western Railway shares; but that money was the amount of several small bequests. It is not an endowment.

5012. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Was the money given specially for the college?—Yes, it was given for the college, but it is absolutely at the disposal of the bishop, and he could withdraw it to-morrow if he were so disposed.

5013. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You say the bishop could withdraw the money, then it is his property?—There is no obligation to leave it with the college if the trustees think fit to withdraw it.

5014. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—How many trustees are there?—There are seven, including the bishop. The trustees are the parish priest of Mallow, the parish priest of Miltelstown, the parish priest of Kamlurk, the parish priest of Macroom, the parish priest of Ballymacoda or Lady's-bridge, and the parish priest of Miltelton. That is, five vicars and one who is not a vicar—the parish priest of Lady's-bridge or Ballymacoda.

5015. Do you get a new deed executed when there is a change of trustees?—Yes.

5016. The trustees for the building and the funds are not the same?—No, I myself am a trustee for the funds but not for the building.

5017. All the trustees are exclusively of one denomination?—All the trustees are Roman Catholics. The institution is Roman Catholic. It is a Diocesan College, but not in the strict sense of the Catholic Church.

5018. Have you no course of theology in the college?—No, although many of the students are aspirants for the priesthood, they merely read their preliminary course for entrance to a theological college. They read their classics, mathematics, English, and any modern languages which they may choose to take up.

5019. Do they read any mental philosophy?—No, there is no mental philosophy taught, but natural philosophy is one of the subjects taught.

5020. What is the teaching staff of the College?—The teaching staff consists of four lay professors, and three clerical professors. I do not count myself in the teaching staff because my other duties do not allow me to do so.

5021. How are the teaching staff paid?—The clerical professors receive their board and lodgings, and a salary of £50 a year.

5022. Is that provided out of the fees?—Yes. The lay professors reside out, and they have salaries averaging about £100.

5023. What subjects do they teach?—One of them teaches classics, and two others are confined to mathematics; another of them teaches classics and a little mathematics; one is exclusively for mathematics.

5024. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What does Mr. Byrne teach?—Mr. Byrne is rather a grinder for boys, where we want them specially prepared for a matriculation or similar examinations. He does work of that class, making up boys for special examinations. Mr. Keating and Mr. Mulohy teach mathematics, and so does Mr. O'Reilly.

5025. Does Mr. Mulohy teach mathematics exclusively?—He teaches mathematics and natural philosophy. He is a Bachelor of Engineering of the Royal University.

5026. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What number of pupils attend the college?—There are ninety-two boarders, and eighteen day boys, 110 altogether.

5027. I find in 1880 the number put down as 140 on the roll, of whom 115 were boarders. Has there been much fluctuation in your numbers?—For the last two years our numbers have fallen a little, but our average has been from 90 to 100 boarders. For the two years before that, however, our average was from 100 to 115.

5028. Your course is the Intermediate course, in addition have you any special courses?—We prepare boys for the preliminary examination as scholars' apprentices, for the matriculation examinations of the Royal University and the College of Surgeons. In order to give you an idea of our course I shall read you a tabulated result of the examinations. For the Intermediate we make all our boys go in. For the last six years there were obtained by the pupils of the school 36 exhibitions of a money value of £1,775, with 14 first class prizes, 14 second class prizes, and 25 third class prizes, making 53 prizes in books. There were also 3 medals won for special excellence in modern languages; two ten pound money prizes for special excellence in modern languages and English. The whole of our prizes of all kinds within the six years were 79, including medals, prizes, exhibitions, and all other distinctions.

5629. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Can you tell us the money value of all these prizes?—Well, no. I have sent all my clients a Christmas card, and in that Christmas card all the results of the five years' prizes are set down.

5630. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the money value of the total of these prizes?—The total money of our exhibitions is £1,775; that is the value of the thirty-eight exhibitions. The money value of our book prizes is £95. Then we had £20 special money prizes for English and modern languages. Then we got last year prizes for special excellence in Greek, French, and Italian.

5631. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—What is the amount received for results free within the same period?—It is on an average something like £140 a year. This year we expect £100.

5632. The average amount which your pupils gained was £339 a year?—Yes.

5633. And the average amount paid to the teaching staff of the institution in result fees was only £140?—Yes.

5634. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—From an educational point of view do you think the money is wisely distributed, so much to the pupils and so little for results?—I believe it is a wise thing to give the pupils a good portion of the money, because we find that there are many boys who could not educate themselves without the money. I have boys who do not cost their parents anything.

5635. They utilize the money to defray the expenses of their education?—Yes.

5636. The teachers then indirectly get a portion of the money back for the education of the pupils?—Yes, they do.

5638. What fees do you charge?—Thirty-three guineas a year for boarders even fourteen, for those under fourteen we charge thirty guineas. We make a reduction in the case of brothers.

5639. What are your fees for day boys?—For day boys our terms, inclusive of books and all other things, are £7 1s.

5640. Are all your boys paying pupils?—They are all paying except one, and that one is paying too, because he gets money prizes of our own. In a certain sense he is a paying pupil; but all the others are paying down cash.

5641. To what class do your pupils belong?—They belong to different classes; some of them are the children of professional men; the greater portion are the children of farmers.

5642. From what district of the county do they come?—There are twenty-five boys from the city and county of Cork, the rest come from every county in Munster.

5643. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the nearest school that competes with you?—Rockwell College I believe is the nearest.

5644. Does St. Finbar's at Cork compete with you?—St. Finbar's is a day school.

5645. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is there no school at Mount Mellery?—Yes, but the pupils do not go in for the Intermediate. The boys who go there are mostly aspiring to be priests. The bulk of them are preparing for the priesthood.

5646. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Who has the management of this college?—The management is entirely in my hands.

5647. Do you select the staff?—Well, so far as the clerical staff is concerned, the bishop has the nominal appointment, but he always gets me to select them. I have the appointment of the lay professors, but I always let the bishop know whom I am getting.

5648. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—I believe you have some burses to pupils at your school?—Well, you cannot call them burses. I hold a competitive examination, at which I offer three places at the beginning of every year to the best boys who present themselves.

5649. Are there funds available for these?—No, I have no funds; I allot them out of the saving of the fees. You cannot strictly call them burses. They are half free places.

5650. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—In point of fact they are half free education?—Yes, but then that is not what I was asked.

5651. Dr. TRAILL.—Are day boys in the school when they compete for these places?—It is before they enter the school. I issue a programme, and the boys come and compete. We don't know where the boys are, and the best boys win.

5652. Do you look to the condition of their parents?—No; we go in for bursas. We don't mind anything else but brains; but we look to character.

5653. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Does that apply to day boys?—No; to boarders exclusively. Day boys are an idle set.

5654. Dr. TRAILL.—Your experience is that a mixture of day boys and boarders does not succeed?—It would be better if they were kept separate.

5655. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—You find you have not the same control over them that you have over the boarders?—We have no control over the day boys after class hours, and they do not study.

5656. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Have you ever tried to get them up after school was over?—I would not have that mixture at all. There is a priest with the boarders whilst they are in the study-hall.

5657. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—At present you are self-supporting, but I suppose you find the struggle rather severe?—It is a tight struggle, and we depend so much upon the fluctuations of the tides. We would not have so good a school but for our success at the Intermediate Examinations.

5658. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Suppose there was an endowment available for you, what do you think would be the best way of applying it?—I think for a large portion of it, the best way to apply it would be in free burses.

5659. Do you consider the application of funds for free places of general utility?—I have noticed in reading the reports that there are a great many small endowments scattered through the country, endowments of from £50 to £40; and I am of opinion that these endowments in connection with small intermediate schools do more harm than good. Where you have only a small number of boys, you lack the mental activity which exists in a school where there is a large number of boys together. Boys coming into contact with one another educate each other quite as much as their masters do. They discuss various subjects, and help one another in a thousand ways. In the second place, these boys in small schools lack the stimulus of the keen competition which exists among the boys in a large school. Then again, for an endowment of £30 or £40 I do not see how you can get a competent man to teach the course of an Intermediate school. If you have only one master he must be able to teach English, classics, mathematics, and one modern language, and no man who is capable of doing that will go to a school for the starvation salary of £40 a year. I find that at Charterhouse there is an endowment of £36, and at Youghal there is one of £20; these, I believe, were left free, they do not belong to any denomination. I think that a much better utilisation of these funds than the present one would be if they were thrown open to the competition of boys from Charleville and Youghal, who could compete for them here. I would do it in this way—I would issue an advertisement saying that there would be an examination for a prize of £30, open to boys, say, from Youghal; let all the boys coming from that district compete, and let the best boy get it. I find that at Kilworth there is a small endowment of 15 guineas, by means of this endowment help could be given to two pupils. I think my proposal is a very modest one. If this money were given as free burses in the college at Fermoy, it would be a much better use of the funds. In these wretched little schools you cannot get a competent master, and if you do obtain one, his heart will be broken trying to work up a good school.

5656. Dr. TRAILL.—The endowment at Youghal has always been paid to a Protestant master!—Yes, I believe so.

5657. How far is it to Kilworth from Fermoy?—About three miles.

5658. How is the endowment there applied?—I do not know what has become of the money; we have day pupils at the college from that district.

5659. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Would the people of these localities be satisfied if the funds were applied in the way you suggest?—Of course everyone looks to himself. I believe the people do not know anything about many of these endowments. I believe they would be delighted if the money were applied in this way. Of course it is a matter for the Commission to say whether the money is more judiciously expended in Youghal and elsewhere than supplementing a school already established.

5660. Dr. TRAILL.—Canon Keller said he would be satisfied to leave the Youghal endowment to the Protestants if by any means the Christian Brothers could bring themselves under the Board of National Education!—That may be Canon Keller's view of the matter.

5661. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—What is the provision in Fermoy for primary education?—Well I can scarcely say. I think it is quite enough for me to contrive myself to my own business.

5662. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Do you think such towns as Youghal and Middleton are sufficiently large to support a good classical school for Catholics?—Yes, and as you mention the word "classical school," I may say in these places when the people talk of classical schools they think of the system that was in vogue many years ago, when there was nothing but hedge schools. When I was a little fellow I was at one of these schools, and was taught some Latin and Greek, but left absolutely ignorant of English, mathematics, and everything else. My education was positively ruined. The boys at these hedge schools were taught a certain amount of Greek and Latin and left absolutely ignorant of everything else.

5663. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there a school of that sort existing in the neighbourhood now?—I have got two pupils who came from such a school in Kentuck. These boys had been reading Greek and Latin. They could repeat some of the passages, but they did not know the five declensions in the Latin grammar, and had no idea of the stem formation or the case endings. They knew no English, Algebra or Euclid, and could not spell ten words correctly.

5664. What age were those two boys you have mentioned?—They were fourteen.

5665. You don't regard with favour that kind of a school?—I look upon the establishment of that class of school as a curse.

5666. Do you think that under the present Intermediate scheme these boys could not be pushed forward?—These boys do not go in for the Intermediate examinations. The school is started for the purpose of making things cheap. The people find a man who is a self-taught man, and he starts a sort of a hedge school.

5670. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—The people are probably attracted by the title of "classical school"!—Yes, and the pupils are taught in such a way that doubts they have learned have to be unlearned when they come to a proper school.

5671. You have said that you were mistaken when a boy at one of these schools. Do you share in the general opinion which seems to prevail that examining was unknown until the Intermediate system was established?—I find that the people who are attacking the Intermediate system are those who have not succeeded at it themselves. I know one school, the head-master of which was giving instructions the first year the Intermediate started to all his fellow head-masters throughout Ireland as to how they were to conduct their schools so as to get exhibitions. He said to himself for two years and failed. He did not get a single thing, and he gave it up, and is now I believe writing translations of Greek and Latin text-books. I find that to succeed at the Intermediate examining will not do. You cannot cram a boy in advanced Greek or Latin composition. At the examination you get a piece of Macaulay or Froese to turn into Greek prose, or perhaps a piece of Langens for Latin prose composition. How can you cram a boy for that?

5672. Dr. TRAILL.—But do many of these succeed in doing that, in writing Greek and Latin prose?—Yes, certainly. We have a boy who took a prize in Latin prose, and the same boy got second place in the list out of all Ireland. I will tell you what you can cram—you can cram the Junior grade composition. The Junior grade composition is not up to the mark. The grammar is, I think, difficult enough; but in the composition they have eighteen examination stock ideas that they give out every year. You can cram these, but you cannot cram the compositions in the middle or senior grades. The history too is crammed.

Dr. TRAILL.—History is crammed all the world over.

5673. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—Taking them all round, do you find the Intermediate examinations a test of real scholarship?—Well, a great deal depends upon what you mean by real scholarship. The Intermediate is no test of scholarship, in the strict sense of the word, up to the age of eighteen, but I believe the Intermediate course is an excellent foundation upon which to base real scholarship.

5674. Do you think the results of the Intermediate examinations a fair test of the work done by the schools?—Certainly I do.

5675. What has been the effect of the Intermediate on your working expenses?—It entails very heavy expense; much more expense than before. It scarcely pays even with our large number taking the result fees into account.

5676. In a smaller school there would be less expense?—I think so.

5677. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Do you mean that the amount of money you get in result fees does not cover the expenses?—Taking all into account, the result fees do not cover the expenses. You see I have to get good professors, and if I have good men I must pay them a corresponding salary. It also entails a large expenditure for books. Now last year I expended over £10 for the best editions of the text-books I could get. I bought Whately's edition of Bacon's Essays, costing 10s., for two boys who were going in for the Intermediate. I buy the best editions I can get of every book for the clever boys in the class. I also buy books for the professors, which adds to the expense.

5678. Lord Justice FRYGIMAN.—Do you teach botany?—No, we do not go in for botany. We are badly in want of apparatus and a physical laboratory in order to teach such subjects.

5679. Are you in connection with South Kentington?—No; but we intend shortly to open a department of the College in connection with South Kentington.

too; we expect to go in for the examinations in connection with the Science and Art Department next May. But we are going in only in science, not in art or drawing.

5650. Why do you not teach drawing?—Well it is not easy to get a competent person to teach it.

5651. But is not drawing the foundation of all technical training?—Yes, but our boys do not go in for technical training, and teaching drawing would interfere with their Intermediate course. The education of our boys is almost purely literary.

5652. Dr. TRAILL.—Is not drawing one of the Intermediate Examination subjects?—Yes; but we do not send the boys in on that subject. It is difficult, as I have said, to get a competent teacher.

5653. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you think the Cork School of Art could provide teachers for this part of the country?—I don't think its influence extends beyond Cork. I do not see what perceptible influence it can exercise at Fermoy.

5654. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What do your boys go in for?—They go in for professions. In fact, the great majority of our boys are intended for a professional career. I may mention that we send up a number of our boys every year for the Matriculation Examination of the Royal University. During the last six years sixty-nine of our students have matriculated. For the First Arts Examination we sent up two who passed. As a general rule, however, we do not prepare them for the Arts examinations. Most of these boys were aspirants for the priesthood. Five out of seven who matriculated this year were for medicine.

5655. Professor DOUGHERTY.—With which of the grades of the Intermediate Examinations would you compare the Matriculation Examination of the Royal University?—Well, you must distinguish between Honours and Pass. A Junior Grade Intermediate Examination ought to have no difficulty in passing the Matriculation Examination of the Royal University; and a Senior Grade Examination ought to be able to matriculate with Honours.

5656. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You have told us that most of your pupils are prepared for a professional career. Have you considered what the result would be to the country from a multiplication of schools like yours; all the educated youth of Ireland would be brought up to a professional career?—Yes, the professions would become overstocked. A great many of my pupils go in for medicine, but I tell them that unless they are prepared to persevere and go into the Army or Navy it is better not to go in for the medicine. It is a very good profession for a boy if he can afterwards get into the Army or Navy, or if he goes out to the Colonies. But the profession is overstocked at home; there are more doctors than there are dispensaries for them. And I am afraid the solicitors' profession is also overstocked. We have three solicitors in the town of Fermoy who were educated at the College.

5657. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You have given us your view of what you call "hedge classical schools." I should like to know your opinion of those primary schools in which the masters prepare boys for the Intermediate Examinations?—I do not consider the masters of primary schools efficient or judicious teachers of classics. Most of them have learned their classics themselves, and I don't believe a man can teach what he has learned himself. When they teach these courses at the primary schools they have too many irons in the fire; I don't think they can be worked together. There are too few teachers in elementary schools to combine the primary, Intermediate, and University courses. I think thirty boys are about as many as one man can teach.

5658. Your opinion is then that if the primary teachers confine themselves to their proper work they will have quite enough to do?—Yes.

5659. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is there anything to prevent the Christian Brothers maintaining a sort of primary school from which yours could be fed?—Nothing whatever. I may say that in this town there are boys going to the Christian Brothers' schools who could well afford to go to mine.

5660. Dr. TRAILL.—Then it is the cheapness of the Christian Brothers' schools that prevents those boys going on to you?—Yes, it is. The teaching at these schools is frequently too elementary to push the boys on.

5661. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—One of the proposals made to us about these small endowments was that some of these might be so arranged that the school at which the boys were educated might get the benefit of their result fees. For example, supposing a boy from Charleville came here, was educated here, and secured a certain number of distinctions at the Royal University examination, that the school that would get a portion of the endowment as result fees for him?—That would be a more paying thing for the school. I think it would be better to give the endowment to the school and then invite boys of a certain age in from the town of Charleville to compete for it.

5662. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Where are the boys to be taught for that examination?—Taught at home.

5663. Ah, that is the difficulty?—Well, I do not see why boys in the sixth class at a National school might not compete for them. We find that many of the boys who come from the National schools are thoroughly well up in mathematics.

5664. Dr. TRAILL.—You would limit the examination to such subjects as are taught to the boys at National schools?—The course might be arranged to suit them.

5665. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Any institution established for the exclusive use of a particular denomination and managed solely by members of that denomination is exempt from our Act, except with the written consent of the governing body of the institution. It is plain that St. Columba's College is not within our Act except with the written consent of the governing body. When that consent is given the only practical matter we can do would be to relieve you of the difficulty of making new deeds on the appointment of fresh trustees. We could incorporate those who now hold office and vest the property in them.

5666. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you find that the papers of the Intermediate Examinations are unequally graduated?—Yes, I do.

5667. I find that a pupil of yours, in the Middle Grade Latin, takes only twelfth place with 587 marks out of 1,305, and another with 958 marks out of 1,340, in the Senior Grade Latin, gets second place?—Yes, but that boy in the senior grade was an exceptionally clever boy. We find that the papers are not fairly graduated in difficulty between the different grades; and in the same grade they are not properly graduated in difficulty in the same subjects in succeeding years. I find that the mathematical papers in the senior grade—(to Dr. TRAILL)—I am afraid that your trigonometry papers are too hard.

Dr. TRAILL.—I did not set the paper in trigonometry.

Fitness.—There are also complaints that the papers are often set in a costly way.

5668. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Did you find that, in one year in the Junior Grade French Examinations, nearly everybody would get merit, and that the same pupils the following year in the same subjects would not get merit marks?—Yes, that has happened. Sometimes the papers given out in the Middle Grade course in Greek is comparatively hard, and last year the paper was very little harder than the Junior Grade Greek.

Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—I am afraid they leave too much to the mercy of the examiner.

5669. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you find that

Rev. William

your objections apply chiefly to the papers of the examiners in the Junior Grade, who are frequently inexperienced!—There was a Professor Davis who was an stranger, and he was a great "craz." For a long time he seemed to pick out the hardest words and words he could find in Roby's Latin Grammar, and expected the pupils to know those words that might not be met in years of reading.

AHERN AND BRITWAY PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

The Rev. John W. Hopkins, Vicar of Ahern, sworn and examined.

Rev. John W.
Hopkins.

5700. Lord Justice FRINGGSON.—What is the name of the parish of which you are rector?—Ahern and Britway. It is a united parish; I am vicar of Ahern and rector of Britway.

5701. There is a school in your parish with a small endowment about which you wrote to us. What is the amount of the endowment?—An acre of ground, which was granted on the 22nd of April, 1838, by the late Duke of Devonshire. It was granted to the minister and churchwardens.

5702. There is a schoolhouse on the ground?—Yes.

5703. That was built by the "Association for the Discontinuance of Vice," assisted by private subscriptions?—Yes.

5704. Do you know the terms of the grant?—I believe it is held in perpetuity at the rent of 1s. a year from the Duke of Devonshire.

5705. Are there money funds attached to the school?—None whatever.

5706. What is the exact name of the school?—It is called Ahern and Britway Parochial School.

5707. Are Ahern and Britway separate parishes?—Yes, they are distinct parishes. Ahern is a village and Britway is a rectory.

5708. When were they united?—Well I could not say. They have possibly been united from time immemorial.

5709. Under whose management is the school?—It is under my management as the vicar of the parish.

5710. How is the school maintained?—It is maintained by private subscriptions.

5711. Is the school under the National Board of Education?—No, it is not.

5712. Dr. TRAILL.—Why are they then called National schools?—Well, at one time the school was under the National Board of Education, but I had a dispute with the Board.

5713. What was the dispute about?—I refused to submit to the conditions of Rule 95 on the Board's regulations.

5714. What is Rule 95 to which you have referred?—Rule 95 requires the teacher to refuse to give religious instruction to any child wishing to receive it. Well, the Commissioners called upon me to compel the teacher to adhere to that rule.

5715. That is not to compel the children to attend the religious instruction?—Oh, not at all; but to compel the child to absent herself from the religious instruction, and this I refused to do.

5716. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—You refused to compel what child?—To compel a Roman Catholic child to absent herself from the religious instruction if she were willing to attend.

5717. That is, during the time the teacher was giving religious instruction to the other children?—Yes.

5718. Lord Justice FRINGGSON.—What is the number of children at present upon the roll of the school?—There are at present six upon the roll.

5719. What is the average attendance?—Well, the average attendance is about five.

5720. Are the children all members of the same family?—No; there are children belonging to three families attending the school.

5721. What means have you of paying the teacher?—The salary is paid by means of private subscriptions.

5722. What is his salary?—The teacher is receiving only £12 a year; but then he teaches in Ballynac school also. He teaches in Ballynac in the morning, and then he comes and teaches three hours every day in the Ahern school in the evening.

5723. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the nearest Protestant school?—Rathcorran.

5724. Lord Justice FRINGGSON.—How far is Ballynac school from yours?—I think about three miles, and I believe it is nearer than Rathcorran, which I have just mentioned.

5725. Under whose management is that school—the one at Ballynac?—It is under the management of the Protestant curate.

5726. Is it a school under the National Board?—No, it is not.

5727. How many children are on the roll at the Ballynac school?—There are ten, I believe.

5728. Dr. TRAILL.—How many children were attending your school at Ahern when you had to dispute with the National Board?—I think there were three.

5729. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Had you any Roman Catholic children attending the school at that time?—Yes, one Roman Catholic child.

5730. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—What was the age of the child to whom you refer?—I think she was about twelve or fourteen years of age.

5731. Is she attending the school at present?—No, she is not.

5732. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it a master or mistress that is in charge of the school?—It is a master.

5733. Where was he trained?—Under the Church Education Society, but I think he holds a certificate under the National Board.

5734. How many children would the school accommodate?—I suppose it would accommodate about thirty pupils.

5735. Lord Justice FRINGGSON.—Do you think the children are getting any useful education under the present arrangement?—Well, I believe they are.

5736. How many Protestant children are in the parish who could attend the school?—There are about ten, but there are some children of Protestant gentry besides these.

5737. These children to whom you have referred are the children of Protestant parents who live in the neighbourhood of the school?—They are the children of Protestant farmers who reside close to the school. I may observe, gentlemen, that a few years ago I represented to the "Church Representative Body" that the school should be taken over and placed under the National Board as a vested school for all denominations in the parish. This I was induced to do on account of the difficulty of managing it as a small parochial school.

5738. Rev. Dr. MULLOY.—But what course would you adopt in that case with regard to Rule 95?—Of course, under the circumstances, I would refuse to become the manager; nor would I ask any dogmas, no matter of what denomination in that case to take the management.

5739. Lord Justice NABH.—Is the school near your church?—Yes, it is near the church; it is within a quarter of a mile of it.

5740. What is the nearest National school under Roman Catholic management?—I think Knockmore is the nearest.

Oct. 21, 1887.
Rev. John W.
Hopley.

5741. How far is it distant?—About a mile and three-quarters by the shortest road.

5742. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Is the district a thickly populated one?—Not especially; but there are a great many Roman Catholic children living in the district to whom it would be a great benefit to have a National School there.

5743. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there any layman living near you who would take the management of the school if it was put under the National Board, for all denominations?—I do not think there is.

5744. Is there no Roman Catholic layman would take the management?—I do not believe there is a Roman Catholic layman of a position to take the management, sufficiently close to the neighbourhood.

5745. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—What direction is it in, does it lie towards Castledyrnion?—It lies almost due south of it.

5746. Dr. TRAILL.—Does the school revert to the Bishops of Devonshire if it comes to be used as such?—Well, I could not venture an opinion upon that, I do not know.

5747. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—The property seems to a certain extent to be derelict since the Church Act.

5748. Dr. TRAILL.—Does the schoolmaster reside on the premises at ABERE?—No, he does not.

5749. But is not the property given in trust for a resident schoolmaster?—Yes, I think that is the case. The schoolmaster resides at the Ballynac school.

5750. What use is made at present of the residence at the ABERE school?—I let it out in apartments to a police constable who is stationed there, and I apply the rent towards the maintenance of the school.

5751. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Do you not consider that letting it out in apartments in this way is a breach of the trust?—Well, I could not answer you whether it is a breach of the trust or not.

5752. Does the policeman to whom you have let the premises hold under a yearly tenancy?—He has signed an agreement to give up the premises to me whenever I want them.

5753. To whom do the Ballynac school premises belong?—The Ballynac school premises are, I think, private property; they belong to Mr. Nason.

5754. Is Ballynac a distinct parish?—Yes, it is a separate parish.

5755. Lord Justice NASH.—Could not the endowment be more beneficially utilised than as it is employed at present?—It would be a great pity to divert it from the purpose to which it has been originally devoted. Indeed I believe a great wrong would be thereby inflicted upon the Protestants of the parish, if the premises were diverted from that purpose.

5756. But do you ever expect to maintain an efficient school there?—Yes, I hope I shall be able to maintain the school there.

5757. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—Is there no other school in the neighbourhood to which these children could go if your school were closed?—I am afraid not. I fear if it is closed they could not attend any other school. Their residences are so situated that they could not attend at any of the National schools of the neighbourhood.

5758. The only prospect that appears to me is to make it a National school under such management as would attract the children of other denominations. Supposing that to be done, how many children are there in the immediate neighbourhood who could attend the school?—Well, I cannot say exactly, but there cannot be less than thirty Roman Catholic children to whom the school would be a very great advantage.

5759. Do these children live close to the school?—Yes, there are a number of them living in the adjacent village.

5760. Did the Roman Catholic children ever, as a rule, attend the school?—Oh, yes; at one time I had no less than fourteen Roman Catholic children attending the school.

5761. Rev. Dr. MOLLAT.—Were they all learning the Protestant catechism?—No. What I really objected to with regard to rule 95 was being called upon to refuse to give religious instruction to a child that was willing to receive it from me.

5762. Dr. TRAILL.—What sort of religious instruction do you refer to; is it the Scriptures or the Church catechism, or both?—Well, I could scarcely answer that question.

5763. Did the child say that it wanted the religious instruction?—I was simply called upon by the secretary of the National Board of Education to direct the teacher not to give religious instruction to the child. The teacher had consulted me on the matter.

5764. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Then the child had not been receiving religious instruction; so, in point of fact, the case did not really arise?—In a certain sense it did not arise, but I was simply called upon not to give the religious instruction.

5765. Dr. TRAILL.—But surely the parent of the child is the best judge as to what religious instruction the child is to receive?—I maintain that a parent has no right to dictate in a matter of conscience.

Dr. TRAILL.—Oh, that is not a Protestant doctrine at all.

5766. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—It is very plain that the way in which the property in this school is held is not satisfactory. The original grant was to the ministers and churchwardens, but the latter have been abolished by Act of Parliament, and have no longer any legal existence. The case of this school is exactly similar to hundreds of other schools throughout Ireland. However, unless by means of some conjoint scheme for them all, I do not see how we can really do anything in the matter. If the people in your locality think it of any value, they could constitute a body to take over this, and similar property; and it is in our power to vest it in that body, and by giving the body a corporate character, to prevent any danger of the property becoming derelict, and also the trouble and expense of transfer. By this means a school, open to all denominations, might be established in your neighbourhood. The people in your district do not seem to be sufficiently supplied with schools. The Roman Catholic children have to travel almost a couple of miles to school. I desire, however, to say that in cases of this kind we never take the initiative; we would not press a scheme upon a school of this kind where the present trustees are unwilling; however, with the consent of the governing body, the Act empowers us to deal not only with this school, but with a large number of other schools throughout the various districts where our Commission have been holding sittings.

5767. Dr. TRAILL.—Would you object to have this school under Roman Catholic management if you were allowed free access to the school for the purpose of giving religious instruction to the Protestant children?—Well, I would not like to have it solely under Roman Catholic management.

5768. Rev. Dr. MOLLAT.—You are not in favour then of a mixed system of education?—I am, decidedly. The only thing in the whole system of the National Board that I object to is rule 95, and I really believe that no Roman Catholic or Protestant clergyman ought to be bound by that rule.

5769. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Then you would not object to the endowment being employed in the most beneficial manner for the children of the district?—I am only anxious to see the endowment employed to the best advantage.

5770. Lord Justice FRYGIMSON.—We would not give the property to the clergy of the parish alone, if we could find any people of position in the neighbourhood who would take an interest in the school, and his work. We could vest the property in a body of this kind, and give them power to place it under the National Board, and thus enable them in that way to make the school really useful to the people of the district.

Witness.—It occurs to me that the suggestion which you throw out, might be effected by vesting the school in the local bunch of magistrates.

5771. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Are there no resident gentry about the place who would take an interest in the school?—Yes, there are several.

5772. What are their names?—Mr. Bewley and Mr. Pine are two who live not very far from the place.

ADAIR NATIONAL SCHOOLS.

Rev. Thomas Warren, sworn.

Rev. Thomas
Warren.

5773. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are, I believe, rector of Fermoy?—Yes.

5774. How long have you been rector?—For over two years and a half.

5775. Are the Adair National schools under your management?—Yes, the schools are under my management as rector of the parish.

5776. Are they in connexion with the National Board?—Yes.

5777. How many pupils have you on the rolls?—At present I think there are fifty-four pupils on the rolls.

5778. What is the average attendance?—The average attendance, I believe, is about thirty-four.

5779. I see from the Report of 1880, that there is an endowment, paid by the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests?—Yes, there is.

5780. How much do you get from them?—I get a sum of £37 2s. 6d. a year.

5781. What other funds have you besides this £37 2s. 6d.?—I get also a bequest of £6 a year.

5782. What does that bequest arise from?—It was left by a lady in this parish, five or six years ago, a Miss Briscoe.

5783. By whom is that annual bequest paid?—It is paid to me by the Representative Church Body.

5784. Is the master paid by the National Board?—Yes.

5785. How are the premises held, is it under a lease?—Well the premises are held by the fact that we have been always in them.

5786. But what is the exact title by which you hold?—I could not tell you.

5787. It is stated in the Report of 1854, that an endowment of £1,000 was given by the Rev. Dr. Adair in the year 1814, which, with the accumulation of interest, amounted to £1,337 9s., in trust to the ministers and churchwardens of the parish of Fermoy, and the owner of the Fermoy estate. Who at present is the owner of the Fermoy estate?—I could not tell you anything about how the endowment is left; perhaps the agent of the estate would be able to throw some light upon that matter.

5788. Does anyone interfere in the management of the school except you?—I have the sole management; no one interferes in it except myself.

5789. Lord Justice NAISM.—Is there any other school in Fermoy under Protestant management but yours?—No other.

5790. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Have you a copy of the will of the Rev. Dr. Adair?—No, I have not a copy of the will; but I got a short abstract of it from which I saw that he left £1,000 to the schools.

5791. Have you got that abstract with you?—Yes, here it is [hands in document].

5792. Lord Justice NAISM.—Do you know was the Rev. Dr. Adair pastor of the parish of Fermoy?—I really could not say whether he was or not.

5793. The money was left in the year 1814?—Yes, that is the year I believe.

5794. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—It is by the Representative Church Body that you are paid the other donation of £6 annually?—Yes, it is from them I receive the money.

5795. You appear to have parochial endowments of very considerable value attached to these schools, would you not think it advantageous to have a parochial body to hold the property?—Well, I do not see what advantage would be gained by it. I think that it is managed very satisfactorily at present.

5796. Dr. TRAILL.—It cannot be satisfactory if the estate is changing hands?—Well, I presume the money is safe where it is, and I think it is better not to be trying experiments.

5797. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Have you no playground attached to this school?—Well at present our position in this. We have this old school-house which is somewhat decayed, and an infant school with a playground attached to it. Before I came here, the latter school was used solely as an infant school; however, when the school was brought under the National Board the children were all removed up to the infant school to which the playground is attached.

5798. To what purpose is the old school-house now devoted?—We use it for parochial meetings and other matters connected with the parish.

5799. How is your infant school held?—We have not a separate infant school now.

5800. How many curates are attached to the parish?—There are two curates at present.

FERMOY COLLEGE.

Michael Bourke, esq., J.P., sworn.

Michael Bourke, esq.

5801. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You are the agent of the Fermoy estate?—Yes.

5802. What is the name of the present owner?—Sir R. J. Abercromby, of Farglona, Aberdeenshire.

5803. He is the successor of the purchaser?—Yes, the estate was purchased in 1836 from a Mr. Anderson, who had been a bankrupt.

5804. I believe there is a place called the College, which we have seen to-day, upon the property?—Yes, there is.

5805. It is a large building with about eleven acres of ground attached to it?—Yes.

5806. Over what length of time does your personal knowledge of the college extend?—Well, something over thirty years.

5807. Has it all that time been a college?—It has.

5808. Do you remember who was head master during the period to which you have referred?—I think the Rev. Mr. White was one of the first I remember; then he was succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Fahy, and the latter by Dr. Robinson, then there were several others.

5809. Do you ever remember it a large school?—Well, yes, I do. In fact I was at school there myself, and we had at that time, I believe, nearly ninety boarders, and between, I think, twenty and thirty day boys.

5809. Who was then the head master?—Mr. White was then the head master.

5810. When did it cease to be a large school?—Well, it continued to be a large school until recent years. There was the Rev. Dr. Robinson who had a good school, then he was succeeded by two or three who died. The last head master was the Rev. Dr. Langley, and I had to take the college from his representatives.

5811. Did the people who succeeded the Rev. Dr. Fahy hold leases?—No, they held the premises merely by agreement.

5812. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Were they written agreements?—Yes.

5813. And for what terms were the premises held under these written agreements?—Well, the terms were various. Dr. Fahy held under an agreement for twenty years.

5814. Was there a rent reserved under the lease?—Yes, it was subject to a yearly rent of £80.

5815. Did all the executors of Dr. Fahy pay rent?—Yes, I received rent from each of the schoolmasters who held the premises.

5816. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Was the gymnasium which we saw when we visited the premises the morning put up by you or by one of the head masters?—That gymnasium to which you refer was erected by the Rev. Mr. Berry, a late head master.

5817. Was it erected at his own expense?—Yes.

5818. Dr. TRAILL.—Why did the Rev. Mr. Berry give up the premises?—Well, he got on so well here that he thought he would do better at Portlinton, and he made a mistake.

5819. How many pupils had Mr. Berry?—I think he had about 60 boarders.

5820. And you think if he had remained here he would have succeeded better than at Portlinton?—Well, I think it would have been better for him if he had remained here.

5821. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The school is now vacant; is it subject to any trust?—No, it is not subject to any trust—at present it is in my hands as agent of the estate.

5822. It does not appear to have any endowment?—No; that is the worst of it.

5823. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose you would willingly grant a lease of the school if any endowments were provided for it?—Yes, I would willingly grant a lease.

5824. Supposing the school were re-established, what number of day boys could you get to it?—Well, Dr. Hatch occupies the part so well that there is scarcely room for a second school at which day boys might attend.

5825. Were there no day boys coming in from the country to the school when you attended it yourself?—Indeed, I could scarcely say; I myself was a boarder, and I was so very young at the time that I cannot remember exactly whether there were or not.

ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIMARY EDUCATION, FERMOY.

Rev. P. J. O'Callaghan, Administrator of the Parish of Fermoy, sworn.

5826. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What provision is there for the primary education of boys under Roman Catholic management in the town?—We have got a school managed and taught by the Christian Brothers.

5827. Is that the only school?—No, we have a school in connection with the National Board of Education, at the other side of the town.

5828. Then the Christian Brothers have children only from one quarter of the town?—Well, there is no distinction made as to the locality from which the children come, but I may say that one side of the town is supplied by the Christian Brothers' schools.

5829. If there is no distinction made as to the locality of the town, what makes the distinction?—The distinction is simply this, the schools are in different positions. The old National School of Fermoy is a school at present under the charge of the Christian Brothers.

5830. When was it taken from under the control of the National Board?—I think it was in the year 1883 it was taken from the National Board and given over to the Christian Brothers; for a considerable time after this period we had no primary Catholic school in the town under the control of the National Board. In the year 1877 or 1878, I am not exactly sure which, the then Administrator of the parish of Fermoy purchased the interest of a house on the other side of the town, as he found the Christian Brothers' schools were not large enough for the school accommodation of the Catholic boys of the town. He purchased the interest in this house on the other side of the town, and got it put into connection with the National Board, and it has been since that period worked in connection with the National Board.

5831. What staff have the Christian Brothers got? There are two teaching brothers, and there is also a lay brother with them.

5832. What salary do you pay them?—I pay them out of our gate collection £120 a year, and they have a house of residence free of rent.

5833. Then the salary is raised by voluntary contributions?—Yes, it is all raised out of voluntary contributions.

5834. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is there not some guarantee given to the Christian Brothers before they undertake to start a school?—Yes, I may say that there was such a guarantee here. The Brothers must be maintained if they are to conduct the school. It has been a matter of arrangement that this salary shall be paid to the Christian Brothers. I pay them myself regularly.

5835. The school fees are devoted to paying masters and buying books?—I believe so, but I have no control over them in that matter.

5836. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Can you tell me the attendance there?—I have never seen the rolls myself, nor did I ever learn the exact number, but I have always been under the impression that the numbers on the roll would be about 250 or 260, about 120 I should say in each school; I think, however, there might be some more in the lower school than in the upper.

5837. There appears to be ample provision, on the terms at which it can be got, at St. Columba's College for a high class education?—Yes.

5838. Dr. TRAILL.—What guarantee have you, when you have no control over the management, that the work by the Christian Brothers is well done?—I have no right at all to interfere in the management; the schools are entirely under the management of the Christian Brothers, my part is to find the funds for the Brothers' salaries.

5839. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—To what class does your teacher belong, under the National Board?—He is a third class teacher.

5840. Is he trained?—No, but he is an efficient man.

5841. What salary has he got?—He has the Board salary of £35, in other words, his class salary, his school pence, and in addition two-thirds of the result fees.

5842. What is the number of pupils at present on your rolls?—I think the number on the rolls now would be about 180, something more than half the attendance at the Christian Brothers' schools.

5843. What is the provision for the teaching of girls in the parish?—We have two other schools; they are mixed schools.

Rev. P. J.
O'Callaghan.

Oct. 26, 1887.

Rev. P. J.
O'Callaghan.

5843. Are these in the town?—One is close to the town, the other about three miles out.

5844. Are these ordinary rural National Schools?—Yes, but they are mixed schools; both girls and boys attend them.

5845. What provision is there for the intermediate education of girls?—There is a girls' day school in connection with Loretto Convent.

5846. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Do you take boarders as well as day pupils at the Loretto Convent?—Yes, there are a good many boarders, but the number of day pupils attending is not very large.

5847. Dr. TRAILL.—How many boarders are attending the convent school?—I think about sixty or seventy; but I am not quite sure about the number.

5848. Is there no school in connection with the convent under the National Board?—Yes, there is a large school in connection with the National Board. The Presentation Nuns have a large National School on their premises.

5849. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you know the numbers on the roll?—There would be, I think, about 630 on the roll. There are some of these infant boys about seventy or eighty, I believe.

5850. Including both infants and girls can you tell us what would be the average daily attendance?—The average daily attendance including both infant boys and girls would be about 450.

PUBLIC SITTING—TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Lismore.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIRN, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, B.D., D.D.; ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

*LISMORE ENDOWED SCHOOL.

R. H. Power, Agent to the Duke of Devonshire, sworn and examined.

R. H. Power.

5851. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What are the endowments of the Lismore Endowed School?—The school was founded under the will of Richard, Earl of Cork, in 1645, which provided for the payment, yearly, of £20 sterling to the schoolmaster of the Free School at Lismore, £10 to the usher.

5852. Is this the only foundation that you know of which is attached to this school at Lismore?—Yes, that is the only foundation that the school appears to have had; at least it is the only foundation that we have been able to trace.

5853. In whom are the school premises vested?—They are vested, in the Duke who lets them to the head master of the school.

5854. Are the premises kept in repair by the Duke?—Yes, the Duke keeps them in repair, but I think he is not obliged to do so.

5855. What do the premises consist of?—They are very extensive; there is accommodation for fully fifty boarders; there is a small extent of land; there is a playground and garden. The Duke also lets accommodation land to the extent of twenty-three acres at a low rent.

5856. That is at a lower rent than it would otherwise bring?—Yes, at a lower rent.

5857. Who is the present head master of the school?—The present head master is Dr. Wright.

5858. When was he appointed?—He has only been appointed very recently. He has been here only since last February.

5859. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Does the Duke execute any instrument when appointing the head master?—Yes, there is a written appointment. It is similar to what you saw at Youghal.

5860. I think you and the Dean of Lismore are appointed visitors of the school by the Duke; have you ever visited the school in your official capacity?—We visit the school occasionally, and if we found a complaint made by any of the boys we would investigate it.

5861. Do you then visit the school in company with the Dean of Lismore?—Well, no, not as a regular thing, but I have been there two or three times with him.

5862. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you know how long this power of visitation has been in existence?—Previously to Dr. Wright's appointment there were no visitors at all.

5863. I suppose you know that the Commission of 1854 reported that the school was in a very deplorable state?—Yes, I heard so.

5864. Do you know whether the Commissioners of Education take any part whatever in the management of the school?—No, not that I am aware of.

5865. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was there never at any time a local committee taking an interest in the management of the school?—There never was at any time, I believe, a local committee. I may mention that since 1864 the school was quite flourishing; in recent times there were thirty-four boarders there.

5866. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose the school is open to all Protestant denominations, and that you have boys of the various Protestant denominations attending the school?—As regards that, I could not answer exactly, but Dr. Wright, the head master, is here, and he will be able to give you evidence as to that point.

5867. Lord Justice NAIRN.—I see in the report of 1879 that there was this schoolhouse given to the school?—I do not know as to that, there was no mention in Lord Cork's will.

5868. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Are the present almshouses the same as those mentioned in the will of the Earl of Cork?—No, they are not. The present almshouses have taken the place of those erected by the Earl of Cork.

5869. Is the schoolhouse the same building as that mentioned by the Earl's will?—No, the school buildings are not the same. The present buildings are much more modern.

5870. Is the site the same?—Well, I am not sure of that; they may be on the same site as the school in Lord Cork's time. I have brought up here an old account book which contains entries relating to the school in the years 1839 and 1840. Perhaps the members of the Commission would like to see it (account book handed in).

5871. Is this the first payment to the schoolmaster at Lismore that you know of?—That is the first that we have so far been able to trace. You will see that it is called the Free School at Lismore, but so far as we can find out there never were at any time any free scholars. The handwriting in the book is similar to that of the letter I showed you at Banister.

1872. But it is called "The Free School at Lisamore."—Yes, but we have been unable to find out anything about the free scholars.

1873. Rev. Dr. Meehan.—The Commissioners, in 1854, report that the master of the Lisamore School had converted a free school into a private one!—Well, the Duke never sent any scholars there as free scholars, as far as we are aware. It is called in all those accounts "The Free School at Lisamore."

1874. But as far as you know free pupils were never received?—Yes, that is the case. I never knew of free pupils.

Oct. 26, 1887.

R. H. Power.

Wm. Wright, M.D., Head Master of the Lisamore Endowed School, sworn.

1875. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—When were you appointed head master?—I was appointed in February 1867.

1876. When you came here what was the number of pupils attending the school?—I opened with one boarder and four day boys.

1877. In February, 1879, there appear to have been fifty pupils attending the school—fifty-five boarders and five day boys. Do you know when the attendance fell off?—I do not know anything whatever of the previous history of the school.

1878. How many day boys and boarders have you at the school now?—I have at present five boarders and ten day boys.

1879. Where do the boarders come from?—They come from various districts—some come from Kilkenny, some from Waterford, and some from the County of Cork.

1880. Are the day boys all from Lisamore?—Yes, all are from the neighbourhood of Lisamore.

1881. What are your fees for boarders?—I charge from £35 to £42 per annum for the boarders.

1882. And what for day boys?—From eight guineas to ten guineas.

1883. What is the course of education pursued in your school?—The general course which is taught in all collegiate schools—English, French, Mathematics, Greek and Latin.

1884. Have you any assistants?—I have one assistant at present. When I cause my numbers were so small I did not require one.

1885. What does the assistant master teach?—He teaches the English subjects.

1886. Do you prepare the boys for the Intermediate Examinations?—We are not specially preparing the pupils for the Intermediate. Last year I had so very few boys that it was not worth the trouble to send them in for the examinations. This year I have some boys, but my numbers altogether are small, so I have not sent to send.

1887. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the nearest centre to which you can send your boys?—Dungannon or Ferns. I think there is a centre at both places.

1888. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You get this remittance of £30, Irish?—Yes, that has been paid to me.

1889. What other emoluments have you got?—I held twenty-three acres of land at a reduced rent from year to year from the Duke of Devonshire.

1890. Dr. TRAILL.—What rent do you pay for those twenty-three acres?—I pay £25 for the twenty-three acres.

1891. Are the premises all kept in repair by the Duke?—Yes.

1892. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Is the regulation of the scale of fees for day boys and boarders entirely left in your own hands?—There has been no interference by anyone in that matter since I became head master of the school.

1893. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you the lands only while you are head master of the school?—Yes, I have signed a written agreement for them to that effect.

1894. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Of what University are you a graduate?—I belong to Trinity College.

1895. You took your degree there?—Yes, I graduated B.A. in 1877, LL.B. in 1881, and I took my degree of M.D. in 1882.

1896. Have you had much experience in teaching?—I have been engaged in teaching for several years.

1897. What are the other schools at which you have taught?—I was head master at Downpatrick before I came here for over three years.

1898. Did you come from the school at Downpatrick to assume duties as head master here?—No, not directly. I came home from New Zealand. I had been abroad for some time in the colonies, and when I came back from the colonies I was appointed head master here.

1899. Do you see any reasonable prospect of enlarging the number of pupils attending the school here at Lisamore?—Well, I see no reason why there should not be a good school at Lisamore. It is a good position for a school of its class as any in the south of Ireland.

1900. What means do you intend to take so as to increase the number of your boys?—I hope to advertise largely the successes of the boys when I get it more into working order, and by this means to attract pupils to the school. I am determined to spare no effort to restore the College to a state of efficiency, and to give public proof of successful working and management.

1901. Have you as yet any successes with your pupils in the examinations?—Oh, yes, one of my boys succeeded lately in winning a place in the Book of Ireland; another of them passed direct from the school into a theological college in England, St. Bee's, another pupil passed into one of the medical schools in Dublin. All these boys succeeded since I came to the school.

1902. To what religious denominations do your boys belong?—To only one denomination now, the Church of Ireland, but the school is open to all denominations, there is no restriction that I see on the pupils as to what religious persuasion they belong, and no objection to me receiving any pupil.

1903. We understand that the Duke of Lisamore and Mr. Power are in the habit of visiting the school?—Yes, and I am always glad to see them.

1904. Professor DODDINGTON.—Do you not think it would be very advantageous if you had a local committee to visit the school and take an interest in its management?—I do not think it would be of much advantage to the school. I believe when a school has to depend upon a local committee for its successful working, its existence is very precarious.

1905. Dr. TRAILL.—Had you not a local committee in connection with the school at Downpatrick?—I did not find that it benefited the school much.

1906. Professor DODDINGTON.—Do you not think it might aid you in the way of obtaining subscriptions and endowments?—I think the school would pay me as well without a guarantee.

1907. Then you would prefer to work the school without the assistance or interference of any committee?—Yes. I would rather have the school without a local committee of management.

Oct. 25, 1887.

Very Rev. Dr.
Brougham.

Very Rev. Dr. Brougham, Dean of Lismore, sworn.

5908. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You are the Dean of Lismore?—Yes.

5909a. How long have you been in Lismore?—Over ten years.

5909. Can you tell us what have been the fortunes of this school during those years?—Yes, I can. There was a very fair attendance of boys at the school—I think about thirty was the number—when I came here first. I believe the school then failed financially. My idea is, that the cause of its failure was that the then head-master had far too many assistant masters. There were three assistant masters, one a Cambridge man, another an Oxford man, and the other was a gentleman who had been in the Civil Service; he was a classical master I think. I do not believe that the school was able to pay all this staff; I think it broke down from that cause. The first assistant master was appointed head-master as soon as the gentleman to whom I have referred, and whose name was Gillon, had left the school.

Mr. R. H. Power.—Mr. Gillon was head-master in 1873, and at that time the school appears to have had forty pupils at that period.

A witness.—I do not know positively that it was the cause, but I think it was that financial shortness which caused Mr. Gillon to throw up the school; but, as I have said, I do not know positively that it was so; that, in my opinion, was the cause.

5910. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Was there no fault to be found with the way in which he conducted the school?—None that I am aware of; there was no fault to be found with the master.

5911. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Do you know anything about the way in which he left; did he resign?—I think he resigned about 1873.

5912. What became of the school when Mr. Gillon's chief assistant master took it?—When the head assistant, whose name was Mr. Honey, took charge of the school, he found it at low-water mark, and worked it up and had about thirty boarders. But he fell into the opposite error, I think, to that into which his predecessor fell, and instead of having too many assistants he had too few and was charging them too often. A man would come in the middle of term, and perhaps leave the school before its close, and so on. The school went on very well till about a year and a half ago; in fact thrashed was a tolerably good one about July twelve months, then it collapsed. Mr. Honey thinking it no longer paid him, resigned. The school was left without a master for about a year. Mr. Power, the agent for the estate, then advertised for a master, and appointed the present master, Dr. Wright. Dr. Wright found the boys all dispersed, and has had great difficulty in getting a school together. Some of the boys have gone to Tipperary school, and it was very up-hill work in getting the boarders together.

5913. Have any of the former boarders, who were there in Mr. Honey's time, come back to Dr. Wright?—Yes, two, and he has got brothers of boys who were under Mr. Honey's charge. He has got all the Protestant day boys he could possibly expect from the neighbourhood of Lismore.

5914. Then there are not, within your knowledge, more than ten Protestant boys in the town of Lismore who could attend the school as day pupils?—Well, I think that would be about the number.

5915. Dr. TRAILL.—Could Protestant boys from the immediate country district not attend the school as day boys?—Yes, boys might come from Cappoquin, Cappagh, or Dungarvan; they could, I think, come by train so as to be in time for morning school.

5916. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—We could find no school under Protestant management in Fermoy; might you not expect boys from Fermoy to come here?—Yes, we might expect them very well.

5917. Professor DOUGHERTY.—All the boys at present attending the school belong to the Church; are there Methodist or Presbyterian boys who might come to the school?—Well, I could not say.

5918. Do you agree with Dr. Wright that it would not assist the school to have a committee of local gentlemen who would take an interest in its management?—That is my opinion too, and I am strengthened in it by the opinion of Mr. Curvey. I think the school would work better without any committee.

5919. Well our experience has been that nearly all the successful schools in the North have local committees of management?—As far as I know about this school a man was appointed head master, and then left to sink or swim as best he could, that was before the appointment of Dr. Wright.

5920. Exactly, there was no control whatever; no body to interfere?—Indeed it might be better to have a couple of visitors. In the late head master's time there was no body to interfere.

5921. Then you would be in favour of a local committee?—I think that I, as Dean of Lismore and Rector of the parish, and Mr. Power, as the agent and representative of the Duke of Devonshire, would be a suitable pair of visitors to look after the school.

5922. Dr. Wright says he would not care to have any local committee interfering with the management of the school?—Well he did not object to us when we were appointed visitors, he said he was glad we were appointed. We have never had to investigate any complaint.

5923. What are your duties as visitors?—Mr. Power looks after the repairs and other matters of that nature, and I look after the religious instruction of the boys. I have all the boys once a week for religious instruction.

5924. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Would you not be in favour of enlarging the number of visitors?—I think Mr. Power and I are well enough able to manage the school as visitors.

5925. But you have no locus standi as far as I can see?—I cannot say.

Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Your evidence amounts to this, that you approve highly of a local committee consisting of yourself and Mr. Power.

5926. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You would not think of appointing members of any other religious denomination than your own to serve on the committee?—I don't know that there are boys of any other religious denomination to attend the school.

5927. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—Would not those mistakes in the management of the school, to which you have before referred, have been prevented by visits from a managing committee?—If I had been a visitor at the time I would have stopped them.

5928. I think it would be much better if the Dean of Lismore and Mr. Power, as agents of the Duke, had legal power to act as visitors in the school?—I think so too.

5929. Do you not think it would be as well to have some of the parents of the boys attending the school to work along with you?—I think in matters of this kind a small committee works best.

5930. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you no hope of being able to increase the number of pupils except from boys belonging to your own church?—I do not know of any others to come.

5931. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Is there any other classical school in Lismore?—I do not know of one; unless they teach classics at the Christian Brothers.

5932. Have the Presbyterians any classical school in Lismore?—No. I do not know of any Presbyterian boys in Lismore or neighbourhood, who would be likely to go to a classical school.

5933. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You say the school is open to all religious denominations; but in point of fact, do any Roman Catholic children attend it?

Dr. Wright.—There are none at present.
Witness.—The head master informs me that he has three private pupils who are Roman Catholics. They come after school hours.

3934. But there are no Roman Catholic children going to the school?—No.

3935. Then the Roman Catholic population of Lisnore get no advantage whatever from the endowment?

Dr. Wright.—If they wish to take advantage of it, the school is quite open to them.

3936. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Are you giving the Roman Catholic pupils, who, you say, are private pupils, the same education as the other boys in the school?—Yes.

Rev. J. McKean, Presbyterian Minister, sworn.

3937. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—How long have you been in Lisnore?—Over twenty-three years.

3938. Has there been during all that time a Presbyterian congregation in Lisnore?—Yes, and there is still a Presbyterian congregation in it.

3939. What is the number of the Presbyterian population?—I minister over a district twenty-five miles long by twenty-five miles broad, and to a congregation including seventy or eighty individuals. We have twenty-five communicants on the roll.

3940. Are there any individuals in your congregation who want intermediate education for their children?—I cannot say that I know of any at present.

3941. Have there been any such individuals during your ministry?—Yes, at one time there were six Presbyterian boys at the Lisnore school.

3942. When was that?—During the time that a Presbyterian was head master of the school. Mr. Patterson was then the head master.

3943. Can you give us any suggestions as to the causes of the great fluctuations in the fortunes of the school?—No. When I came here to Lisnore about twenty-three years ago there was no school; the place was held by a gentleman, who was a layman, and he had no school for several years, but he had had at one time, as his assistant masters, some well known men, among others, Dr. McTaggart, and some others; afterwards the school fell away, and the then head master had a seizure till his death. The Duke of Devonshire was then pleased to appoint Mr. Patterson head master of the school, and he had at one time some fourteen or fifteen boys attending the school.

3944. Dr. TRAILL.—Was he a Presbyterian clergyman?—No, he was not ordained as a clergyman, but he had passed through College, and had been licensed, but was not attached to any congregation. He devoted himself to teaching at Lisnore.

3945. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Can you give us any suggestion as to the causes of the fluctuations in the numbers?—Well, no; I think the school during Mr. Haney's time was a great success, he had thirty-five boarders, and this too after the previous history of the school. Mr. Haney was organist at the cathedral, and did not mean to be satisfied with his position, and I think he determined to return to England, and so he did not care to work hard as to keep up the school. Dr. Wright has only been lately appointed, and under him the school appears to be doing fairly well.

3946. Dr. TRAILL.—Are there none of your boys going to it?—None at present. One of my congregation was speaking to me about it, but he says the fees are too high.

3947. What are the fees charged?—£10, I think, are the fees charged for day boys.

3948. What fees would the member of your congregation, of whom you have spoken, be willing to pay?—He thinks £1 for English, and some 30s. a quarter for English and classical would be enough.

3949. Does he intend to educate his son for a profession?—He was thinking of sending his son to be educated as an engineer, and is not particularly desirous that he should learn classics.

3950. Why would he not have his son taught classics as well?—I do not know. I know he objects to the fees as being too dear.

3951. Has he spoken to Dr. Wright on the subject?—I do not think he has. But my recollection of the words of Ireland enables me to say that an education of a similar class to that imparted at the Lisnore School could be obtained at the Andersonian Institution, Belfast, for about £8 a year.

3952. Professor DEVEREAUX.—Do you ever visit this school?—I have never visited it since Dr. Wright came, nor indeed since Mr. Patterson left.

3953. Do you think the materials for a local committee exist in Lisnore?—Well, the school has been ably managed, and, I may say, so generously managed by the Duke of Devonshire in every respect, both as regards teachers and pupils, that I for one would be prepared to leave it in the hands of the Duke of Devonshire, as it has been for the past number of years. May I be allowed to say that I remember, years ago, when I was in conversation with his Grace on the matter of endowed schools, that he expressed an opinion to me (I think it is not a breach of confidence in publishing it) that he thought that if an endowed school had proved successful in a certain locality, that the Royal Commission would be warranted in appropriating the endowment to another place, where it would be likely to be more successful and useful.

3954. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—But the Royal Commission find themselves much puzzled when at one time a school with an endowment is very successful, and at another is a failure?

Dr. Wright.—I believe there is material in Fermoy and Lisnore for a good school, if the Catholics would attend the school as they have done in days past.

3955. Can you suggest any means by which we can help the school to regain its former status?—One of the ways would be by the abolition of the visitors in their official capacity altogether. Have no visitors, neither one clergyman nor another, then the reduction of the school fees to meet the capabilities of a larger class of the community.

3956. If you look at the former reports you will find that when there were no visitors, the school was practically deserted?—Yes, and when there were no visitors there were some 35 boarders at the school. With respect to free pupils, Mr. Power, I think, stated that he was not aware of any boarders being free pupils, and getting their education free at the school in the past. I have no exact data on which to base my statement, but I know I have often heard of boys who were free pupils at the school, and were educated free as such.

3957. Lord Justice NASH (to Mr. R. H. Power).—Does the Duke make grants to any other schools in Lisnore except this endowed school?—He does. He makes grants annually to the Christian Brothers' Schools and to the National Schools.

3958. Do you know what are the respective amounts of these grants?—To the National Schools he subscribes £20 or £25, and I cannot say how many what he subscribes to the Christian Brothers, but I think it is £20. He subscribes to the Convent Schools, those under the National Board, £30. He also does some repairs to the Christian Brothers' Schools.

3959. Dr. TRAILL.—Does the Duke make any distinction between the Christian Brothers' schools here and those at Youghall?—The Duke has no property now in Youghall, but to the best of my belief he does subscribe there also.

5950. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—He has no property now in Youghall but the fishery?—No; when the property was sold the subscriptions were withdrawn.

5951. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You have not got a copy of the advertisement inviting candidates to apply for the head-mastership of the school?—No, I have not, but I have got the deed of appointment.

5952. Lord Justice FitzGibbon (reading).—"The Duke of Devonshire appoints William Wright to be head-master of the Grammar School at Lismore. He is not to accept any appointment in the Church or otherwise which would interfere with his duty as master except on Sunday alone. He is at any time to give up the school premises on receiving proper notice, and at the expiration of the period it is lawful for the Duke to take possession."—This case is very similar to many others which we have heard. It strikes us as being well worthy of your consideration whether the permanence of this school in its present condition might not be secured by associating some local gentleman in the management. We would be very glad to hear of such a committee being constituted, and would give it all the assistance in our power. Of course, if we attempted to do anything against his Grace's will or without his consent, we would be apt to destroy the school, which is certainly no part of our duty. But if any local committee, satisfactory in its constitution to all parties, could be made, we would be glad to give effect to it. It would be our duty to make provision with regard to the rent-charge, which is the whole of the endowment, and to secure it for the benefit of the neighbourhood. It is a good matter to have such an endowment, and it would be very advantageous to have it secured if the property were sold, or if one of his Grace's successors were less active than he is in the cause of education. This small endowment, if secured, might prove a nucleus for other endowments. Another thing to remember is, that neither Mr. Gilliland nor Mr. Henry seem to have found the slightest difficulty in getting pupils. The difficulty seems to be in keeping them.

The Dean of Lismore.—We have now got an excellent master, and I hope that in a short time the school will regain its former position.

Mr. R. H. Power.—I may say that when Mr. Henry resigned he had a good school.

5953. Dr. TRAILL.—Why then did he give up the school?—He refused to take new pupils, and let the numbers fall off.

5954. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—What our experience tends to show is that these collapses occur when there is no one interested in the school—that is, no one interested but the master. Then, on the other hand, in cases where several outsiders are interested, the school, though at dead low water perhaps for some time, has gradually recovered its position.

PUBLIC SITTING—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Clonmel.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGIBBON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NABES, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, B.D., D.D., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.R.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

*CLONMEL ENDOWED GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The Rev. Marye Le Bon Kennedy, Head Master of the Endowed School, Clonmel, sworn.

5955A. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—When were you appointed to the head-mastership of Clonmel Endowed School?—October, 1883.

5955B. By whom were you appointed?—I was appointed by Lord Mountcashel and Lord Ormond.

5955C. Were you appointed under a written agreement?—Yes.

5955D. Have you got a copy of that agreement with you?—No, but I can easily obtain it for you.

5955E. How was it you heard of the vacancy?—I saw an advertisement for a master, and I accordingly sent in an application and obtained the post.

5955F. Do you know who had been the master before you came?—Yes, a Mr. Hinchinson he was master, at least so far back as in 1877.

5955G. What number of pupils are attending the school at present?—At present there are forty-seven altogether.

5955H. What number of these are boarders and day boys, respectively?—There are thirty-six boarders and eleven day boys.

5955I. Are the thirty-six boarders as many as your house will accommodate?—Well, very nearly as many.

5955J. Where do the boarders come from?—From all parts.

5955K. Dr. TRAILL.—How many pupils could you accommodate altogether; I mean, without going into the private part of the building?—About forty boarders and fifteen or twenty day boys are as many as the premises could accommodate.

5955L. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—What are your terms for boarders?—I charge £50 for boys over thirteen, and for boys under thirteen £46.

5955M. Does this fee include everything?—Yes, except music and drawing with books.

5955N. During the time you have been in charge has the number of day boys increased or diminished?—First increased, then diminished.

5955O. What was the largest number of day boys you had at any time?—I had twenty-three day boys at one period, or somewhere about that number.

5955P. The school seems to have been founded "for the education of the sons of the Protestant freemen of Clonmel to be taught gratis." How many of the sons of freemen of the town have you at the school now?—There are six free boys attending the school at the present time.

5955Q. How are these boys admitted to the school?—Well, singly in this way—some person applies to me, whom I know to be a freeman, for the admission of his son as a free boy, and if I have nothing to say against the character of the applicant's son I admit him.

5955R. Are you bound to take the son of any person who is a Protestant freeman?—Yes, I believe so.

5955S. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Was there any notice in the deed of your appointment as to the education of the sons of freemen?—Yes, that term was in my deed of appointment.

5955T. What emoluments do you receive from the endowment?—I get a salary of £350 a year.

5955U. Do you get anything in addition?—I am besides that entitled to receive the fees of the paying pupils.

5955V. Then for the sum of £350 you are expected to teach the sons of the freemen of Clonmel?—Yes.

* Appendix B, No. XLX., p. 895.

Rev. Marye
Le Bon
Kennedy

that sum I am bound to receive the sons of freemen and educate their girls.

5984. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Why are there so few of the sons of freemen at the school?—I really do not know. They vary from time to time. There were one or two boys who came to me for a time, but after a time they were taken away, and were sent to the Model School by their parents. The parents seemed to think that there was little use in learning Greek and Latin.

5985. What fee do you charge day boys?—We charge day boys £8 or £10 a year, according as they learn classics or not.

5986. Dr. TRAILL.—How many boys are not learning classics?—There are four boarders who are not in any class at present.

5987. And how many day boys?—Well, just now there is no day boy who is not learning classics.

5988. Then forty-three out of the forty-seven at the school are learning classics?—Yes, I believe that is the proportion.

5989. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you send your boys in for the Intermediate examinations?—Yes, I send the boys in whenever the courses suit them.

5990. Did you send any up this year?—I sent some.

5991. What do you mean by "whenever the courses suit them"?—Whenever the subjects are somewhat near our usual school course. Some years they require special examining for the Intermediate.

5992. How is it that one year they require examining and another they do not?—Well, sometimes I had boys who were too old, and then I had others who were engaged in reading a course which would not suit the Intermediate without taking them away from their special work. But for the future I hope to arrange the school so as to be able to send up the majority of the boys for the Intermediate Examinations.

5993. How many did you send up for this year's Intermediate Examinations?—I sent up eight this year.

5994. Did any of them get exhibitions?—No, they got no exhibitions among them. They all passed and one got a prize.

5995. What grades did they pass in?—Middle and junior. They were mostly junior boys, and I did not begin the special course with them till after Christmas.

5996. When we were here last we were told that the Protestant freemen of Chelmsford were limited in number?—I do not know anything about the matter.

5997. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—Is there a list kept of the Protestant freemen of Chelmsford?—I do not know of it, but perhaps the Town Clerk would know about it, and could produce it.

5998. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there any distinction made in the school between those who are free boys and those who are not?—No; there is no distinction whatever made between the boys at the school.

5999. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you know anything as to how the estate is managed?—I know nothing whatever of the estate except what I can gather from the yearly reports.

6000. Do the trustees, so far as you know, take any part in the management?—I believe they cannot; I think they have nothing whatever to do with it. They appoint the head master. All the rest is done by the Clare-street Commissioners.

6001. What do they do with regard to the repairs, is he concerned on the school premises?—The only thing they do is to say that they cannot give us any money. They have given us £50 in the last five years for repairs and improvements that had to be executed on the buildings.

6002. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—Do they keep the buildings in repair?—Yes, they are supposed to do so.

6003. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you get any money from them for the payment of assistant masters?—None whatever. I have also to pay the rent of a cricket field.

6004. What rent do you pay for the cricket field?—£30 a year for three acres.

6005. Do you hold it under a lease?—I am a yearly tenant, but can hold it for a term of three years if I like. I rent it from a Mr. Higgins.

6006. Dr. TRAILL.—You are bound to keep it in grass, I suppose?—Yes.

6007. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The last statement we got from the Commissioners is, that they received £348 11s., but that the school was in debt to them £783 10s. 9d. I—I believe a large part of the debt is a Government debt for building.

6008. Has that debt not been cleared off?—I believe the building debt has not been paid off.

6009. They say in their last report that they expended £75 17s. 1d. in repairs executed in the year 1886 in the school?—They did nothing of the kind.

6010. Well, it is down in their report?—They must mean that item for drainage on the estate. At any rate, there was no such expenditure in repairs in any one year while I have been at the school.

6011. Have you no control over the expenditure?—No, I have no control whatever.

6012. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—Do you know how much they spend in repairs?—Yes, it is through me that the money is spent.

6013. Can you ascertain for us how much money was spent on the school buildings during the year ending December 31st, 1886?—Yes, I can.

6014. Do you know was it less than £75?—I cannot exactly remember; but that account puzzles me.

6015. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—The Commissioners return the school as owing them for the year ending 31st December, 1884, £325 13s., and on the 31st December, 1885, the debt owing to the Commissioners is returned as amounting to £416 8s. 11d. The whole of this great debt, except a sum of £225 odd, was run up in two years?—As to the items referring to salary which occur in the account, I may say, when I came here at first, I was here nine months before I received any salary at all, and then for the first year I got only £300.

6016. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Then you have not been paid at the rate of £250 a year?—No, not for the first year, as I have said I only got £300 for that year. I know they refused to bind themselves to pay me any salary whatever, unless they could collect their rents, and I know they had difficulty in getting in the rents in some years.

6017. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Has that sum been acknowledged by the Commissioners as a debt due to you?—Well, I told them that I would consider it as a debt due to me, but the Commissioners never gave me any answer.

6018. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you know what year there were no rents?—Yes, I know one year they got no rents whatever.

6019. Did they recover that year's rents?—I cannot say of my own knowledge, but I believe they did not recover it all.

6020. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Do you know of anybody in the neighbourhood who would be likely to take an interest in the property and the school if we were to vest it in a local body?—Well, I believe the estate is away in the north side of the country, away from here a number of miles.

6021. The estate is at a place called Lismurra. The former Commission sent to find out something about it. It appears that there are 690 acres in the estate of which about sixty acres are bog. The tenants were described at that time as very poor, and living in wretched houses?—I believe a large part of the debt due from the estate is owing to the action of one tenant, against whom a decree has been got, but who refuses payment.

6022. Do you know who is agent of the property?—I do not know. Mr. Owen was the agent formerly, but he died about two years ago.

Oct. 26, 1903.
Rev. Mr. Mayne
in Ban
Kennedy.

6023. Do any of your boarders come from the county of Tipperary?—Yes, about seven or eight come from that county.

6024. How many of them come from the North of Ireland?—There are four from the county of Monaghan, I think that is all from north of Dublin.

6025. Do none of them come from the county of Cork?—One, only.

6026. Dr. TRAILL.—Where do the rest of the boys come from; you have only accounted for eleven out of your thirty-six boarders? Of the remainder some come from the county Limerick, some from Galway, others from Waterford, Kerry, and Mayo.

6027. Lord Justice NAULT.—Were you engaged in teaching before you came to Clonsilla?—Yes, for some time. I was at Draghda Grammar School for some months.

6028. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Where did you take your degree?—I am a graduate of Dublin University.

6029. Is the school in connection with the Department of Science and Art at South Kensington?—No, I have not put the school in connection with South Kensington.

6030. Why have you not established a connection with it?—Because my boys are not of a class to do that; they generally take a liberal and classical education.

6031. Are there no boys in the school learning drawing?—Yes, there are a large number of the boys learning drawing. I have a very good drawing master.

6032. Why not put the school into connection with South Kensington, drawing is one of their subjects?—We could not go into the other—South Kensington subjects—alone so deeply as to make it successful without seriously interfering with their other work.

6033. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What class of people do your boys generally come from?—They are chiefly the sons of country gentry and clergy, that is the boarders.

6034. And the day boys?—The majority are the free boys, and their fathers are principally merchants in Clonsilla.

6035. And do the parents of these boys prefer a classical education to that which could be obtained at a good National school in connection with South Kensington?—Yes, I think every free boy is learning classics.

6036. Their object then is probably to go to a University?—Yes, generally that is the case with them.

6037. Lord Justice NAULT.—Most of the boys come with the intention of afterwards going to Trinity College?—Yes.

6038. Have any of them gone in for the Royal University?—Only one has been thinking of going in for the Royal University.

6039. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—You get this report of the Commissioners every year?—Yes.

6040. Have you any idea how that sum of £50 put down in their account as received in 1885 disappears in 1886?—I must confess I cannot understand that report.

6041. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you find the Intermediate course suitable for your school?—Yes; generally.

6042. Do you find the changes of the books from year to year inconvenient?—No, I cannot say that I do.

6043. Do you find the courses too short?—No.

6044. Do you find any difference in that respect between the junior, middle, and senior grades?—We find the junior and middle grade courses suitable enough for our boys, but we never send in a boy in the senior grade, because we find that it interferes with his University prospects.

Dr. TRAILL.—We find that the boys from Coleraine who took exhibitions and prizes at the Intermediate examinations, also took the first places at entrance and also the first exhibitions in Trinity College, Dublin.

6045. Lord Justice FITZGERSON. If you had taken the trouble to look at the results as we have done, you would find that nine-tenths of the boys who distinguish themselves at the Trinity College examinations are the boys who have distinguished themselves at the Intermediate examinations?—Very probably, at the junior or even middle grade Intermediate. Those boys whose parents approve of their going in, and whom the Intermediate courses suit, I accordingly send in for the examinations; but I have known instances where boys have been deliberately kept back for the sake of getting the course to suit them.

6046. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—As regards the Intermediate course and preparation for the University, it appears to be an established rule that the boys who do best at the Intermediate do best at the University?—I dare say the cleverest boys would do best at both.

6047. We do notice the boys who fail at the Intermediate coming out with honours at the Royal University.

6048. Lord Justice NAULT.—Are all your boys Protestants?—At present all the boarders belong to the Irish Church. Among the day boys there are two boys either Presbyterians or Methodists, I really do not know to which particular denomination they belong. I had one Roman Catholic day boy quite lately.

6049. Professor DUCHESNE.—Have you any Presbyterian boys?—No, unless the two among the day pupils whose religion I do not know.

6050. Do they come to the religious instruction?—Yes, their father sends them to it; I know he was aware that they attended the religious instruction.

6051. Dr. TRAILL.—Is the religious instruction what the boys come to, in Scripture or Catechism?—Scripture only. I have since heard that these boys are Quakers.

6052. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—What staff of teachers have you got at the school?—My staff of assistants is four.

6053. What subjects do they teach?—One takes Classics and English, another Mathematics and Natural Science, a third French, German, Drawing and Music, and the fourth takes general junior work.

6054. How many of these are resident?—All four are resident.

6055. How many of these are University men?—None of the masters I have at present are graduates; one is an undergraduate, and another will be I expect in a very short time.

6056. What are the qualifications of your Classical master?—His is a peculiar case; he is a man who was educated at King Edward VI. Grammar School, at Birmingham, and he was recommended very highly to me by his head master, who said if he had gone up to Oxford he would have been one of the most distinguished men of his year, but he could not afford to go, and compelled to take to teaching.

6057. Is he preparing now for the University?—Yes; he is preparing to enter Trinity. My mathematical master was educated at Santry, and has had experience in several schools in England, and he also is preparing to enter Trinity. My present French master is not a graduate, but my late French teacher was a graduate of Marburg. The junior master is an undergraduate of the Royal University.

6058. What salaries do you give them?—On an average I give them £50 a year and residence.

6059. Who engages them?—They are engaged by myself.

6060. Is there anybody connected with the neighbourhood, who takes an active interest in the school?—No; there are several who might be expected to take an interest, and one or two whom I have vainly tried to get to do so.

6061. Do you think it would increase the efficiency of the school if you had a local committee representing the people, for whose benefit the school was intended?—I don't think it would make any difference.

Oct. 26, 1887.
Rev. Mervyn
Le Ban
Kennedy.

6061. Do you know anything about the endowment of the school?—As regards the endowment, I do not know anything except what is given in the printed report of the Commissioners.

6062. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—The funds are running down very rapidly?—So I believe. There are funds lying idle in the hands of the Commissioners which we are anxious to have applied to the school.

6063. If they paid their debts they would be unable to spend anything on the school for years.

Witness.—There is a sum to the credit of Ballyroan which might be used here.

Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—But the people of Ballyroan probably do not want to part with their endowment.

6064. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—In the account for the year ending the 31st December, 1883, the Commissioners put down the Clonmel school as owing £178 8s. 1d.—I believe there is some old loan due to the Commissioners of Public Works.

6065. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—When you were appointed head master did the Mayor of Clonmel take any part in your appointment?—No.

6066. Do you know was he consulted about the appointment?—Not by me.

6067. Do you know that he is one of the persons in whom the right of appointment is vested?

6068. Dr. TRAILL.—But you should be aware that the Mayor has nothing whatever to do with the appointment since the Municipal Corporations Act?—I believe he is still nominally one of the persons in whom the right of appointment vests.

6069. How do you know that?—I believe he is.

6070. But the Municipal Corporations Act put an end to his having any such right?

Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—When the other two persons in whom the power of appointment vests agree, they are sure of a majority.

Dr. TRAILL.—But if the third has no legal status there is no use in applying to him.

6071. Dr. TRAILL (to Mr. Kennedy).—How many boarders and day boys did you find at the school when you came?—I found three boarders and seven day boys.

6072. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—Now that you know the state of affairs, would it not be best for you to communicate with the people of Clonmel, and get them to arrange a committee formed up from the parents of the boys attending the school, or of persons interested in education, so we have proposed?—I should be very glad to do so.

6073. Rev. Dr. MONTAGU.—Do you happen to know how many freemen of the city of Clonmel are now living?—I have no means of giving you any information about that.

6074. Is there any information available about them?—Is there a list of freemen kept?—I suppose the Town Clerk could give you information about that.

6075. Who is the Town Clerk?—Mr. Clancy is the Town Clerk. I have never seen the list of freemen.

6076. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you think that the best possible way of expending this endowment is to maintain a boarding school for boys from all parts of Ireland, while only some ten or eleven boys from Clonmel take advantage of the school?—One would like that the funds were utilised more by the people of the neighbourhood.

6077. Do you think that a local governing body would not make a better application of the endowment?—I do not know that they would.

6077A. Dr. TRAILL.—I suppose, Mr. Kennedy, that you have plenty of accommodation in your class-rooms for the day boys in addition to the forty boarders?—Yes. By making use of the dining-hall I could accommodate between twenty and thirty day boys.

6077B. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Has there been any complaint as to your rate of fees for day boys?—I have had one or two applications to admit day boys at lower fees.

6078. Which do you prefer to develop, your boarding school or your day school?—Well, I try to develop both; however, I would prefer to develop the boarding school.

6079. Do you find it any disadvantage to have a day school in connection with your boarding school?—No, I cannot say that I do.

£ 80. Is there any difference in regard to social position among the boys attending your school?—There is, and there is not.

6081. But the tendency would be to lower the status of the school if the numbers were increased by lowering the fees?—I think it would.

6082. Dr. TRAILL.—Have the day boys the use of the playground?—Yes.

6083. It is sometimes said that in the management of a school a number of day boys are a drawback?—Yes.

6084. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—But do you not think that the day boys were the object of the founder's intention?—I think that the day boys, no matter what their social position, were the original object of the endowment.

6085. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do you think that ten day boys represent the available school population for a school of this class in Clonmel?—Well, I can only judge by the results.

6086. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—But with a Protestant population of 1,500 there must be more than that?—I cannot say.

6087. Dr. TRAILL.—How many free boys do you think you could take with the existing endowment?—I never thought of limiting the number of free day boys at all.

6088. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Your school is practically denominational at present?—What do you mean by that?

6089. Well, connected with the Church?—Yes.

6090. Is there any objection to that on the part of Protestants of other denominations?—No, not that I know of. I had till lately one Roman Catholic boy.

6091. Was he a day boy or boarder?—He was a day boy.

6092. Dr. TRAILL.—Was he a free boy? No, he was not.

Rev. Latham Warren, Rector of Clonmel, sworn.

6093. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—How long have you been rector?—Nearly five years; something over four and a half years, I believe.

6094. During that time have you taken any part in the management of the Clonmel Endowed School?—No. I know nothing about its property or management. I did not feel that I had any right to interfere with the management of the school; beyond knowing Mr. Kennedy, the head master, I have no knowledge of the school.

6095. Do you ever visit the school in connexion with the religious instruction, which the head master told us the boys receive?—No, I do not visit the school. One of my curates goes there once a week; he goes, I think, every Wednesday. The boys come to our church for morning service, but not for evening worship.

6096. Mr. Kennedy tells us that he knows nothing about the management of the estate, and that the school is entirely managed by himself. Do you not think that if some local gentlemen took an interest in the school it would be beneficial for it?—I think it would be an advantage to the head master.

6097. Dr. TRAILL.—Are you aware that the endowment is "for the sons of the Protestant Freemen of Clonmel"?—I am aware of that.

Rev. Latham
Warren.

Oct. 24, 1887.

Rev. Lathua
Warren.

6108. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What is the Church population of Clonmel?—The Church population, not including the military, is about 570.

6109. Do you know what are the numbers of the other Protestant denominations?—As regards the dissenting bodies I do not know their exact numbers. There is a congregation of Presbyterians, one of Methodists; both of them are small, I believe, but still they have established places of worship.

6110. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is the Society of Friends not a numerous body in Clonmel?—Yes, they are a strong body in this town; they have an established meeting-house; but they were a very much stronger body than they are now. There is a substantial Protestant population in the place, it might be something about 1,000. There is a congregation of Plymouth Brethren.

6101. Where is this Protestant population getting its education?—I know that many of them attend the Model school. My courses go there every Friday for religious instruction.

6102. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—The children are chiefly Protestant at the Model schools?—Yes. We have about 100 Protestant children at the Model schools.

6103. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Are any of their children of a class to get a higher education, something better than a National School education?—If it were available for them I should say there are some such children at the Model school.

6104. Dr. TRAILL.—The principal teacher of your school told us that he lost the majority of his children when they got to the age of fourteen; they then went to the Model school?—Yes, I think that is the case.

6105. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Your school then is the preparatory school, and the Model school the finishing school for the Protestants of Clonmel?—Yes. I do not think we have many children over fourteen, because they then go to the Model school.

6106. Dr. TRAILL.—Then if the Model school were done away with, you would have no kind of a proper school for the Protestants of Clonmel?—No, I do not think we would.

6107. Do you know if the Earl of Mountcashel has any connection with Clonmel?—I do not know anything of that.

6108. Has the Marquis of Ormonde any connection at present with the town?—I do not think so. I do not think they have any property here.

6109. Rev. Dr. MOLLAY.—Then, of the three persons who have the right of appointment of the head master, the Mayor of Clonmel is the only one who is connected with the town, and he is just the only one who never gets any share in the appointment?—I cannot say.

6110. Dr. TRAILL.—But you are aware that the Mayor of Clonmel has no right, since the passing of the Municipal Corporations Act, to take any part in the appointment of the head master?—Is that so?

6111. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—It is our duty to try and put the school and property under proper supervision. Can you not find us fit materials for this purpose?—I have never thought of the question at all; it is a difficult question to answer at once. Nine years ago there was a good enough interest taken in the school.

6112. Who is the present holder of the Ormond property?—Mr. Bagwell's predecessor purchased the property, but he is away in England at present.

6113. Dr. TRAILL.—Are there any resident gentry who would take an interest in the school?—There are, I think.

6114. Could you not get a body similar to that which they have got at Monaghan?—I am sure we could. It is a question, however, I never thought of.

6115. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Do the members of the Society of Friends take an interest in education?—Yes, I think they do. I am sure if we thought of it we could find a very efficient committee of management.

6116. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—At Monaghan they held a meeting to which all religious denominations were invited, but, as a matter of fact, only the Protestants attended. They then formed a committee and worked up their school to a successful and efficient state. When we went there we found things in a satisfactory condition that we placed the school entirely in the hands of the local Board. It has been proposed to follow the same course here, and from what we found in 1878 and 1879, I expected that some of the people here would do this?—Well, I believe Mr. Bagwell would take an interest in the matter if it were brought before him.

Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq., Sub-Sheriff for the County of Tipperary, sworn.

Gerald
Fitzgerald,
esq.

6116A. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long are you sub-sheriff of the county?—Since the beginning of 1887.

6117. Do you know anything about this school?—I went to it; I was a former pupil of the school.

6118. How long is that ago?—I was there about the year 1838, I think.

6119. How many pupils were there at the school?—There were about twenty boarders, and about, I suppose, forty day boys.

6120. What denominations were they?—The day boys were of all denominations.

6121. At that time was it the only Intermediate school in the town?—It was the only school of that class in the town then.

6122. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Who was the head master then?—The Rev. Dr. Bell, he was the father of the late Archbishop Bell, of Waterford and of Tipperary, who himself taught in the school.

6123A. Who was the successor of Dr. Bell?—Well after that period the school fell into abeyance for a time; there were two or three masters, if I remember right, and then it came into the hands of the Rev. Thomas Ketchell, (Y) He was a clever man and an excellent teacher, but he got into difficulties. Then Mr. Hutchinson came as master, and the school rose again. I send my son to the school as a pupil, and he is a freeman Mr. Hutchinson would not take my fee from me for my son when I wanted to pay for him. Then the school fell away again before Mr. Hutchinson left.

6123. Do you know anything about the freemen of Clonmel?—There is a great number of freemen Catholics and Quakers and Presbyterians; but at the time to which I refer it was a great benefit being a freeman, for then Clonmel was a Parliamentary borough. Now that is all swept away, and Clonmel being merged into the county, the freeman's vote is entirely lost.

6124. Did the freemen belong to various Protestant denominations?—All denominations of Protestants were freemen.

6125. I am speaking of the Protestant freemen for the benefit of whose children this school was intended, did they all belong to one denomination?—No, there were freemen of all denominations; there were Catholic freemen as well as Protestant.

6126. Lord Justice NAPIER.—Then there was no

Oct. 26, 1837.
Oswell
Fitzgerald,
sq.

restriction as to what denomination the freemen were to belong?—There was no restriction as to the religion to which a freeman should belong.

6127. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Then the school was never strictly denominational?—No, I remember boys of all creeds at it.

6128. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How did they obtain admission to the freemen's roll of the city?—A man was admitted a freeman by servitude, that is by serving his apprenticeship to some trade, or by being the son or grandson of a freeman, or by marriage.

6129. Lord Justice NAULT.—Are there many admissions now to the freemen's roll?—Since the borough has ceased to be a Parliamentary one, there is not the same interest taken in getting made a freeman. I know there were some admitted some time ago, but prior to the change in the representation, before every Parliamentary election for the borough, a list of the freemen was published, and those whose names were on the list, and were within a seven mile radius of the town were entitled to vote, but without that radius they could not vote.

6130. Then the only advantage in being a freeman now is in one's children being admitted to this school?—Yes, that is all.

6131. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Do you know the whole belonging to the school?—Well, I do not know it very accurately.

6132. Have you ever been on it?—Yes.

6133. Do you know anything about its present condition?—I am afraid that the rents are not paid like the rents in a great many other places.

6134. To what do you attribute that?—Well, that would require a long answer.

6135. Do you believe the absence of any local person interested in the estate has anything to do with it?—Well, you see the estate is a good way from here.

6136. Who is the agent for the property?—I believe the agent is Mr. Frank.

6137. Where does he live?—He lives near Castlebar, Monaghan, his place is within eight or ten miles of the property.

6138. Do you think if the people of Clonmel were interested in the property they would be likely to manage it better?—I think not. The estate is over forty miles from here.

6139. But they would have a personal interest in its management?—Yes, but the distance of the estate from the school is an inconvenience.

6140. Do you know is there much rent due from the tenants?—I have reason to know that very large sums of money are due on the estate from one or two tenants especially.

6141. There seem to be some very large holdings on the estate?—I know that one of the principal tenants has had no stock or means of his own, and he has begun to take in "grass," and there are not available in execution for the rent due by him.

6142. As regards the school and its management, can you suggest any one who would take a practical interest in it?—Mr. Baywell, I believe, would be the best. He is the representative of the Ormrod estate, and is a very large proprietor; and he would, I am sure, take an active interest in it. He is besides a man of education, well read and clever, and he takes an active interest in every thing local.

6143. I suppose he has some practical experience in the management of estates?—Yes. He lives within two or three miles of the town, and there would be no great difficulty in him taking an active share in the management.

6144. Do you know if he is a freeman of the city?—Well, I cannot say whether or not. Not having seen the list of freemen I would not be certain, but I think he is a freeman.

6145. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Are there any professional or business men in the town who are freemen, and who would serve on a local committee of management?—If I saw the list of freemen I could point out to you at once whether they were or not.

6146. Lord Justice NAULT.—Were any of the Quakers freemen?—Oh, yes; the Malvernians and the Grubbs, and several others, were freemen.

6147. Dr. TRAILL.—The Quakers have a school of their own at Waterford?—I believe so.

6148. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How far are Portlaw and Cash from Clonmel?—A short distance, about eight or nine miles.

6149. Could not boys come from those places to the school?—Yes, the boys could come by train.

6150. What is the population of Clonmel?—About 2,600, I think.

CLONMEL (ST. MARY'S) INCORPORATED SOCIETY'S SCHOOL AND CLONMEL CHARITABLE SCHOOL.

Rev. Latham Warren examined.

Rev. Latham
Warren.

6151. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—The first school is St. Mary's or the Incorporated Society's School?—The Incorporated Society's School does not exist at all. It ceased to exist before I came here. It was only a boys' school. Some time ago it was in the hands of the Incorporated Society, but there was a dispute in their lease, that if they at any time ceased to have a school there, then, that after three months lapse of the school being carried on, the building should go to the parish. For many years before I came here they had no school at all, and then the whole thing collapsed, so that now the Incorporated Society have no lease stand at all.

6152. Is the school that belonged to the Incorporated Society occupied at present as a parish school?—The buildings are at the rear of the present school premises.

6153. I see John Baywell granted it to the Representative Church Body at the yearly rent of a peppercorn. Have you got the whole of these premises under this grant?—Yes.

6154. The first endowment that I see upon the list is Anne Cook, £50; then Robert Grubb, £2 15s. 4d., and, and £150 Government Stock; Ladyman's bequest, £5 Irish, and £5 fr. interest on a bond?—Well, I have never heard of that Grubb bequest which you read out. We are receiving the other endowments, Ladyman's, Cooke's, and Pomeroy's. Pomeroy's is a grant of £7 7s. 8d., for the apprenticing of boys, we have given that towards the apprenticing fund.

6155. Then you have an apprenticing fund in the parish?—Yes.

6156. How much are you in receipt of at present?—We are in receipt of £5 left by Dr. Ladyman, for the apprenticing and schooling of boys, and £3 for the poor from the same donor.

6157. To whom is that paid?—It is paid to the ministers and churchwardens by the Corporation annually.

6158. How is it that the Corporation come to pay it?—They borrowed money, I think.

6159. Then it is secured on mortgage?—I do not know; I do not know anything of the particulars of the mortgages, all I know is that the money is paid by them since I came here.

6160. Who has Pomeroy's bequest?—That also is paid by the Corporation.

Oct. 26, 1883.
Rev. John
Warren.

6160. Have you any other apprenticing funds?—We had others, but I did not bring particulars of them. I think we had better give you a list of them.

6161. Dr. TRAILL.—Who pays Anne Cook's money?—That is a sum of £5 for a school already established; that is paid out of a capital sum that was lost and recovered. It is now in Chancery.

6162. Lord Justice FRYGINTON.—You say you know nothing about Grubb's bequest?—I never heard of the Grubb's property until your lordship read it out to me.

6163. Do you still receive any endowment from the Incorporated Society?—None whatever.

6164. There was an endowment of £15 per cent on a lease—is that still paid to you?—I do not know anything of it.

6165. What is the number of children attending the school?—There are from sixty to seventy on the roll, and the average attendance is about forty-six.

6166. Is it a mixed school?—Yes.

6167. I think you told me the children leave you and go to the Model School about the age of thirteen?—Yes, they leave for the Model School about the ages of thirteen and fourteen.

6168. Do both the boys and girls go?—Yes.

6169. Rev. Dr. MOLLER.—Then it is practically a preparatory school for the Model School?—Well, yes.

6170. Do many of the young children go to the Model School without coming to your school at all?—Yes, some of the young children do.

6171. Lord Justice FRYGINTON.—How long have you been in connection with the National Board?—I think between two and three years.

6172. Is your teacher closed?—Yes, the teacher is second class.

6173. Have you any assistants?—We pay an assistant ourselves, as we do not come up to the average for the assistant to be paid by the National Board.

6174. What salary do you give the assistant?—£15 a year.

6175. How do you get the money to pay the assistant?—We get annual subscriptions to the amount of £23, and then we have collections at the church, which bring in about another £4.

6176. You are aware that the old corporation of minister and churchwardens no longer exists as a corporate body. If we made a body to hold this property for you, how do you think it ought to be formed?—Well, that is a question that would require some consideration before I could answer it. The thing has worked so well and so satisfactory that I have never thought of making an alteration in the management of the funds. We have always consulted the Select Vestry in these matters. It was through the action of the Select Vestry, and with their approval and co-operation, that the school was put in connection with the National Board.

6177. Do the Select Vestry take an active interest in the school?—They do; the school committee is appointed by the Select Vestry.

6178. Dr. TRAILL.—Has that been since the school was put under the National Board?—Yes. We had barely thirty one of an average, just what would get us under the National Board two or three years ago, and now we have raised the school until the average attendance is up to forty-six.

6179. Would it benefit your school much if the Model School were closed?—Yes, our school would be much larger.

6180. But I suppose you have no desire to close the Model School in order to increase the attendance at yours?—No, I have not any such wish. When I got the school it had no appliances and was in a very wretched condition, it is now, I am happy to say, in a prosperous condition.

Lord Justice FRYGINTON.—The only thing would be to give a legal status to the management you have at present. What we shall ask you to do is to make out a list of all the property you are in receipt of, including all apprenticeship funds. These should be vested in the same body as the school.

6181. Lord Justice STAMM.—What is the name of the school at Waterford to which you pay £25 a year?—"The Friends' Provincial School," at Waterford.

Gerald Fitzgerald re-examined.

Gerald
Fitzgerald.

6182. With regard to the freeman's roll, I see that there is a separate list for the Quakers, and in connection with this list I may say that there are six names on it, and five of these are alive. On the other list you give us any idea of the persons?—I see there are some recent admissions in the year 1884. There are about thirty-seven living. I would be inclined to think that this is a list of those living within a circle of seven miles.

ROCKWELL COLLEGE, CAHIR.

Rev. Praeger Geoghegan sworn.

Rev. Praeger
Geoghegan.

6183. Lord Justice FRYGINTON.—What distance is Rockwell College from Clonmel?—It is ten miles from Clonmel, three from Cashel, and five from Cahire, our post town is Cashel.

6184. How long have you been connected with the institution?—Over twenty years.

6185. You are not an Englishman?—No, I was born in the province of Alaska; I have been head of the college for the last seven years.

6186. What number of pupils have you at Rockwell?—Ninety.

6187. How many of these are day boys and boarders?—Sixteen day boys, fifty-seven boarders, and seven or eight ecclesiastical students who are boarders also.

6188. What is the name of your order?—It is known as the Order of the "Fathers of the Holy Christ."

6189. Then it is the same order as that of Blackrock?—Yes, they are the only two houses in Ireland.

6190. How long has the order been in Ireland?—

Since 1859; Rockwell College was founded in 1858, and Blackrock in 1859.

6191. Were they originally founded as Intermediate schools?—The original intention was to make them Intermediate schools. They are since that date both Intermediate Colleges.

6192. Do you teach classics?—Yes.

6193. What is your course of study?—It embraces Greek and Latin classics, the English, French, German, Italian, and Irish languages, mathematics, and science, music, drawing; anything that is to be taught in the course for the Intermediate.

6194. How far do you go in mathematics?—Arithmetic, the six books of Euclid, algebra, trigonometry, and mechanics.

6195. In the senior, middle, and junior grades how many boys did you send up for the Intermediate this year?—Thirty-five.

6196. I believe your school has been extremely successful?—This year we sent in thirty-five boys, of whom

Oct. 26, 1887.

Rev. Frederic Gough.

twenty-six were successful. In the senior grade we sent in only four candidates, and the four retained exhibitions; two of them of £25 each, and two others of £15 each; and two of the boys got book prizes. Then we had honors in seventeen subjects besides many passes. In the middle grade we had seven successful candidates. One obtained the gold medal for modern languages, three retained exhibitions each of the value of £15, and three other prizes were obtained. Then there were honors in seventeen subjects besides many passes. In the junior grade, my lord, we had fifteen successful candidates, the gold medal for modern languages, and four exhibitions obtained, two of £20 each, and two of £15 each. Then we had four prizes, and sixty-four honors besides many passes. The summary for the year 1887 is as follows:—With 55 candidates, Rockwell secured:—In the senior grade, 4 exhibitions retained, two prizes, 17 honors, besides many passes. In the middle grade, 3 exhibitions retained, the gold medal for modern languages, three prizes, 17 honors, besides many passes. In the junior grade, 4 exhibitions obtained, 4 prizes, 64 honors, besides many passes. In modern languages, my lord, out of the three gold medals obtainable at the Intermediate Examinations, Rockwell won two, one in the middle, and one in the junior grade. The Irish Times said:—"In modern languages, Rockwell College, Cashel, maintains its old supremacy. The gold medal in the middle grade being awarded to Thomas O'Brien, and that in the junior grade to John Aker, both students of that college."

6117. Dr. TRAILL.—What department have you charge of?—I have charge of the Greek and of the French departments.

6118. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How many of you are engaged in teaching?—Six Fathers, four assistants, who are not yet priests, and one Brother; in all eleven.

6119. Have you any extra professors?—No, we have no extra professors. They all belong to the order. There are four who are not Fathers. They are preparing to be so, but have not yet finished.

6120. How many are there altogether?—There are eleven of our order at the college.

6121. Dr. TRAILL.—Where do your fifty-seven boarders come from?—From every county of Ireland, but mostly from the counties around Kippurey.

6122. To what professions do your boys generally go?—Many of them to the medical profession, some to the law, others to the ecclesiastical state.

6123. What medical schools do they go to?—Some go to Cork and some to Dublin.

6124. Are your boarding pupils all from the South of Ireland?—No, we have some from Belfast and some from Dublin, but they are mostly from the South of Ireland.

6125. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What fees do you charge for day boys and boarders, respectively?—We charge thirty guineas a year for boarders.

6126. Are they all charged the same?—Yes, but we make some reduction in case of brothers.

6127. Have you any free pupils?—We have no free pupils.

6128. Dr. TRAILL.—What are your fees for day boys?—We charge £5 a year for day boys.

6129. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How many day boys have you?—About seventeen. They are all from the neighbourhood of Rockwell.

6130. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What land have you got at the college?—About 300 acres, all in our own hands.

6131. Who are the trustees?—There are three trustees. They are members of the order.

6132. How did this land come into your possession?—It was formerly given to the Scotch Bishops by a Mr. Charles Thibault with an obligation on the order to educate twelve students for ever. Later on the Scotch Bishops sold their right to our order for £7,000, and relieved it from the obligation of educating students for the Scotch Mission.

6133. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Then you had to pay for the endowment that Mr. Thibault gave to the Scotch bishops?—Yes, and that endowment has left us altogether and has gone to Scotland to the bishops.

6134. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—Had Mr. Thibault any connection with Scotland?—Yes, he was a French merchant who made a fortune in Dundee.

6135. Why then did he give the money over here?—He bought 2,000 acres near Cashel and left part as an endowment to the Scotch bishops.

6136. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—What did you get for the £7,000 you gave to the Scotch bishops?—We got the entire possession of Rockwell. At the time we bought it, Cardinal Manning was the arbitrator, and the value put upon the place at that time was £13,000, and then we had to pay £7,000 to the Scotch bishops for their share, and besides there was a farmer in the place, and in order to make him leave his place, we had to give him £300 as compensation. Besides there were £500 law expenses, so that we paid the sum of £8,000.

6137. Dr. TRAILL.—How did you get it for £7,000 if the arbitrator assessed the place at £13,000?—We had been building on the place for years: the arbitrator assessed the Scotch bishops' share at sixty per cent., and we had about forty per cent., we had to pay them £7,000, and other expenses brought it up to £8,000.

6138. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What were your total successes in the Intermediate this year?—For this year in all we have 108 honors, which include high honors in Greek, Latin, English, French, German, Italian, Celtic, Arithmetic, Euclid, Algebra, Natural Philosophy. In all these subjects within the last nine years, Rockwell College has presented 414 candidates, of whom 364 were successful. This we consider a high average; and there were gained by these candidates thirty-six exhibitions, eleven gold medals, thirteen silver medals, ninety-six prizes, and 223 passes.

6139. How are the affairs of the college managed?—It is by a committee.—They are managed by the superior with his council.

6140. How many of the order constitute the council?—Four members of the order constitute the council.

6141. Dr. TRAILL.—Is your order a teaching one?—It is a teaching order in Europe, and a missionary order in Africa. It is a teaching and missionary order in America. We have different colleges in America, Trinidad, Martinique, etc.

6142. Where do you get all your money?—From various sources which I need not answer.

6143. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—What amount of money have you got from the Intermediate as result fees?—We got £135 last year.

6144. Have you any idea of the money prizes obtained by the students as against your £135 of result fees?—We had four exhibitions retained, that was £70; two in the middle grade, and we had nine prizes about £5 each, and there are four exhibitions, two of £10, and two of £15; in all about £350.

6145. Do these exhibitions enable the pupils who got them to pay their fees?—I may say that is the way they pay their fees.

6146. Do you find the expenses of the Intermediate are balanced by the result fees?—I would rather there was no Intermediate at all, because the books cost more than the result fees. I think it is no benefit to the Intermediate schools as regards money. We have a college in Trinidad, where besides the result fees for their pupils, they have a grant of £1,000 from the State, and the State gives £1,000 a year more to the Royal College.

6147. Dr. TRAILL.—Where is that?—In Trinidad, where the Intermediate system was first established.

6148. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Do you spend £160 a year on books?—Well, not every year; we supply the boys with books of the different classes.

6149. You say the whole of the result fees of last year would scarcely balance the expenditure on books; do the books become the property of the college?—

Oct. 19, 1891.
Rev. Father
Geary.

Yes, but there are a number of books, such as grammars and dictionaries, which it is not necessary to purchase anew every year.

6230. Dr. TRAILL.—Then taking one year with another would the result be not counterbalance the expenditure on books?—Yes, but it takes £40 or £50 every year for fresh text books.

6231. Rev. Dr. MONTAG.—Then you would have a large collection of books in the college at the end of eight or ten years?—Yes, we have a very large stock of books, and we are constantly adding to them, there are so many text books coming out every year, and we have to purchase them for the boys.

6232. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you find it possible to cram the boys for the Intermediate examinations?—No, we teach the boys grammar well, and we have a special cramming for the examination.

6233. Then you find the boys work well enough?—Yes, as a rule the boys work well.

6234. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—If any endowment were available for Intermediate Education, to what purpose do you think it would be best applied?—Well, to help the establishment to live. I think any establishment that worked well should have an endowment, and I think that if an endowment were given according to results, Rockwell would have a claim to an endowment as well as any college in the North of Ireland. It was at the head of the list one year in the Intermediate. In 1884 Rockwell carried off one-fifth of all the medals given, and more than double as many as any other college. Taking exhibitions and medals alone into account, Rockwell was first of all Ireland, with a lot of thirteens. The next highest college having only seventeen.

6235. What year was that in?—That was in the year 1884.

6236. Rev. Dr. MONTAG.—Comparing Rockwell with the other Intermediate schools in Munster, does it stand first?—I think this year Fermoy stands first. They have more pupils than we have, but I don't know about the Sacred Heart College at Liswick.

6237. Dr. TRAILL.—What about the Christian Brothers at Cork?—The Christian Brothers of Cork are a most successful school. They have a very large number of pupils, but they are not a college.

6238. Rev. Dr. MONTAG.—Then judging by the results of the Intermediate, the four highest schools in Munster are, 1st, Christian Brothers, Cork; 2nd, St. Columba's College, Fermoy; 3rd, Rockwell College, Cashel; 4th, Sacred Heart College, Liswick?—Yes, I think so.

6239. No other school in Munster has been so successful as these at the Intermediate Examinations, and yet not one of the four has any endowment from the State?—I know Rockwell has none; I don't know about the others.

6240. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Do you find the Intermediate Examinations a fair test of a boy's knowledge?—I think, my lord, that a boy who has passed through the three grades with success, must be a good scholar.

6241. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you think the Intermediate Examinations have tended to make the boys more accurate scholars?—I think the boys are better scholars since the Intermediate. They certainly now read a shorter course of literature than they did before, but then, formerly, they did not study it so well as they do now.

6242. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Which do you think the better course, to read over a great number of authors, or to study a smaller course carefully?—I would rather know well what I do know, than have read much and know little.

6243. Then according to your experience the Intermediate Examinations have tended to promote sound scholarship, that is for those who go through the three grades?—Yes, certainly.

6244. Dr. TRAILL.—Is your school open to all denominations?—No, only to Catholics.

6245. Did you sign a document which you received from the Intermediate Education Board relative to boys abstaining themselves from the religious instruction, a Conscience Clause, in fact?—Oh, yes, my Protestant might sign that document.

6246. Then you do not interpret it that a Protestant might go into your school, and get an education if he wanted it, and absent himself at the hour devoted to religious instruction?—I do not think it applies, as there are none but Catholics attending the school.

6247. Rev. Dr. MONTAG.—Are there any endowments in Munster that you know of, which might be made available for your school?—I think the endowments ought to come from the Government itself. They have plenty of money.

6248. Does it occur to you at all, that the schools which have been most successful in passing pupils for the Intermediate and other examinations in Munster, are those schools that have no endowments?—It appears very strange indeed. I think if they had endowments they would do a great deal better.

Dr. TRAILL.—We find Protestant schools without any endowment very successful also.

6249. Lord Justice MANN.—But you think a small endowment would do you no harm?—Certainly not.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' SCHOOLS (ST. PETER'S AND ST. PAUL'S, CLONMEL).

Rev. Brother Patrick J. White sworn.

Rev. Brother
Patrick J.
White

6250. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You are a Christian Brother of the Clerical community?—Yes, I am a Christian Brother teaching in the larger school.

6251. What buildings have you got?—We have two different sets of buildings.

6252. How many schools have you in them?—In the large building, four rooms and a lecture room.

6253. How many brothers have you in the community?—There are six brothers here, and there are three in the other community in Irish town. I should have said, one of the brothers in the larger school is a lay brother.

6254. Then there are five engaged in teaching?—Yes.

6255. How many boys have you attending your upper school?—There are 480 on the roll, and we had 435 in attendance this week.

6256. How many boys have you attending the other school, the smaller one?—There are 217 on the roll, and 171 in attendance.

6257. That is, in round numbers, in both schools, you have about 700 on the roll, and about 600 in average attendance?—Yes, roughly, I think, those are about the numbers.

6258. How high do you go in the way of instruction?—Well, our course includes everything that is suited for passes in the Intermediate.

6259. For what grade do you send them in?—We send them in as high as the senior grade.

6260. Do you teach Latin?—We have about eight at present learning Latin for the primary course.

6261. Do you teach any Greek?—We have only two at present at it.

6262. Who teaches it?—A brother teaches it. I have a brother with me in this Intermediate school who has taken out a certificate from the South Kew-sington Department; and he looks after these things. I look after the arithmetic and geometry.

6262. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it the brother who teaches science that also teaches classics?—Yes; it is the brother who has the South Kensington certificate, who looks after the languages.

6263. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—For what branches are you in connection with South Kensington?—Mathematics, theoretical mechanics, sound, light, and heat, inorganic chemistry, geometrical drawing and freestone. In the first grade, drawing, we passed last year 131; second grade, freestone, two; geometrical drawing, ten; inorganic chemistry, eight; sound light and heat, three; theoretical mechanics, three; mathematics, eleven.

6264. What are your intermediate results for last year?—We had fourteen passes (thirteen in junior grade, one in the middle), and two prizes. In 1864, we had three additions; in 1865, three also; and in 1866, one. In 1865, we had three prizes, we had also three in 1865, one in 1864, three in 1863, two in 1862, and two in the present year. Our passes for the last seven years have been, five in 1861, eighteen in 1862, thirty in 1863, twenty-nine in 1864, thirty in 1865, twenty-five in 1866, fourteen in 1867.

6265. I suppose those boys whom you commend in your return as holding exhibitions retained them for some time?—One of them retained his exhibition for three years, two others retained them for two years.

6266. Lord Justice STAM.—I observe great fluctuations in the number of passes, to what do you attribute it?—The fluctuation in the number of passes this year, I attribute to the fact, that about four weeks before the examinations, our boys were drawn away by the military, a good many of them being drummers or bagpipers in the bands of the militia regiments.

6267. Where were they taken to?—They were drawn away to Cunden Fort, and were kept there during a good part of the season, and then when they came back, they were ill prepared to go in for an examination. They just came back on the day of the examination.

6268. How many of the boys are connected with a militia regiment of that description?—I think there were five or six with the regiment last year, besides that, there are a good many of our grown boys passed away. Then others become over age, and so on, and it fell to the lot of the juniors to take up the course. Then the arithmetic and geometry was very difficult this year, and many of the little fellows were unable to grapple with the papers on these subjects.

6269. They were not fair papers then?—No, they were not, sir, that is acknowledged by all.

6270. You mean the papers for the junior grade?—Yes.

6271. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—As you do not prepare them in many languages, this told heavily on your results?—Yes. I am not like the colleges, which are able to prepare their pupils in modern languages, and can take their passes in these subjects. Our juniors depend upon their arithmetic and geometry, and English, and if these subjects are too difficult it tells heavily on the results.

6272. I find in the report that there are certain endowments belonging to your school?—Yes.

6273. Who are the trustees for the school?—There are several trustees. The Roman Catholic Bishop of Worcester and Worcester for the time being, the Superior General of the Christian Brothers for the time being, and three Brothers named. The schools are held subject to a rent of £10 per annum.

6274. What is Lawlor's Endowment?—It was left in 1853 by a Mr. Lawlor. He bequeathed a profit rent arising out of houses, amounting to £37 10s. per annum, half for the support of the community, and half for breakfast and clothing for the poor. All the houses, except three, run out of lease in 1870.

6275. Have they been re-let since?—They are now in Mr. Grubb's hands as head landlord. They were taken from us in 1870. I have still three houses left, and if you please to turn over this document (here the witness handed up a document to the court), you will see how my accounts are with regard to the three houses that I hold. The first account is that of Mr. Landy's. He holds at a rent of £18 per year, payable half yearly. He has paid £7 out of £37 due, leaving a balance of £30 owing. That, I think, you will not consider profitable. The other account is Mr. Cooney's. He holds at a similar rent, and out of £45 due he has made three payments, leaving a balance owing of £34 18s. 8d.

6276. Then all you have got out of the first premises is £7 10s.—Yes, that is all.

6277. What is the position of the third house?—It is held in the main street by Mr. Mahony. He is the head landlord, we are the middle landlords, and he is the tenant. He gives us 26 a year except what he deducts for income tax and poor rates. This is all we have out of the £37 10s. a year bequeathed to us by Mr. Lawlor.

6278. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you any lease of Mahony's premises?—We have no lease against him. Mr. Tyld is the agent to whom I pay the rent.

6279. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—The next endowment is Blane's Bequest. In whose name is that invested?—I do not know. Mr. Blane's by his will invested £140 15s. 4d. in such a way as to produce 25 annually as his subscription for the Brother's support. He had been in the habit of giving them 25 every year.

6280. Who pays you this money?—I know that Mr. Maxwell has the power of attorney for drawing the interest.

6281. The next is Dr. Burke's Bequest?—Yes. He was the late parish priest. He bequeathed £1,100. Half was to be invested for support of the Brothers, and the other half for breakfast and clothing for the poor boys. It gives an annual income of £30 a year for each.

6282. What are the names of the trustees for that fund?—That is in the name of Dr. Power, Rev. O. J. Flavin, Dr. Crean, and Mr. W. Ryan, the solicitor, Mr. M. Ryan.

6283. How is it invested?—It is invested in the National Bank.

6284. Dr. TRAILL.—Is it on deposit?—I do not know exactly what it is in.

6285. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—It must be in National Bank shares. The next is James Barron's Bequest?—Yes. That is National Bank shares producing £27, to be divided in the same manner as Dr. Burke's Bequest.

6286. Then that gives you altogether £48 10s. for the support of the community, and £45 10s. for the poor boys?—Yes.

6287. I see your receipts are £78 and your expenditure, £23. Does this £55 arise from school fees?—Yes, it is the receipts for 1866.

6288. I see on item, £80 for philosophical instruments?—Yes, that arose in this way; when we connected ourselves with the South Kensington Department we were obliged to pay a good deal for appliances to carry out their system, otherwise we would not get their grant. They gave as much towards the grant as we contributed ourselves.

6289. How much do you pay to your pupil teachers?—We are paying our pupil teachers sixteen shillings a week.

6290. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you pay the whole of this £80 for philosophical instruments yourself?—Yes. I think so.

6291. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Do you know anything about St. Francis' Academy? Is that a private school?—That is not now in existence at all. It is a closed-up establishment.

6292. Rev. Dr. MALCOLM.—Is the school there?—Yes, there is a house.

6293. By whom is it tenanted?—I do not know.

Oct. 26, 1867
Rev. Brother Patrick J. White.

624. 18, 1887.

Rev. Mr. Butler
Patrick J.
White.

6234. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How much a year were you able to get in result fees, one year with another?—I know we got almost £50 this year: we have not been paid it yet, but that is the amount we are entitled to from the number of pupils.

6235. I believe that the difficulty about the use of your own books and certain emblems is the only matter that prevents you from going under the National Board?—Well, we generally leave matters of that kind to the decision of our Superior and his acting committee.

6236. Then these matters can be brought before him?—Yes, and when all questions of this kind arise he generally calls a Chapter of the Order, and of course I would be bound by whatever decision the Chapter came to, and would obey what they ordained in the matter.

6237. Dr. Traill.—The use of certain religious emblems in your schools is one of the great difficulties which prevents your schools coming in under the National Board?—Yes, I believe that is the case.

6238. Supposing that you were under the National Board, can you form any idea of how much you would be entitled to from their grants?—I think we would be entitled to about 12s. 6d. a head for our pupils.

6239. If you had an endowment to what use would you apply it?—Well, if we had more money we could have more teachers, and more appliances for the education of the children.

6240. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You have got a quantity of property in trust for the schools, some of it in the hands of one set of trustees, and some in the hands of another. It is very necessary for you to watch this property and prevent it becoming derelict, which in the present position it is very apt to do. The only thing we could do for you is to incorporate your present trustees, and this would save you all legal expense and an immensity of trouble in the future. We would be quite willing to incorporate such a body for you, a body who could hold all the trust funds.

Oct. 27, 1887.

PUBLIC SITTING, THURSDAY, OCTOBER, 27 1887.

At the Courthouse, Waterford.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERALD, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAIRN, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.Sc., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.T.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, JUNR., was in attendance.

Lord Justice Fitzgerald made an introductory statement.

BISHOP FOY'S CHARITY.

6301. The Right Rev. Dr. Day.—With respect to Bishop Foy's Charity, we formulated a scheme and sent it in to the Commission. But, with regard to that scheme, I wish to state that it was accompanied with a condition that we should be entirely exempt from your jurisdiction. We only sent in that scheme in case you should decide against us in our claim for exemption from the operation of the Act.

6302. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—But we must first ascertain the original terms of the foundation and the present position of the charity, whether it is or is not within our jurisdiction. If the charity is within our jurisdiction we must exercise our power with a due regard to the intentions of the original founder. Possibly we had better take the will and ascertain what the foundation is.

The Right Rev. Dr. Day, Lord Bishop of Cashed, Emly, Waterford, and Lismore, sworn.

The Right
Rev. Dr. Day.

6303. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—How long have you been Bishop of Cashed and Waterford?—I have been Bishop of Cashed for over fifteen years.

6304. You are one of the governors of Bishop Foy's Charity, I believe?—Yes, I am one of the governors.

6305. The charity was originally founded by the will of Nathaniel Foy, Bishop of Waterford and Lismore?—Yes, the charity was founded under his will, and I believe the date of the will is December 26, 1797.

6306. I believe after this will there was an Act of Parliament, one of the reign of George III.?—Yes, there was.

6307. Then I see there is another Act, the 48th Geo. III., 1808?—Yes.

6308. Was it under this Act of 1808 that the premises were secured in which the school is now situated?—Yes, my lord.

6309. What is the present condition of the school?—When I became Bishop of Cashed the school was in a very bad state, and the master was inefficient. The premises I may say were in a ruinous condition. I met the trustees time after time in Waterford and I determined on repairing the school. I almost rebuilt a portion of it.

6310. Was this with money that had accumulated?—Yes.

6311. From Bishop Foy's estate?—It was in the bank, and partly in funds in the name of the late Bishop of Cashed.

6312. Were the funds from the estate of Bishop Foy?—I suppose so, but I have no means of knowing.

6313. The trustees are mentioned in the Report of 1880 [here the Lord Justice read from a report]?—Yes, these are the trustees.

6314. Have any of the municipal authorities taken part in the management of the charity since the act of 1808?—They have not certainly taken any part in the management of the charity since I became bishop.

6315. The endowment consists of lands only?—It is all lands with the exception of a house in the town of Waterford.

6316. About how much was laid out in the restoration of the premises?—There was a sum of about £3,000 expended in restoring it.

6317. After its completion who was the master?—Mr. William Smith, the present master.

6318. What is the number of boys in the institution?—After it was restored there were forty boys boarded, lodged, educated, and apprenticed; this continued as long as the funds sufficed to do it.

6319. Is there any separate apprenticeship fund?—Yes, there is; but it is not confined to the boy's school.

6320. How is it distributed then?—It is both for boys and girls.

6321. By whom is that fund administered?—By the dean and myself, the two trustees.

6322. Then there are the same trustees for this fund as for Bishop Foy's School?—Yes.

6323. Then the governing body for the one should be the same as the governing body for the other?—Well, I suppose so.

6324. How are the boys appointed to the school?—By the bishop and dean; they select them. The being, I believe, from what you have read in the will, has the right to the sole appointment if he wishes to exercise it, but I have always consulted the Dean, and it is with his approval that I usually appoint the boys.

6325. We have been told that the number of boys at Bishop Fej's foundation has been reduced?—Yes; the number of boys on the foundation has been reduced to twelve, because of the utter falling off of our rents.

6326. How long has this been the case?—That has been so for two or three years. The funds have never been reduced to so low an ebb as now.

6327. How did you manage to reduce the number of boys on the foundation?—Well, the boys have been reduced by not filling up the places as they became vacant. I should hope that the reduction, however, will not be permanent.

6328. Who is the present agent of the estate?—Mr. Langley, who is here present to-day.

6329. To what religious denomination do the boys at the school belong?—To the Church of Ireland exclusively.

6330. So if a boy of another denomination enters he must conform?—They must conform with the Church of Ireland.

6331. Have you ever had boys of other denominations attending the school?—We have taken in one or two Protestant Dissenters, whom their parents consented to their conforming to our Church, and they were instructed in the doctrines of the Church.

6332. Are the boys all instructed in the Church Catechism?—Yes.

6333. And do they all go to the Protestant Church?—They attend Divine service at Ballynakill Church; I mention that church. It is the parish church where the school is held.

6334. Is it close to the school?—It is within a quarter of a mile of the school.

6335. I see that St. Oliver's Church is mentioned in the will?—Yes; the boys in former times attended that church, but the school is now removed out of the town and it would be inconvenient for them to attend St. Oliver's. St. Oliver's Church is one of the city churches. It is two miles from the town to the school.

6336. It struck us to-day when we visited the school that the number of boys deriving benefit from such an endowment is very small: do you think if it were made available for day boys it might not become more useful to the neighbourhood?—In its present position it is too far from the town to take day boys in connection with it.

6337. Why was it removed out of the town?—It was removed out of the town premises for the purposes of the boarding school.

6338. You would then prefer it as a boarding school?—I think the benefits of it is very great, and if we could keep up the full number it would be an undoubted advantage. This we hope to do. I would hope that the rents will not always be in the same condition as they are at present in Ireland.

6339. What is the mode of selection of the boys?—They are selected by the Dean and myself.

6340. Are there many applications?—Not at present, because we have made it known that we will not take in any more.

6341. How do you select them?—What we have always done, is, to have an examination of boys. The candidates are obtained by giving notice throughout the town, we do not have an examination for every place, but when there are four or five places vacant there would be then a selection made from the candidates.

6342. Have you always a sufficient number of applicants to fill the places?—We have always more candidates than places.

6343. In preference given to any particular class of boys?—Well, they should be poor boys. We would always give preference to destitution, and they should be children of members of our Church.

6344. Do you require the boys to pass an examination?—We require a certain amount of education. The boys must pass an elementary examination in reading and writing.

6345. At what ages are the boys admitted into the institution?—Ten years of age is the appointed time, but we have now reduced the age to nine.

6346. There is a limitation in the will as to the length of time a boy can remain in the school. Is that rule in force now?—No, we keep them till the age of sixteen. We found that that was necessary in order to put them into some way of earning their own bread. If we sent them out at the age of fourteen, the time limited in the will, it would have a bad effect, so we keep them till they are sixteen.

6347. What steps do you take to get them into situations so as to start them in life?—There are applications made to us from all classes of persons in town, who want assistance in shops, offices, etc.

6348. Then you have found no difficulty in getting them into places, as soon as they leave the school?

6349. Have you had to pay a fee in these cases?—No, we can get them into places without fees.

6350. Where?—Well, as I have said in shops and offices; and they generally get 10s. a week at once.

6351. Without any fee being paid?—Yes.

6352. The education is then such as to fit them for those positions?—Yes, they get a sound commercial education. They are taught book-keeping.

6353. Dr. TARRANT.—You claim exemption?—Yes, we claim exemption.

6354. On what grounds?—On the grounds that the boys for whom the school was originally founded and intended, are boys of one religious denomination, and also on the ground that the governing body is composed exclusively of members of the Church of Ireland.

6355. If this charity were declared exempt, would you be inclined to put forward a scheme for its better government?—No; we think our present scheme and governing body is a very good one.

6356. But if this Commission were to give you an improved scheme, would you not avail yourself of the powers of this Commission?—Yes, I would, in that case.

6357. Under the original foundation there was a layman one of the trustees; would you be inclined to incorporate a layman with you who might assist in making this endowment a successful one?—Well, yes. A suitable layman would be an advantage if added to the governing body. I believe, originally, the mayor and the sheriff were trustees.

6358. Lord Justice FRYGATE.—Then you think it would not be disadvantageous for the management of the estate to have some layman on the governing body?—One suitable layman might be desirable, one who would give us his advice in monetary matters. When you were here last we had Mr. Bowles. He gave us very valuable assistance and advice, but he is dead. We would be glad to associate with us on the governing body such a layman as he.

6359. It would appear to have only two governors now?—It would be very desirable to have only one layman. The Mayor was the only layman appointed in the will.

6360. There is another matter that occurs to me that would be advantageous. It is evident that these foundation places are not sufficient to fill the entire buildings that you have got, why then not allow for a class of boys to pay for their education?—We have found out that ourselves, and we have for the last few years, when we have had more accommodation, received boys who pay £20; we receive these boys from any place, as boarders, giving them the same advantages as the other boys, both clothing and feeding, and also educating them.

6361. £30 a year would not pay for each additional boy brought in?—Yes, we found that it would cost about £17 a year, leaving £3 more towards the payment of the staff of the institution.

6362. The Bishop has a veto upon everything with regard to the nomination of the boys?—Yes.

6363. Have you never had any claim on the part of the Mayor as regards the management of the charity?—Never; not in my time.

6364. Whether he was a Protestant or not?—No.

6365. Dr. TRAILL.—The Municipal Corporations Act deprived them of that power?—Yes, I thought so.

6366. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—I see by the document that was sent in to the Commission that there is a debt upon the place at present?—There is a debt for which the Dean and I have made ourselves responsible. It was necessary to incur this debt in order to keep the place open. The falling off of the rents was the cause of it.

6367. Can you tell us the net income for the last eight or nine years?—No, I could not without referring to the accounts.

6368. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—What was the income for last year?—The agent who is here will be able to give you that more accurately than I could.

6369. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the amount of the debt that is due upon the place?—It is at least £1,200. The Dean and I contracted the debt to keep, as I have said, the place open.

6370. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—I understood you to say that you have reduced the age of admission to nine years?—Yes, we have.

6371. To what class do the parents of the children belong?—The parents of the boys are usually poor tradesmen, and people of that class, servants, and in some cases men belonging to the staff of the militia, and others of that kind.

6372. Have you any orphan children in the institution?—We have. But there is a little city orphan home, and we sometimes take boys who have been brought up from infancy there into Bishop Foy's School.

6373. Then many of the boys are the children of poor parents?—Some of the boys are very poor.

6374. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—I suppose their clothing is paid for?—Yes; it is paid for out of the income of the school. We do that even for the boys who pay £30 a year.

6375. Dr. TRAILL.—How many of the boys pay this stipend of £30 a year?—There are four boys at present who pay this sum of £30 a year.

6376. Where do they come from?—They come from other quarters.

6377. Then they may come from any place?—Yes.

6378. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—To what class do their parents belong?—They are the children of land stewards and other people of that class throughout the country who would gladly pay that sum for their children in return for the education they receive.

6379. Professor DOUGHERTY.—You said, I think, that you received boys belonging to other Protestant denominations?—Yes, in one or two instances, but we have done so with the consent of the parents.

6380. Did you require a formal written consent from the parents?—Certainly; we required a formal written consent from the parents, certainly, or otherwise we would not have admitted them.

6381. Did you simply assume when the parents were making application in a formal way that they would consent to their son being educated in the Episcopal faith?—No, we were by no means satisfied with an assumption, and we required the written consent of the parents.

6382. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—How often has this class of case occurred?—It has happened once or twice.

6383. Then you think it advisable to admit cases of that kind?—Well, we considered that the boys in the cases to which I have referred as worthy of admission.

6384. Rev. Dr. MALLOY.—Do you consider that the endowment was intended for Protestants of different denominations?—No, I do not.

6385. You consider that it was the intention of the founder to confine it to Protestants of one denomination only?—I think it was intended for Protestants who are members of the Church of Ireland.

6386. On what grounds, then, were you able to extend it to Protestants of other denominations?—Well, on the grounds that they became members of the Church of Ireland.

6387. Lord Justice FRYGUESON.—I do not think there can be any doubt about the character of this endowment. It was created by a Bishop out of his own private property, and given, after the expiration of certain life interests for members of his own family, to purposes of education. Bishop Foy placed it under the control of the Bishop, Dean, and Mayor of the City of Waterford, but at the same time he left it in a rather peculiar way; for the Bishop must, according to the terms of the will, be a member of the body of trustees whom they act on any occasion with regard to the charity; even if only two acted, one of them must necessarily be the Bishop. Furthermore, the boys were all removable at any time by the Bishop, and he could even refuse to admit those selected by the Dean and Mayor, and could appoint others in their place. In addition to this, the master of the school was to be appointed, and was removable, by the Bishop. It is evidently an establishment that our bishop founded and placed under the control and guidance of all his successors. Then there are two Acts of Parliament dealing with this charity, one of them bearing date 1808; and the inference is plain that, as the law stood at that time, the charity was considered an exclusive one. At the time those Acts were passed it was absolutely necessary that the three members of the governing body should be members of one particular religious denomination—viz., that of the Established Church. When the Municipal Corporations Act of 1840 was passed, it placed a limit upon the powers of members of municipal corporations who were Roman Catholics with regard to the private trusts of which they were ex-officio trustees. By that Act the Mayor and Corporation have been deprived of a share in the active government of this and similar institutions. And accordingly we find that this charity has been, for the last fifty years, under the exclusive control and jurisdiction of the Bishop and Dean of Waterford. As regards the boys who are the objects of the endowment and for whom it was provided, we see that the endowment is applicable only to boys who are members of the same religious denomination as the governing body of the institution. The Bishop, we understand, could take a child whose parents were of another denomination, but when the child enters the institution he becomes a member, and is educated as a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Having taken these facts into consideration, we must declare, as we have done in many other cases, that this endowment is exempt, and that we have no power to go further with the matter. Where an endowment of this kind is left for the people of a particular locality we cannot deprive them of their exclusive right to the endowment so long as there are any of the original class for whose benefit it was intended. Even with the assent of the governing body, in a case of this kind, we would be bound to keep up the exclusive character of the endowment in the framing of any scheme which we might prepare for its future government. It now only remains in this case for the governing body to consider whether they want any alteration in their present constitution. I say my idea, that we could incorporate the present governing body and invest the property in them for once and all, and now that the Bishop and Dean are no longer what is known as corporations sole, this might not be an imprudent step to take; and if a layman were associated with them in the management of the charity, he would be found, I think, of great assistance for putting out boys to trades.

6388. Right Rev. Dr. Dwyer.—Would an application be received by you if the Dean and I considered it advisable to take this step which you have suggested?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—We consider that we ought not to expect any governing body to give their consent, so as to deprive themselves of their control in the matter, until they know what we are going to do. What we have hitherto done in cases of this kind is as follows:—We have asked the governing body who are desirous that we should draft a scheme for them, to give us, in writing, a full statement of all the suggestions they wish to make for the improvement of the trust property. We then, from these materials, prepare a draft scheme and submit it to the governing body, who must consider their objections to the draft. If the governing body would rather have no scheme at all than the one we send them, we drop the matter. On the other hand, if they are satisfied with the draft, we ask them to give their consent, and, on their consent being given, we publish the scheme.

6389. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—Then that does not enable with our right of exemption from your jurisdiction under this Act?—No, but once the consent is given it comes within the Act. Our course in consent cases is to prepare the draft scheme and then to ask for the consent of the governing body, in writing, before we publish it.

6390. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—Does that consent in writing give you power to modify in any case with the endowment?

Dr. TRAILL.—You are not asked to put your head into a noose.

6391. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—I would ask for the information of the governing body of the charity, whether, if we thought it advisable, under the present difficult circumstances of the country, to sell our landed property can you give them authority to do so?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Yes, we can give full powers of sale and letting.

Dr. TRAILL.—Your lordship will understand that, when you come in under the operation of this Act, and your governing body has been incorporated by the Commission, you are liable to inspection and to audit. The auditor will be appointed by the Local Government Board.

6392. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—Would we have to pay that auditor?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Yes, but it would not involve much expense; but your accounts must pass the Local Government Board audit. The 17th section of the Act deals with this matter. As regards the audit it is open to me to appoint a competent authority as auditor, who is proposed by the governing body. We have opened communications with the Local Government Board, and we have grounds for stating that they are prepared to audit accounts of this kind at a very reasonable and uniform charge. An audit of that kind is a very valuable precaution.

6393. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—I would only ask you whether you would recommend us to seek the aid of our landed property?

Rev. Dr. MALLON.—In the scheme we would only give the governing body power to sell if they wished to do so.

The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—Oh, yes; I understand that of course. We would have it distinctly understood, Dr. TRAILL, that our asking for a scheme does not bind us to accept it.

Rev. Dr. MALLON.—The Act does not apply to your endowment without your written consent; but when we get your written consent then we can deal with it.

6394. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—Suppose that I consent and the Dean consents with me, and the school is placed under the operation of the scheme, would that vitiate our claim for exemption from any future Commission?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Oh, we cannot tell if it will be exempt from any future legislation. The schemes prepared by us under this Act, have the same force as an Act of Parliament. We have power to insert provisions for placing the scheme on the consent being obtained of the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. Formerly, governing bodies were compelled, at a great deal of expense, to go into the Court of Chancery to effect this object. Wherever we have formed governing bodies, we provide that the scheme may be altered on the application of the governors to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests. In the case of foundations exclusively belonging to the Church of Ireland, we have in certain instances inserted a provision in the scheme that it may be altered by the same authority on the application of the Church Synod.

Dr. TRAILL.—The great object is to save you the expense of applying to the Court of Chancery, your scheme will enable you to effect the object, formerly obtainable only by application to that Court, without much trouble or expense.

6395. The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—Supposing that we give our consent to the scheme, does that secure the exclusiveness of our endowment?

Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—The section of the Act is explicit on the point. We cannot possibly give you a higher security than the safety of the Act itself.

Mr. Charles Langley, Agent of the Estate of Bishop Foy's Charity, sworn and examined.

6396. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—When were you appointed agent for the Foy Estate?—At the latter end of 1880.

6397. That was just shortly after the former inquiry?—I do not know.

6398. Where do you reside?—I live near Kilmastomas.

6399. Is that near the Foy Estate?—The nearest part of the estate is about eight miles from where I reside, and the other portion of the estate lies about nine miles off my place.

6400. The estate is in two lots there?—Yes, it is in two different lots, one portion is situated near Kilmastomas, and the other lot is situated near Carrick-on-Sale.

6401. Take one lot at a time; take the Kilmastomas lot, is it lease property?—No, the whole estate is leased property, except in one instance.

6402. What class of land is it?—It is land chiefly occupied by dairy farmers and graziers who rear young stock.

6403. How many tenants are on that land?—There are thirty-two tenants, I think on the entire estate.

6404. But how many are on the portion of the estate situated near Kilmastomas?—I cannot tell you exactly, but I think about twenty-three are situated on one lot, and possibly about nine on the Kilmastomas portion.

6405. Have you got a rental of the estate with you?—No, I have not.

6406. Are the lands held by leases from year to year?—There are two cases of leaseholders and only two on the estate, the remainder are yearly tenants.

6407. Dr. TRAILL.—Are three tenants going into the Courts under the Land Act?—Well, I do not know that.

Oct. 22, 1889.
The Right
Hon. Dr. Dwyer.

Mr Charles
Langley.

Oct. 21, 1897.
—
Mr. Charles
Langley.

6408. Are the rents above or below the Poor Law Valuation?—I think the majority are above the Poor Law Valuation.

6409. Lord Justice FREDGEMAN.—We understand that the difficulty about the income of this charity has arisen from the difficulty of getting in the rents from the tenants on the estate?—Yes, the tenants have gone in for the "Plan of Campaign," and there is some difficulty in getting the rents from them. However, a settlement has been arrived at, and concessions have been made to them. They have paid me a half year's rent, but with the condition also that they should pay another half year's rent next month.

6410. Does that apply to the whole of the tenants?—Well, yes.

6411. Are there any of the tenants who have not gone in for the Plan of Campaign?—Yes, there are about five or six of the yearly tenants who have not gone in for it and neither have the leaseholders.

6412. How much is the rental of the property now?—Well there have been reductions made since 1881. The rental in that year was £1,603 14s. 4d., and for the following year, it was the same amount. In the year 1883, the rental was reduced to £1,519 10s. 1d. The cause of this was that several of the tenants in that year went into the Land Courts and got their rents reduced by the Court. In the years 1884 and 1885, the rental stood at £1,484 14s. 3d., this was caused by some further reductions by the Land Courts, nine of the tenants having gone into the Court to have their rents fixed. In the year 1886, the rental stood at £1,479 18s. 1d.

6413. What is the amount of arrears due by the tenants?—The amount of arrears? I can tell you the amount I received last year.

6414. How much was it?—£515.

6415. Dr. TRAILL.—Was that the amount you received for the whole year?—Yes, they refused payment and went in for the "Plan of Campaign," and stood out for reductions of the rent.

6416. Lord Justice FREDGEMAN.—Was that in the year 1886?—Yes, for the November year, 1886.

6417. How much of the rental have you got this year?—£490 10s., and I expect I shall get the same sum in a short time.

6418. So that would be something over £500 for the whole year?—Yes, I strongly it will be paid when I go round myself to collect it.

6419. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What reductions have you allowed the tenants who went in for the "Plan of Campaign"?—We allowed a reduction of thirty-five per cent. on the old rents, and of twenty-five per cent. on the judicial rents; but it was on condition that they should pay those two paces in November.

6420. Is that a permanent reduction?—Oh, no, only for these two particular years.

6421. Dr. TRAILL.—For what two years?—For November, 1886, and May, 1887.

6422. Did you get the May rents for the year 1886?—No, there are some who did not pay and who are under process for the amounts due. There is one under execution. Four or five of them are in a very shaky state. There is a decree of eviction obtained against one man who has a large holding.

6423. What is his rent?—His rent is £191.

6424. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Is that tenant a leaseholder?—No, he is not.

6425. Do you expect many of your leaseholders to go into court for a revision of their rents under the new Act?—No, I do not think they will. You see there are only two leaseholders on the estate.

6426. Lord Justice FREDGEMAN.—There was one lease held by the Rev. E. Ridgeway?—Yes, that is still in existence.

6427. Dr. TRAILL.—Who is the other leaseholder?—The Marquis of Waterford.

6428. I understand this land was close to the Marquis of Waterford's own land?—Yes, it is quite close to it, he took it for the purpose of improving his own demesne, it immediately adjoins it.

6429. There is another tenant here, Peter Wall (?) who appears to have a large holding?—Yes.

6430. Has he joined the "Plan of Campaign"?—Yes, he has joined it.

6431. What is his rent?—Peter Wall's rent, as well as I can remember, was £150 16s. 8d. This amount, however, has been reduced by the Land Courts. He went into the Courts and got it reduced to about £140, and then I think he appealed and got it further reduced to £130.

6432. And that is the amount which Peter Wall has refused to pay?—Yes.

6433. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—Has he a lease of his holding or is he only a yearly tenant?—He has not got a lease, but since his rent was fixed by the Land Court he has got a judicial lease for fifteen years. I know of my own personal observation that Wall has been in the habit of drawing mowers from Carrick. He has been for years mowing his land by mares purchased in this way in the town.

6434. Dr. TRAILL.—Was that rent of £150 16s. 8d. the rent of Wall's holding for a number of years previous to his application to the Land Courts?—Yes.

6435. Rev. Dr. MOLLON.—I believe that it dates from the year of the Battle of Waterloo, 1815?—I do not know; the books are not here from which I could tell you when he entered the farm.

6436. Dr. TRAILL.—Do you know what that amount, £150 16s. 8d., Wall's rent in the year 1856? I cannot say.

6437. Was it his rent in 1845?—I do not know, I cannot tell you that without consulting the rent books.

6438. Lord Justice FREDGEMAN.—Then comes the case of Thomas Drolan?—He held at a rent under Griffith's valuation. His old rent was £34. The case was brought into the courts, and his rent was raised by the Land Commissioners to £75; the tenant then appealed to the Superior Court, and the rent was reduced to £68. His rent now stands at this amount.

6439. Do you visit the estate from time to time?—Yes, I live near it.

6440. Can you give us any idea of what the receipts from the estate will be in the future?—Oh, I could not do that.

6441. Is there any chance of their being further reductions in the rents of the holdings?—It may be that there will.

6442. But the tenants have not gone into the courts again?—No.

6443. Perhaps you could give us some idea as to future value of landed property?—Well, there have been considerable reductions made by the Land Commissioners in the last few years. These reductions are much greater in proportion than those which were originally made by the Commissioners. This fact may induce some of the present tenants to go into the courts. But I know that none of the tenants have expressed any intention to me to do so.

6444. There are, according to the last report, some wretched cottier houses on the estate. Do you know if anything has been done towards the improvement of these?—I do not know of anything of that kind being on the estate. I only know it since 1881.

6445. But it is stated here in the report that there were such houses on the estate—on the townland of Ballyquin?—Oh, yes; they are labourers' cottages on the farm of a man named Power; they were not directly held from the trustees.

6446. Dr. TRAILL.—Have there been any labourers' cottages built on this estate under the recent Act?—Yes, there were two; they were built by the Board of Guardians.

6447. Lord Justice FREDGEMAN.—Do you know who has the shooting of the estate?—I do not know anything about the shooting.

6448. Have you got a map of the estate?—No; I have not got a good map, but I have an old one; it is not of very much use, as the holdings on the estate when it was made are not the same holdings as at present exist.

6449. Do you take any part in the management of the school?—None whatever. I merely collect the rents of the estate.

6450. Rev. Dr. Mollov.—Do the statements bring the half-year's rent down to £430?—No; that is not the half-year's rent—that is the amount paid to me by the man who went in for the "Plan of Campaign"; these are others who did not go in for the "Plan of Campaign."

6451. Dr. TRAVER.—How many of them did not join the "Plan of Campaign"?—Five or six of the twenty tenants and the leaseholders.

6452. What may be the half-yearly payments of those who did not go in for the "Plan"?—I would have to look up the books to give you the exact figure.

6453. I thought you told us that the rents amounted to £1,479 13s. 1d.—that would mean over £700 for the half year?—That was the rental which I gave you.

6454. But can you give us the actual cash received for the last few years?—I can give you the cash received since I commenced the agency; that I can give you for each year. The actual cash receipts which I have received since 1881 are as follows:—For the year 1881 I received £1,556 2s. 3d., for the year 1882, £1,649 11s. 4d.; for the year 1883, £1,320 5s. 1d.; for the year 1884, £1,371 19s. 10½d.; and for the year 1885, £1,213 1s. 7d.

6455. What because of the difference between these years—there is a wide margin between the sums received in some of the years?—That is the arrears.

6456. Why, you are about £300 short for this year, besides that for the previous years. In 1885 you were over £270 short, and in 1884 you were about £150 short?—Yes.

6457. And I see that in 1883 you were about £190 short?—Yes, that is the case. In 1882 we were something over the rent, but that was some arrears from the year 1881, and then the year 1882 was all right.

6458. But what has become of the arrears for the years 1883, 1884, and 1885?—Some of the arrears are wiped out, besides, see the amount is reducible by poor rates and allowances made to the tenant.

6459. Have any of the tenants gone into the court under the Arrears Act?—No, there is only one tenant who has taken advantage of that Act.

6460. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Have you any immediate prospect of getting a reduction of the debt?—Next month I expect to be paid by those men who have gone in for the "Plan of Campaign."

Wm. H. Smith, Head Master of Bishop Foy's School, sworn.

6461. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—You have been head master of Foy's School since 1879?—I have been master since 1873, my lord.

6462. What course of education do you give the boys?—Well, to qualify them for trades and commercial positions.

6463. Then it is a commercial education you give them?—Yes, it is an English and commercial education.

6464. Do you teach them any classics?—None whatever; the boys are nearly of a poor class.

6465. What assistance have you in teaching the boys?—I had an assistant master till March twelve months (1886); then, owing to the difficulty in getting in the rents, the funds diminished, and we had to make a reduction of the staff. I then got rid of two house servants, and a man who did outside work, and the assistant master. I have done the teaching work of the school since that time single-handed, with, however, occasional assistance from my son who has served Trinity College.

6466. Is he paid a salary?—He does not get a salary, nor would I consent that he should receive anything.

6467. How are the internal arrangements and management of the institution regulated; who has control over them?—At present my daughter is mistress, but I have superintendence over every department of the house.

6468. How many boys have you in the school?—We had fourteen when you visited it this morning, but we are just after apprenticing one boy to a trade.

6469. How many boys have you had in the school during the year?—We have had twenty-eight boys in the school during the year.

6470. How many boys do you admit during the year?—The admission of additional boys depends entirely upon the state of the funds. We have had applications upon applications continually. We have had twenty-nine applications this year.

6471. Do the applications come through you?—No. The trustees advertise when there is a number of places vacant, and then the applications are lodged at the Secretary's office. The applicants are afterwards examined by me.

6472. Then you have an examination?—Yes, I examine them all in the presence of the trustees. I <sup>WILLIAM H.</sup> conduct the examination in their presence.

6473. Is that examination a qualifying examination or is it competitive?—It is merely to see that the boys are sufficiently educated to enter such a school as mine. It is merely a qualifying examination.

6474. In what subjects do you examine the boys?—Well, they must read easy words of two and three syllables, they must work easy questions in the four elementary rules of arithmetic; we also examine them at the same time in the Scriptures and Church Catechism.

6475. What subjects are embraced in the course of education the boys receive at the school?—We educate them generally in all the branches of a good commercial education. In arithmetic, book-keeping, English, algebra.

6476. Dr. TRAVER.—How far do the boys go in English?—There are some of the boys at present learning the third book of English. Then we teach them dictation, transcription, and English composition.

6477. Lord Justice FitzGibbon.—Have you ever sent any of your boys up for the Intermediate?—No; we have never sent any of them up, for many reasons. I cannot retain a class of boys long enough to send them up for the Intermediate Examinations, because I could not in justice keep a boy back from a position which might be offered to him. Here we cannot do much in the Intermediate course, we could only send our boys forward in English and mathematics alone, and this I do not think would be a very wise thing.

6478. At what age do the boys leave you?—They leave me before the age of sixteen. Indeed we rarely have a boy of sixteen years, but the trustees said they would allow boys to remain to that age.

6479. Then you rarely have a boy so old as sixteen years?—We rarely have a boy more than fourteen years of age; we rarely have a boy more than four years in the school, they generally go out about three years after their entrance.

Oct. 21, 1882.
 William M.
 South

6480. At what age do they enter?—They come in about the age of ten.

6481. You have always plenty of applications?—We have always applications in abundance, more applications than we have been able to entertain.

6482. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—What positions do your boys get when they leave school?—Well, they get various positions, in warehouses, sometimes as counter hands in drapery and grocery shops in Waterford, and as assistants of that kind, they get clerkships in merchants' offices, and then we send them also to trades.

6483. What trades?—Well, we sent one boy as an apprentice to the printing business lately.

6484. Have they, as a rule, given satisfaction to their employers?—I am thankful to be able to say that we have not had a single case of complaint, the boys are well thought of, and speak very highly of the city.

6485. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We saw a nice workshop there this morning, how did you get that?—We got that from Mr. A. Denny, he made it a present to myself personally. He fitted up the place as a workshop, and provided it with all sorts of tools to the amount of £50.

6486. Then, there appear to be some local gentlemen who take an interest in your school?—Oh, yes, there are, I am glad to say, many gentlemen in the city interested in the school. They all look to me for boys from my school.

6487. Dr. TRAILL.—Why do you not employ a special teacher to instruct the boys in the use of tools?—I do not think it would be an advantage.

6488. But it would make them a great deal handier, and prove very useful to them if they were afterwards apprenticed to a trade?—Yes, it would make them a little handier, but really, I do not think we could teach them a trade, you see we give them more a literary education than a technical training.

6489. But would it not be better to train the eye and hand together?—As far as possible we do train the eye and hand together. I may say that for over three years we have not employed a tradesman; we have done all the odd jobs about the house ourselves.

6490. Rev. Dr. MOTT.—Do you teach the boys drawing?—No, I do not teach drawing, I am not competent to teach it myself.

6491. Do you not think that drawing would be very useful to the boys?—Oh, yes, I consider it would be extremely useful to the boys.

6492. Have you ever thought of getting it done by aid from South Kensington?—No, I have never suggested it to the trustees. We are so hampered at present for funds, and we would have to pay a teacher to come out from the city.

6493. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—We saw one school at Skibbereen, where they earned over £80 in results free from South Kensington; they had a teacher there who taught the boys the subjects in which the South Kensington Department holds examinations?—Yes, that makes all the difference.

6494. You have not got a drawing master?—No.

6495. Have you yourself been trained as a teacher?—Yes; I was trained at the Church of Ireland Training College, Kildare-place, Dublin; I hold a first class certificate.

6496. Dr. TRAILL.—Were you trained there under the new or under the old system?—Under the old system. But I have been keeping myself up to the advances made in the system of teaching. I read all their books and publications, and so keep myself abreast of the advances made by the new system.

6497. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—How long have you been engaged in teaching?—Since I was seventeen years of age, I have been engaged in teaching.

6498. You have a considerable quantity of land around your school?—Yes, I got it attached to the school a few years after I came.

6499. How much land have you there?—Altogether, including the garden, house, buildings, and all, we have about twenty-five acres.

6500. How do you utilize it?—We have it, of course, for the recreation of the boys, who have a cricket field; we also supply all our own milk, butter, potatoes, vegetables, and manure.

6501. It is only within recent years you have this land attached to the school?—Yes; some years ago that farm was rented by a gentleman in our neighbourhood for £11 a year. I applied to him for a cricket ground for the boys, and he declined to let us have it. The trustees, however, came to an arrangement with him, and gave him a reduction in his rent, in order to let us have the cricket ground for the boys. I think the rent was reduced to £35 10s. Then he gave up a part of the ground entirely to us, and paid a rent only of £12. I think in 1875 (I) we got it all into our own hands, and have it now. I may mention that, then, I did not put on young stock, for the trustees had no money for that purpose; but we have always made out of it more than the rent of £11 by the cattle put on to graze on the land, besides the other things which we get, such as potatoes and vegetables, etc.

6502. Have you a gardener who looks after these things?—Yes, we have a resident gardener, and a man who resides on the premises also. These men cultivate the garden and raise the vegetables required by the household.

6503. Do you pay the gardener's wages?—No, the secretary pays him his wages through me.

6504. Do you find any difference made between the boys who pay and the boys who do not pay for their education at the school?—Not the shadow of a shade* of a difference.

6505. Dr. TRAILL.—Are they all dressed alike?—They are all dressed and fed alike; and they sleep in the same dormitories; there is no difference whatever between them.

6506. Lord Justice FITZGERALD.—It is probable that many people, if they knew that this education could be obtained at so cheap a rate, would send their sons to the school?—I think a great number of people would be glad to send their sons to us if it was understood that we would take them.

6507. Have you any idea of what it would cost to keep the boys?—One with another it would take between £16 and £17.

6508. Does that include the charge for teaching?—Oh, no, clothing and feeding only.

6509. Who pays you your salary?—I am paid by the trustees.

6510. How much do they pay you?—£106 a year with my board, lodging, and servants.

6511. Do you board with the boys?—No, I board at my own house, I have my own dietary.

6512. Do you mean that the trustees pay for your board?—Yes.

6513. Do you get an allowance of so much for your board?—It is included in the monthly account. I select my own dietary.

WATERFORD DIOCESAN SCHOOL.

The Right Rev. Dr. Day examined.

6514. Lord Justice NAUGHTON.—Is this the school which has a grant from the Corporation of Waterford?—No, that one has ceased to exist. It was a school established, and supported by a tax upon the clergy of the diocese, and it ceased to exist at the time of the disestablishment of the Irish Church. This diocesan school is one into which inquiries were made to the last Commission. The exhibition attached to the school has been applied to a boy who was educated here and entered Trinity College. A rent of £12 is paid to the trustees of the hall where the school is held for the use of the room; there is no lease drawn out, but they are very glad to have the rent.

5815. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is it applied to any other use than that of the school?—It is used for Sunday school meetings and other meetings of that class.

5816. How many pupils are at the school?—At present there are only from sixteen to twenty pupils attending it, very lately there was a great many more pupils. However, after Christmas we expect a considerable increase in the numbers attending it.

5817. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Your endowment is £40 a year, arising out of a capital sum, I see?—Yes, that is our entire endowment. The money was left to the diocese of Cusack and Limerick, and the diocese of Cusack refused to part with their share.

5818. Can you tell me what the diocese of Cusack does with its share of the money?—They apply it to their primary schools.

5819. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the amount of the money?—£400.

5820. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is this the only Intermediate school in Waterford available for Protestants?—There is, I believe, a private Intermediate school kept by Mr. Durican, a Baptist clergyman.

5821. Is the £1,000 in the hands of the Representative Church Body?—No; the interest of the subscriptions does not come through the Representative Church Body, it is invested in Railway Debenture Stock, that £500, and it comes directly to the Board of Education of the diocese.

5822. Who are the trustees of that?—The trustees are composed of the Bishop, the Dean, Mr. A. Denny, and Mr. Robert Paul; we have had to transfer the money into railway debentures.

5823. Dr. TRAILL.—Could you get a lease of the premises in order to vest this property in your school trustees?—Oh, yes, I think so.

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS' SCHOOLS, WATERFORD.

Rev. Br. Jas. C. Francis sworn.

5824. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Are you the head of the Christian Brothers' Schools at Waterford?—Yes, I am what is termed the Superior.

5825. How many different establishments have you in Waterford?—I do not mean schools in your sense of the word I—We have three.

5826. What are the names of them?—Mount Zion, with ten schools under the same roof, St. Patrick's and St. John's.

5827. Lord Justice NAIRN.—How many boys had you in attendance for the past year, 1886?—I have the returns with which I can furnish your lordship. (Here the witness handed in a document to the Lord Justice.)

5828. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—You told us there were ten separate schools in Mount Zion; how many are in the other two establishments?—There are only two schools at St. Patrick's and two at St. John's, fourteen altogether.

5829. What is the number of your community in Waterford?—There are sixteen in the community; including servants it would bring it up to twenty-one.

5830. How many Brothers are engaged in teaching?—There are fourteen engaged in teaching, and myself makes fifteen. I am constantly employed in inspection of the schools, and then there is one Brother who attends to the ordinary department.

5831. You are not told off to any particular duty then?—I am constantly engaged in inspecting the schools.

5832. Lord Justice NAIRN.—I see the average attendance at Mount Zion is 765, what year is that for?—For the year 1886, there are 935 on the rolls.

5833. Dr. TRAILL.—What is the average attendance at the other two schools, and what is the number on the rolls?—At St. Patrick's there are 138 on the rolls and 140 of an average attendance. At St. John's there are 247 on the rolls, and 217 of an average attendance. The total average attendance for the twelve months ending 1886, was 1,015, and the number on the rolls for the same period 1,383. We generally call it 1,400. We really estimate more than that number, because we have a rule that if any pupil has been absent for three months we strike his name off the books. We go through the roll books every three months, and the name of any pupil who has been absent for that period is expunged.

5834. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Are these the only primary schools in Waterford?—Within the present year another school has been set in motion under Catholic management, also a National school, but the Christian Brothers' schools, of which I am superintendent, are not under the National Board.

5835. Then yours are the principal primary schools in Waterford?—Yes, they are the principal schools for primary education since the beginning of the century, since the year 1843.

5836. Are you able to tell us how many boys at your schools pay and how many are free?—I shall give you the summary of the whole fourteen schools. You already have the number upon the rolls, the average number of free pupils is about 200, and when I say, "about," it is because it is impossible to give the number exactly as the number varies from week to week.

5837. How many paying pupils have you?—I have them arranged according to the amount they pay. There are 573 paying 1d. a week, there are 285 paying 3d. a week, there are 140 paying 3d. a week, there are 21 paying 4d. a week, and 33 paying 6d. a week.

5838. Then by that amount, a little more than a half of your pupils pay a penny a week or nothing at all?—Yes, about one half. Then we have one professor, who is paid, in the Intermediate school.

5839. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Then, he is not one of the order?—No, because we have not members enough.

5840. What salary do you give him?—We pay him £63 a year out of the school pence.

5841. I believe that under your rules you cannot make use of these payments except for the use of the schools?—Yes, under the rules of our order we cannot use a penny of it except for the keeping up of the schools. We cannot use it for the personal expenses of the community.

5842. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Do you pay any others of the staff?—I pay twenty-seven more out of the school pence salaries averaging from 2s. to 7s. 6d. a week, each, according to the school in which they teach.

5843. Dr. TRAILL.—How much does that amount to in the year?—Last year the school fees amounted to £299 10s. 5d.; the year before it was much the same. The amount expended last year on monitor's was £180 3s. 2d., that is the amount which I paid out of that £200 of school fees, it includes all that I paid the masters and professors.

6544. How many paid professors have you?—I have only one paid professor and twenty-seven paid masters. Then I paid for rent, repairs, furniture, &c., £268 3s. 4d. for educational appliances, £23 1s. 10d., and for free requisites, such as books, slates, ink, writing paper, £59 16s. 8d.; that also includes premiums for good conduct. The sum for fuel amounts to £8 8s. 8d. You will find the total expenditure to be £344 15s. 8d.

6545. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Then there is a deficit?—Yes, it gives a deficit under the school fees of £54 a year, that is what I want to bring under your notice, but if you wish to know the exact state of our affairs, I can explain how the deficit is made up. But I wish to go through the affairs of the school regularly and give you the results. In 1880, we had twenty-seven honours and two passes; in 1881, fifty honours and six passes; in 1882, thirty-three honours and seven passes; in 1883, twenty-six honours and four passes.

6546. Professor DOUGHERTY.—What do you mean by honours?—That is, a boy got more than was required by the Commissioners for a pass, he answered more than was necessary in five, six, or seven subjects. All that I mean by saying that we had fifty honours in 1881 is, that fifty boys got honours in two, three, or more subjects. In 1884 we had thirty-two honours and nine passes; in 1885, thirty-six honours and eight passes; in 1886, thirty honours and five passes; in 1887, thirty-two honours and seven passes.

6547. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—You are singularly steady; your average is about forty per annum!—Yes, I think that would be about it. As to exhibitions which vary according to the rule of the Commissioners from £15 to £20 per annum, I will not be able to give you the precise money value of them, but the number of exhibitions obtained was seventeen.

6548. Dr. TRAILL.—During what period were those obtained?—From 1879 to 1887, both inclusive, we obtained one gold medal and two silver medals.

6549. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—In what subject was the gold medal obtained?—I think it was obtained by a boy who was first of all Ireland in the middle grade. He was the head of the middle grade to the best of my recollection. The boy had eleven or twelve subjects.

6550. What subjects do you teach beyond the ordinary English school?—Well, English, French, and other modern languages, Celtic, arithmetic, bookkeeping, Euclid, algebra, natural philosophy.

6551. Do you go as far as trigonometry?—Yes, say lord, and navigation, if it is required.

6552. Lord Justice NALAN.—Do you teach mathematics?—No, that is taught by the Intermediate Board. Then we teach chemistry, drawing, and music.

6553. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Do you not teach Latin or Greek?—Not in the Mount Zion Schools. The boys go out to learn it at night school. They go to the professor we engaged, to learn Latin, but I am not aware of any going in for Greek.

6554. Dr. TRAILL.—Who pays for this?—The boys pay the professor themselves. It is the same professor to whom we pay £52 a year.

6555. Lord Justice NALAN.—Have you any idea how many learn Latin in that way?—The number that do so, I think, is not more than five, if so many. It may be six this year. I am not prepared to answer, because I do not know. Our schools are also in connection with South Kensington.

6556. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—May I ask this for the sake of clearness; you told us that in 1887 you had thirty-two honours and seven passes; am I to understand that thirty-nine pupils altogether passed the examinations, and that of this number thirty-two got honours in one or more subjects?—Precisely so, when I give you honours, each honour means an individual boy. Now, I can give you the results fees.

6557. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—Before you go to that, how many boys are in your Intermediate classes?—Generally about fifty.

6558. Then you are able to pass forty out of every fifty boys that you send in?—Yes, I think that is about the proportion.

6559. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—How are these fifty boys divided between the three grades?—This year? Two in the senior grade, five in the middle grade, and thirty-two in the junior grade.

6560. These fifty boys are all drawn from your primary schools in the town?—Yes. I have the possession of a child from its first school. When a class is prepared, I must hold an examination. I examine the boys in the class and reject them if they are not up to their work. If they are up in their work I promote the boys to the second school. In the second school a precisely similar course is pursued, and thus the boys are promoted progressively from the lowest school to the highest.

6561. But are the fifty boys in the Intermediate class all drawn from your own schools?—Yes, ninety-eight per cent. of them are, you may get two per cent. of them coming in from a place called Ferrybank, on the recommendation of the parish priest. I sometimes get a letter from the parish priest to take in a boy for special reasons, but the number that enters in that way is very small.

6562. What is the total number of boys attending all your schools in the town?—It was 1,335 in 1886.

6563. Then under your system in Waterford there are 1,385 boys, of whom fifty are in the intermediate classes?—Yes.

6564. About how long do they remain in the primary schools?—Three times each year I am bound to examine every school and to promote the boys according to their merit. Before Christmas, before Easter, before summer.

6565. But about how long on the average do they remain in the primary schools?—Well, from the first school not more than about five years, but that is only an approximation.

6566. How long do they remain in the intermediate school?—On an average about from two to three years. Sometimes three years. That would be the outside.

6567. Lord Justice Fitzgerald.—What other intermediate schools are there in Waterford?—I do not know that there is another intermediate Roman Catholic School in the city, as far as I recollect. About two years ago there was one, St. John's College School, but it was turned into a primary school, because the Bishop of Ossory opened a classical school in a place called Kilmacow, and that diminished the number attending St. John's College School. By reason of the diminution in the number of pupils our bishop and his advisers preferred turning it into a primary school. That is my opinion on the matter, but I am not in a position to say exactly that it is the reason.

6568. Now, with regard to results fees, would you give us some information?—I have not got the results fees for this year, but I have calculated them myself; and we sometimes have a controversy with the Commissioners over the calculation of the results fees, but we expect to get £100 results fees this year. The results fees for the past five years, consecutively, are as follows:—

1880	35	0	0
1881	75	10	6
1882	194	4	4
1883	30	12	0
1884	29	17	0
1885	31	0	0
1886	60	4	4

and, as I have said, in 1887 we expect about £100. The year 1888 was the year in which one of our boys got the head place in the middle grade.

5368. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—That shows a great fluctuation in the amount received each year; to what do you attribute it?—Well, if I may be allowed to use a simile, I answer you that the tree that bears good fruit this year will not do so next. A junior boy will go in the first year, and pass, and you will receive results, but you will not receive results when he goes in again the following year, unless he gets honours in his subjects. And then many boys leave the school before they get honours.

5370. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—They would vary also with the number of subjects in which you sent the boys in?—Precisely.

5371. Then, taking them on the whole, you do not make money by your results test?—My opinion, say, my conviction with regard to it, is that I would be glad to have nothing to do with the Intermediate. It involves so much labour, and expense, and anxiety, that the results do not counterbalance it.

5372. Then from a pecuniary point of view it does not pay to work for the Intermediate?—No; it scarcely pays. But I would not give the Intermediate up when you regard it from an educational point of view. The boy who has an object before him will learn twice as much in the same time as one who has no object before him. Circumventing is out of the question; the word is abused, and very much abused, in its use, especially with regard to these examinations.

5373. Your expenses are wonderfully good, taking into account the cost of teaching and appliances, then the results you get?—The expenses that we incur for the Intermediate, paying teachers, and buying appliances, come to a good deal more than the results give in some individual years, but that is for some years only. However, if you take the sum totals, the one will counterbalance the other. We have not, for instance, to pay for appliances every year.

5374. Rev. Dr. MOLLOY.—Then on the whole you think you are not out of pocket by the Intermediate?—I do not think I am out of pocket by it. I am of opinion that I have something to the good, from it.

5375. Do you think it has helped to improve your system of teaching?—Immensely.

5376. Do you think that the preparation for these examinations helps to improve the intelligence of the boys?—There is no denying it. The boys have both their intelligence trained, and their memories stored with knowledge. That is my opinion and conviction, no matter who may differ from me on the matter.

5377a. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Are the examinations a satisfactory test as to the knowledge of the boys, and the way in which they have been taught?—Well, the character of the examination will depend a great deal upon the good sense of the man who sets the examination paper, and his practical acquaintance with the capabilities of boys. You may arrange an examination that would be worthless as a test of the boys' capabilities.

5377. Do you find a change in the character of the papers from year to year?—Yes, very much; we are won at the mercy of the examiner from year to year, that the ship at sea is at the mercy of the wind.

5378. Dr. TRAILL.—But you would not expect to see the same questions every year?—No, I would not, but I would expect every year to see reasonable questions put. For instance the mathematical paper, I think it was that of the Junior Grade, was most unreasonable this year. I would venture to submit it to all here present, and I am convinced they would find it very difficult to work it out in detail in the time allowed. The questions were very abstract, far too obscure for junior boys. An examination of this kind is all right when you have mature men competing for honours. A man may preach himself in a paper set in this way, but it is very disheartening to the boys, and also disheartening to the teachers, to find, after twelve months' hard teaching, such unreasonable papers set.

5379. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—Now, with regard to the South Kensington Examinations?—Our connection with South Kensington is very short. It was only in 1886 that the connection was formed, and the examinations commenced.

5380. I suppose you only go in for drawing?—We go in for both science and art. Here is a paper with the results of our examinations in connection with the Science and Art Department.

5381. Dr. TRAILL.—How much money did you make by that?—I am afraid I can only give you the results for one year; in 1886 we received £85 6s., but what we are to get this year I cannot say; we expect it will be something more than that for 1886.

5382. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—How do you apply this money received from South Kensington?—A part of that money goes to the support of the Science Hall, which is a special department in connection with the school, and filled with mathematical, physical, and chemical appliances. In the year 1881 the Corporation of Waterford made up £108 by voluntary subscription to add to the stock of instruments we had then already in our hands.

5383. Professor DONOVAN.—Was the gift by the Corporation of Waterford out of the city rates or was it raised by voluntary subscription?—It was raised, I understand, by voluntary subscription with the object of increasing our stock of scientific appliances.

5384. Dr. TRAILL.—Did you get a grant from South Kensington opposite to that amount?—South Kensington has given us appliances to the value of, I suppose, about £24. I would have been charged £48 for these instruments if we had not been connected with South Kensington at the time we got them. The money we got from the Corporation was collected by a committee of gentlemen belonging to the city.

5385. But did you not get a grant from South Kensington equal in amount to the money collected?—No, that was before our connection with South Kensington. It was when we were only a voluntary school.

5386. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—You were able to put about 150 of your boys in elementary art?—Yes.

5387. Do you teach drawing in all your schools?—In about half the schools. Those who are not sufficiently advanced in the junior schools draw on slates; but you cannot call it drawing, it consists merely of drawing straight lines. But the lessons proceed in difficulty from school to school.

5388. Have you got an account of your endowments with you?—Yes.

5389. Dr. HANLEY'S bequest, I see, is £92 6s. 3d. only—£100 Irish. The Rev. Dr. HANLEY was Bishop of Waterford at the beginning of the century, at the time when Mount Zion was founded?—I have divided the bequest to show that part of it belong to the community; the share that goes to the poor boys and for providing books is £18 6s. 3d.

5390. How does your share of this endowment reach you?—From the Superior-General in Dublin.

5391. Dr. TRAILL.—Who are the trustees?—I think the trustees for this amount are our Superior-General and the Bishop.

5392. Lord Justice FRYGROVE.—What is this next bequest, Mary Power's Charity, £40 2s. 6d.?—That arises from £1,000 precisely.

5393. Do you know how that endowment is situated?—That, I believe, comes from the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests to the Bishop of Waterford, and he then sends it to me to dispose of; but that is only a part, this part is for the Christian Brothers for the education of poor boys. But there are other parts of this endowment of which I have only to keep the accounts. These go to an old ladies' asylum in Waterford, and to the Presentation Nuns' schools for clothing.

6504. Do you know how it is apportioned between these various bodies?—I think I have one part, the nuns get two parts, and the old ladies' asylum three parts.

6505. The next I see is the Delany and Congrave charity, what is that?—That, my lord, has ceased, and I am sorry to say as to how it ceased I cannot exactly find out; I have made several efforts, and all I can discover exactly is that it ceased about 1850 or 1851; it arose from the rent of a house, and I believe with the cessation of a lease of some kind, the portion that came to our schools as a charity also ceased.

6506. Dr. TRAILL.—Where was the house situated?—I think in Patrick-street in the city.

6507. Who has it now?—It reverted, I think, to the original landlady.

6508. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—You have been rather unfortunate in that way. I see that you do not receive the income bequeathed to you arising from some other houses in Patrick-street?—That is so. We keep a book called the "History of the Order," and in looking over that book I find it recorded that we lost that endowment by reason of a flaw in the will of J. Power. The trustees of the Hospital of the Holy Ghost, it seems, were able to wrest that endowment from us on account of this illegally-drawn document. It was not through any fault of the Mount Zion community that the endowment was lost.

6509. Nicholas Power's bequest, £5,000 stock; who has the administration of the income arising from this?—Generally, I think, the Bishop. I find from the history that I have mentioned that there has been an increase in this, owing to the increased cost of living. It is devoted to the payment of two teachers, and the increased endowment now amounts at £70 a year. This increase was, as I have said, due to the increased cost of living. The endowment is divided, £35 going to the support of each teacher.

6510. Who holds this stock?—It is trusted in Three per Cent stock, and comes to me through the Superior-General in Dublin.

6511. Dr. TRAILL.—Why does it not give you more than £70 a year?—There is a portion of the income devoted to Rogation Masses for members of the Power family; and then there is another portion of it, £4 10s. I think, goes towards clothing for poor boys attending St. Patrick's Schools.

6512. Do you know who holds the certificates for this stock and these leases?—I think the leases are kept by the Superior-General in Dublin, aided by a governing body consisting of three members of the Order, who are elected for the purpose of assisting him in these matters. I have been told that they are kept in an iron safe in Dublin.

6513. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—I find an immense increase in the number of boys attending your schools since 1850; have you been extending the schools?—I think possibly the increase is due to the fact that St. John's was not included in the last report. I think reference only was made in that report to endowed schools.

Dr. TRAILL.—Even so, there is an increase.

6514. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—As far as I can make out these endowments come to about £300 a year?—About £330, I think.

6515. Now what other sources of income have you to pay the teaching establishment of the school?—Well, I have a number of small bequests amounting in the aggregate to £400; these are invested by myself, and were given by certain people in the city; this amount produces an annual income of £14. That is the sum total with regard to the bequests. Then we have an annual collection through the city once a year producing from about £220 to £330; this amount fluctuates. Then there is a weekly penny collection through the city, which, I may say, I would be glad to have done with if I had any other means.

6516. Dr. TRAILL.—Is that penny collection made every week through the city?—Yes, it is a weekly collection.

6517. How much does that bring you in every year?—Well, about £100. However, it varies very much, sometimes rising to £115; the fluctuations of this fund are terrible; it has fallen as low as £90 one year.

6518. Then that gives you altogether about £700 for all the schools?—Yes, about that; but in your calculation you have not taken into account the cost of collection, which amounts to something every week.

6519. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—If there was money available for you, to what purpose would you devote it?—To the payment of monitors in our schools. The schools are at present in debt to me—I mean by that, in debt to the community. I have advanced more towards the support of the schools than I have received from them.

6520. Professor DOUGHERTY.—Have you applied any portion of the results fees received from the Intermediate Board towards the payment of monitors?—Certainly. But I hold what I get as results fees not for the schools exclusively. I do not regard the schools as entitled to the results fees of the Intermediate. I regard as the income of the school the fees received weekly. What comes from South Kensington and the Intermediate, as results fees, I look upon as belonging to the school exclusively, but as funds which I may use for the benefit of the school or the community. The schools are, at this moment, I believe, in my debt to the amount fully of £170 or £180; this is money which I consider should justly belong to the community.

6521. When you say "debt" you mean that that amount has actually been expended on the schools?—Yes.

6522. Lord Justice NARIN.—Then at the beginning had you no fixed arrangement with the parish or the Bishop about the annual stipends?—We have made stipendials as to the stipends for St. John's Schools only. For the rest we must depend upon the annual and weekly collections and take our chance.

6523. Lord Justice FRYGIMON.—What amount pay salaries, in addition to what you have now, would be sufficient to pay an adequate staff of monitors, and put your establishment on a secure basis?—Well, suppose I take the maintenance of the community as the most necessary part of the machinery (for without teachers you cannot have a school), including all the expenses for the payment of a doctor, discipline, clothing, furniture, rents, recreation, incidental expenses, &c., I would not be able to say that less than £50 a year per head of the number in the community would be sufficient. I am now taking the support of the community as the first question, all the others I shall treat of afterwards. Fifty pounds per head for seventeen persons is the lowest at which I can calculate the actual cost; that would amount to £875. The rents of Mount Zion alone I should tell you come to a considerable sum.

6524. I thought you were only subject to a rent of £2 5s. 6d.?—No, our total rent is £28 3s. 6d.

6525. But that must be for additional premises you have acquired?—No; I think the ground was not wholly bought out. (Here the witness put in a map and showed that the Mount Zion premises were held under several titles).

6526. I want you to give us the amount which it would require to pay your staff of monitors?—Well, twenty-eight monitors, at an average of 4s. a week, forty weeks is the school time, and that would bring the cost annually for the twenty-eight monitors up to £224 a year. I have actually paid last year for monitors £189 8s. 2d.; but some of the monitors are only paid for half a day's work, these only teach during a part of the day. But you may put down as an average £10 a year for each monitor, that would bring the whole cost of the monitorial staff up to £280 for the whole year.

6016. What salary do you pay your teacher?—He is paid £52 per annum. He could, however, be paid out of the result fees received from the Intermediate if I had the means of paying the monitors.

6017. If you were paid on the same scale as the National Board pay for results what amount would you receive for your school?—I think, my lord, it would be safe to say that it would amount to fully £1,000 a year.

6018. Dr. TRAILL.—Does that include salaries, or is it merely gratification for?—I mean for everything.

6019. How much would the gratification fees amount to in your schools?—I think we would have about £1 a head for the results fees of the boys; this I have estimated on, from 1,000 to 1,100 children in daily attendance would bring us in fully £1,000 a year; pay on that scale would give us means in abundance for maintaining the schools.

6020. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Do you think your system would be applicable for imparting a sound primary education?—It is intended for that purpose, and judging by results it has been highly successful in doing so.

6021. May I ask what is the difficulty that prevents you getting that large sum in results?—Religion alone.

6022. Where does that practically interfere with you, does the difficulty arise from the particular books you use?—Well there is a difficulty about the extensive use of our own books in the primary schools. These books have been compiled at great expense of mind and purse, and have been used by us with marked success for over three-quarters of a century.

6023. Don't you, as a matter of fact, use the National Board books for children in the junior classes?—Not one here; we use our own books here exclusively. But if you refer to the higher classes as the Intermediate class we of course use books not our own.

6024. The Christian Brothers' books are all primary books, I believe?—No, not all; we have histories and other class books of a literary character compiled for the higher classes in our schools.

6025. I suppose it is in the teaching of history that the difficulty about the use of the books comes in?—Well no not in the history alone. From my own experience as a teacher, I can assure you I have often found myself elevated, after a hard day's work in teaching, by reading a passage from one of our reading books. There is a tone and style about them that you will not find in any other class book. There are selections in them appertaining to the relations of the soul with God, to the eternity of the soul, and other kindred matters, which, every one, who reads them, must feel are teeming with genuine religion.

6026. Dr. TRAILL.—Then you do not like calvarious reading books?—No, I do not.

6027. Rev. Dr. MOLLAT.—You mean that your literary books have a religious tone?—They have not only a religious tone, but they have an elegant style about them.

6028. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—You are not going to make it a matter of principle in religion what text book on trigonometry you use?—I can assure what Mr. Traversy said about our books in the House of Commons. He said if he were asked why the Christian Brothers' books were not used in the National schools, he could not give a reason why they should not be used. We endeavour to make our books interesting and instructive.

6029. Dr. TRAILL.—If the State were to give you aid would you object to State inspection of the books?—Not in the least. When the Duke of Devonshire inspected our schools at Lismore, I took the opportunity of presenting him with a complete set of our books as we were anxious that he should see them by reason of a great number of the children of his tenantry coming to our schools, so that he might see what we were teaching them. I presented him with two sets, one set each for his grandchildren whom he brought with him to see the school. He wrote me afterwards a very kind letter approving highly of the books, and Lady Egerton herself also wrote me a letter approving of the books, saying that both she and her children had derived much information and pleasure from reading them.

6030. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—Then, as Dr. Traill has asked you, you have no objection to State inspection of your books?—Certainly not.

6031. Lord Justice NAIRN.—But inspection is one thing and the power of veto another; would you believe in the State having the power of veto over the books?—I believe in the State having the approval of the books. If there were anything in the books which would be offensive to the State, which I am quite sure there is not, I would not object to the Government exercising a power of veto and enjoining the lesson; but on subjects of a religious nature we must be allowed to exercise our own judgment, for that is what the State itself claims and it should be granted to others as well.

6032. Dr. TRAILL.—Are your schools open to Protestants?—Yes, although we warmly expect that they would attend our schools. I had them at our schools at Lismore, independent of the State aid.

6033. Then would you consider that the State, in case you had State aid, had a right to object to anything in your books which might interfere with the beliefs of the Protestants attending your school?—The course I adopt is this—when a Protestant parent applies to me for the admission of his son to our schools. I say "Very well, I shall admit your son, but our schools are Catholic schools, the teachers are Catholics, the whole tone of the place is Catholic, but we will do our best to give your child a sound secular education, he can leave at the time we give religious instruction to the Catholic children."

6034. But the school books themselves are religious?—But there are also many of the books, such as writing and drawing-books, that cannot have any religious tinge about them. There will be necessarily in every religious denomination particular beliefs and tenets held, and practices observed, which Christians of another denomination will object to. And if you produce a book yourself it will necessarily reflect the colour of your mind, and have the stamp of your beliefs impressed upon it.

6035. Would you expect the Protestants who might go to your school, if you had the State aid, to use your books?—In the present state of education, it is practically denominational both in the North and South of Ireland; you have really one denomination attending our school, and each class supports its own establishments. And the Government really gives denominational education. When this is the state of affairs, I say they should not hind us down and force us not to have denominational education.

6036. Lord Justice FERGUSON.—This question of the books has little to say to the evidence which we require; but I believe there is a difficulty about the emblems which you use in your schoolbooks?—There is a difficulty about that matter, but I may say at once, that if the removal of those emblems is to be made the condition of the Government grant, I would prefer to do without it for ever. People do not use a rule object to the head of Her Majesty being stamped on the coins which are handled every day, and in the same way we say that there can be no objection to the picture of the Blessed Virgin or of Our Lord being used in our schoolbooks.

Rev. Dr. Jas. C. Fawcett.

Oct. 27, 1887.
Rev. Dr. Jas.
C. O'Leary.

6637. Dr. TRAILL.—Is there a picture of the Queen in your schoolrooms?—As a matter of fact we put up a picture of Her Majesty in the old manse from which I came, the picture was in the refectory, and I may tell you that we hold Her Majesty in high respect as a very worthy Sovereign.

6638. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Is there any distinction made between the time of imparting religious and secular instruction, or do you impart them promiscuously?—Not at all; we have a separate half-hour for religious instruction. The religious instruction is given from 10 o'clock to 10-30 in the morning. This instruction is exclusively religious.

6639. Do you find, as a teacher, that it is necessary to make a distinction between religious and secular instruction, in other words that you cannot impart them to children promiscuously?—Undoubtedly I do. But at the same time there will be small matters crop up during the day which will have a bearing upon religious subjects. Our children, for instance, are taught to say a short prayer when the clock strikes; and they are taught, when they enter the school, to kneel down and say a short prayer. In the evening before dismissal they also kneel down and say a prayer. The school opens with prayer, but there is nothing sectarian in the prayer that is used.

FRIENDS' PROVINCIAL SCHOOL, NEWTOWN, WATERFORD.

Edward Garnett, Superintendent and Head Master of the School, sworn.

Edward Garnett.

6640. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Under whose management is the school conducted?—It is under the management of a committee, appointed at the Quarterly Meeting of those Friends who are members of the Minister province.

6641. That is, I suppose, the organised body, in Minister, of the Society of Friends?—Yes, they are members of the Society of Friends.

6642. I believe you have an endowment under the will of Robert Grubb, which produces annually £11 la. 6d., then there are other endowments and a sum of £300 invested in legacies bringing in a total £208 9s. 6d.—Yes.

6643. I see there was also in 1838 an endowment consisting of a house and some landed property, a portion of which was let, bringing in £90 a year?—Yes, that is a share of landed property, part of which goes to the Mountmellick School; it is in the hands of the Friends of the Leinster province. When the Commission was round the last time, the two schools, Newtown and Mountmellick, were united, and the accounts kept together, but now, since 1854 (?) they have been separated, and that property which you have mentioned, being left for the education of girls has been taken possession of by the Mountmellick school.

6644. You had also at that time some debenture stock?—That stock still belongs to us.

6645. Who are the trustees who hold the property?—The present trustees are Samuel White, William White, Henry Bell, and Francis Walpole.

6646. They are members of the Society of Friends?—Yes, all of them.

6647. I believe your school is entirely a boy's school?—Yes.

6648. Are the pupils all boarders?—Yes, they are all boarding pupils.

6649. And are the boarders at your school the sons of members of the Society of Friends?—Yes, the majority are. Those who are members of the Society of Friends are recommended by the Friends of the locality to which they belong.

6650. What terms are charged for the pupils?—The terms are various. We charge rates of payments from £35 per annum to £44 per annum. This is the highest we charge, £44. The rates are regulated according to what the parents of the children can afford to pay.

6651. Do these children who enter at the lowest rate, pay the fee or is it paid for them by the Society?—The parents of the children pay it, or if the parents are unable it is paid by the Monthly Meeting.

6652. Is the benefit of the institution in this respect confined solely to those who are members of the Society of Friends?—Yes, it is.

6653. Then boys who enter the school and are not the children of members of the Society of Friends are charged such a rate that they do not come under the endowment at all?—Yes, these boys are charged the highest rate. Such boys are admitted only on the approval of the Committee of Management, and with the understanding that they shall conform with the school to the rules and regulations in the same manner as those boys who are the children of members of the Society of Friends.

6654. How many pupils are attending the school at present?—We have only twenty-nine boys at the present time.

6655. How many of these are the children of members of the Society of Friends?—All, but six of them are the sons of members of the Society of Friends; twenty-three are members of the Society of Friends, the remaining six are not.

6656. What fee do those six boys pay?—They pay £44 per annum; it is the special rate we charge for such boys.

6657. What is the course of education in your school?—It embraces the usual branches of a sound English education; we look upon it as an English and commercial education, and includes drawing, elementary science, measurement, geometry, algebra, French, and Latin. We have it in the prospectus (paper handed in).

6658. I see you teach French and Latin?—Yes, but with regard to those subjects, the course of Latin is necessarily limited, it is hardly what you would call a classical education.

6659. Now, Dr. MURRAY.—How is it that the number of pupils at the school has been reduced since the report of the last Commission. The number was forty-eight in the year 1880?—Yes, we had forty-eight pupils then. But why they are reduced it is difficult exactly to say. This present year we lost a good many boys at the summer vacation; twelve boys left at that time and only six new boys entered, and that itself is a good deficit in one year.

6660. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What teaching staff have you got at the school at present?—At present our staff consists of three assistant masters and myself, who am the superintendent.

6661. How are their salaries provided?—They are provided out of the school funds, the endowments, annual subscriptions, the annual income of the school, and the payments of the children.

6662. Then you have got an annual subscription list in addition to the endowments?—Yes. The annual subscriptions last year amounted to £91 15s. However that is an item that is gradually diminishing in amount from year to year.

6663. Dr. TRAILL.—Why is the annual subscription list diminishing in amount; is it because of a diminution in the numbers of your body?—Partly that has something to do with it; and it is also partly due to the fact some do not care to subscribe to the fund.

6664. The diminution you say has been gradual?—Yes, it is a gradual thing; it is not much every year, but in the course of ten or twelve years the diminution comes to a considerable item.

6665. I believe your school is organized in exactly the same way as those of the Society of Friends at Lisburn?—Yes, I suppose that is the case; but our school is not connected in any way with the Lisburn School. Here is a copy of the last report issued by our school. [Document handed in.]

6664. Lord Justice NAIRN.—Do you not teach Greek?—No, and we read a limited course of Latin only.

6667. What do you find the boys principally interested for by their parents; is it for a business life?—Yes; the boys are generally intended for a business career.

6668. I see a considerable item in your income arises from rents at Newtown?—Yes, that is the rent of a portion of land let for building.

6669. What is the value of the school buildings estimated at now?—The school has purchased the house itself, and the buildings are worth about £2,150.

6670. Dr. TRAILL.—How far is the school from this?—It is about one mile from the city.

6671. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Who collects the rents of the property belonging to the school?—They are collected by the treasurer by correspondence.

6672. How is the treasurer appointed?—He is appointed by the Committee of Management.

6673. Who takes charge of the various documents of title and certificates of stock?—I think the treasurer looks after those things, that is so far as I have any personal knowledge of the matter.

6674. Dr. TRAILL.—Where are they kept?—I believe, in a safe at the school.

6675. How many free pupils have you at the school?—We have none, every boy attending the school has to pay either the reduced fee or the full fee.

6676. What does it cost to keep the boys?—It costs over £40 a head, that is dividing the cost among all the boys. Even the £40 would scarcely pay the standing expenses of the school. Even now with our reduced numbers the expenses are very much the same, and we now find that the actual average cost of each boy is something like £41.

6677. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—This school does not come within the operation of the Act of Parliament. So far as you have any endowment, the benefit of it is exclusively confined to children of members of the Society of Friends. However, we have power to incorporate your present trustees, so as to prevent the necessity of constant convenancing and re-appointments. But it is for the governing body to consider whether they think this incorporation of the trustees would be advisable or not?—I may say that with regard to the trustees they are diminishing rapidly; two of them died very lately and two fresh ones had to be appointed.

Oct. 27, 1897.

Edward
Gerrard.

MASON CHARITY BLUE SCHOOL.

Captain Richard Clayton Carver sworn.

6678. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—What is your connection with the Mason Charity Blue School?—I am one of the executors of the will of my father, Mr. R. T. Carver. He died since the last inquiry.

6679. What is the date of his death?—January, 1884.

6680. Are you the sole executor under your father's will?—No; I am an executor in conjunction with my eldest brother, who is at present residing in England.

6681. I believe the endowment consists of a rent-charge amounting to £257 7s. 6d., paid by the mayor and corporation of Waterford in consideration of a sum of £300 left by the Mason family?—Yes, I believe that is the case.

6682. Is that rent-charge payable to you?—To my brother and myself as trustees under the will of our father.

6683. I believe the schools were built by a Mrs. Mary Mason?—Yes, I understand that is so.

6684. There is also an endowment arising from a bequest of £1,000 by Counsellor Alcock?—Yes.

6685. The income arising from that endowment was, I understand, to be devoted to the purpose of providing apprentice fees and marriage portions for the girls attending the Mason School?—Yes.

6686. Does the income of this endowment pass also through your hands?—No; that, I understand, was a bequest to the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter of Waterford.

6687. Yes, that was left for the purpose of providing apprentice fees and marriage portions for the girls attending the Mason Blue School?—The Bishop and Dean have had little connection with the school at all, and, so far as I know of the matter, I do not think we have claimed that fund.

6688. Do you know if a claim has been made upon the fund by any of the girls attending the school?—Well, I could not say whether that has been the case or not, but the schoolmistress, who is here, will be able to answer that question much better than I can. I have only lately undertaken the management of the school, and in consequence I know very little about it.

6689. You cannot tell us how this Alcock endowment is held out?—No, I cannot.

6690. Who are the managers of the school?—The school is at present managed by my eldest brother and myself.

6691. Is it under the National Board?—I believe not.

6692. Who has the appointment of the teacher?—We appoint the mistress; it is a girl's school. We receive the funds and disburse them.

6693. How are they laid out?—Well, in the payment of the teacher's salary and the support of the school.

6694. How much do you pay the teacher?—£24 a year; her salary was raised within the last year to that amount.

6695. Dr. TRAILL.—What was her salary before it was increased?—It was £16 a year.

6696. Lord Justice FRANKLIN.—Is it by tracing your descent through the original founders, the Mason family, that you and your brother are the trustees?—Yes.

6697. How is it that you are both trustees?—Well, we were both executors under my father's will, and as such we took upon ourselves the management of the school.

6698. Did he make any mention about this in his will?—None whatever.

6699. Do you know that under the original deed in case of failure of heirs of your family the endowment would vest in the mayor of Waterford and the four oldest aldermen?—Yes, I believe that is the case.

6700. And do you not think that it would be an advantage to the school, in case such an event happened as the failure of your heirs, that there should be a larger body of persons associated with you in the management, in order to prevent it lapsing into the hands of the mayor and corporation?—Well, that event is so remote and the school so small, that I do not think any advantage would be gained by having a larger managing body.

6701. What is the total income of the school from its endowments?—The total income amounts to a little short of £40 a year.

Capt. Richard Clayton Carver.

Oct. 21, 1887.
 apt. Richard
 Clayton Carew

6701. If it were associated with some other school, or made the nucleus of a larger school, the endowment would be far more beneficially employed than at present; you see a great part of the endowment is taken up by the mistress's salary?—I may say I have been only managing the school for about two months. When my brother comes back from England, however, I think his wife will take a more active part in the management of the school than we have been able to do.

6702. Dr. TRAILL.—In what relation do you stand to the Mason family, the original founders?—I cannot say; I have asked our family solicitor about that matter, but he has been unable to give me any exact information.

6703. Do you not think it would be better to make arrangements to prevent a lapse of the trusteeship to the mayor and aldermen of Waterford as this is a Protestant endowment?—Well, my father managed it during his lifetime, and thought he was the person best entitled to do so, and so my brother and I as his representatives have taken upon us the management, thinking we had that right also.

6704. Would you not prefer that it was vested in a larger body of management so as to prevent this contingency which might happen?—Well, I would prefer to consult the other members of the family before I give a decided answer, for my own part I should prefer it was not done.

6705. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—How are the expenses of the school paid?—Sir are paid out of the school funds.

6706. You say you cannot tell exactly in what relation you stand to the Mason family?—No, I cannot say exactly, but I believe it was through a marriage. I have made several inquiries about this matter from the solicitor, but he could not tell me what was the exact relationship. However, I have examined some family papers and records, and have written down the following account of the school, which, with your lordship's permission, I will read. Lady Alcock, widow of Sir John Alcock, who was a near relation to the Mason family, appears to have managed the school prior to 1820, in which year she died, and her daughter, Mrs. Carew, of Ballinacorney, took the management of the school and retained it up till the year 1847, in which year she died. Robert Thomas Carew, esq., of Ballinacorney, then undertook the management and immediately paid off the balance, £40 6s. 3d., which had been owing by the school, the expenses having been for some years in excess of the income. Under the management of Mr. R. T. Carew a credit balance is shown at the end of each year, which in 1864 amounted to £108 13s. 3d.; a portion of this was then invested in the purchase of two old five per cent. preference shares in the W. and L. Railway, which absorbed £96 17s. 6d. The dividends of these have been duly claimed and credited to the school. In the year 1870 the balance to the credit of the school had again reached a high figure, £150 13s. 6d., and to absorb a portion of this two more old five per cent. W. and L. preference shares were purchased at £48 each, which, allowing for brokerage, reduced the surplus by £96 1s. In the year 1871 a new roof was required for the school-house, and in order to supply the requisite funds, three out of the four shares in the W. and L. Railway were sold, realising a sum of £151 17s. 6d., and the building was provided with a new roof at a cost of £150. In the year 1875 the remaining one share in the W. and L. Railway was redeemed by the W. and L. Railway Company at £50, and the surplus then amounted to £155. The following year two £50 four per cent. consolidated preference shares were purchased in the W. and L. Railway Company, absorbing £96 4s. 8d. These shares are now held by Robert Thomas Carew and Richard Clayton Carew as trustees under the will of the late Mr. Carew of Ballinacorney, and the half-yearly interest on the loan of £300 to the Corporation of Waterford is also paid to them as trustees of the school funds. Mr. R. T. Carew died on January 20, 1880, and since that date the school has been under the management of the trustees above named, who are, respectively, the eldest and the second sons of the deceased, Mr. R. T. Carew. It has been the custom to distribute premiums to the children in money or books, in proportion to the number of days' attendance shown by the book at the end of each half year; and attendance at church on Sunday in the established dress of the school is taken into account in awarding the premiums. An annual outing and treat is also given to the children, usually to Ballinacorney Park, which they take full advantage of, and it is no doubt adds to the popularity of the school. Under the control of the present trustees, Mrs. Arner, the attendance has increased from four or five to sixteen at which number it now stands. The average cost of each child, as the number now stands, appears to be nearly £4, but should the number continue to increase the amount distributed in premiums could be substantially reduced, and the other expenses cut down. The funds at the disposal of the school would not, however, now be able to provide for so large a number as thirty girls which was originally intended, the income and expenditure being now about evenly balanced.

6707. I understood you to say that you are successors of Mrs. Carew, who had been managing the school?—Yes; she was my grandmother. She was a Miss Alcock, a relation of Sir John Alcock.

6708. What was the relation between Mrs. Carew and Lady Alcock?—She was her daughter. I think there were two daughters.

6709. Lord Justice NASH.—Do you know to whom the other Miss Alcock was married?—I am not sure. I could not answer the question without consulting family records.

6710. Lord Justice FRYGROUSE.—What strikes me about this school is the condition of the management. It is all very well at present so long as it is looked after, and so long as the help of the Mason family are alive, and reside in the neighbourhood of Waterford?—I am very sure when my brother and his wife come back from England to reside here they will look after the school, and work it up as my father did during his lifetime. I know the family would be very sorry if the management of the school passed out of their hands.

6711. But do you not think that some provision should be made in case the family ceased to reside in the neighbourhood of Waterford, and also to provide for the contingency of a failure of heirs?—As I have said before I would like to consult with the other members of the family before I give a decided answer on that point; but both events are very unlikely to happen.

6712. Then there is another point which requires looking after—Counsellor Alcock's endowment. The children attending your school have the first right to the income arising from this, and you cannot say if any of the girls who have been educated at the school had ever received a marriage portion or apprenthice from this endowment?—My lord, I think the schoolmistress will be able to give definite information on that point. I have been but a short time managing the school, but I understand that complaints were made to the trustees of that fund that it was not properly administered.

I think the proper course would be for you to communicate with your brother about this matter. We shall then be glad to receive any suggestions you may offer, both as to putting the existing endowment in a secure position, and also as to obtaining for you the right mentioned in the will of Counsellor Alcock to the income arising from this £1,000.

6713. Lord Justice NASH.—How many pupils are at the school?—There are sixteen attending it now.

Oct. 27, 1887
Capt. Thomas
Clayton Curlew

6714. Are they all day pupils?—Yes; there are no boarding pupils attending it at all. It is merely a small day school. The education is free, the children have nothing to pay for it.

6715. Dr. TRAILL.—How is it that the number attending it is so small?—I think the question of wearing blue clothes has interfered to a great extent in preventing more attending the school.

6716. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you know in the regulation with regard to the clothing enforced?—Yes, it is enforced under the old will.

6717. Do you know what relation Henry Alcock was of Sir John Alcock?—He was his younger brother.

6718. Dr. TRAILL.—Have you ever heard of any of those boys of Bishop Foy's School marrying any of the girls attending the Mason School?—I have never heard of any of them doing so, but it may have taken place without my knowing anything about it.

6719. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Would it not come to you that this £1,000, which seems to have been left in the first instance for the benefit of the children attending the Mason School, might be obtained for the school by associating the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter, who are the trustees of the fund, in the governing body of the school?—I do not like to give any opinion of my own, because, as I have said, my brother will be coming back from England in a few months with his wife.

6720. Dr. TRAILL.—What amount of the endowment is left after you pay the teacher her salary?—About £36 per year.

6721. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The mistress has a residence besides the salary of £34 a year?—The residence is part of the school; the schoolmistress resides in the school. There are some lodgings which are not required for the purposes of the school; these had been let out for a long term, but that term fell in some time ago, and then the schoolmistress took them, and she pays a rent of 3s. a month for this part of the buildings, which goes to the revenue of the school.

6722. Does she sublet them again?—No.

Mrs. Armour sworn.

6723. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—How long have you been mistress of the Mason Blue School?—Over sixteen years.

6724. What is the largest number of children you have had attending the school?—Sixteen is the largest number of girls that I have had at the school.

6725. How many girls have you at the school at present?—There are sixteen on the rolls now; when I came to take up the school I had only four.

6726. How many pupils had you in 1880?—I had twelve pupils then.

6727. Dr. TRAILL.—Can you tell me why the number taking advantage of the school is so small?—The girls when they come to the age of fourteen go out to situations or trades, and that, I think, is one of the reasons why the numbers are low.

6728. At what age do they enter the school?—They come into the school as young as four.

6729. And how many years do they stay at the school?—They stay until they are twelve or fourteen years of age, just according as they get situations or not.

6730. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—In what subjects are the pupils instructed?—Reading, writing, arithmetic, needlework, and geography.

6731. They are the children of poor parents?—Yes, the children are poor.

6732. What becomes of them after they leave school—at what occupations do they earn their livelihood?—When they go out they generally go as domestic servants, as nursery maids, and other occupations of that nature.

6733. Do you know the ladies to whom they generally go as servants?—Oh, yes.

6734. Is it through you that the application comes?—Yes, the application is made to me, and then I speak to the local clergyman. When the late Mrs. Curlew was managing the school she liked to consult the clergyman of the parish in the matter of putting the girls out to service.

6735. Then the local clergyman assist you in the matter?—They do not exactly assist me, but Mr. Christie of St. Patrick's catechises the girls every Thursday.

6736. Dr. TRAILL.—Were you trained as a teacher?—No, I never was trained.

6737. It is a very elementary education you give the girls?—Yes. I went myself to the school first as a pupil teacher. I teach them reading, writing, arithmetic, and all kinds of needlework.

6738. Do you watch the subsequent career of the girls after they leave the school?—Yes, and they all turn out very well.

6739. Where do they usually go to live after they leave school?—They mostly reside in Waterford, and some of them have been married.

6740. Did any of them marry a boy from Bishop Foy's School?—Yes, one of them married a Foy's School boy, and they have two of their children at the school now.

6741. Do you know did she get any marriage portion?—She did, she got £10; she had to apply to the Dean and Chapter for it.

6742. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you know in what year the application was made for that marriage portion money?—I could not say.

6743. Why are there not more children at the school?—Well, there are other Protestant schools in the town.

6744. But there are a good many Protestants in the town?—Yes, but there are parochial and industrial schools in the same street.

6745. How many of the girls attending your school have got this marriage portion of £10?—Well, six, I believe it is confined to the girls of my school, but I have only applied for it in one case.

6746. Were there not other girls from the school married?—There was no application made except the one I have mentioned for the marriage portion; there may have been other girls married, but they did not get the marriage portion, so far as I am aware of it.

6747. But they cannot get the marriage portion without getting a certificate of good conduct from you?—So I have been told.

6748. Why do they not get apprentice fees if marriage portions are not given?—I believe they can get them from the Dean and Chapter without coming to me for a certificate.

6749. But do you know as a matter of fact whether they get apprentice fees or not?—I cannot say whether they get them or not.

PUBLIC SITTING—FRIDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1887.

At the Courthouse, Waterford.

Present:—The Right Hon. Lord Justice FITZGERSON, and the Right Hon. Lord Justice NAHEU, Judicial Commissioners; and the Rev. GERALD MOLLOY, D.D., D.S.C., ANTHONY TRAILL, Esq., LL.D., M.D., F.Y.C.D., and Professor DOUGHERTY, M.A., Assistant Commissioners.

The Assistant Secretary, N. D. MURPHY, Junr., was in attendance.

ALCOCK'S APPRENTICESHIP ENDOWMENT.

The Right Rev. Dr. Day, Lord Bishop of Cashel and Bndy, Waterford, and Lismore, examined.

The Right
Rev. Dr. Day.

6749. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—It appears that Counsellor Alcock left a sum of £1,000, from the income of which was to be paid, in the first instance, if any such were required, marriage portions to the girls attending The Mason Charity Blue School, and, failing that, as apprentice fees for the same pupils; and, failing those two objects, then as apprentice fees for others to be nominated by the Bishop, Dean, and Chapter. The mistress of the school told us that during her time she has made only one application for a marriage portion on behalf of a pupil of the school, and with regard to apprentice fees, she does not seem to know much about the fund. We are anxious to find out from you, as one of the trustees, about this Alcock fund. The two funds—that of the Mason family and that arising from the Alcock bequest—appear to have been intended to be worked together, as far as it is possible to do so. Captain Carew is apparently anxious that the clergy of the parish should take an interest in the school, and we are of opinion that the clergy of the district might be associated in the management of the Mason School, and that provision should be made that the pupils attending the school should have the full benefit of this Alcock endowment, as they have undoubtedly, according to the terms of the original gift, the first right to it.

The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—As regards this fund, I am very sorry that the dean is not here to give evidence about it. I have been at his house, and he is, I am sorry to say, laid up to-day. The management of this marriage portion fund and apprentice fund, arising under the will of Counsellor Alcock and connected with the Mason School, has been left entirely in the hands of the dean. He showed me a bundle of receipts relating to the fund, which he would have produced had he not been confined to his room to-day. From what I gathered from him it appears that he has been giving apprentice fees of £3. He generally gives it in three portions, so as to secure that the young persons who have been put out to trades do not leave their apprenticeships before the end of the time for which they have been bound. He also told me that he gave marriage portions ranging, in such cases, from £10 to £5. The whole income of the fund is, I believe, less than £30, that is, the interest on the £1,000.

6750. Professor DOUGHERTY.—We have found in other places that the payment of apprentice fees of the amount you have mentioned is not really sufficient to obtain for the children getting these fees, under the changed circumstances of these times, any great advantage, and that the money would be far more beneficially applied in providing outfits for the children when they leave the school—I really cannot say anything about that, as the management of this fund has been entirely in the hands of the dean.

6761. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—Do you not think that the clergy of the district and the trustees of the Alcock fund might be advantageously joined in the present management of the Mason school?—I am sure the clergy would be glad to be connected with the management of the school.

6752. How does your lordship think a governing body would be best constituted to look after this school and fund?—Well, I have never thought of the matter, and it is a subject which would require some consideration.

6753. Lord Justice NAHEU.—In whose parish is the school situated?—I really do not know. I think it is on the borders of two parishes.

6754. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—The school is a handsome building and is in nice order, do you not think that it is a building which might be made available for the teaching of children who are not at present so well provided with school buildings?—I suppose it might be, but I cannot say, as I do not know the school.

6755. Dr. TRAILL.—Captain Carew thought that the representatives of the Mason family should be practically the sole managers of the school. Would there be any objection to that on the part of the trustees of the Alcock endowment?—I think if you put in the scheme that the Alcock trustees should be added to the management of the school; I think that they should have a substantial share in the management as well as the representatives in that case.

6756. I suppose that if the apprentices fund of £1,000 were brought under the control of the managing body, it would put over Captain Carew's objection. He did not object to the enlarging of its governing body, but thought that the management of the school, the appointment of the teacher for instance, should be wholly in the hands of the representatives of the Carew family?—I would not be willing to undertake any responsibility concerning the school in that case.

6757. I suppose if the Carew family were anxious to put it under the National Board you would not allow that?—I do not suppose we would. But in any case I certainly would not allow my name, and I am sure the same in the case with the dean also, to be connected with the school at all, if we had no practical share in its management. I do not think it would be right to connect either the bishop or dean with the school if they did not share in its management.

6758. Then you think that if the bishop or the dean or any of the clergy of the diocese are appointed on the governing body they should have a substantial voice in the management of the school?—Undoubtedly I do, I think they should have a substantial share in it.

6759. Lord Justice FITZGERSON.—In cases of this kind, where the school is a private foundation, we have left the power of appointment of a master, or other teacher, in the hands of the representative of the original founder, so long as he is willing to act, and then, in case of refusal to do so, or in case of his inability from other reasons, the power is vested in a governing body, which usually consists of the local clergy, several of the local laity, and the original founder's representatives. But I am bound to say, from what Captain Carew said yesterday, that he is only too anxious that the school should be successful. The school at present is not in any permanent condition of security, it really depends for its management upon the presence of some member of the family of the original founder. And it is obvious that he should reside in or near Waterford, in order that the school may be successfully worked. It seems a great pity to have a fine building like the present school, not made available for a greater number of children, and it appears that this is impossible, unless the clergy are associated in the management of it.

The Lord Bishop of Cashel.—I am sure the clergy of Waterford would be glad to take a share in the management of the school.

6760. I do not think that this Alcock fund is administered in strict accordance with the terms of the will?—I cannot say about that, the dean has the management of it.

6761. Professor DOCUMENTY.—I would like to ask you, with regard to this Alcock fund, whether you think an endowment for the purpose of providing marriage portions, a practically useful form of endowment?—Well, I think that the young people see good to get it.

6762. It does not tend then, so far as you know, to induce people to marry for the sake of getting the money?—No; I do not think it does.

6763. You think, then, a fund to provide marriage portions may still be usefully applied?—I think so.

6764. We have had evidence in other places that apprentice fees and marriage portions are out of date now. Is that the case in Waterford?—No; I do not think it is. I think if such funds are properly managed they are very beneficial.

6765. Do you think an apprentice fee of £5 very beneficial?—Yes; we have given fees of that amount, but a larger sum, would, of course, secure the apprentice more advantage.

6766. Do you not think that the funds might be applied with far more advantage to the rising generation if they were employed in assisting to provide the means of technical education?—Well, that might be so.

6767. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—Do you think you could secure more support for the Mason school if we put the management on a wider basis?—I think if the management of the school were placed in the hands of the clergy, and such other persons as you might consider it judicious to associate with Mr. Carrer that subscriptions would be found to enlarge the salary, and obtain an efficient mistress.

6768. Would your lordship give any representation on the governing body to the subscribers?—I think they would prefer to leave the management to the local clergy.

6769. Dr. TRAILL.—The apprentice fund is exclusively managed by the clergy?—Yes.

6770. And the other endowment is for thirty poor children of all Protestant denominations?—I suppose so.

6771. Professor DOCUMENTY.—I understood you, my lord bishop, to say that the governing body of the school should be increased by the addition of the local clergy. I am anxious to know whether you would agree to put it on a still wider basis, and to associate lay men of other Protestant denominations with the management?—I think it would not be desirable.

CITY PROTESTANT ORPHAN SCHOOL, WATERFORD.

6772. Lord Justice FRYGEMAN.—What is the foundation of your school?—It was founded in the year 1818, by several gentlemen who met together in the town hall, for the purpose of establishing a school by voluntary subscription, for the education and maintenance of the destitute poor Protestant children of the city.

6773. Have you any endowment attached to the school?—There is a sum of £100 given by a Mr. Penckford, and other bequests, but the treasurer, Mr. John Strangman, will give you the details of the endowments better than I can.
